

OFFICIAL CODE OF GEORGIA
—
ANNOTATED

VOLUME 1

Constitution of the United States

2007 Edition

Digitized by the Internet Archive
in 2013

OFFICIAL CODE OF GEORGIA ANNOTATED

With Provision for Subsequent Pocket Parts

Prepared by

The Code Revision Commission
The Office of Legislative Counsel and

The Editorial Staff of LexisNexis®

Published Under Authority of the State of Georgia

Volume 1 2007 Edition

Constitution of the United States

Including Annotations taken from the Georgia Reports and the Georgia Appeals Reports

LexisNexis®

Charlottesville, Virginia

2007

OFFICIAL CODE OF GEORGIA
ANNOTATED

COPYRIGHT 1926 THROUGH 1930
© 1982, 1990, 2007

BY THE STATE OF GEORGIA

All rights reserved.

ISBN 1-4224-3824-4

Volume I
4181511

Preface

This volume cumulates and replaces the 1990 edition of Volume 1 of the Official Code of Georgia Annotated, as supplemented by the 2006 Cumulative Supplement. The 1990 edition of Volume 1 and its 2006 Cumulative Supplement may thus be recycled or, if so desired, may be retained for historical purposes.

This volume contains the Constitution of the United States and amendments thereto. This volume also contains case annotations reflecting decisions posted to LexisNexis® through May 25, 2007. These annotations will appear in the following traditional reporter sources: Georgia Supreme Court Opinions; Georgia Appeals Court Opinions; Southeastern Reporter, Second Series; Supreme Court Reporter; Federal Reporter, Third Series; Federal Supplement, Second Series; Federal Rules Decisions; and Bankruptcy Reporter. As official and traditional citations become available, substitutions for the LexisNexis® citations will be made.

Additionally, LexisNexis® has prepared annotations and references to Attorney General Opinions, law reviews, and other research sources that we hope will be beneficial as you utilize this product. A complete listing of those sources is as follows: Official and Unofficial Attorney General Opinions; Opinions of the Judicial Qualifications Commission; Advisory Opinions of the State Disciplinary Board of the State Bar; Formal Advisory Opinions of the State Disciplinary Board of the State Bar, issued by the Supreme Court of Georgia; Emory Law Journal; Georgia Law Review; Georgia State University Law Review; Mercer Law Review; Georgia State Bar Journal; American Law Reports; American Jurisprudence 2d; American Jurisprudence Pleading and Practice, American Jurisprudence Proof of Facts; American Jurisprudence Trials; Corpus Juris Secundum; and Uniform Laws Annotated. Also included, where appropriate, are cross references to the Official Code of Georgia Annotated.

This volume also contains the Act that enacted the Official Code of Georgia Annotated; a foreword by the Chairman of the Code Revision Commission; a history of the codification of the laws of Georgia; and a user's guide.

Georgia Laws 2007, p. 47, § 54, effective May 11, 2007, reenacted, except for Title 47, the Official Code of Georgia Annotated, as amended by the text and Code section numbering contained in the 2006 supplements to the Code. See the editor's notes to Code Section 1-1-1 for the text of the 2007 reenacting Act. For Acts reenacting the Official Code of Georgia Annotated as amended by the text and numbering contained in the 1982 through 2006 supplements, see Ga. L. 1983, p. 3, § 1; Ga. L. 1984, p. 22, § 54; Ga. L. 1985, p. 149, § 54; Ga. L. 1986, p. 10, § 54; Ga. L. 1987, p. 3, § 54; Ga. L. 1988, p. 13, § 54; Ga. L. 1989, p. 14, § 54; Ga. L. 1990, p. 8, § 54; Ga. L. 1991, p. 94, § 54; Ga. L. 1992, p. 6, § 54; Ga. L. 1993, p. 91, § 54; Ga. L. 1994, p. 97, § 54; Ga. L. 1995, p. 10, § 54; Ga. L. 1996, p. 6, § 54; Ga. L. 1997, p. 143, § 54; Ga. L. 1998, p. 128, § 54; Ga. L. 1999, p. 81, § 54; Ga. L. 2000, p. 136, § 54; Ga. L. 2001, p. 4, § 54; Ga. L. 2002, p. 415, § 54; Ga. L. 2003, p. 140, § 54; Ga. L. 2004, p. 631, § 54; Ga. L. 2005, p. 60, § 54; and Ga. L. 2006, p. 72, § 54, respectively.

Acts of the General Assembly of the State of Georgia or portions thereof shall be construed as references to the Official Code of Georgia Annotated, to provide for other matters relative to the foregoing; to provide an effective date; to repeal conflicting laws; and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Georgia:

Section 1. At the 1977 regular session, the General Assembly of Georgia created the Code Revision Commission and authorized the commission to select a publisher to conduct a revision of the Code and the laws of Georgia. Pursuant to such authority, the Code Revision Commission entered into a contract with the Michie Company of Charlottesville, Virginia, on June 19, 1978, for the recodification and publication of Georgia laws in a new Official Code of Georgia Annotated. It is the purpose of this Act to enact the statutory portion of the codification of Georgia laws prepared by the Code Revision Commission and the Michie Company.

Section 2. The statutory portion of the codification of Georgia laws prepared by the Code Revision Commission and the Michie Company which is on file in the office of the Secretary of State is enacted and shall have the effect of statutes enacted by the General Assembly of Georgia.

Section 3. The statutory portion of the codification is contained in 24 volumes entitled "Code of Georgia 1981 Legislative Edition" plus one volume entitled "Code of Georgia 1981 Legislative Edition Supplement." Material contained in such supplement consists of Acts and resolutions of the General Assembly enacted at the 1981 regular session. The material contained in such supplement shall supersede correspondingly numbered material in the other 24 volumes and shall be in addition to the material in the other 24 volumes where such material is not correspondingly numbered.

OFFICIAL CODE OF GEORGIA ANNOTATED ADOPTED.

No. 1 (House Bill No. 2).

AN ACT

To enact the statutory portion of the codification of Georgia laws prepared by the Code Revision Commission and the Michie Company; to provide for a statement of purpose; to provide for the publication of the Official Code of Georgia Annotated; to provide the method and time at which such Code shall take effect; to provide that the material contained in the supplemental volume shall supersede material contained in the remaining 24 volumes of the statutory portion of such codification; to provide that references in local or special laws to certain other Acts or resolutions of the General Assembly or to prior codes of the State of Georgia or portions thereof shall be construed as references to the Official Code of Georgia Annotated; to provide for other matters relative to the foregoing; to provide an effective date; to repeal conflicting laws; and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Georgia:

Section 1. At the 1977 regular session, the General Assembly of Georgia created the Code Revision Commission and authorized the commission to select a publisher to conduct a revision of the Code and the laws of Georgia. Pursuant to such authority, the Code Revision Commission entered into a contract with the Michie Company of Charlottesville, Virginia, on June 19, 1978, for the recodification and publication of Georgia laws in a new Official Code of Georgia Annotated. It is the purpose of this Act to enact the statutory portion of the codification of Georgia laws prepared by the Code Revision Commission and the Michie Company.

Section 2. The statutory portion of the codification of Georgia laws prepared by the Code Revision Commission and the Michie Company which is on file in the office of the Secretary of State is enacted and shall have the effect of statutes enacted by the General Assembly of Georgia.

Section 3. The statutory portion of the codification is contained in 24 volumes entitled "Code of Georgia 1981 Legislative Edition" plus one volume entitled "Code of Georgia 1981 Legislative Edition Supplement." Material contained in such supplement consists of Acts and resolutions of the General Assembly enacted at the 1981 regular session. The material contained in such supplement shall supersede correspondingly numbered material in the other 24 volumes and shall be in addition to the material in the other 24 volumes where such material is not correspondingly numbered.

Section 4. The statutory portion of such codification shall be merged with annotations, captions, catchlines, history lines, editorial notes, cross-references, indexes, and other materials pursuant to the contract; shall be published by authority of the state pursuant to such contract; and, when so published, shall be known and may be cited as the "Official Code of Georgia Annotated."

Section 5. The codification enacted pursuant to Section 2 of this Act shall take effect on November 1, 1982, as provided in Code Section 1-1-9 of such codification.

Section 6. Any reference in any local or special law of this state to any Act or resolution of the General Assembly or to any title, chapter, section, or other portion of any prior code of this state shall be construed to be a reference to the appropriate title, chapter, article, part, subpart, Code section, subsection, paragraph, subparagraph, division, or subdivision of the Official Code of Georgia Annotated which is enacted by this Act.

Section 7. This Act shall become effective upon its approval by the Governor or upon its becoming law without his approval.

Section 8. All laws and parts of laws in conflict with this Act are hereby repealed.

Approved September 3, 1981.

FOREWORD

At the 1981 extraordinary session, the General Assembly of Georgia enacted the statutory portion of the Official Code of Georgia Annotated, the first complete and official recodification of the laws of Georgia since the Code of 1933. Since the adoption of the Code of 1933, there has been a significant increase in both the number and complexity of the laws of Georgia. State government has grown in size and has undergone several significant reorganizations. State government is operating under its fourth state constitution since 1933.

In recognition of the many changes in the laws and the government of the State of Georgia, the General Assembly created the Code Revision Study Committee in 1976. The committee was composed of the following members:

Honorable Wayne Snow, Jr., Chairman
Honorable Howard T. Overby, Vice Chairman
Honorable Hugh Brown McNatt, Secretary
Honorable Peter L. Banks
Honorable Roy Barnes
Honorable Robert W. Crenshaw, Jr.
Honorable Roger Johnson
Honorable Randolph C. Karrh
Honorable J. Beverly Langford
Honorable Preston B. Lewis, Jr.
Honorable Lewis R. Slaton
Honorable Hugh D. Sosebee
Honorable J. Douglas Stewart
Honorable Albert W. Thompson
Honorable Larry Walker

The committee was directed to conduct a thorough study of the subject of code revision, including the need therefor, the time involved, the cost thereof, and all other matters relative thereto. In December, 1976, the committee submitted its report to the General Assembly. In its findings the committee stated: "The time for a complete, bulk revision and recodification of this state's statutory law is long overdue and must be accomplished as quickly as possible. Any attempt to accomplish code revision on a title-by-title basis is not a practicable or feasible solution to the problem. The most economical and satisfactory method to accomplish code revision within the State of Georgia is through a negotiated contract with a publishing firm possessing the necessary expertise and manpower to accomplish a complete recodification as quickly as possible."

The committee then recommended that the General Assembly create a Code Revision Commission and vest in the commission the responsibility of selecting an appropriate firm to accomplish the code revision project and to resolve the myriad of details connected with the code revision project.

FOREWORD

To carry out the recommendations of the Code Revision Study Committee, the General Assembly created the Code Revision Commission at the 1977 session and gave the commission the powers necessary to carry out the code revision project. The commission is composed of the Lieutenant Governor and four members of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives and four additional members of the House of Representatives, and five members appointed by the president of the State Bar of Georgia, one of whom is a judge or senior judge of the superior courts and one of whom is a district attorney. The members of the commission as of the date of enactment of the Official Code of Georgia Annotated were:

Honorable Wayne Snow, Jr., Chairman
Honorable Thomas B. Murphy
Honorable Larry Walker
Honorable Randolph C. Karrh
Honorable J. C. Daugherty Honorable Zell Miller
Honorable Roy Barnes
Honorable J. Nathan Deal
Honorable Bill Littlefield
Honorable Charles Wessels
Honorable R. W. Crenshaw, Jr.
Honorable Hugh Brown McNatt
Honorable Lewis R. Slaton
Honorable Hugh D. Sosebee
Honorable J. Douglas Stewart

In addition to the members listed above, Honorable Peter L. Banks, Honorable Howard T. Overby, Honorable J. Beverly Langford, and Honorable Albert W. Thompson served as members of the commission during the recodification process.

The Office of Legislative Council of the General Assembly provided staff for the commission. Terry A. McKenzie, Betty J. Clements, Martin Moody Wilson, G. Joseph Scheuer, Dolores McDonald, and Patterson Harp served as members of the Code Revision Division of the Office of Legislative Counsel and as the staff of the commission. In addition, Frank H. Edwards, Legislative Counsel, Gloria Anderson, and the other employees of the Office of Legislative Counsel provided valuable assistance in the preparation of the Official Code of Georgia Annotated.

Following presentations by five law publishers, the commission selected The Michie Company to prepare and publish the Official Code of Georgia Annotated on behalf of the State of Georgia. Following the execution of a contract between the commission and The Michie Company, the commission and staff developed the uniform numbering system and rules of style which are used in the new Code. The commission adopted an arrangement of laws consisting of 53 Code titles. A statute copy consisting of the Code of 1933, all Georgia laws enacted since 1933, and those laws which were inadvertently omitted from the Code of 1933 but which are still in effect was prepared and arranged into the 53 titles. The editorial staff of The Michie Company, under the direction of David P. Harriman, Stephen C. Willard, James J. Watson, and J. Gerald Kail, performed a title-by-title examination of the statute copy. Numerous memoranda were prepared and sent to the commission for each title. The questions and proposals for changes contained in the memoranda were examined by the staff of the commission, proposed responses were developed, and the questions and proposals were then considered and resolved by the commission. Over 100,000 questions were resolved in this manner. In addition to the questions contained in the memoranda, grammatical changes, the correction of typographical errors, the renumbering of 1933 Code sections and portions thereof, the correction of cross-references within text, and changes necessitated by rules of style were marked directly onto the statute copy by the editors and were examined and approved by the commission and its staff. Upon completion of this process, each title was typeset in a page-proof format and was again examined completely by the editors and the commission's staff. The page proofs were proofread several times and every memoranda question and response was compared with the page proofs to ensure that the editorial work was correct. Throughout this process, every effort was made to avoid changes in the substance of the law. In those instances in which the commission felt that a substantive change had to be made, a separate bill was introduced in the General Assembly to accomplish the change. These bills were enacted in the 1980 and 1981 regular sessions of the General Assembly. Upon completion of the editorial process, a manuscript entitled the Code of Georgia 1981 Legislative Edition was prepared, presented to the General Assembly, and enacted at the 1981 extraordinary session of the General Assembly. Annotations, indexes, editorial notes, and other materials have been added to that manuscript to produce the Official Code of Georgia Annotated, the first official Code to be published under authority of the State of Georgia since the Code of 1933.

FOREWORD

In reviewing the memoranda and page proofs, the commission and its staff received the assistance of several hundred people. The Code Revision Overview Committee of the State Bar of Georgia and a number of committees, sections, and individual members of the bar reviewed memoranda or page proofs and provided valuable assistance to the commission. In addition, each department of state government and a number of organizations assigned people to work with the commission in the recodification project. This project could not have been completed without the expertise provided by these individuals and the Code Revision Commission wishes to express its gratitude for their assistance.

FOREWORD

The adoption and publication of the Official Code of Georgia Annotated represents years of painstaking effort by the General Assembly of Georgia, the Code Revision Commission, the Office of Legislative Counsel, the State Bar of Georgia, and The Michie Company. It has been the goal of all who have contributed their time, labor, and expertise to this project to produce a complete, thorough, accurate, and usable Code for the State of Georgia and its citizens. We sincerely hope and believe that this goal has been accomplished.

Code Revision Commission
Honorable Wayne Snow, Jr.
Chairman, 1981
Honorable Larry Walker
Chairman, 1990

HISTORY OF THE CODIFICATION OF THE LAWS OF GEORGIA

The development of the codification of the laws of Georgia has been divided by one commentator into three separate stages — compilation, digest, and code.

The compilation stage began with the provisions of the Constitution of 1798 that the body of laws of the state should be “revised, digested and arranged under proper heads.” Pursuant to this provision, a compilation of laws was published by Robert Watkins in 1801, followed the next year by a compilation prepared by Horatio Marbury and William H. Crawford. Both compilations covered much the same field, specifically, the years 1755 to 1800. Later, pursuant to an Act of 1809 providing for decennial compilations, three separate compilations were prepared. The first, covering the years 1800 to 1810, was prepared by Augustin Smith Clayton. The second, covering the years 1810 to 1819, was prepared by Lucius Q. C. Lamar. The third, covering the years 1819 to 1829, was prepared by William H. Dawson. These volumes encompassed all laws and resolutions passed during the periods in question, regardless of the public and general or private and local nature of the laws and resolutions included and regardless of whether they were in force.

The next stage of development, the digest period, began with an Act of 1819 directing the preparation of a digest of laws of the state. The digest was to embrace all Acts and resolutions passed prior to the 1819 Session as well as those Acts and resolutions passed during that session. The Act directing the preparation of the digest contemplated a condensed volume which would exclude repealed laws and laws of a private and local nature. Pursuant to this legislative authorization, Oliver H. Prince prepared a digest volume which was approved by the Governor in January 1822 and which was revised in 1837. The 1837 revision of Prince’s Digest contained an index of local laws. Pursuant to a resolution of the General Assembly passed December 23, 1843, William A. Hotchkiss prepared a digest of the statutory law of Georgia. This work was the subject of a state subscription upon its completion in 1845. In 1851, Thomas R. R. Cobb published another legislatively authorized digest which was based on the arrangement and plan developed by Prince. Both Prince’s Digest and Cobb’s Digest contained an alphabetical listing of titles and a chronological arrangement of legislative Acts and resolutions. Next, Howell Cobb prepared “A Compilation of the General and Public Statutes of the State of Georgia.” This work was subscribed to by the state in 1859.

The next and most innovative step in the evolution of Georgia codified law was the Georgia Code of 1863. In 1858, a bill was introduced in the General Assembly proposing the codification of Georgia law. The resulting enactment provided for the formation of a three-man commission to prepare for the people of Georgia a code “which should, as near as practicable, embrace, in a condensed form, the laws of Georgia, whether derived from the common law, the constitutions, the statutes of the state, the decisions of the supreme court, or the statutes of England in force in the State.” This was to be the first code in the United States giving statutory effect to common law and equitable principles.

The commissioners, David Irwin, Thomas R. R. Cobb, and Richard H. Clark, took it upon themselves to add and delete laws in a manner consistent with the existing system of law, with an eye toward meeting existing needs and in anticipation of future needs. In doing so, the commissioners adopted and incorporated suggestions, alterations, modifications, enlargements, and restrictions in the laws of the state. However, the taking of such liberties was ratified when the Code was adopted by the General Assembly.

Because the commissioners omitted historical annotations, the sources of some of the laws contained in the Code of 1863, particularly the part dealing with “Political and Public Organization of the State,” written by Clark, remain undisclosed. Other parts of the Code are clearly traceable to two prior sources, the Judiciary Act of 1799 and the Penal Code of 1833, which were carried almost wholly intact into Parts 3 and 4 of the Code.

Although a number of codes have followed the Code of 1863, few alterations in its form have been made. Some changes have been made for purposes of clarity, but the substance of the original Code has generally been preserved. The succeeding revisions have continued the process initiated by the Code of 1863 of codifying common law principles as they have developed.

Subsequent official Codes of Georgia were commissioned and adopted as follows:

Code of 1868: Committee appointed to examine revised Code, Ga. L. 1865-66, p. 315. Governor authorized to subscribe for copies for use by state, Ga. L. 1866, p. 223. Code ratified by Constitution of 1868, Art. XI, Sec. III.

Code of 1873: Governor authorized to subscribe for copies of revised Code upon favorable report by Attorney General, Ga. L. 1872, p. 524.

Code of 1882: Governor authorized to direct Attorney General to examine revised Code, Ga. L. 1880-81, p. 676. Publication of Code authorized by General Assembly, Ga. L. 1880-81, p. 140.

Code of 1895: Authorization given for appointment of Code commissioners, Ga. L. 1893, p. 119. Code adopted, Ga. L. 1895, p. 98.

Code of 1910: Code commission created, Ga. L. 1909, p. 111. Code adopted, Ga. L. 1910, p. 48.

HISTORY OF CODIFICATION

Code of 1933: Code commission created, Ga. L. 1929, p. 1487. Code adopted, Ga. L. 1933, p. 31; Ga. L. 1935, p. 84.

USER'S GUIDE

CONTENTS

CITATION FORM

ARRANGEMENT AND NUMBERING SYSTEM

ARRANGEMENT OF SPECIFIC TYPES OF MATERIAL WITHIN THE CODE

TITLE AND CHAPTER ANALYSES

HISTORY LINES

REPEAL LINES

CROSS REFERENCES

CASE ANNOTATIONS

EDITOR'S NOTES AND CODE COMMISSION NOTES

LAW REVIEWS

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF GEORGIA

ADVISORY OPINIONS OF THE STATE BAR

DECISIONS AND OPINIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW

RESEARCH REFERENCES

INDEXES

—GENERAL INDEX

—VOLUME INDEXES

—INDEX OF LOCAL AND SPECIAL LAWS AND GENERAL LAWS OF LOCAL APPLICATION

CONVERSION TABLES

DICTIONARY

SECRETARY OF STATE'S CERTIFICATES

Citation Form

The Official Code of Georgia Annotated may be cited as "O.C.G.A." See Code Section 1-1-8 as to citation of the Official Code of Georgia Annotated.

Arrangement and Numbering System

The Official Code of Georgia Annotated is arranged into 53 Code titles. In addition to the 53 titles, the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of Georgia are included in separate volumes with their original internal numbering systems retained. No Code title numbers have been assigned to the Constitutions.

With the exception of Title 1, "General Provisions," titles within the Code are arranged in alphabetical order. A list of the Code title numbers and names appears in the front of each volume of the Code.

Where appropriate, titles within the Code are divided into chapters, chapters are divided into articles, articles are divided into parts, and parts are divided into subparts. An exception to this arrangement occurs in Title 11, "Commercial Code." Because of the importance of maintaining the numbering scheme of the Uniform Commercial Code throughout the United States, Title 11 does not follow the numbering scheme used in the remaining titles of the Code.

Titles, chapters, articles, parts, and subparts of the Code are designated with Arabic numerals. If a new title, chapter, article, part, or subpart is added between two existing titles, chapters, articles, parts, or subparts, it will be designated by the preceding numeral plus a capital letter. Thus, if two new chapters are to be added between Chapters 4 and 5 of a title, they will be designated as Chapters 4A and 4B.

A three-unit numbering system is used to designate Code sections. Thus, Code Section 2-5-1 is the first Code section of Chapter 5 of Title 2. Code section numbers are not consecutive in the Code. At the end of each article, part, and subpart, gaps are left in Code section numbers to allow for future legislation. If a new Code section is added between two existing Code sections, the new Code section will be designated with the preceding Code section number followed by a period and one or more numerals. Thus, if two new Code sections are added between Code Sections 2-5-38 and 2-5-39, the new Code sections will be designated as Code Sections 2-5-38.1 and 2-5-38.2.

Where appropriate, Code sections are divided into subsections, subsections are divided into paragraphs, paragraphs are divided into subparagraphs, subparagraphs are divided into divisions, and divisions are divided into subdivisions. These units are designated as follows:

Subsections—(a), (b), (c), (d), etc.

Paragraphs—(1), (2), (3), (4), etc.

Subparagraphs—(A), (B), (C), (D), etc.

Divisions—(i), (ii), (iii), (iv), etc.

Subdivisions—I, (II), (III), (IV), etc.

If it becomes necessary to add new subsections, paragraphs, subparagraphs, divisions, or subdivisions between existing subsections, paragraphs, subparagraphs, divisions, or subdivisions, the new material will be designated as follows:

Subsection—(a), (a.1), (a.2), (b)

Paragraph—(1), (1.1), (1.2), (2)

Subparagraph—(A), (A.1), (A.2), (B)

Division—(i), (i.1), (i.2), (ii)

Subdivision—I, (I.1), (I.2), (II)

If a Code section has introductory language followed by a list, subsection designations are not used to designate the items in the list, but each item is given a paragraph designation. This helps to maintain the flexibility of the numbering system. Definitions sections are examples of this system of numbering items in a list.

Arrangement of Specific Types of Material Within the Code

Title 1 of the Official Code of Georgia Annotated relates to general provisions applicable either to the adoption of the Code itself or to the enactment of laws generally. Title 1 contains an expression of legislative intent in the enactment of the Code, provides for severability for the Code and future laws as well, preserves certain types of Acts which are not codified, provides for the specific repeal of prior codes and laws, describes classes and categories of persons, provides for rights of persons, provides for rules of statutory construction, and provides for definitions of terms used throughout the Code. All persons are urged to read Title 1 prior to using the Code.

In the same manner that Title 1 contains material which is applicable to the entire Code, most titles within the Code contain a general provisions chapter as Chapter 1 of the title. This chapter contains definitions and other material of general application throughout the particular title.

Within each chapter, article, part, and subpart, certain types of material generally will be arranged in a uniform manner throughout the Code. The short title of a law, if any, will be the first Code section, followed by the Code section stating the purpose or legislative findings, followed by Code section defining certain words and phrases used in that law. Within the body of the chapter, article, part, or subpart, related Code sections will be grouped together. Penalty Code sections are generally at the end of the material to which they relate.

Title and Chapter Analyses

Preceding each title in the Code is a title analysis which lists the numbers and captions of each chapter within the title.

Preceding each chapter in the Code is a chapter analysis which lists each article, part, and subpart within the chapter and each Code section and its catchline.

History Lines

Generally, each Code section is followed by a history line which includes citations to the Georgia Laws and prior official compilations of the laws of the state, pertaining to substantially the same subject matter as the present Code section. Unofficial codes are not cited in the history lines. No history line is included for those Code sections which are enacted by the Official Code of Georgia Annotated itself. Examples of these types of Code sections include those Code sections in Title 1 dealing with the enactment of the Official Code of Georgia Annotated and Code sections in other titles which provide new title-wide definitions not previously included in the law.

Quite often the history lines not only will reflect the most recent specific enactment of a Code section but also will trace similar provisions of law existing prior to the most recent specific enactment, even though that enactment may not have expressly amended any of the prior similar provisions and may in fact have repealed them. For example, Ga. L. 1977, p. 396 enacted a new game and fish code (now codified primarily at Title 27) which repealed most of the then-existing provisions of law relating to game and fish. However, rather than beginning each history line in Title 27 with the most recent specific enactment (Ga. L. 1977, p. 396), the editors have examined the pre-1977 game and fish Acts, compared the subject matter of those Acts with the subject matter of each section of Ga. L. 1977, p. 396, and added history where appropriate. This tracing procedure serves the purpose of providing more complete historical information and recognizes the fact that many repeals by the General Assembly have the practical effect of amending or renumbering existing provisions of law.

In some cases the history lines may provide a quick method of translating sections of the Code to sections of prior codes. However, since the history lines do not cite unofficial codifications of provisions of Georgia law, reference generally should be made to the conversion tables in Volume 41 whenever a translation of a new Code section to a prior provision of law is desired.

Bill numbers are included in history lines for Acts enacted in 2005 and later.

History lines are provided for those numbered paragraphs of the 1983 Georgia Constitution that have been amended or added since that Constitution was ratified in 1982.

Repeal Lines

When a Code section is repealed, its Code section number and catchline are set out, followed by a notation that the particular section has been repealed. An Editor's note under the repeal line lists citations to the Georgia Laws on which the repealed Code section was based, and refers the user to the Code provisions, if any, now covering the subject of the repealed Code section.

Cross References

Appropriate cross references between related provisions of the Code are included at the beginning of the annotations for a particular title, chapter, article, part, subpart, or Code section.

Case Annotations

LexisNexis® has prepared and included in the Official Code of Georgia Annotated a complete set of case annotations. All decisions of the Supreme Court of Georgia and the Court of Appeals of Georgia and all decisions of the federal courts in cases which arose in Georgia construing any portion of the general statutory law of the state, the Constitution of the United States, and the Constitution of Georgia have been examined and appropriate annotations have been prepared and included under a "Judicial Decisions" heading following the title, chapter, article, part, subpart, or Code section designation of the Official Code of Georgia Annotated to which they relate. Annotations contain the name of the case, the complete official and unofficial citations, and the year of the decision. Normally, constructions of statutes relating to constitutionality thereof appear first in the annotations for a particular provision of the Code.

Editor's Notes and Code Commission Notes

If the editorial staff of LexisNexis®, the Code Revision Commission, or the commission's staff felt that an explanatory note would be helpful to users of the Code, such notes were added as editor's notes or Code Commission notes.

Law Reviews

Appropriate articles and notes from each law review which is published in the State of Georgia are noted following the title, Code section, or other designation to which they relate.

Opinions of the Attorney General of Georgia

Where appropriate, annotations are included concerning relevant opinions of the Attorney General of Georgia, and citations to those opinions are given. These annotations are included under the heading "Opinions of the Attorney General" following the particular title, Code section, or other designation to which they relate.

Advisory Opinions of the State Bar

Where appropriate, annotations are included concerning relevant advisory opinions of the State Bar of Georgia, and citations to those opinions are given. These annotations are included under the heading "Advisory Opinions of the State Bar" following the particular title, Code section, or other designation to which they relate.

Decisions and Opinions Under Prior Law

Editor's notes or the subheadings "Decisions Under Prior Law" and "Opinions Under Prior Law" appear in the case annotations and the annotations to Attorney General opinions. These editor's notes and subheadings are utilized to indicate a judicial decision or an Attorney General opinion under a provision of law which was specifically repealed subsequent to the decision or opinion but which was succeeded by a provision similar to the repealed provision, so that the decision or opinion has continued relevance to an effective provision of law.

Research References

To aid in legal research, collateral references have been included to appropriate material in American Jurisprudence, Corpus Juris Secundum, American Law Reports, and Uniform Laws Annotated. These annotations are included under the heading "Research References" following the particular title, Code section, or other designation to which they relate.

Indexes

—General Index

The Official Code of Georgia Annotated contains a completely new general index prepared by LexisNexis®. Index entries have been produced by an actual reading of the body of the statutes and other material and not merely from headings or catchlines. All major headings in the Code are represented in the index.

—Volume Indexes

In addition to the general index, each volume of the Code contains an individual volume index covering the material contained in that volume. Individual volume indexes will not be revised in the annual supplements to the volumes but will be revised and updated when a volume is recompiled and republished.

—Index of Local and Special Laws and General Laws of Local Application

In addition to the general index, a complete, new index to local and special laws and general laws of local application has been compiled and published as a part of the Code. This index contains citations to the Georgia Laws from 1730 to the present. Entries are divided into current and noncurrent laws in order to eliminate the necessity of having to examine repealed laws when attempting to locate currently effective laws. Index entries were prepared after a complete reading of each statute. After the index was prepared, each entry was compared with the Georgia Laws to ensure the accuracy of the index entries.

For further information regarding the index to local and special laws and general laws of local application, see the foreword to that index and the user's guide preceding the portion of that index dealing specifically with general laws of local application.

Conversion Tables

Conversion tables have been included in Volume 41 to assist the user of the Code in converting citations between the Official Code of Georgia Annotated and the Georgia Code Annotated, the Code of Georgia of 1933, and all previous codes of the State of Georgia. Also included are a table showing the location of each section of the Georgia Laws which has been codified in the Official Code of Georgia Annotated and tables which indicate corresponding provisions of the 1877 Constitution of Georgia, the 1945 Constitution of Georgia, the 1976 Constitution of Georgia, and the 1983 Constitution of Georgia. Conversion tables for the present and prior Constitutions of Georgia are also contained in Volume 2.

Dictionary

In the preparation of this Code, the Code Revision Commission and The Michie Company utilized Funk & Wagnalls Standard College Dictionary, copyright 1977 by Harper & Row, Publishers, Inc., as a standard reference work.

Secretary of State's Certificates

In each statutory volume as well as in the volume containing the Constitution of Georgia, there is included in the front matter a certification by the Secretary of State of Georgia that the statutes or constitutional provisions contained in that volume are true and correct copies of such material as enacted by the General Assembly of Georgia, all as the same appear of file and record in the office of the Secretary of State.

Table of Titles

- Title 1. General Provisions.
2. Agriculture.
 3. Alcoholic Beverages.
 4. Animals.
 5. Appeal and Error.
 6. Aviation.
 7. Banking and Finance.
 8. Buildings and Housing.
 9. Civil Practice.
 10. Commerce and Trade.
 11. Commercial Code.
 12. Conservation and Natural Resources.
 13. Contracts.
 14. Corporations, Partnerships, and Associations.
 15. Courts.
 16. Crimes and Offenses.
 17. Criminal Procedure.
 18. Debtor and Creditor.
 19. Domestic Relations.
 20. Education.
 21. Elections.
 22. Eminent Domain.
 23. Equity.
 24. Evidence.
 25. Fire Protection and Safety.
 26. Food, Drugs, and Cosmetics.
 27. Game and Fish.
 28. General Assembly.
 29. Guardian and Ward.

TABLE OF TITLES

30. Handicapped Persons.
31. Health.
32. Highways, Bridges, and Ferries.
33. Insurance.
34. Labor and Industrial Relations.
35. Law Enforcement Officers and Agencies.
36. Local Government.
37. Mental Health.
38. Military, Emergency Management, and Veterans Affairs.
39. Minors.
40. Motor Vehicles and Traffic.
41. Nuisances.
42. Penal Institutions.
43. Professions and Businesses.
44. Property.
45. Public Officers and Employees.
46. Public Utilities and Public Transportation.
47. Retirement and Pensions.
48. Revenue and Taxation.
49. Social Services.
50. State Government.
51. Torts.
52. Waters of the State, Ports, and Watercraft.
53. Wills, Trusts, and Administration of Estates.

In Addition, This Publication Includes

Constitution of the United States

Constitution of the State of Georgia

Tables of Comparative Sections

Table of Acts

Index to Local and Special Laws

TABLE OF TITLES

Index to General Laws of Local Application

Short Title Index

General Index

Table of Contents

VOLUME 1

	PAGE
Constitution of the United States	1
Index to the Constitution	1105

CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

ARTICLE I

Sec.

1. Legislative Powers.
2. House of Representatives, How Constituted, Power of Impeachment.
3. The Senate, How Constituted, Impeachment Trials.
4. Elections of Senators and Representatives, Meetings.
5. Quorum, Journals, Meetings, Adjournments.
6. Compensation, Privileges, Disabilities.
7. Procedure in Passing Bills and Resolutions.
8. Powers of Congress.
9. Limitations upon Powers of Congress.
10. Restrictions upon Powers of States.

ARTICLE II

Sec.

1. Executive Power, Election, Qualifications of the President.
2. Powers of the President.
3. Powers and Duties of the President.
4. Impeachment.

ARTICLE III

Sec.

1. Judicial Power, Tenure of Office.
2. Jurisdiction.
3. Treason, Proof and Punishment.

ARTICLE IV

Sec.

1. Faith and Credit among States.
2. Privileges and Immunities, Fugitives.
3. Admission of New States, Territory and Other Property.
4. Guarantee of Republican Government.

ARTICLE V

Amendment of the Constitution

ARTICLE VI

Debts, Supremacy, Oath

CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES

ARTICLE VII

Ratification and Establishment

AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION

AMENDMENT I

Freedom of Religion, of Speech, and of the Press.

AMENDMENT II

Right to Keep and Bear Arms.

AMENDMENT III

Quartering of Soldiers.

AMENDMENT IV

Security from Unwarrantable Search and Seizure.

AMENDMENT V

Rights of Accused in Criminal Proceedings.

AMENDMENT VI

Right to Speedy Trial, Witnesses, etc.

AMENDMENT VII

Trial by Jury in Civil Cases.

AMENDMENT VIII

Bails, Fines, Punishments.

AMENDMENT IX

Reservation of Rights of the People.

AMENDMENT X

Powers Reserved to States or People.

AMENDMENT XI

Restriction of Judicial Power.

AMENDMENT XII

Election of President and Vice-President.

CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES

AMENDMENT XIII

Sec.

1. Abolition of Slavery.
2. Power to Enforce this Article.

AMENDMENT XIV

Sec.

1. Citizenship Rights Not to Be Abridged by States.
2. Apportionment of Representatives in Congress.
3. Persons Disqualified from Holding Office.
4. What Public Debts are Valid.
5. Power to Enforce This Article.

AMENDMENT XV

Sec.

1. Negro Suffrage.
2. Power to Enforce This Article.

AMENDMENT XVI

Authorizing Income Taxes.

AMENDMENT XVII

Popular Election of Senators.

AMENDMENT XVIII

Sec.

1. National Liquor Prohibition.
2. Power to Enforce This Article.
3. Ratification within Seven Years.

AMENDMENT XIX

Woman Suffrage.

AMENDMENT XX

Sec.

1. Terms of Office.
2. Time of Convening Congress.
3. Death of President Elect.
4. Election of the President.
5. Effective Date of Sections 1 and 2.
6. Ratification within Seven Years.

CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES

AMENDMENT XXI

Sec.

1. National Liquor Prohibition Repealed.
2. Transportation of Liquor into "Dry" States.
3. Ratification within Seven Years.

AMENDMENT XXII

Sec.

1. Terms of Office of the President.
2. Ratification within Seven Years.

AMENDMENT XXIII

Sec.

1. Electors for President and Vice President in District of Columbia.
2. Power to Enforce Article.

AMENDMENT XXIV

Sec.

1. Poll Tax Payment Not Required to Vote in Federal Elections.
2. Power to Enforce Article.

AMENDMENT XXV

Sec.

1. Succession upon Death, Resignation or Removal of President.
2. Vacancy in Office of Vice President.
3. Declaration by President of Inability to Perform Duties.
4. Declaration of President's Disability by Vice President and Other Officers; Determination of Issue.

AMENDMENT XXVI

Sec.

1. Voting by Persons Eighteen Years of Age.
2. Power to Enforce Article.

AMENDMENT XXVII

Laws Varying Compensation for Services of Senators and Representatives.

Editor's notes. — The article, amendment, and section headings appearing in brackets have been inserted in this printing of the original Constitution. They generally follow those in the printing contained in The Constitution of the United States (5th Ed., 1952), published by the Library of Congress.

CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES

[Preamble]

WE THE PEOPLE of the United States, in Order to form a more perfect Union, establish Justice, insure domestic Tranquility, provide for the common defence, promote the general Welfare, and secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity, do ordain and establish this CONSTITUTION for the United States of America.

Law reviews. — For article, "The Literary Force of the Preamble," see 39 Mercer L. Rev. 879 (1988). For introduction to symposium on religious dimensions of American constitutionalism, see 39 Emory L.J. 1 (1990). For article, "Religious Dimensions in the Development of American Constitutionalism," see 39 Emory L.J. 21 (1990). For article, "Constitutionalism as the American Religion: The Good Portion," see 39 Emory L.J. 203 (1990).

For note, "The Application of the Constitution Outside the Continental Limits of the United States," see 21 Ga. B.J. 246 (1958).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

State prisoners. — Constitutionally protected freedoms enjoyed by citizens-at-large may be withdrawn or constricted as to state prisoners, so far as justified by the considerations underlying our penal system. Polakoff v. Henderson, 370 F. Supp. 690 (N.D. Ga. 1973), aff'd, 488 F.2d 977 (5th Cir. 1974).

In order to raise a question as to the constitutionality of a "law," at least three things must be shown: (1) statute or particular part or parts of statute which the party would challenge must be stated or pointed out with fair precision; (2) the provisions of the Constitution, which it is claimed have been violated, must be clearly designated; and (3) it must be shown wherein the statute, or some designated part of it, violates such constitutional provision. Lockaby v. City of Cedartown, 151 Ga. App. 281, 259 S.E.2d 683 (1979).

ARTICLE I.

Law reviews. — For article, “Closes When Congress Doesn’t Do Its Job,” see 40 Emory L.J. 1007 (1991).

Section 1.

[Legislative Powers]

All legislative Powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.

Law reviews. — For article discussing validity of “executive privilege” as defense to congressional demand for information, see 8 Ga. L. Rev. 809 (1974). For article discussing the separation of powers implications of implied rights of actions, see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 973 (1983). For article, “Congress: The Purse, the Purpose, and the Power,” 21 Ga. L. Rev. 1 (1986). For article, “The Impact of the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations on Federal Policy,” 21 Ga. L. Rev. 17 (1986). For article, “Congress As Constitutional Decisionmaker and Its Power to Counter Judicial Doctrine,” 21 Ga. L. Rev. 57 (1986). For article, “Separation of Political Powers: Boundaries or Balance?,” 21 Ga. L. Rev. 171 (1986). For article, “The Framers’ Understanding of Constitutional Deliberation in Congress,” 21 Ga. L. Rev. 217 (1986). For article, “An Overview of the New Federal Sentencing Guidelines,” see 25 Ga. St. B.J. 16 (1988). For article, “The Separation of Powers in a Federal System,” see 37 Emory L.J. 538 (1988). For introduction to symposium on separation of powers, see 37 Emory L.J. 535 (1988). For article, “Preserving Judicial Integrity: Some Comments on the Role of the Judiciary Under the ‘Blending’ of Powers,” see 37 Emory L.J. 587 (1988). For article, “The Preservation of Individual Liberty Through the Separation of Powers and Federalism: Reflections on the Shaping of Constitutional Immortality,” see 37 Emory L.J. 613 (1988). For article, “The Illegitimacy of the Public Interest Standard at the FCC,” see 38 Emory L.J. 714 (1989).

For note, “Bowsher v. Synar: Bright-Line Rule or Dice-Toss Approach to Separation of Powers?,” see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 969 (1987).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Congress may fix standard and delegate details. — Legislative power of Congress cannot be delegated, but it is equally well settled that Congress may declare its will, and, after fixing a primary standard, devolve upon administrative officers the “power to fill up the details” by prescribing administrative rules. It is difficult to define the line which separates legislative power to make laws from administrative authority to make regulations, but when Congress has legislated and indicated its will, it can give to those who are to act under such general provisions power to fill up the details by the establishment of administrative rules and regulations, violation of which can be punished by fine or imprisonment fixed by Congress. Richmond Hosiery Mills v. Camp, 7 F.

Supp. 139 (N.D. Ga. 1934), aff’d, 74 F.2d 200 (5th Cir. 1934).

Delegation of rule-making authority not delegation of legislative power. — That Congress cannot delegate legislative power is a principle universally recognized as vital to the integrity and maintenance of the system of government ordained by the Constitution; but the authority to make administrative rules is not a delegation of legislative power, nor are such rules raised from an administrative to a legislative character because the violation thereof is punished as a public offense. So long as a policy is laid down and a standard established by a statute, no unconstitutional delegation of legislative power is involved in leaving to selected instrumentalities the making of subordinate rules within prescribed limits and the determination of facts to which the policy as declared by the legislature is to apply; but the constant recognition of the necessity and validity of such provisions, and the wide range of administrative authority which has been developed by means of them, cannot be allowed to obscure the limitations of the authority to delegate if our constitutional system is to be maintained. United States v. Griffin, 12 F. Supp. 135 (S.D. Ga. 1935).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Constitutionality and construction of Emergency Price Control Act as relating to rent, 148 ALR 1403; 149 ALR 1467; 150 ALR 1462; 151 ALR 1465; 152 ALR 1462; 153 ALR 1434; 154 ALR 1460; 155 ALR 1461; 156 ALR 1459; 157 ALR 1457; 158 ALR 1464.

Constitutionality, construction, and application of Emergency Price Control Act, 148 ALR 1429; 149 ALR 1472; 150 ALR 1470; 151 ALR 1469; 152 ALR 1472; 153 ALR 1444; 154 ALR 1468; 155 ALR 1467; 156 ALR 1467; 157 ALR 1463; 158 ALR 1474.

Power and duty of court where Legislature renders constitutional mandate ineffectual by failing to enact statute necessary to make it effective or by repealing or amending statute previously passed for that purpose, 153 ALR 522.

Implied cause of action for damages for violation of provisions of state constitutions, 75 ALR5th 619.

Validity, construction, and effect of domestic currency transaction reporting requirement based upon 31 U.S.C.S. § 5313(a), 89 ALR Fed. 770.

Section 2.

[House of Representatives, How Constituted, Power of Impeachment]

The House of Representatives, shall be composed of Members chosen every second Year by the People of the several States, and the Electors in each State shall have the Qualifications requisite for Electors of the most numerous Branch of the State Legislature.

No Person shall be a Representative who shall not have attained to the Age of twenty-five Years, and been seven Years a Citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an Inhabitant of that State in which he shall be chosen.

Representatives and direct Taxes shall be apportioned among the several States which may be included within this Union, according to their respective Numbers, which shall be determined by adding to the whole Number of free Persons, including those bound to Service for a Term of Years, and excluding Indians not taxed, three fifths of all other Persons. The actual Enumeration shall be made within three Years after the first Meeting of the Congress of the United States, and within every subsequent Term of ten Years, in such Manner as they shall by Law direct. The Number of Representatives shall not exceed one for every thirty Thousand, but each State shall have at Least one Representative; and until such enumeration shall be made, the State of New Hampshire shall be entitled to chuse three, Massachusetts eight, Rhode-Island and Providence Plantations one, Connecticut five, New York six, New Jersey four, Pennsylvania eight, Delaware one, Maryland six, Virginia ten, North Carolina five, South Carolina five, and Georgia three.

When vacancies happen in the Representation from any State, the Executive Authority thereof shall issue Writs of Election to fill such Vacancies.

The House of Representatives shall chuse their Speaker and other Officers; and shall have the sole Power of Impeachment.

Cross references. — Qualifications of electors, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. I; Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. II; and § 21-2-219. Factors disqualifying a person from nomination or election, §§ 21-2-7, 21-2-8. Filling vacancies, § 21-2-543.

Editor's notes. — U.S. Const., amend. 14, sec. III, modifies clause 2 of this section by imposing additional, but probably anachronistic, disqualifying criteria. The phrase "three fifths of all other persons" in clause 3 of this section referred to slaves and has been rendered obsolete by U.S. Const., amend. 13. The entire first sentence of clause 3 was subsequently superseded by U.S. Const., amend. 14, sec. II.

Law reviews. — For article analyzing constitutionally permissible modifications in qualifications established for representatives and senators, see 17 J. of Pub. L. 103 (1968). For article, "Reapportionment Recapitulated: 1960-1970," see 7 Ga. St. B.J. 191 (1970). For article considering the power of the United States House of Representatives to expel a member and the power of the judiciary to review such an expulsion, see 5 Ga. L. Rev. 203 (1971). For survey of commercial law, see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 31 (1982). For article, "Georgia and the Development of Constitutional Principles: An Essay in Honor of the Bicentennial," see 24 Ga. St. B.J. 6 (1987). For article, "Ideology, Religion, and the Constitutional Protection of Private Property: 1760-1860," see 39 Emory L.J. 65 (1990).

For comment on South v. Peters, 339 U.S. 276, 70 S. Ct. 641, 94 L. Ed. 834 (1950) denying federal jurisdiction in case involving apportionment, see 2 Mercer L. Rev. 275 (1950). For comment on Wesberry v. Sanders, 376 U.S. 1, 84 S. Ct. 526, 11 L. Ed. 2d 81 (1964), congressional districting, see 15 Mercer L. Rev. 504 (1964). For comment discussing "one man, one vote" doctrine in light of Wilkins v. Davis, 205 Va. 803, 139 S.E.2d 849 (1965), see 16 Mercer L. Rev. 446 (1965). For comment on Jenness v. Little, 306 F. Supp. 925 (N.D. Ga. 1969), on motion for stay on appeal and injunctive relief sub nom., Matthews v. Little, 396 U.S. 1223, 90 S. Ct. 17, 24 L. Ed. 2d 45 (1969), as to the constitutionality of requiring a filing fee as prerequisite to candidacy in municipal elections, see 21 Mercer L. Rev. 369 (1969).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

States can, within limits, specify qualifications of voters in both state and federal elections; the Constitution makes voters' qualifications rest on state law even in federal elections. Gray v. Sanders, 372 U.S. 368, 83 S. Ct. 801, 9 L. Ed. 2d 821 (1963).

Command that representatives be chosen "by the People of the several States" means that as nearly as is practicable one person's vote in a congressional election is to be worth as much as another's. Wesberry v. Sanders, 376 U.S. 1, 84 S. Ct. 526, 11 L. Ed. 2d 481 (1964).

Within the states, legislatures may not draw lines of congressional districts in such a way as to give some voters a greater voice than others in choosing a congressional representative. Wesberry v. Sanders, 376 U.S. 1, 84 S. Ct. 526, 11 L. Ed. 2d 481 (1964).

U.S. Const., art. I, sec. II, cl. 2 provides the sole and exclusive qualifications which must be met by a candidate for election to the United States House of Representatives. Lowe v. Fowler, 240 Ga. 213, 240 S.E.2d 70 (1977).

Judicial review of census not a political question. — Judicial review of the accuracy of the federal census does not raise a nonjusticiable political question under U.S. Const., art. I, sec. II, cl. 3, which grants the exclusive power to Congress to determine the manner in which the census is conducted but does not exclude judicial review. City of Willacoochee v. Baldridge, 556 F. Supp. 551 (S.D. Ga. 1983).

Cited in Consolidated Utils. Co. v. Commissioner, 84 F.2d 548 (5th Cir. 1936); In re Cent. of Ga. Ry., 47 F. Supp. 786 (S.D. Ga.

1942); King v. Chapman, 62 F. Supp. 639 (M.D. Ga. 1945); Pollard v. State, 128 Ga. App. 470, 197 S.E.2d 158 (1973); Smith v. State, 138 Ga. App. 226, 225 S.E.2d 744 (1976); Duncan v. Poythress, 657 F.2d 691 (5th Cir. 1981).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Section enumerates qualifications for federal office. — The only qualifications a candidate must possess to be eligible to seek the office of United States representative are those enumerated in U.S. Const., art. I, sec. II, cl. 2. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-62.

Other residency requirements unenforceable. — Insofar as they require a candidate for the United States House of Representatives to be a registered voter or to be a resident of the district from which election is sought, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. II, Para. III and O.C.G.A. § 21-2-132 are unenforceable. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-62.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Constitutionality of statute permitting payment of taxes in instalments, 101 ALR 1335.

Section 3.

[The Senate, How Constituted, Impeachment Trials]

The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, chosen by the Legislature thereof, for six Years; and each Senator shall have one Vote.

Immediately after they shall be assembled in Consequence of the first Election, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three Classes. The Seats of the Senators of the first Class shall be vacated at the Expiration of the second Year, of the second Class at the Expiration of the fourth Year, and of the third Class at the Expiration of the sixth Year, so that one-third may be chosen every second Year; and if Vacancies happen by Resignation, or otherwise, during the Recess of the Legislature of any State, the Executive thereof may make temporary Appointments until the next Meeting of the Legislature, which shall then fill such Vacancies.

No Person shall be a Senator who shall not have attained to the Age of thirty Years, and been nine Years a Citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an Inhabitant of that State for which he shall be chosen.

The Vice President of the United States shall be President of the Senate, but shall have no Vote, unless they be equally divided.

The Senate shall chuse their other Officers, and also a President pro tempore, in the Absence of the Vice President, or when he shall exercise the Office of President of the United States.

The Senate shall have the sole Power to try all Impeachments. When sitting for that Purpose, they shall be on Oath or Affirmation. When the President of the United States is tried, the Chief Justice shall preside: And no Person shall be convicted without the Concurrence of two thirds of the Members present.

Judgment in Cases of Impeachment shall not extend further than to removal from Office, and disqualification to hold and enjoy any Office of honor, Trust or Profit under the United States; but the Party convicted shall nevertheless be liable and subject to Indictment, Trial, Judgment and Punishment, according to Law.

Cross references. — Factors disqualifying a person from nomination or election, §§ 21-2-7, 21-2-8.

Editor's notes. — The manner in which senators are "chosen" and vacancies filled, as prescribed by clauses 1 and 2 of this section, respectively, has been modified by U.S. Const., amend. 17. United States Const., amend. 14, sec. III, modifies clause 3 of this section by imposing additional, but probably anachronistic, disqualifying criteria.

Law reviews. — For article analyzing constitutionally permissible modifications in qualifications established for representatives and senators, see 17 J. of Pub. L. 103 (1968). For article, "Chief Justice Burger and Extra-Case Activism," see 20 J. of Pub. L. 533 (1971).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Cited in South v. Peters, 89 F. Supp. 672 (N.D. Ga. 1950); Wesberry v. Sanders, 376 U.S. 1, 84 S. Ct. 526, 11 L. Ed. 2d 481 (1964); Bond v. Floyd, 251 F. Supp. 333 (N.D. Ga.

1966); Public Citizen, Inc. v. Miller, 813 F. Supp. 821 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 992 F.2d 1548 (11th Cir. 1993).

Section 4.

[Elections of Senators and Representatives, Meetings]

The Times, Places and Manner of holding Elections for Senators and Representatives, shall be prescribed in each State by the Legislature thereof; but the Congress may at any time by Law make or alter such Regulations, except as to the Places of chusing Senators.

The Congress shall assemble at least once in every Year, and such Meeting shall be on the first Monday in December, unless they shall by Law appoint a different Day.

Cross references. — Manner of holding elections, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II and §§ 21-2-267, 21-2-280, 21-2-380 through 21-2-390, 21-2-400 et seq., and 21-2-540. Times of elections, §§ 21-2-150, 21-2-541. Places of elections, §§ 21-2-265, 21-2-266, 21-2-269.

Editor's notes. — The date on which Congress shall assemble each year has been modified by U.S. Const., amend. 20, sec. II.

Law reviews. — For article, "Speech and Campaign Reform: Congress, The Courts and Community," see 14 Ga. L. Rev. 195 (1980).

For comment on South v. Peters, 339 U.S. 276, 70 S. Ct. 641, 94 L. Ed. 834 (1950) denying federal jurisdiction in case involving apportionment, see 2 Mercer L. Rev. 275 (1950).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

State congressional apportionment laws. — Nothing in the language of U.S. Const., art. I, sec. IV gives support to a construction that would immunize state congressional apportionment laws which debase citizen's right to vote from power of courts to protect constitutional rights of individuals from legislative destruction. Wesberry v. Sanders, 376 U.S. 1, 84 S. Ct. 526, 11 L. Ed. 2d 481 (1964).

Regulation of mixed state-federal election. — The United States Constitution's necessary and proper clause, U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl. 18, along with U.S. Const., art. I, sec. IV, empowers Congress to regulate mixed federal-state elections, even if the federal candidate is unopposed. United States v. McCranie, 169 F.3d 723 (11th Cir. 1999).

Cited in Cook v. Fortson, 68 F. Supp. 624 (N.D. Ga. 1946); South v. Peters, 89 F. Supp. 672 (N.D. Ga. 1950); Bond v. Fortson, 334 F. Supp. 1192 (N.D. Ga. 1971); Public Citizen, Inc. v. Miller, 813 F. Supp. 821 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 992 F.2d 1548 (11th Cir. 1993).

Section 5.

[Quorum, Journals, Meetings, Adjournments]

Each House shall be the Judge of the Elections, Returns and Qualifications of its own Members, and a Majority of each shall constitute a Quorum to do Business; but a smaller Number may adjourn from day to day, and may be authorized to compel the Attendance of absent Members, in such Manner, and under such Penalties as each House may provide.

Each House may determine the Rules of its Proceedings, punish its Members for disorderly Behaviour, and with the Concurrence of two thirds, expel a Member.

Each House shall keep a Journal of its Proceedings, and from time to time publish the same, excepting such Parts as may in their Judgment require Secrecy; and the Yeas and Nays of the Members of either House on any question shall, at the Desire of one fifth of those Present, be entered on the Journal.

Neither House, during the Session of Congress, shall, without the Consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other Place than that in which the two Houses shall be sitting.

Law reviews. — For article considering the power of the United States House of Representatives to expel a member and the power of the judiciary to review such an expulsion, see 5 Ga. L. Rev. 203 (1971). For article discussing validity of "executive privilege" as defense to congressional demand for information, see 8 Ga. L. Rev. 809 (1974).

For comment on South v. Peters, 339 U.S. 276, 70 S. Ct. 641, 94 L. Ed. 834 (1950) denying federal jurisdiction in case involving apportionment, see 2 Mercer L. Rev. 275 (1950).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Judicial interference only upon showing of denial of due process. — If judicial interference can be successfully invoked under U.S. Const., art. I, sec. V, cls. 1 and 2, it can only be upon a clear showing of such arbitrary and improvident use of the power as will constitute a denial of due process of law. Bond v. Floyd, 251 F. Supp. 333 (N.D. Ga.), rev'd on other grounds, 385 U.S. 116, 87 S. Ct. 339, 17 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1966).

Senate power of self-protection. — Under the Constitution, the Senate of the United States necessarily possesses the inherent power of self-protection. Bond v. Floyd, 251 F. Supp. 333 (N.D. Ga.), rev'd on other grounds, 385 U.S. 116, 87 S. Ct. 339, 17 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1966).

Courts of this state have jurisdiction of a proceeding brought under Art. 13, Ch. 2, T. 21, to obtain a recount of all or a portion of the ballots cast in an election for a representative to either House of Congress. Blackburn v. Hall, 115 Ga. App. 235, 154 S.E.2d 392 (1967).

A generalized assertion of privilege yields to a demonstrated, specific need for evidence in a pending criminal trial. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd on other grounds, 519 F.2d 184 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1976).

Privilege may not be invoked at expense of defendant's rights. — The legislative branch is not entitled to invoke privilege of confidentiality at the expense of an individual accused's right to evidence at a criminal trial. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd on other grounds, 519 F.2d 184 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1976).

Since the government that prosecutes an accused also has the duty to protect the defendant's constitutional rights, it may not undertake prosecution and then invoke its governmental privileges to deprive the accused of anything that might be material to the defense. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd on other grounds, 519 F.2d 184 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1976).

Scope of power to investigate. — Although the power of Congress to investigate for legislative purposes is inherent, it is not unlimited, and is always subject to limitations imposed by the individual guarantees of the Bill of Rights. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd on other grounds, 519 F.2d 184 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1976).

There is no presidential privilege to withhold evidence that is demonstrably relevant in a criminal trial because of the guarantee of due process of law and the necessity to protect basic function of the courts. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd on other grounds, 519 F.2d 184 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1976).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — State court jurisdiction over contest involving primary election for member of Congress, 68 ALR2d 1320.

Section 6.

[Compensation, Privileges, Disabilities]

The Senators and Representatives shall receive a Compensation for their Services, to be ascertained by Law, and paid out of the Treasury of the United States. They shall in all Cases, except Treason, Felony and Breach of the Peace, be privileged from Arrest during their Attendance at the Session of their respective Houses, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any Speech or Debate in either House, they shall not be questioned in any other Place.

No Senator or Representative shall, during the Time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil Office under the Authority of the United States, which shall have been created, or the Emoluments whereof shall have been encreased during such time; and no Person holding any Office under the United States, shall be a Member of either House during his Continuance in Office.

Cross references. — Comparable prohibition against holding multiple offices or accepting office created during elected officer's term, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. II, Para. IV. Comparable privilege from arrest for General Assembly members, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IV, Para. IX.

Law reviews. — For article, "The Supreme Court and Civil Liberties: 1974-1975," see 24 Emory L.J. 937 (1975). For article, "Congress and the Fourth Amendment," 21 Ga. L. Rev. 107 (1986). For essay, "Standing and Rights," see 36 Emory L.J. 1195 (1987). For article, "The Illegitimacy of the Public Interest Standard at the FCC," see 38 Emory L.J. 714 (1989). For article, "Spallone v. United States: When Constitutional Principles Collide," see 7 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 527 (1991).

For note discussing parameters of speech and debate clause as a defense in private civil suits and proposing balancing test to limit the privilege, see 10 Ga. L. Rev. 953 (1976).

For comment on Methodist Fed'n for Social Action v. Eastland, 141 F. Supp. 729 (D.C. Cir. 1956) (three judges sitting), holding that the federal district court could not prevent the publication of a congressional handbook even though it falsely and defamatorily stated that plaintiff organization was a communist front, see 19 Ga. B.J. 366 (1957). For comment on Eastland v. United States Servicemen's Fund, 421 U.S. 491, 955 S. Ct. 1813, 44 L. Ed. 324 (1975), refusing to allow a first amendment exception to the privilege of legislative immunity, see 27 Mercer L. Rev. 1195 (1976).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Comparable Georgia Constitution provision. — Georgia Const. 1976, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. XII (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IV, Para. IX) is similar to U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VI, cl. 1. Village of N. Atlanta v. Cook, 219 Ga. 316, 133 S.E.2d 585 (1963).

Violation of speech or debate clause. — The speech or debate clause prohibited inquiry into a member of Congress's committee assignments even if the member's specific legislative acts were not mentioned since the privilege protects legislative status as well as legislative acts and the government's inquiry into defendant's committee memberships actually amounted to an inquiry into legislative acts where the government was allowed to argue a permissive inference that the defendant knew the details of the money-laundering statutes because of the defendant's status as a member of the Banking and Judiciary Committees. United States v. Swindall, 971 F.2d 1531

(11th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1040, 114 S. Ct. 683, 126 L. Ed. 2d 650 (1994).

Because the indictment charged that the defendant, a former member of the United States House of Representatives, had discussed money laundering transactions with an undercover agent and an intermediary, and then falsely testified to a grand jury to conceal the extent of the defendant's involvement in these discussions, questioning the defendant before the grand jury about the committee memberships violated the speech or debate clause of the United States Constitution; it was error to allow reference to be made to the defendant's committee memberships both in the grand jury proceeding and at trial; and the remedy for the violations of the privilege was dismissal of the affected counts. United States v. Swindall, 971 F.2d 1531 (11th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1040, 114 S. Ct. 683, 126 L. Ed. 2d 650 (1994).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Constitutional provision against increase in compensation of public officer during term of office as applicable to statute providing for first time for compensation for office, 144 ALR 685.

Incompatibility of offices or positions in the military and in the civil services, 147 ALR 1419; 148 ALR 1399; 150 ALR 1444.

Section 7.

[Procedure in Passing Bills and Resolutions]

All Bills for raising Revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives; but the Senate may propose or concur with Amendments as on other Bills.

Every Bill which shall have passed the House of Representatives and the Senate, shall, before it become a Law, be presented to the President of the United States; if he approve he shall sign it, but if not he shall return it, with his Objections to that House in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the Objections at large on their Journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If after such Reconsideration two thirds of that House shall agree to pass the Bill, it shall be sent, together with the Objections, to the other House, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two thirds of that House, it shall become a Law. But in all such Cases the Votes of both Houses shall be determined by yeas and Nays, and the Names of the Persons voting for and against the Bill shall be entered on the Journal of each House respectively. If any Bill shall not be returned by the President within ten Days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the Same shall be a Law, in like Manner as if he had signed it, unless the Congress by their Adjournment prevent its Return, in which Case it shall not be a Law.

Every Order, Resolution, or Vote to which the Concurrence of the Senate and House of Representatives may be necessary (except on a question of Adjournment) shall be presented to the President of the United States; and before the Same shall take Effect, shall be approved by him, or being disapproved by him, shall be repassed by two thirds of the Senate and the House of Representatives, according to the Rules and Limitations prescribed in the Case of a Bill.

Cross references. — Effective date of Georgia Acts, § 1-3-4.

Editor's notes. — Unless otherwise provided in the subject legislation itself, a bill takes effect as of the date of its enactment. Lapeyre v. United States, 87 U.S. (17 Wall.) 191, 26 L. Ed. 606 (1872).

Law reviews. — For article, "History of the Veto Power in Georgia," see 8 Ga. St. B.J. 513 (1972). For survey of 1987 Eleventh Circuit cases on administrative law, see 39 Mercer L. Rev. 1057 (1988). For article, "The Illegitimacy of the Public Interest Standard at the FCC," see 38 Emory L.J. 714 (1989).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — What amounts to an adjournment within constitutional provision that bill shall become a law if not returned by executive within specified time, unless adjournment prevents its return, 64 ALR 1446.

Power of executive to sign bill after adjournment, or during recess of Legislature, 64 ALR 1468.

Validity of veto as affected by failure to give reasons for vetoing or objections to measure vetoed, 119 ALR 1189.

Application of constitutional requirement that bills for raising revenue originate in lower House, 4 ALR2d 973.

Effect of simultaneous repeal and re-enactment of all, or part, of legislative Act, 77 ALR2d 336.

Section 8.

[Powers of Congress]

The Congress shall have Power To lay and collect Taxes, Duties, Imposts and Excises, to pay the Debts and provide for the common Defense and general Welfare of the United States; but all Duties, Imposts and Excises shall be uniform throughout the United States;

To borrow Money on the credit of the United States;

To regulate Commerce with foreign Nations, and among the several States and with the Indian Tribes;

To establish an uniform Rule of Naturalization, and uniform Laws on the subject of Bankruptcies throughout the United States;

To coin Money, regulate the Value thereof, and of foreign Coin, and fix the Standard of Weights and Measures;

To provide for the Punishment of counterfeiting the Securities and current Coin of the United States;

To establish Post Offices and post Roads;

To promote the Progress of Science and useful Arts, by securing for limited Times to Authors and Inventors the exclusive Right to their respective Writings and Discoveries;

To constitute Tribunals inferior to the supreme Court;

To define and punish Piracies and Felonies committed on the high Seas, and Offenses against the Law of Nations;

To declare War, grant Letters of Marque and Reprisal, and make Rules concerning Captures on Land and Water;

To raise and support Armies, but no Appropriation of Money to that Use shall be for a longer Term than two Years;

To provide and maintain a Navy;

To make Rules for the Government and Regulation of the land and naval Forces;

To provide for calling forth the Militia to execute the Laws of the Union, suppress Insurrections and repel Invasions;

To provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining the Militia, and for governing such Part of them as may be employed in the Service of the United States, reserving to the States respectively, the Appointment of the Officers, and the Authority of training the Militia according to the discipline prescribed by Congress;

To exercise exclusive Legislation in all Cases whatsoever, over such District (not exceeding ten Miles square) as may, by Cession of particular States, and the Acceptance of Congress, become the Seat of the Government of the United States, and to exercise like Authority over all Places purchased by the Consent of the Legislature of the State in which the Same shall be, for the Erection of Forts, Magazines, Arsenals, dock-Yards, and other needful Buildings; — And

To make all Laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into Execution the foregoing Powers, and all other Powers vested by this Constitution in the Government of the United States, or in any Department or Officer thereof.

Cross references. — Organization and training of militia, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. II and §§ 38-2-24, 38-2-27, 38-2-132. Weights and measures standards, §§ 10-2-2, 10-2-3. Appointment of militia officers, §§ 38-2-150, 38-2-152, 38-2-210. State cession authority, §§ 50-2-22, 50-2-25. Limited concurrent state and federal jurisdiction over ceded territory, §§ 50-2-23, 50-2-25 through 50-2-27.

Editor's notes. — U.S. Const., amend. 14, sec. IV, modifies clause 1 of this section by forbidding federal or state governments from assuming or paying certain debts.

Law reviews. — For article discussing fishing rights along maritime belt of the United States, in light of Toomer v. Witsell, 334 U.S. 385, 68 S. Ct. 1157, 92 L. Ed. 1460 (1948), see 11 Ga. B.J. 191 (1948). For article, "The Discriminatory Effect of Multiple State Taxation of Interstate Carriers," see 5 J. of Pub. L. 327 (1956). For article, "Georgia Water Law, Use and Control Factors," see 19 Ga. B.J. 119 (1956). For article, "Patterns of Social Legislation: Reflections on the Welfare State," see 6 J. of Pub. L. 3 (1957). For article, "The Law of the Land," focusing on the role of the Supreme Court, see 6 J. of

Pub. L. 444 (1957). For article, "The Federal Loyalty Security Program — A Constitutional Dilemma," see 20 Ga. B.J. 473 (1958). For article, "Congress, the States and Commerce," see 8 J. of Pub. L. 47 (1959). For article criticizing statutory interpretation of Federal Power Act extending federal authority through the commerce clause, and proposing a balancing of interests test to protect state jurisdiction over production and gathering of natural gas and electricity when they are local activities, see 10 Mercer L. Rev. 226 (1959). For article, "The Subject-Matter Limitation Upon the Treaty-Making Power," see 11 J. of Pub. L. 122 (1962). For article discussing "Pre-Emption" Doctrine, in light of Campbell v. Hussey, 368 U.S. 297, 82 S. Ct. 327, 7 L. Ed. 2d 312 (1961), see 11 J. of Pub. L. 341 (1962). For article, "Consolidation by Compact: A Remedy for Preemption of State Food and Drug Laws," see 14 J. of Pub. L. 276 (1965). For article discussing discrimination in public accommodations, see 17 Mercer L. Rev. 338 (1965). For article discussing congressional power to regulate the value of currency in the case of a change in the par value of the dollar, see 16 J. of Pub. L. 51 (1967). For article discussing functional broadening of Congress' delegated powers and its effect on civil liberties, see 18 J. of Pub. L. 103 (1969). For article discussing validity of "executive privilege" as defense to congressional demand for information, see 8 Ga. L. Rev. 809 (1974). For article, "Constitutional Issues In Federal No-Fault," see 27 Mercer L. Rev. 273 (1975). For article discussing developing principles of state sovereignty limitations on Congress' exercise of its granted powers, see 11 Ga. L. Rev. 35 (1976). For article discussing the constitutional parameters of state efforts to stimulate international trade, see 27 Mercer L. Rev. 391 (1976). For article analyzing the relationship between the military and the First Amendment right of individuals to engage in political activities, see 28 Emory L.J. 3 (1979). For article, "In their own image: The reframing of the due process clause by the United States Supreme Court", see 13 Ga. L. Rev. 479 (1979). For article, "Trademark Protection: Judicial Inconsistency in the Fifth Circuit," see 32 Mercer L. Rev. 1167 (1981). For article, "Federalism and State Taxation of Multistate Enterprises," see 32 Emory L.J. 89 (1983). For article, "Problems in Search of Principles: The First Amendment in the Supreme Court from 1791-1930," see 35 Emory L.J. 59 (1986). For article, "Cable Copyright: The Role of the Copyright Office," see 35 Emory L.J. 621 (1986). For article, "Congress: The Purse, the Purpose, and the Power," 21 Ga. L. Rev. 1 (1986). For article, "Congress As Constitutional Decisionmaker and Its Power to Counter Judicial Doctrine," 21 Ga. L. Rev. 57 (1986). For article, "State Taxation of Interstate Banking," see 21 Ga. L. Rev. 283 (1986). For article, "Plying the Erie Waters: Choice of Law in the Deterrence of Frivolous Appeals," see 21 Ga. L. Rev. 653 (1987). For lecture, "Government, Society, and Anarchy," see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 753 (1987). For article, "Georgia and the Development of Constitutional Principles: An Essay in Honor of the Bicentennial," see 24 Ga. St. B.J. 6 (1987). For article, "Georgia's Current Antitakeover Law: A Look at Management's New Shield," see 24 Ga. St. B.J. 176 (1988). For article, "Biotechnology and the Law: Social Responsibility or Freedom of Scientific Inquiry?," see 39 Mercer L. Rev. 437 (1988). For article, "The Right of Personality: A Common-Law Basis for the Protection of the Moral Rights of Authors," see 23 Ga. L. Rev. 1 (1988). For article, "Rethinking the Ban on General Solicitation," see 38 Emory L.J. 67 (1989). For article, "More Myths of Parity: State Court Forums and Constitutional Actions for the Right to Shelter," see 38 Emory L.J. 615 (1989). For article, "Ideology, Religion, and the Constitutional Protection of Private Property: 1760-1860," see 39 Emory L.J. 65 (1990). For essay, "The Prospects for a Revival of Conservative Activism in Constitutional Jurisprudence," see 24 Ga. L. Rev. 629 (1990). For article on copyright law and the public domain, see 39 Emory L.J. 965 (1990). For article, "Benson Revisited: The Case Against Patent Protection for Algorithms and Other Computer Program-Related Inventions," see 39 Emory L.J. 1025 (1990). For annual eleventh circuit survey of bankruptcy law, see 42 Mercer L. Rev. 1277 (1991). For article, "Rights as Trumps," see 27 Ga. L. Rev. 463 (1993). For article, "On-Line Computer Databases and CD-Roms Are Not the Electronic Equivalent of Microfilm: Tasini v. New York Times Co., Electronic Revisions, and Individual Contributions to Collective Works under the Copyright Act of 1976," see 15 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 521 (1998). For article, "The Origins and Application of the Military Deference Doctrine," see 35 Ga. L. Rev. 161 (2000). For article, "Protecting Intrastate Threatened Species: Does the Endangered Species Act Encroach on Traditional State Authority and Exceed the Outer Limits of the Commerce Clause?," see 36 Ga. L. Rev. 723 (2002). For article, "Filburn's Legacy," see 52 Emory L.J. 1719 (2003). For article, "Patent Law for the General Practitioner," see 9 Ga. St. B.J. 10 (2003). For Eleventh Circuit survey article on intellectual property decisions in 2003, see 55 Mercer L. Rev. 1327 (2004).

For note discussing Georgia corporate income tax in light of commerce clause immunity, see 10 Ga. B.J. 172 (1947). For note discussing the relationship of federal and state regulation of insurance, in light of In the Matter of American Hospital and Life Insurance Co., C.C.H. Trade Reg. Rep. 25,954 (FTC, April 24, 1956), see 5 J. of Pub. L. 494 (1956). For notes on amenability of dependents of servicemen and non-military employees to court-martial overseas, see 9 J. of Pub. L. 252 (1960). For note discussing the scope of federal police power under the commerce clause, see 4 Ga. L. Rev. 359 (1970). For note discussing the constitutional implications of higher nonresident tuition fees charged by state universities, see 8 Ga. St. B.J. 86 (1971). For note discussing the doctrine of federal preemption in the allocation of powers between the nation and the states, see 22 J. of Pub. L. 391 (1973). For note, "Oil Spills — State Prevention and the Possibility of Pre-emption," see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 559 (1973). For note discussing the twenty-first amendment limitation on state's power to regulate alcoholic beverages, in light of United States v. State Tax Comm'n, 412 U.S. 363, 93 S. Ct. 2183, 37 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1973), see 10 Ga. St. B.J. 336 (1973). For note discussing the commerce power and its relation to the tenth amendment in light of National League of Cities v. Usery, 426 U.S. 833, 96 S. Ct. 2465, 49 L. Ed. 2d 245 (1976), see 25 Emory L.J. 937 (1976). For note discussing whether there is a freedom of scientific inquiry such that privately sponsored scientific research is beyond the reach of the federal commerce power, discussed in the context of recombinant deoxyribose nucleic acid research, see 11 Ga. L. Rev. 785 (1977). For note discussing "Interstate Commerce" jurisdictional test in Sherman Act cases, in light of McLain v. Real Estate Bd., Inc., 444 U.S. 232, 100 S. Ct. 502, 62 L. Ed. 2d 441 (1980), see 15 Ga. L. Rev. 714 (1981). For note, "Conditioning Access to the Public Forum on the Purchase of Insurance," see 17 Ga. L. Rev. 815 (1983). For note, "United States v. Stanley: Salt in a Serviceman's Wounds," see 39 Mercer L. Rev. 1013 (1988). For note on the licensed-foundry defense in patent infringement cases, see 11 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 621 (1995). For note on solid waste disposal, flow control ordinances and regulations, see 32 Ga. L. Rev. 1227 (1998). For note, "United States v. Odom: The Eleventh Circuit Substantially Affects Federal Criminal Law Through Its Constitutional Analysis of the Jurisdictional Element of Section 844(i)," see 53 Mercer L. Rev. 1735 (2002). For article introducing symposium on war powers under the constitution, see 19 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 931 (2003). For article, "Constitution, Foreign Affairs and Presidential War-Making: A Response to Professor Powell," see 19 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 947 (2003). For article, "Structuralism and the War Power: The Army, Navy and Militia Clauses," see 19 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 1021 (2003). For article, "A Constitutional Structure for Foreign Affairs," see 19 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 1059 (2003).

For comment discussing state immunity from federal taxation in light of Allen v. Regents of Univ. Sys., 304 U.S. 439, 58 S. Ct. 980, 82 L. Ed. 1448 (1938), Helvering v. Gerhardt, 304 U.S. 405, 58 S. Ct. 969, 82 L. Ed. 1427 (1938), and Helvering v. Therrell, 303 U.S. 218, 58 S. Ct. 539, 82 L. Ed. 758 (1938), see 1 Ga. B.J. 43 (1938). For comment on Allen v. Regents of Univ. Sys., 304 U.S. 439, 58 S. Ct. 980, 82 L. Ed. 1448 (1938), denying immunity from federal taxation to football tickets sold by University of Georgia, see 1 Ga. B.J. 46 (1939). For comment concerning constitutionally permissible government competition with private industry, in light of Tennessee Elec. Power Co. v. TVA., 306 U.S. 118, 59 S. Ct. 366, 83 L. Ed. 543 (1939), see 1 Ga. B.J. 56 (1939). For comment on Herbert v. State, 60 Ga. App. 633, 4 S.E.2d 843 (1939), see 2 Ga. B.J. 55 (1940). For comment regarding constitutionality of tax for the purpose of maintaining post roads levied on vehicles in interstate commerce, in light of Dixie Ohio Express Co. v. State Revenue Comm'n, 306 U.S. 72, 59 S. Ct. 435, 83 L. Ed. 495 (1939), see 2 Ga. B.J. 75 (1940). For comment regarding constitutionality of sales tax imposed on receipts of sales of coal previously transported in interstate commerce, in light of McGoldrick v. Berwind-White Mining Co., 309 U.S. 33, 60 S. Ct. 388, 84 L. Ed. 565 (1940), see 2 Ga. B.J. 80 (1940). For comment on Best & Co. v. Maxwell, 311 U.S. 454, 61 S. Ct. 334, 85 L. Ed. 275 (1940), holding state licensing tax on foreign retailers violates commerce clause, see 3 Ga. B.J. 74 (1941). For comment on Korematsu v. United States, 323 U.S. 214, 65 S. Ct. 193, 89 L. Ed. 194 (1944), upholding constitutionality of exclusion of Japanese-Americans from military arms, see 7 Ga. B.J. 364 (1945). For comment on Beard v. Alexandria, 69 F. Supp. 722, (W.D. La. 1947), upholding constitutionality of ordinance prohibiting peddlers, hawkers, or itinerant merchants from going upon private residences to solicit orders or sell goods, see 10 Ga. B.J. 116 (1947). For comment discussing constitutionality of nondiscriminatory tax on motor carriers engaged solely in interstate commerce, in light of Aero

Mayflower Transit Co. v. Board of R.R. Comm'rs, 332 U.S. 495, 68 S. Ct. 167, 92 L. Ed. 99 (1947), see 10 Ga. B.J. 381 (1948). For comment on United States v. Sullivan, 332 U.S. 689, 68 S. Ct. 331, 92 L. Ed. 297 (1948), holding federal regulation of all retail sales is constitutional where product has once moved in interstate commerce, see 10 Ga. B.J. 484 (1948). For comment on Gardella v. Chandler, 172 F.2d 402 (2d Cir. 1949), holding playing of baseball games in "organized baseball" constitutes interstate commerce, see 12 Ga. B.J. 100 (1949). For comment discussing constitutionality of state taxation of interstate motor carriers, in light of Capital Greyhound Lines v. Brice, 339 U.S. 542, 70 S. Ct. 806, 94 L. Ed. 1053 (1950), see 13 Ga. B.J. 364 (1951). For comment on Dean Milk Co. v. Madison, 340 U.S. 349, 71 S. Ct. 295, 95 L. Ed. 329 (1951), holding unconstitutional five-mile limit placed on pasteurization of milk, see 13 Ga. B.J. 480 (1951). For comment discussing state regulation of interstate natural gas pipelines, in light of Cities Serv. Gas Co. v. Peerless Oil & Gas Co., 340 U.S. 179, 71 S. Ct. 215, 95 L. Ed. 190 (1950), see 13 Ga. B.J. 488 (1951). For comment on Beard v. City of Alexandria, 341 U.S. 622, 71 S. Ct. 920, 95 L. Ed. 1233 (1951), upholding constitutionality of "Green River" ordinances, see 14 Ga. B.J. 258 (1951). For comment on immunity of judicial sale held by trustee in bankruptcy from taxation by state, in light of California State Bd. of Equalization v. Goggin, 191 F.2d 726 (9th Cir. 1951), cert. denied, 342 U.S. 909, 72 S. Ct. 302, 96 L. Ed. 680 (1952), see 1 J. of Pub. L. 504 (1952). For comment on Specter Motor Serv. Co. v. O'Connor, 340 U.S. 602, 71 S. Ct. 508, 95 L. Ed. 573 (1951), holding Connecticut Corporation Tax Act of 1935 violative of the commerce clause of the United States Constitution, see 14 Ga. B.J. 371 (1952). For comment on Kitchens v. Steele, 112 F. Supp. 383 (W.D. Mo. 1953), holding that a statute providing for the confinement of an accused found to be mentally incompetent until such time as the accused shall be mentally competent to stand trial is valid under the constitutional provision relating to "incidental powers," see 16 Ga. B.J. 236 (1953). For comment on Castle v. Hayes Freight Lines, 348 U.S. 61, 75 S. Ct. 191, 99 L. Ed. 68 (1954), holding the Federal Motor Carrier Act does not allow the state to suspend or revoke the right of interstate carriers for violations of state highway regulation, see 17 Ga. B.J. 403 (1955). For comment on United States ex rel. Toth v. Quarles, 350 U.S. 11, 76 S. Ct. 1, 100 L. Ed. 8 (1955), holding necessary and proper clause does not permit subjection of ex-servicemen to trial by court-martial, see 7 Mercer L. Rev. 385 (1956). For comment discussing revocation of citizenship for concealment of a material fact, see 18 Ga. B.J. 506 (1956). For comment concerning state taxation of federal property, in light of Offutt Hous. Co. v. County of Sarpy, 351 U.S. 253, 76 S. Ct. 814, 100 L. Ed. 1151 (1956), see 19 Ga. B.J. 247 (1956). For comment on Reid v. Covert, 354 U.S. 1, 77 S. Ct. 1222, 1 L. Ed. 2d 1148 (1957), and Kinsella v. Krueger, 351 U.S. 470, 76 S. Ct. 886, 100 L. Ed. 1342 (1956), as to military authority overseas over dependents of servicemen, see 6 J. of Pub. L. 540 (1957). For comment on Kingsley Books, Inc. v. Brown, 354 U.S. 436, 77 S. Ct. 1325, 1 L. Ed. 2d 1469 (1957), upholding the enjoining under a New York statute of distribution of certain obscene books, see 6 J. of Pub. L. 548 (1957). For comment on Railway Employes' Dep't v. Hanson, 351 U.S. 225, 76 S. Ct. 714, 100 L. Ed. 1112 (1956), see 19 Ga. B.J. 550 (1957). For comment on West Point Whsle. Grocery Co. v. City of Opelika, 38 Ala. App. 444, 87 So. 2d 661 (1956), see 20 Ga. B.J. 403 (1958). For comment on Northwestern States Portland Cement Co. v. Minnesota, 358 U.S. 450, 79 S. Ct. 357, 3 L. Ed. 2d 421 (1959), applying discrimination test for state taxation affecting interstate commerce, see 10 Mercer L. Rev. 327 (1959). For comment on Williams v. Stockham Valves & Fittings, Inc., 358 U.S. 450, 79 S. Ct. 357, 3 L. Ed. 2d 421 (1959), upholding constitutionality of state net income tax levied on revenues of foreign corporation derived from interstate commerce where tax is "fairly apportioned," see 22 Ga. B.J. 107 (1959). For comment discussing constitutionality of legislation requiring employees to pay dues to railway union in order to maintain employment, in light of International Ass'n of Machinists v. Street, 367 U.S. 740, 81 S. Ct. 1784, 6 L. Ed. 2d 1141 (1961), see 24 Ga. B.J. 432 (1962). For comment discussing taxpayer standing to challenge federal spending, in light of Flast v. Cohen, 392 U.S. 83, 88 S. Ct. 1942, 20 L. Ed. 2d 947

(1968), see 17 J. of Pub. L. 419 (1968). For comment on National Bellas Hess, Inc. v. Department of Revenue, 386 U.S. 753, 87 S. Ct. 1389, 18 L. Ed. 2d 505 (1967), as to constitutionality of imposing state use taxes on out of state mail order form, see 19 Mercer L. Rev. 257 (1968). For comment on O'Callahan v. Parker, 395 U.S. 258, 89 S. Ct. 1683, 23 L. Ed. 291 (1969), as to limits of court-martial's jurisdiction to try serviceman, see 18 J. of Pub. L. 471 (1969). For comment discussing limits on the military's jurisdiction and the constitutional rights of servicemen in light of O'Callahan v. Parker, 395 U.S. 258, 89 S. Ct. 1683, 23 L. Ed. 2d 291 (1969), see 21 Mercer L. Rev. 311 (1969). For comment on United States v. Brand Jewelers, Inc., 318 F. Supp. 1293 (S.D.N.Y. 1970), as to implied power of the executive to sue, see 20 J. of Pub. L. 337 (1971). For comment on Anderson v. Laird, 316 F. Supp. 1081 (D.C. Cir. 1970), as to religious regulations at military academies, see 5 Ga. L. Rev. 400 (1971). For comment on Reeves, Inc. v. Kelley, 586 F.2d 1230 (8th Cir. 1978), vacated and remanded, 444 U.S. 1031, 99 S. Ct. 2155, 60 L. Ed. 2d 1041 (1979), as to whether a state acting in a proprietary capacity as an interstate seller is restricted by the commerce clause, see 13 Ga. L. Rev. 1086 (1979). For comment on the commerce clause and economic self-protection, see 14 Ga. L. Rev. 101 (1979). For comment on Fullilove v. Klutznick, 448 U.S. 448, 100 S. Ct. 2758, 65 L. Ed. 2d 902 (1980), regarding the constitutionality of the ten percent set aside for minority contractors, etc., see 29 Emory L.J. 1127 (1980). For comment, "A Rose by Any Other Name: Computer Programs and the Idea-Expression Distinction," see 34 Emory L.J. 741 (1985). For comment, "Commerce and Outer Space: A Legal Survey," see 37 Mercer L. Rev. 1551 (1986). For comment,

"A Regulatory Theory of Copyright: Avoiding a First Amendment Conflict," see 35 Emory L.J. 163 (1986). For comment, "Private Citizens in Foreign Affairs: A Constitutional Analysis," see 36 Emory L.J. 285 (1987). For comment, "The Colorization Dispute: Moral Rights Theory as a Means of Judicial and Legislative Reform," see 38 Emory L.J. 237 (1989). For comment, "Reinforcing the Foundation: The Case Against Copyright Protection for Works of Architecture," see 39 Emory L.J. 1261 (1990). For comment, "Copyright Protection for Computer Languages: Creative Incentive or Technological Threat?" see 39 Emory L.J. 1293 (1990). For comment, "Can Anyone Own a Piece of the Clock?: The Troublesome Application of Copyright Law to Works of Historical Fiction, Interpretation, and Theory," see 42 Emory L.J. 253 (1993). For comment on general copying for classroom use as fair use under the copyright law, see 46 Emory L.J. 1363 (1997). For comment, "Choosing Between Principles of Federal Power: The Civil Rights Remedy of the Violence Against Women Act," see 47 Emory L.J. 819 (1998). For comment, "The Government's Right to Read: Maintaining State Access to Digital Data in the Age of Impenetrable Encryption," see 49 Emory L.J. 711 (2000). For comment, "Hegel's Secret: Personality and the Housemark Cases," see 52 Emory L.J. 515 (2003). For comment, "Verizon Maryland, Inc. v. Public Service Commission of Maryland: Reaffirming Ex parte Young and the Necessity of Finding Regulatory Hand-Back Schemes to a Gift or Gratuity," see 52 Emory L.J. 1519 (2003). For comment on the effect of Devlin v. Scardelletti and amendments to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(e) on class action "minimal diversity" concerns, see 52 Emory L.J. 1877 (2003).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

SPENDING

TAXATION

COMMERCE

1. INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE TRANSACTIONS
2. POWER OF CONGRESS TO REGULATE
3. POWER OF STATE TO REGULATE
4. POWER OF STATE TO TAX

COINING OF MONEY AND REGULATION OF LEGAL TENDER
 BANKRUPTCY
 PATENTS AND COPYRIGHTS
 WAR-MAKING POWERS
 REGULATION OF ARMED FORCES
 EXCLUSIVE JURISDICTION

General Consideration

This section grants powers but it does not authorize Congress to delegate those powers. — Congress has power to enact a law to become effective when certain conditions come into existence and may delegate to an administrative officer the authority to determine, in accordance with the standard laid down by Congress, when the conditions have come into existence. Or, Congress may declare a policy and fix a definite standard by which the administrator is to be controlled and authorize him to make subordinate rules for the administration of the Act. Congress cannot, however, permit the administrator to determine what the law shall be. Payne v. Griffin, 51 F. Supp. 588 (M.D. Ga. 1943).

Extent of congressional authority. — The Constitution grants Congress the authority to make all laws necessary to effectuate its authority. However, this authority is not unchecked. Congress may pass only those laws which are consistent with the limits contained within the Constitution. United States v. Hill, 750 F. Supp. 524 (N.D. Ga. 1990).

Power to establish criminal defenses. — Congress clearly has the authority to establish and prescribe by law those defenses that are available to the defendants accused of federal criminal conduct. United States v. Hill, 750 F. Supp. 524 (N.D. Ga. 1990).

Regulation of mixed state-federal election. — The necessary and proper clause of this section, along with U.S. Const., art. I, sec. IV, empowers Congress to regulate mixed federal-state elections, even if the federal candidate is unopposed. United States v. McCranie, 169 F.3d 723 (11th Cir. 1999).

Cited in City of Waycross v. Bell, 169 Ga. 57, 149 S.E. 641 (1929); In re Moore, 42 F.2d 475 (N.D. Ga. 1930); Citizens' & S. Nat'l Bank v. City of Atlanta, 46 F.2d 88 (N.D. Ga. 1931); Richardson v. Johnson Furn. Co., 176 Ga. 28, 166 S.E. 662 (1932); In re Glover Casket Co., 1 F. Supp. 743 (N.D. Ga. 1932);

Richmire v. Legg, 3 F. Supp. 787 (N.D. Ga. 1933); Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Nash Loan Co., 179 Ga. 52, 175 S.E. 247 (1934); Rollins v. Legg, 179 Ga. 85, 175 S.E. 382 (1934); Aero Mayflower Transit Co. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 295 U.S. 285, 55 S. Ct. 709, 79 L. Ed. 1439 (1935); Green v. Page, 9 F. Supp. 844 (S.D. Ga. 1935); Dean v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 193 Ga. 401, 18 S.E.2d 756 (1942); Derrick v. City Council, 138 F.2d 507 (5th Cir. 1943); Perkins v. Brown, 53 F. Supp. 176 (S.D. Ga. 1943); Sykes v. Sanford, 150 F.2d 205 (5th Cir. 1945); United States ex rel. Goodman v. Hearn, 153 F.2d 186 (5th Cir. 1946); Benton v. Callaway, 165 F.2d 877 (5th Cir. 1948); Brown v. Sanford, 79 F. Supp. 146 (N.D. Ga. 1948); Blalock v. Brown, 78 Ga. App. 537, 51 S.E.2d 610 (1949); Zuber v. Pennsylvania R.R., 82 F. Supp. 670 (N.D. Ga. 1949); Capitol Distrib. Co. v. Redwine, 206 Ga. 477, 57 S.E.2d 578 (1950); Williams v. Cedartown Textiles, Inc., 208 Ga. 659, 68 S.E.2d 705 (1952); Grayson-Robinson Stores, Inc. v. Oneida, Ltd., 209 Ga. 613, 75 S.E.2d 161 (1953); United States v. Denmark, 119 F. Supp. 647 (S.D. Ga. 1953); Bisson v. Howard, 224 F.2d 586 (5th Cir. 1955); Looper v. Georgia, S. & Fla. Ry., 213 Ga. 279, 99 S.E.2d 101 (1957); Smith v. UMW, 180 F. Supp. 796 (M.D. Ga. 1958); Stockham Valves & Fittings, Inc. v. Williams, 214 Ga. 803, 108 S.E.2d 314 (1959); Central of Ga. Ry. v. Brower, 102 Ga. App. 462, 116 S.E.2d 679 (1960); Coke v. City of Atlanta, 184 F. Supp. 579 (N.D. Ga. 1960); Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 231 F. Supp. 393 (N.D. Ga. 1964); U.S. Steel Corp. v. Undercofler, 220 Ga. 553, 140 S.E.2d 269 (1965); Independent Publishing Co. v. Hawes, 224 Ga. 728, 164 S.E.2d 559 (1968); Gilstrap v. United States, 389 F.2d 6 (5th Cir. 1968); Cross v. State, 122 Ga. App. 208, 176 S.E.2d 517 (1970); DeKalb County v. Empire Distributions, Inc., 229 Ga. 497, 192 S.E.2d 346 (1972); United States v. Crow, Pope & Land Enters., Inc., 340 F. Supp. 25 (N.D. Ga. 1972); Calley v. Callaway, 519 F.2d 184 (5th Cir. 1975); Michelin Tire Corp. v. Wages, 423

General Consideration (Cont'd)

U.S. 276, 96 S. Ct. 535, 46 L. Ed. 2d 495 (1976); DeKalb Cablevision Corp. v. Press Ass'n, 141 Ga. App. 1, 232 S.E.2d 353 (1977); Fred Whitaker Co. v. E.T. Barwick Indus., Inc., 551 F.2d 622 (5th Cir. 1977); General Fin. Corp. v. Garner, 556 F.2d 772 (5th Cir. 1977); United States v. Southern Motor Carriers Rate Conference, 439 F. Supp. 29 (N.D. Ga. 1977); City of Macon v. Marshall, 439 F. Supp. 1209 (M.D. Ga. 1977); Georgia Franchise Practices Comm'n v. Massey-Ferguson, Inc., 240 Ga. 743, 242 S.E.2d 69 (1978); High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 449 F. Supp. 364 (N.D. Ga. 1978); Keenan Co. v. Pamlico, Inc., 245 Ga. 842, 268 S.E.2d 334 (1980); High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 515 F. Supp. 176 (N.D. Ga. 1980); Joyner v. Golden Dome Inv. Co., 7 Bankr. 596 (M.D. Ga. 1980); United States v. Yeatts, 639 F.2d 1186 (5th Cir. 1981); Windfaire, Inc. v. Busbee, 523 F. Supp. 868 (N.D. Ga. 1981); High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 673 F.2d 1225 (11th Cir. 1982); Bleakley v. Jekyll Island-State Park Auth., 536 F. Supp. 236 (S.D. Ga. 1982); McCroan v. Bailey, 543 F. Supp. 1201 (S.D. Ga. 1982); Chemical Bank v. Grigsby's World of Carpet, Inc. (In re WWG Indus., Inc.), 44 Bankr. 287 (N.D. Ga. 1984); Geowaste of Ga., Inc. v. Tanner, 875 F. Supp. 830 (M.D. Ga. 1995).

Spending

Monetary awards for intentional torts. — Spending clause statutes may authorize monetary awards for intentional violations. Franklin v. Gwinnett County Pub. Sch., 503 U.S. 60, 112 S. Ct. 1028, 117 L. Ed. 2d 208 (1992).

Power of Congress to provide for payment of obligations in legal tender. — Sections 462 and 463 of 31 U.S.C., providing for discharge, by payment in legal tender, of obligations for payment in gold or any particular coin or currency, or in money of the United States measured thereby, of the then standard weight and fineness, are not unconstitutional as in violation of this section, as the exercise of a power not delegated to Congress, nor in violation of the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5 or amend. 10. Smith v. Bukofzer, 180 Ga. 585, 180 S.E. 358 (1935).

Congress authorized to impose conditions upon receipt of federal funds. — Congress has the authority under the spending clause to impose conditions that attach by the terms of the statute involved upon the receipt of federal funds offered under a federal act. Georgia Ass'n of Retarded Citizens v. McDaniel, 716 F.2d 1565 (11th Cir. 1983), vacated on other grounds, 468 U.S. 1213, 104 S. Ct. 3582, 82 L. Ed. 2d 880 (1984).

Taxation

Business conducted by state for gain. — The immunity implied from dual sovereignty recognized by Constitution does not extend to business enterprises conducted by states for gain. Allen v. Regents of Univ. Sys., 304 U.S. 439, 58 S. Ct. 980, 82 L. Ed. 1448 (1938), overruled on other grounds, 469 U.S. 528, 105 S. Ct. 1005, 83 L. Ed. 2d 1016 (1985).

Power of judiciary to impinge upon rules of taxation established by Congress. — Congress bears the responsibility for establishing rules of taxation, and as long as Congress has acted within its constitutional powers, the judiciary cannot use its broad powers to frustrate specific statutory language. Fears v. United States, 386 F. Supp. 1223 (N.D. Ga. 1975), aff'd, 518 F.2d 1405 (5th Cir. 1975).

Congress does not have an unlimited right to tax the citizenry. — A federal statute passed under the taxing power may be so arbitrary and capricious as to violate due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5. Fears v. United States, 386 F. Supp. 1223 (N.D. Ga. 1975), aff'd, 518 F.2d 1405 (5th Cir. 1975).

Unconstitutionality of tax measure derives neither from unequal imposition nor from unequal incidence, but rather from that special instance where the law is so arbitrary as to compel the conclusion that it does not involve an exertion of the taxing power, but constitutes, in substance and effect, the direct exertion of a different and forbidden power, as, for example, the confiscation of property. Fears v. United States, 386 F. Supp. 1223 (N.D. Ga. 1975), aff'd, 518 F.2d 1405 (5th Cir. 1975).

Within constitutional limitations, there is no equity in tax law. Fears v. United States, 386 F. Supp. 1223 (N.D. Ga. 1975), aff'd, 518 F.2d 1405 (5th Cir. 1975).

Commerce

1. Interstate and Foreign Commerce Transactions

“Interstate commerce” defined. — Interstate commerce consists of intercourse and traffic between citizens or inhabitants of different states, and includes the purchase, sale, and exchange of commodities. American Mills Co. v. Doyal, 46 Ga. App. 236, 167 S.E. 312 (1933).

Determination of whether cause affects interstate commerce. — Where interstate commerce is affected, it is not a question of whether the affecting cause is a transaction in interstate or intrastate commerce, or an intrastate process, or intrastate understanding or combination, but rather a question of whether the cause really and substantially affects interstate commerce. Richmond Hosiery Mills v. Camp, 7 F. Supp. 139 (N.D. Ga. 1934), aff’d, 74 F.2d 200 (5th Cir. 1934).

Plaintiff made a prima facie showing that if manufacturer had minimum contacts with Georgia sufficient to support personal jurisdiction on a stream of commerce theory. Maxwell Chase Techs., L.L.C. v. KMB Produce, Inc., 79 F. Supp. 2d 1364 (N.D. Ga. 1999).

Determination of whether transaction constitutes interstate commerce. — In determining what does and does not constitute commerce, the circumstances, continuance, and extent of the transaction in question may be considered, and no court has ever attempted to lay down a definite and unvarying formula by which the problem may be solved. Commerce is not a technical, legal conception, but rather a practical one, drawn from the course of business. The exigencies of trade determine what is essential to the business or process of interstate commerce in that trade. Interstate commerce is increased and enlarged with each additional degree and development of transportation and communication. Fleming v. Alterman, 38 F. Supp. 94 (N.D. Ga. 1941).

Passage of a person from one state to another is interstate commerce within meaning of Constitution, and enactment by Congress of statute making it a federal offense to do so for purpose of escaping prosecution for a crime, is within the power of Congress. Simmons v. Zerbst, 18 F. Supp. 929 (N.D. Ga. 1937).

Federal commerce power encompasses the movement in interstate commerce of persons as well as commodities. United States v. Guest, 383 U.S. 745, 86 S. Ct. 1170, 16 L. Ed. 2d 239 (1966).

State cannot authorize violation of commerce clause. — A state cannot authorize activity which violates the commerce clause; thus, if the Georgia statute enabling authorities to enter into agreements for exclusive rights with respect to solid waste disposal is interpreted to exclude competition from the solid waste disposal market, then it would conflict with the commerce clause, and, accordingly, conduct of authorities pursuant to the statute would not be entitled to state action immunity. Pine Ridge Recycling, Inc. v. Butts County, 855 F. Supp. 1264 (M.D. Ga. 1994).

If the contract is for sale of article and for its delivery to buyer in another state, transaction is one of interstate commerce. American Mills Co. v. Doyal, 46 Ga. App. 236, 167 S.E. 312 (1933).

Manufacturing alone, within a single state, is not commerce and the fact that the things manufactured are to be shipped or used in interstate commerce does not make their production a part thereof. Richmond Hosiery Mills v. Camp, 7 F. Supp. 139 (N.D. Ga. 1934), aff’d, 74 F.2d 200 (5th Cir. 1934).

One who ships interstate is unquestionably engaged in commerce, and one whose business is to all practical purposes exclusively the receipt and distribution of such shipments by wholesale and in such manner as to produce a constant and continuous recurrence thereof is as much a part thereof by the day-in and day-out receipt and distribution of such goods as one who ships them. Each activity is a part of the whole of commerce among the several states, and the whole includes the parts. Fleming v. Alterman, 38 F. Supp. 94 (N.D. Ga. 1941).

Question of whether there is subsequent interstate shipment furnishes one test of interstate commerce, but does not supply a definite and unvarying standard which may be applied to all transactions to measure and define their interstate or intrastate character. Of necessity, each transaction and business must be determined in the light of all surrounding circumstances. Fleming v. Alterman, 38 F. Supp. 94 (N.D. Ga. 1941).

If transportation has acquired an interstate character it continues at least until the load reaches the point where the parties originally intended that the movement should finally end. Fleming v. Alterman, 38 F. Supp. 94 (N.D. Ga. 1941).

Commerce (Cont'd)1. Interstate and Foreign Commerce Transactions (Cont'd)

Commerce in tobacco is overwhelmingly interstate and foreign. Mulford v. Smith, 24 F. Supp. 919 (M.D. Ga. 1938), aff'd, 307 U.S. 38, 59 S. Ct. 648, 83 L. Ed. 1092 (1939).

Nationwide business of local sales contracts. — A nationwide business is not deprived of its interstate character merely because it is built upon sales contracts which are local in nature. United States v. South-Eastern Underwriters Ass'n, 322 U.S. 533, 64 S. Ct. 1162, 88 L. Ed. 1440 (1944) (decided under prior law).

Radio broadcasting or communications are all interstate; this is so although such broadcasting may be intended for intrastate transmissions only. Radio broadcasting is an instrumentality of interstate commerce and subject to regulation under the commerce clause of the Constitution. Regents of Univ. Sys. v. Carroll, 78 Ga. App. 292, 50 S.E.2d 808 (1948), aff'd, 338 U.S. 586, 70 S. Ct. 370, 94 L. Ed. 363 (1950).

Private transactions of public utility not subject to regulation as interstate commerce. — Although radio broadcasting is truly an interstate proposition, and an operator of radio broadcasting station is an operator of public utility and thus subject to regulation as any other public utility engaged in interstate transactions would be under the authority given Congress by the commerce clause of the Constitution, its private transactions, not affected with a public interest and not connected with its operation as an interstate public utility, are not subject to regulation and control by Federal Communications Commission under the Federal Communications Act of 1934, as amended (47 U.S.C. § 151 et seq.), or any other governmental agency empowered to regulate interstate transactions of a public utility; matters of private concern and contracts affecting private rights, which do not have as their subject matter the rights conferred by a license or do not substantially affect such rights, are not within the scope of the commission's power to regulate and control, in the public interest, broadcasting by radio stations and licenses to such stations. Regents of Univ. Sys. v. Carroll, 78 Ga. App. 292, 50 S.E.2d 808 (1948), aff'd, 338 U.S. 586, 70 S. Ct. 370, 94 L. Ed. 363 (1950).

Under facts, restaurant engaged in interstate commerce. — Because witnesses testified that upon presenting themselves for service no inquiry was made as to their place of residence, and because the restaurant had several large signs on two important business route portions of federal highways, and because the restaurant itself was situated on a main business route, a federal interstate highway, and because it was clear beyond any question that a very substantial part of the dollar value of the food and other products served or sold by the restaurant originated outside of the state and thus had moved in commerce, the restaurant was engaged in interstate commerce. Willis v. Pickrick Restaurant, 231 F. Supp. 396 (N.D. Ga. 1964), appeal dismissed sub nom. Maddox v. Willis, 382 U.S. 18, 86 S. Ct. 72, 15 L. Ed. 2d 13 (1965).

Noncommercial, illegal, or sporadic transactions. — Not only may transactions be commerce though noncommercial, but they may also be commerce though illegal and sporadic, and though they do not utilize common carriers or concern the flow of anything more tangible than electrons and information. United States v. South-Eastern Underwriters Ass'n, 322 U.S. 533, 64 S. Ct. 1162, 88 L. Ed. 1440 (1944) (decided under prior law).

Acquisition of firearms by felons, etc., subject to regulation as interstate commerce. — The acquisition of firearms by convicted felons and persons under indictment for felonies, although arguably intrastate activity, imposes a sufficient burden upon interstate commerce to be a proper subject for federal regulation. United States v. Nelson, 458 F.2d 556 (5th Cir. 1972).

Federal statute prohibiting firearm possession by domestic violence offenders. — Federal statute prohibiting anyone convicted of a domestic violence misdemeanor from possessing or receiving a firearm did not violate the commerce clause. National Ass'n of Gov't Employees v. Barrett, 968 F. Supp. 1564 (N.D. Ga. 1997), aff'd sub nom. Hiley v. Barrett, 155 F.3d 1276 (11th Cir. 1998).

Organizations affecting commerce may not escape coverage of social legislation by showing that they were created for fraternal or religious purposes. McClure v. Salvation Army, 460 F.2d 553 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 896, 93 S. Ct. 132, 34 L. Ed. 2d 153 (1972).

2. Power of Congress to Regulate

Scope of power. — Power of Congress over interstate commerce is complete in itself, may be exercised to its utmost extent, and acknowledges no limitations, other than are prescribed by the Constitution. United States v. Darby, 312 U.S. 100, 61 S. Ct. 451, 85 L. Ed. 609 (1941); Drake v. Hirsch, 40 F. Supp. 290 (N.D. Ga. 1941); Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241, 85 S. Ct. 348, 13 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1964).

Power to regulate commerce is the power to prescribe the rule by which commerce is to be governed. It extends not only to those regulations which aid, foster, and protect the commerce, but embraces those which prohibit it. United States v. Darby, 312 U.S. 100, 61 S. Ct. 451, 85 L. Ed. 609 (1941).

Power of Congress over interstate commerce is not confined to regulation of commerce among the states. It extends to those activities intrastate which so affect interstate commerce or the exercise of the power of Congress over it as to make regulation of them appropriate means to the attainment of a legitimate end, the exercise of the power granted to Congress to regulate interstate commerce. United States v. Darby, 312 U.S. 100, 61 S. Ct. 451, 85 L. Ed. 609 (1941); Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241, 85 S. Ct. 348, 13 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1964); Willis v. Pickrick Restaurant, 231 F. Supp. 396 (N.D. Ga. 1964), appeal dismissed sub nom. Maddox v. Willis, 382 U.S. 18, 86 S. Ct. 72, 15 L. Ed. 2d 13 (1965).

Commerce clause gives exclusive power to Congress to regulate interstate commerce, and its failure to act on the subject in area of taxation nevertheless requires that interstate commerce shall be free from any direct restrictions or impositions by the states. Northwestern States Portland Cement Co. v. Minnesota, 358 U.S. 450, 79 S. Ct. 357, 3 L. Ed. 2d 421 (1959) (decided under prior law).

Supremacy of federal power. — Regulations of commerce by Congress, including those of persons carrying it on and the instrumentalities used in it, although they may fall within field of ordinary police power, such as laws regulating employers' liability, hours of service of employees, safety appliances on equipment, and the like, will override police regulations of state when in conflict with them, because of the supremacy of the federal Constitution and laws, although in the absence of congressional legislation such state regulation would stand. Johnson Transf. & Freight Lines v. Perry, 47 F.2d 900 (N.D. Ga. 1931).

Where Congress assumes regulation and control of interstate commerce its power is supreme and any state regulations to the contrary are of no effect. Tucker v. Casualty Reciprocal Exch., 40 F. Supp. 383 (N.D. Ga. 1941).

If interstate and intrastate commerce are served by same instrumentalities of common carrier, and it appears that a state regulation applied directly to intrastate business may in fact burden interstate commerce, such state regulation must yield to the federal power to assure adequate interstate service. Western Union Tel. Co. v. State, 207 Ga. 675, 63 S.E.2d 878 (1951).

Commerce clause is restricted by its terms to the control of interstate commerce. Montgomery & Atlanta Freight Lines v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 175 Ga. 826, 166 S.E. 200 (1932).

Whatever affects interstate commerce in a substantial and direct way may be regulated by Congress, regardless of whether the affecting cause is a transaction in intrastate process or agreement. Richmond Hosiery Mills v. Camp, 7 F. Supp. 139 (N.D. Ga. 1934), aff'd, 74 F.2d 200 (5th Cir. 1934).

Congress has power to regulate transactions in and affecting interstate commerce by removing discriminations against and burdens upon it and by measures to foster and promote its growth and insure its safety. Richmond Hosiery Mills v. Camp, 7 F. Supp. 139 (N.D. Ga. 1934), aff'd, 74 F.2d 200 (5th Cir. 1934).

Exercise of congressional power to regulate. — Commerce means something more than traffic; it is intercourse, and the power committed to Congress to regulate commerce is exercised by prescribing rules for carrying on that intercourse. Simmons v. Zerbst, 18 F. Supp. 929 (N.D. Ga. 1937).

Commerce (Cont'd)2. Power of Congress to Regulate (Cont'd)*Elements of Congress' regulatory power.

— Any rule which is intended to foster, protect, and conserve commerce, or to prevent the flow of commerce from working harm to the people of the nation, is within the competence of Congress. Within these limits, the exercise of the power, the grant being unlimited in its terms, may lawfully extend to the absolute prohibition of such commerce, and, a fortiori, to limitation of the amount of a given commodity which may be transported in such commerce. The motive of Congress in exerting the power is irrelevant to the validity of the legislation. Mulford v. Smith, 307 U.S. 38, 59 S. Ct. 648, 83 L. Ed. 1092 (1939).

If regulation of interstate commerce of any kind is needed, Congress, not the states, must furnish it; and it may be of any kind not prohibited by other constitutional provisions. Mulford v. Smith, 24 F. Supp. 919 (M.D. Ga. 1938), aff'd, 307 U.S. 38, 59 S. Ct. 648, 83 L. Ed. 1092 (1939).

Federal power over intrastate railroad tracks and agencies. Congress's preemption of state regulatory authority over intrastate railroad tracks and agencies is a valid exercise of its authority to regulate under the commerce clause. CSX Transp., Inc. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 944 F. Supp. 1573 (N.D. Ga. 1996).

Intrastate rates may be controlled by Congress when so involved with interstate commerce as to make it necessary. Mulford v. Smith, 24 F. Supp. 919 (M.D. Ga. 1938), aff'd, 307 U.S. 38, 59 S. Ct. 648, 83 L. Ed. 1092 (1939).

Within its sphere, the power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce is in its nature a police power, to be exerted for the public good and in any way, not prohibited, which Congress deems calculated to achieve the desired regulatory effect. This may involve affecting or controlling what would usually pertain to the state police power. Mulford v. Smith, 24 F. Supp. 919 (M.D. Ga. 1938), aff'd, 307 U.S. 38, 59 S. Ct. 648, 83 L. Ed. 1092 (1939).

Power to regulate certain local activities.

— While agriculture, mining, manufacturing, and the like, are in themselves local activities, the regulation of which generally belongs to the states and not to Congress, and sales made within the state are not intended at the time to result in removing the goods from the state, it may not be maintained that such intrinsically local matters do not under some circumstances become so interwoven with interstate and foreign commerce as to render it necessary and proper for Congress to affect to control them in order to regulate the interstate and foreign commerce which springs from them. The power of Congress to regulate such commerce is paramount and very broad. Mulford v. Smith, 24 F. Supp. 919 (M.D. Ga. 1938), aff'd, 307 U.S. 38, 59 S. Ct. 648, 83 L. Ed. 1092 (1939).

Motive and purpose of regulation of interstate commerce are matters for legislative judgment upon the exercise of which the Constitution places no restriction and over which the courts are given no control. United States v. Darby, 312 U.S. 100, 61 S. Ct. 451, 85 L. Ed. 609 (1941).

Congress can regulate traffic though it consists of intangibles. United States v. South-Eastern Underwriters Ass'n, 322 U.S. 533, 64 S. Ct. 1162, 88 L. Ed. 1440 (1944) (decided under prior law).

Incidental regulation of intrastate commerce. — The execution by Congress of its power to regulate interstate commerce is not limited by fact that intrastate transactions may have become so interwoven therewith that effective control of interstate commerce by Congress incidentally controls intrastate commerce. Western Union Tel. Co. v. State, 207 Ga. 675, 63 S.E.2d 878 (1951).

No sort of trade can be carried on to which this power does not extend. Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241, 85 S. Ct. 348, 13 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1964).

Authority of the federal government over interstate commerce does not differ in extent or character from that retained by the states over intrastate commerce. Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241, 85 S. Ct. 348, 13 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1964).

Determinative test of the exercise of power by Congress under the commerce clause is simply whether the activity sought to be regulated is commerce which concerns more states than one and has a real and substantial relation to the national interest. Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241, 85 S. Ct. 348, 13 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1964).

Tenth amendment does not operate upon a valid exercise of power delegated to Congress by the commerce clause. United States v. Collier, 478 F.2d 268 (5th Cir. 1973).

Direct regulation of interstate carriage, including regulation of the persons carrying and their vehicles, is vested in federal government. Johnson Transf. & Freight Lines v. Perry, 47 F.2d 900 (N.D. Ga. 1931).

Federal power over interstate waterways. — The power of the United States over its waters capable of use as interstate highways stems from the authority to regulate commerce among the several states delegated to Congress under U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl. 3. Such power extends to the entire bed of the stream and includes lands below the ordinary high-water mark. Federal jurisdiction over such waters embraces the whole surface of bodies of water subject to tidal action no matter how shallow or obstructed. A common sense view permits no distinction upon the ground of navigability between the shallows and depths of navigable waters. United States v. Lewis, 355 F. Supp. 1132 (S.D. Ga. 1973).

Elimination of racial discrimination. — Congressional power to legislate in furtherance of the elimination of racial discrimination is derived from the thirteenth amendment, the power over interstate commerce, the power under the fourteenth amendment, and the power under the fifteenth amendment. United States v. Bob Lawrence Realty, Inc., 474 F.2d 115 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 826, 94 S. Ct. 131, 38 L. Ed. 2d 59 (1973).

Prohibition of injurious articles. — Congress, following its own conception of public policy concerning restrictions which may appropriately be imposed on interstate commerce, is free to exclude from the commerce articles whose use in the states for which they are destined it may conceive to be injurious to the public health, morals, or welfare, even though the states have not sought to regulate their use. United States v. Darby, 312 U.S. 100, 61 S. Ct. 451, 85 L. Ed. 609 (1941).

Application of the Fair Labor Standards Act, 29 U.S.C. § 201 et seq., to a county is not an unconstitutional exercise of power under the commerce clause. Prickett v. DeKalb County, 92 F. Supp. 2d 1357 (N.D. Ga. 2000).

Congress lacks transcendent legislative authority with regard to labor relations; its authority to prescribe labor-management ordinances derives from its power over interstate commerce. Baldovin v. International Longshoremen's Ass'n, 626 F.2d 445 (5th Cir. 1980).

Requiring disclosure of credit information within congressional power. — A statutory scheme requiring disclosure by creditors of credit information expressed in a uniform manner, as well as disclosure of the actual annual interest rate to the debtor, is within the power granted to Congress under the commerce clause. Thomas v. Myers-Dickson Furn. Co., 479 F.2d 740 (5th Cir. 1973).

Commerce power is subject to the due process clause of the fifth amendment. United States v. Hawes, 529 F.2d 472 (5th Cir. 1976).

There is no requirement of national uniformity when Congress exercises its power under the commerce clause. United States v. Hawes, 529 F.2d 472 (5th Cir. 1976).

Regulations not infringing constitutional prohibition. — Whatever their motive and purpose, regulations of commerce which do not infringe some constitutional prohibition are within the plenary power conferred on Congress by the commerce clause. Alewine v. City Council, 505 F. Supp. 880 (S.D. Ga. 1981), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 699 F.2d 1060 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 470 U.S. 1027, 105 S. Ct. 1391, 84 L. Ed. 2d 781 (1985).

Federal arson statute authorized. — Federal arson statute (18 U.S.C. § 844(i)) was within the regulatory authority of Congress. United States v. Chowdhury, 118 F.3d 742 (11th Cir. 1997).

Purely intrastate disputes do not fall within the commerce clause and therefore are not subject to the federal Lanham Act's regulation of service marks. Jellibeans, Inc. v. Skating Clubs of Ga., Inc., 716 F.2d 833 (11th Cir. 1983).

Court's jurisdiction invoked by fact business uses service mark in interstate commerce. — The fact that a business uses its service mark in interstate commerce is sufficient to invoke the federal court's jurisdiction. There is no requirement that the business of an infringer be shown to be interstate as well. Jellibeans, Inc. v. Skating Clubs of Ga., Inc., 716 F.2d 833 (11th Cir. 1983).

Commerce (Cont'd)3. Power of State to Regulate

State law that frustrates or conflicts with lawful objective of federal statute must yield to the federal authority. United States v. Composite State Bd. of Medical Exmrs., 656 F.2d 131 (5th Cir. 1981).

Mere privilege of engaging in interstate commerce is not derived from the state and cannot be conditioned by a state upon procuring a license or paying a tax. Johnson Transf. & Freight Lines v. Perry, 47 F.2d 900 (N.D. Ga. 1931).

General police power and general taxing power are reserved to the state government, and these may usually be exercised without excepting persons and instrumentalities engaged in interstate commerce, provided there is no discrimination against interstate commerce, and provided no direct and unreasonable burden is put upon it. Johnson Transf. & Freight Lines v. Perry, 47 F.2d 900 (N.D. Ga. 1931).

State may license or refuse to license, may condition or charge for, the use of its improved roads, when they are turned from their common uses and purposes to the carrier's business, since an interstate carrier has no better right than any other to use the state's improved highways without its consent, or without paying for it. Johnson Transf. & Freight Lines v. Perry, 47 F.2d 900 (N.D. Ga. 1931).

Certificate of public convenience and necessity, with a reasonable fee therefor, and an annual license fee for trucks, are legally demandable by state as a nondiscriminatory prerequisite for use of highways for carrier purposes, even though the commerce involved is wholly interstate. Johnson Transf. & Freight Lines v. Perry, 47 F.2d 900 (N.D. Ga. 1931).

State statute imposing duty of ordinary care not unreasonable burden. — In absence of action by Congress authorizing particular acts, complained of as negligence, or in prescribing degree of care and diligence to be exercised by railroad company in operating interstate trains at public crossings, it cannot be said that general duty to exercise ordinary care, imposed by law of state upon its citizens generally, constitutes an unreasonable burden upon interstate commerce because persons engaged in interstate commerce incidentally come within purview of such general laws. Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. Benton, 43 Ga. App. 495, 159 S.E. 717 (1931), rev'd on other grounds, 175 Ga. 491, 165 S.E. 593 (1932); Powell v. Smith, 70 Ga. App. 754, 29 S.E.2d 521 (1944).

State has full power and authority to regulate and control business within its jurisdiction, unless such regulations and control conflict with terms of its own or the federal Constitution. Montgomery & Atlanta Freight Lines v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 175 Ga. 826, 166 S.E. 200 (1932).

Elements of regulation of intrastate and interstate motor carriers. — Use of public highways by private intrastate and interstate motor carriers of goods may be conditioned by the state upon the carrier's obtaining a license, complying with reasonable regulations, paying a reasonable license fee and tax for expenses of highway administration, and maintenance and reconstruction of the highways covered by the license, and upon the filing of an insurance policy as security against injuries from carrier's negligent operations to persons and property other than passengers and property he carries. In the exercise of its right to demand compensation for special highway facilities it has provided, and of its power to regulate use of its highways in the interest of public safety, a state may properly treat motor vehicles as a special class, because of the special damage to the highways and special dangers to the public attending their operation. Aero Mayflower Transit Co. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 179 Ga. 431, 176 S.E. 487 (1934), aff'd, 295 U.S. 285, 55 S. Ct. 709, 79 L. Ed. 1439 (1935).

Law regulating insurance. — Provision of O.C.G.A. § 33-34-3 that motor vehicle insurance policies issued by insurers authorized to transact business in the state are deemed to provide the minimum coverage required by Georgia law when the insured is involved in an accident in Georgia is shielded from attack under the commerce clause by the McCarran-Ferguson Act. Bankers Ins. Co. v. Taylor, 267 Ga. 134, 475 S.E.2d 619 (1996).

Mere existence of power does not deprive states of authority. — The mere existence of congressional power, no conflict with its exercise being shown, does not deprive the states of their authority to safeguard their local interests by legislation which does not directly burden transactions in interstate or foreign commerce. Townsend v. Yeomans, 301 U.S. 441, 57 S. Ct. 842, 81 L. Ed. 1210 (1937).

Absent congressional legislation on subject, state laws which are not regulations of commerce itself or its instrumentalities are not forbidden even though they affect interstate commerce. United States v. Darby, 312 U.S. 100, 61 S. Ct. 451, 85 L. Ed. 609 (1941).

Appropriate local regulations adopted primarily to promote safety upon streets of municipality are not obnoxious to commerce clause where the indirect burden upon interstate commerce is not unreasonable. Lowe v. City Council, 45 F. Supp. 143 (S.D. Ga. 1942).

Limitations on local power to regulate. — Local or internal commerce, not affecting other states and with which it is not necessary to interfere for purpose of executing some of the general powers of the government, may be controlled by local authorities; but if a city government may control the commerce that flows through it from outside state by such exactions as make the movement no longer profitable or possible, other states are affected and the general powers of the national government are circumscribed beyond the limits the Constitution allows. Lowe v. City Council, 45 F. Supp. 143 (S.D. Ga. 1942).

Validity of municipal ordinance regarding taxicab owners operating interstate and intrastate. — Provisions of municipal ordinance requiring operators of taxicabs to maintain office, telephone, and attendant on duty at all times within city is void as to taxicab owners residing outside state who are engaged in interstate business, because it conflicts with the commerce clause; but provisions of municipal ordinance dealing with prevention of cruising upon streets, proscribing use of one street, where traffic congests, for more than one block at a time, limiting number of passengers in one automobile, and requiring operator to drive with care and prudence in compliance with police regulations, are not directed at and do not discriminate against those engaged in interstate commerce. Local taxicabs and like vehicles operating intrastate are bound by them. Lowe v. City Council, 45 F. Supp. 143 (S.D. Ga. 1942).

A city ordinance that puts an undue burden on commerce is offensive to U.S.

Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl. 3. — Not all burdens upon commerce, but only undue or discriminatory ones, are forbidden. Graves v. City of Gainesville, 78 Ga. App. 186, 51 S.E.2d 58 (1948).

Barrier to trade with other states. — A state consistently with the commerce clause cannot put a barrier around its borders to bar trade from other states and thus bring to naught the great constitutional purpose of the fathers in giving to Congress the power to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several states. Graves v. City of Gainesville, 78 Ga. App. 186, 51 S.E.2d 58 (1948).

The twenty-first amendment removes spirituous liquors and alcohol from protection of commerce clause to the extent necessary to allow the states to adopt and enforce appropriate laws and regulations dealing with the subject, and thus to burden interstate commerce to this extent. Even in the absence of any protection under U.S. Const., amend. 21, the sovereign states in the exercise of their reserved police power may, without offending the commerce clause, adopt and enforce necessary laws and regulations to effectuate their own protection against illegal traffic and trade in such liquors. Atkins v. Manning, 206 Ga. 219, 56 S.E.2d 260 (1949); Redwine v. Schenley Indus., Inc., 210 Ga. 769, 83 S.E.2d 16 (1954).

Supremacy of federal power over state regulations burdening interstate commerce. — If interstate and intrastate commerce are served by same instrumentalities of common carrier, and it appears that a state regulation applied directly to intrastate business may in fact burden interstate commerce, such state regulation must yield to the federal power to assure adequate interstate service. Western Union Tel. Co. v. State, 207 Ga. 675, 63 S.E.2d 878 (1951).

State may exercise power of eminent domain although interstate commerce may be indirectly or incidentally involved. Elberton S. Ry. v. State Hwy. Dep't, 211 Ga. 838, 89 S.E.2d 645 (1955).

State's inherent right to regulate internal commerce. — Although Congress has the exclusive power to regulate interstate commerce, and while the courts have held that a state cannot impose undue burdens on interstate commerce, a state has an inherent and reserved right to regulate its local, domestic, and internal commerce, even though by so doing it may indirectly or incidentally affect interstate commerce. Elbertson S. Ry. v. State Hwy. Dep't, 211 Ga. 838, 89 S.E.2d 645 (1955); Southern Ry. v. State Hwy. Dep't, 219 Ga. 435, 134 S.E.2d 12 (1963).

Commerce (Cont'd)3. Power of State to Regulate (Cont'd)

Commerce clause gives exclusive power to Congress to regulate interstate commerce, and its failure to act on the subject in area of taxation nevertheless requires that interstate commerce shall be free from any direct restrictions or impositions by the states. Northwestern States Portland Cement Co. v. Minnesota, 358 U.S. 450, 79 S. Ct. 357, 3 L. Ed. 2d 421 (1959) (decided under prior law).

Federal law excludes local regulation, even though the latter does no more than supplement the former. Complementary state regulations are as invalid as state regulations which conflict with the federal scheme. Campbell v. Hussey, 368 U.S. 297, 82 S. Ct. 327, 7 L. Ed. 2d 299 (1961).

Limitation on state's power of eminent domain where interstate commerce affected. — A state may exercise its power of eminent domain in acquiring necessary rights of way for state-aid roads although interstate commerce may be indirectly or incidentally involved, but a state cannot by an arbitrary, capricious, and unnecessary exercise of its power of eminent domain take and destroy property which a railway company is using for the purpose of carrying on interstate commerce. Southern Ry. v. State Hwy. Dep't, 219 Ga. 435, 134 S.E.2d 12 (1963).

Power of states as to local concerns. — Commerce clause did not withdraw from the states the power to legislate with respect to their local concerns, even though such legislation may indirectly and incidentally affect interstate commerce and persons engaged in it. Southern Ry. v. Overnite Transp. Co., 223 Ga. 825, 158 S.E.2d 387 (1967).

Validity of statutes affecting interstate commerce. — State statutes that only relate to or indirectly affect interstate commerce or cover matters not legislated on by Congress are not invalid as interfering with or burdening interstate commerce. Southern Ry. v.

Overnite Transp. Co., 223 Ga. 825, 158 S.E.2d 387 (1967).

Power of state to regulate for public safety. — The United States Supreme Court has recognized the "broad power in the state to protect its inhabitants against perils to health or safety, fraudulent traders, and highway hazards, even by use of measures which bear adversely upon interstate commerce." General GMC Trucks, Inc. v. GMC Truck & Coach Div., 239 Ga. 373, 237 S.E.2d 194, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 996, 98 S. Ct. 634, 54 L. Ed. 2d 491 (1977).

Georgia courts, though broadly construing the police power, have traditionally limited power of state to regulate private business under U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl. 1. General GMC Trucks, Inc. v. GMC Truck & Coach Div., 239 Ga. 373, 237 S.E.2d 194, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 996, 98 S. Ct. 634, 54 L. Ed. 2d 491 (1977).

Test for validity of statute affecting interstate commerce. — If a statute regulates evenhandedly to effectuate a legitimate local public interest, and its effects on interstate commerce are only incidental, it will be upheld unless burden imposed on such commerce is clearly excessive in relation to putative local benefits. General GMC Trucks, Inc. v. GMC Truck & Coach Div., 239 Ga. 373, 237 S.E.2d 194, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 996, 98 S. Ct. 634, 54 L. Ed. 2d 491 (1977).

State law limiting medical suppliers. — State policy that suppliers of durable medical supplies have a valid business license and an in-state business location or be located within a fifty mile radius of the state boundary was violative of the interstate commerce clause. It discriminated against interstate commerce and was not the least burdensome means of accomplishing its stated purpose: reducing the administrative costs of the Medicaid program and protecting the citizens of Georgia. Nutritional Support Servs. v. Miller, 830 F. Supp. 625 (N.D. Ga. 1993).

Validity of real estate broker licensure requirements. — Real estate broker licensure requirements, which are not uncommonly imposed by the states, generally withstand attack on the basis of the commerce clause; Supreme Court of Georgia does not find Georgia's invalid. Krizan v. Newman & Co., 246 Ga. 214, 271 S.E.2d 135 (1980).

O.C.G.A. §§ 40-2-111 and 40-2-112 discriminate against interstate commerce because they impose taxes on vehicles registered in certain states which are not imposed on vehicles registered in the State of Georgia. State v. Private Truck Council of Am., Inc., 258 Ga. 531, 371 S.E.2d 378 (1988).

State licensing requirements unenforceable where review over federal determination conferred thereby. — A state may not enforce licensing requirements that, though valid in the absence of federal regulation, give the state's licensing board a virtual power of review over the federal determination that a person is qualified to perform certain functions. United States v. Composite State Bd. of Medical Exmsr., 656 F.2d 131 (5th Cir. 1981).

Regulation of taxicabs. — A city ordinance which placed a limit on the number of taxi permits to be issued and which limited the number of certificates of public necessity and convenience to be issued did not violate the commerce clause. Airport Taxi Cab Advisory Comm. v. City of Atlanta, 584 F. Supp. 961 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

One-year Georgia residency requirement for holders of certificates of public necessity and convenience to operate taxicabs in Atlanta, Ga., City Code § 162-57(a)(3) violated the commerce clause because the city did not show that discrimination against non-residents was demonstrably justified by a valid factor unrelated to economic protectionism; there was no relationship between the residency requirement and a valid government interest, and the requirement was economic protectionism which created an artificial barrier to commerce. Atlanta Taxicab Co. Owners Ass'n v. City of Atlanta, 281 Ga. 342, 638 S.E.2d 307 (2006).

Association of taxicab owners had standing to challenge the constitutionality under the commerce clause of a one-year Georgia residency requirement for holders of certificates of public necessity and convenience (CPNC) to operate taxicabs in Atlanta, Ga., City Code § 162-57(a)(3) because the provision erected an existing impediment to the solicitation and eventual consummation of any sale or lease of a CPNC to a nonresident of Georgia; enforcement of § 162-57(a)(3) against them impacted their right to engage freely in those business activities currently authorized by the CPNCs issued to them under Atlanta, Ga., City Code ch. 162. Atlanta Taxicab Co. Owners Ass'n v. City of Atlanta, 281 Ga. 342, 638 S.E.2d 307 (2006).

City ordinances which regulated the fares which licensed limousine service companies could charge for trips to and from an airport and prohibited the advertising of any fares that were not in compliance did not violate the commerce clause and the fourteenth amendment. Executive Town & Country Servs., Inc. v. City of Atlanta, 789 F.2d 1523 (11th Cir. 1986).

Interstate transportation of refuse. — A county's application of O.C.G.A. § 36-1-16, which restricts transportation of refuse, to prohibit a waste management company from operating a landfill, which was owned by a municipality but located in the county, as a regional landfill, i.e., from receiving waste from outside the county and from outside the state, violated the company's constitutional commerce clause right to engage in interstate commerce without discriminatory intervention. Diamond Waste, Inc. v. Monroe County, 731 F. Supp. 505 (M.D. Ga. 1990), aff'd in part, vacated on other grounds, 939 F.2d 941 (11th Cir. 1991).

County resolution preventing a waste management firm from importing waste of any kind into the county from other counties and other locations violated the commerce clause. Diamond Waste, Inc. v. Monroe County, 939 F.2d 941 (11th Cir. 1991).

O.C.G.A. § 36-1-16, which permits Georgia counties to require an application for a permit from those who would bring across state or county boundaries garbage, trash, waste, or refuse for the purpose of dumping such at a publicly or privately owned dump, is constitutional. Diamond Waste, Inc. v. Monroe County, 939 F.2d 941 (11th Cir. 1991).

County ordinance regulating the transport of out-of-county waste into the county did not violate the commerce clause on its face. Diamond Waste, Inc. v. Monroe County, 796 F. Supp. 1511 (M.D. Ga. 1992).

Landfill operator with solid waste handling permit was within the "zone of interests" protected by the commerce clause because its ability or inability to operate impacted the flow of interstate commerce. Diamond Waste, Inc. v. Monroe County, 796 F. Supp. 1511 (M.D. Ga. 1992).

That out-of-state generators may be less trustworthy than in-state generators is an insufficient reason to burden interstate commerce in solid waste disposal since a load of in-state waste is no different from a load of out-of-state waste apart from origin. Southern States Landfill, Inc. v. Georgia Dep't of Natural Resources, 801 F. Supp. 725 (M.D. Ga. 1992).

Commerce (Cont'd)3. Power of State to Regulate (Cont'd)

The state failed to justify its requirements that one must obtain a special solid waste handling permit prior to engaging in out-of-state waste disposal; that an out-of-state waste handler must submit a waste analysis plan, through which the operator must obtain a representative sample from every load of out-of-state waste received and perform a detailed chemical and physical analysis on the sample; that out-of-state waste be accompanied by a manifest at all times that the waste is in the state of Georgia; that $10.00 per ton be charged as a fee on out-of-state waste; and that the Environmental Protection Division of the Georgia Department of Natural Resources be authorized to inspect at random any out-of-state generators that dispose of their waste in Georgia. Southern States Landfill, Inc. v. Georgia Dep't of Natural Resources, 801 F. Supp. 725 (M.D. Ga. 1992).

The statutory provisions and the rules that apply to the regulation of out-of-state waste, or "special solid waste," specifically former O.C.G.A. § 12-8-27 and Rule 391-3-4.10, in their entirety, and O.C.G.A. § 12-8-24 and Rule 391-3-4.02, insofar as they require a permit for the handling of special solid waste, are unconstitutional burdens upon interstate commerce. Southern States Landfill, Inc. v. Georgia Dep't of Natural Resources, 801 F. Supp. 725 (M.D. Ga. 1992) (decided prior to repeal of § 12-8-27 by Ga. L. 1993, p. 399).

Out-of-county operator had standing to challenge county ordinance on landfills because the ordinance regulated out-of-county waste brought into the county. Mullis Tree Serv., Inc. v. Bibb County, 822 F. Supp. 738 (M.D. Ga. 1993).

Landfill operator whose landfill was permitted as a landfill not regulated by a county ordinance but who had obtained special authorization from the state to accept various other types of waste, some of which was defined by the county ordinance, had standing to challenge the ordinance. Mullis Tree Serv., Inc. v. Bibb County, 822 F. Supp. 738 (M.D. Ga. 1993).

County ordinance treating differently in-county waste from out-of-county waste was subject to strict scrutiny, requiring lower court reconsideration on the issue of facial invalidity. Diamond Waste, Inc. v. Monroe County, 814 F. Supp. 83 (M.D. Ga. 1993).

Discrimination regarding transportation of refuse. — County ordinance regulating waste imported into county was unconstitutional under the commerce clause, since it treated waste coming from outside the county differently from waste originating inside the county, and the county failed to meet its burden of showing that there was some reason, apart from county of origin, to treat out-of-county waste differently from in-county waste. Diamond Waste, Inc. v. Monroe County, 828 F. Supp. 52 (M.D. Ga. 1993), aff'd, 43 F.3d 677 (11th Cir. 1994).

County policy limiting the origin of waste to within 150 miles of the county was violative of the commerce clause, despite the county's assertion that the limitation was necessary to preserve the capacity of its waste facility. The county failed to give any reason why its objectives could not be accomplished without discriminating against other counties. GSW, Inc. v. Long County, 999 F.2d 1508 (11th Cir. 1993).

State law regulating waste treatment facilities. — Statutory provisions regulating the issuance of permits and containing transportation restrictions pertaining to biomedical waste thermal treatment facilities were deemed unconstitutional as a violation of the commerce clause. Environmental Waste Reductions, Inc. v. Reheis, 887 F. Supp. 1534 (N.D. Ga. 1994).

Georgia "anti-takeover" statute enjoyed a presumption of validity under the supremacy and interstate commerce clauses, where it could not be established with the required degree of legal certainty that the statute denied hostile tender offers for Georgia corporations a meaningful opportunity to succeed. West Point-Pepperell, Inc. v. Farley, Inc., 711 F. Supp. 1096 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

4. Power of State to Tax

Validity of tax on imports. — Where commodity imported into state has come to rest and become part of common mass of property in state, a nondiscriminatory tax by state upon it, or upon its sale or use, is valid. Wright v. Fulton County, 169 Ga. 354, 150 S.E. 262 (1929).

Gasoline imported by distributor from another state but used in conduct of its business loses its interstate character and may be subjected to an excise tax consistently with commerce clause, although it remains in original packages in which it is imported. Wright v. Fulton County, 169 Ga. 354, 150 S.E. 262 (1929).

Mere privilege of engaging in interstate commerce is not derived from the state and cannot be conditioned by a state upon procuring a license or paying a tax. Johnson Transf. & Freight Lines v. Perry, 47 F.2d 900 (N.D. Ga. 1931).

Control of use of improved roads. — The state may license or refuse to license, may condition or charge for, the use of its improved roads, when they are turned from their common uses and purposes to the carrier's business, since interstate carrier has no better right than any other to use the state's improved highways without its consent, or without paying for it. Johnson Transf. & Freight Lines v. Perry, 47 F.2d 900 (N.D. Ga. 1931).

Certificate of public convenience and necessity, with a reasonable fee therefor, and an annual license fee for trucks, are legally demandable by state as a nondiscriminatory prerequisite for use of highways for carrier purposes, even though the commerce involved is wholly interstate. Johnson Transf. & Freight Lines v. Perry, 47 F.2d 900 (N.D. Ga. 1931).

Tax on proceeds of interstate commerce. — It is a burden on interstate commerce for a state to tax proceeds of interstate commerce, and a tax by a state upon the gross receipts of goods sold in interstate commerce is a tax on interstate commerce and is contrary to U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl.3. American Mills Co. v. Doyal, 46 Ga. App. 236, 167 S.E. 312 (1933).

Highway users subject to state regulation. — Highways are public property and users of them, although engaged exclusively in interstate commerce, are subject to regulation by state to ensure safety and convenience and conservation of the highways, and may be required to contribute to their cost and upkeep. Common carriers for hire, who make the highways their place of business, may properly be charged an extra tax for such use. Aero Mayflower Transit Co. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 179 Ga. 431, 176 S.E. 487 (1934), aff'd, 295 U.S. 285, 55 S. Ct. 709, 79 L. Ed. 1439 (1935).

To sustain a charge by the state for the use of or privilege of using its roads for interstate transportation, it must affirmatively appear that the charge is exacted as compensation or to pay the cost of policing its highways. Dixie Ohio Express Co. v. State Revenue Comm'n, 306 U.S. 72, 59 S. Ct. 435, 83 L. Ed. 495 (1939).

Validity of tax on interstate carriers for highway use. — While state may not tax privilege of engaging in interstate commerce, it may impose upon motor vehicles engaged exclusively in interstate commerce a charge, as compensation for use of public highways, which is a fair contribution to the cost of constructing and maintaining them and of regulating the traffic thereon. As such a tax is a direct burden on interstate commerce, it cannot be sustained unless it appears, in some way, that it is levied only as compensation for use of the highways or to defray the expense of regulating motor traffic. This may be indicated by the nature of the imposition, such as a mileage tax directly proportioned to highway use, by the express allocation of the proceeds of the tax to highway purposes, or otherwise. Where it is shown that the tax is so imposed, it will be sustained, unless the taxpayer shows that it bears no reasonable relation to the privilege of using the highways or is discriminatory; but the mere fact that the tax falls upon one who uses the highway is not enough to give it presumptive validity. Aero Mayflower Transit Co. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 179 Ga. 431, 176 S.E. 487 (1934), aff'd, 295 U.S. 285, 55 S. Ct. 709, 79 L. Ed. 1439 (1935).

Validity of regulation requiring permit and payment of tax from exclusively interstate carriers. — State regulation providing that, before operating over state highways, common motor carrier shall apply for and obtain certificate or permit from state commission and shall pay an extra tax for maintenance and repair of the highways and for administration and enforcement of the laws governing their use, is constitutional though applied to carriers engaged exclusively in interstate commerce. That the tax so exacted is not all used for maintenance and repair of the highways, but some of it for defraying expenses of the commission for administration and enforcement and some for other purposes, is no concern of the taxpayer, it being assessed for a proper purpose and not unreasonable in amount. Aero Mayflower Transit Co. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 179 Ga. 431, 176 S.E. 487 (1934), aff'd, 295 U.S. 285, 55 S. Ct. 709, 79 L. Ed. 1439 (1935).

Commerce (Cont'd)4. Power of State to Tax (Cont'd)

Validity of tax on corporate income derived from interstate commerce. — Fact that sources of tax imposed on corporation organized under laws of Delaware and domesticated under laws of Georgia incidentally involve interstate commerce transactions in computing the taxable net income of taxpayer does not contravene the commerce clause. Montag Bros. v. State Revenue Comm'n, 50 Ga. App. 660, 179 S.E. 563 (1935), aff'd, 182 Ga. 568, 186 S.E. 558 (1936).

Validity of municipal tax on operation of radio broadcasting station. — Business of radio broadcasting of programs, some originating in other states and transmitted to broadcasting station in this state by wire, and others originating locally, to listeners in this state and other states, is interstate commerce, and is of such a nature that the business of broadcasting such programs to listeners in this state cannot be discontinued without withdrawing the broadcasting of such programs from listeners in other states. A municipal tax on privilege of operating or the business of operating a radio broadcasting station of the nature described is invalid as a burden on interstate commerce. City of Atlanta v. Southern Broadcasting Co., 184 Ga. 9, 190 S.E. 594 (1937).

State has power to tax income of its resident and domestic corporations derived from transactions both within and without state, where there is no discrimination against interstate commerce either in the admeasurement of the tax or in the means adopted for the enforcing of it. State Revenue Comm'n v. Edgar Bros. Co., 185 Ga. 216, 194 S.E. 505 (1937), appeal dismissed, 303 U.S. 626, 58 S. Ct. 761, 82 L. Ed. 1088 (1938).

Taxation of income of nonresidents as burden on interstate commerce. — As to nonresidents, income tax may be levied upon income received from property within state, and fact that it may require activities of skill and management outside state to bring the income to fruition does not, by reason of the commerce clause, deprive the taxing state of jurisdiction to tax income which arises within its borders, as to nonresidents doing business in a state and whose business is of a unitary character, a tax may be levied based upon the entire net income, but apportioned to that part of the net income attributable to business done in the taxing state, where the enforcement of such tax is left to the ordinary means of collecting taxes. State Revenue Comm'n v. Edgar Bros. Co., 185 Ga. 216, 194 S.E. 505 (1937), appeal dismissed, 303 U.S. 626, 58 S. Ct. 761, 82 L. Ed. 1088 (1938).

Validity of maintenance tax imposed on carriers for use of highways. — Former Code 1933, Ch. 92-29 (see O.C.G.A. Ch. 10, T. 48), which imposes a maintenance tax on the operation of motor buses, trucks, and trailers upon the public roads of this state, in addition to any and all other taxes, licenses, or registration fees required, for the privilege of using the highways of the state, the entire amount of the tax to be allocated for the construction and maintenance of public highways, is not violative of the commerce clause nor does it violate the privileges and immunities clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Dixie-Ohio Express Co. v. State Revenue Comm'n, 186 Ga. 228, 197 S.E. 887 (1938), aff'd, 306 U.S. 72, 59 S. Ct. 435, 83 L. Ed. 495 (1939).

It is elementary that state may not impose a tax on privilege of engaging in interstate commerce. Dixie Ohio Express Co. v. State Revenue Comm'n, 306 U.S. 72, 59 S. Ct. 435, 83 L. Ed. 495 (1939).

Imposition of charge for use of special facilities furnished by state. — If a state at its own expense furnishes special facilities for the use of those engaged in commerce, interstate as well as domestic, it may exact compensation therefor. Dixie Ohio Express Co. v. State Revenue Comm'n, 306 U.S. 72, 59 S. Ct. 435, 83 L. Ed. 495 (1939).

Validity of tax on privilege of possessing cigarettes. — Cigarette tax levied not upon the privilege of receiving cigarettes in this state, but rather upon the privilege of retaining, keeping, holding, or possessing them for personal use after they have been received, acquired, or brought into this state, is not violative of the commerce clause. Head v. Cigarette Sales Co., 188 Ga. 452, 4 S.E.2d 203 (1939).

Excise tax which effects protectionism is invalid. — An excise tax provision whose purpose and effect is simple economic protectionism is virtually per se invalid under the commerce clause. James B. Beam Distilling Co. v. State, 259 Ga. 363, 382 S.E.2d 95 (1989), rev'd on other grounds, 501 U.S. 529, 111 S. Ct. 2439, 115 L. Ed. 2d 481 (1991), aff'd, 263 Ga. 609, 437 S.E.2d 782 (1993).

Nondiscriminatory ad valorem tax. — Commerce clause does not exempt either tangible or intangible property from nondiscriminatory ad valorem tax by state, nor would it matter that the same intangibles might also be subject to taxation in state of company's domicile. Suttles v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., 193 Ga. 495, 19 S.E.2d 396 (1942), later appeal, 201 Ga. 84, 38 S.E.2d 786 (1946).

Commerce clause does not exempt either tangible or intangible property from nondiscriminatory ad valorem tax by municipality. Parke, Davis & Co. v. City of Atlanta, 200 Ga. 296, 36 S.E.2d 773 (1946).

Taxation of domestic corporate income derived from interstate commerce. — A state, in levying a general income tax upon gains and profits of domestic corporation, may include in the computation the net income derived from transactions in interstate commerce without contravening the commerce clause, where there is no discrimination against interstate commerce either in the admeasurement of the tax or in the means adopted for enforcing it. Parke, Davis & Co. v. Cook, 198 Ga. 457, 31 S.E.2d 728 (1944), appeal dismissed, 323 U.S. 681, 65 S. Ct. 436, 89 L. Ed. 552 (1945).

Merchant's tax on nonresidents. — State is not precluded by commerce clause from imposing merchant's tax upon nonresident manufacturing corporation which has selected a city of that state as a distributing point, and has secured a local transfer company to take charge of its products when shipped to that point, assort them, store them in warehouse, and make delivery in original packages to customers of manufacturer, either as expressly directed by it, or under general directions in favor of its recognized and approved customers whose names are furnished to transfer company, since, under such circumstances, the goods, when stored in warehouse, are no longer in transit but have reached their destination and are held in the state for sale. Parke, Davis & Co. v. Cook, 198 Ga. 457, 31 S.E.2d 728 (1944), appeal dismissed, 323 U.S. 681, 65 S. Ct. 436, 89 L. Ed. 552 (1945).

Taxation of corporate income derived from unsolicited orders from outside state. — Before any part of income received by corporations having property or doing business in state can lawfully escape Georgia tax law, it must appear that such part was derived from property owned or business done outside state. Income derived by corporation from unsolicited orders received by it from outside state cannot, under the fourteenth amendment and the commerce clause, be taxed elsewhere than in state. State v. Coca-Cola Bottling Co., 214 Ga. 316, 104 S.E.2d 574 (1958).

Commerce clause gives exclusive power to Congress to regulate interstate commerce, and its failure to act on the subject in area of taxation nevertheless requires that interstate commerce shall be free from any direct restrictions or impositions by the states. Northwestern States Portland Cement Co. v. Minnesota, 358 U.S. 450, 79 S. Ct. 357, 3 L. Ed. 2d 421 (1959) (decided under prior law).

Tax on net income from interstate commerce, as distinguished from tax on privilege of engaging in interstate commerce, does not conflict with commerce clause. Northwestern States Portland Cement Co. v. Minnesota, 358 U.S. 450, 79 S. Ct. 357, 3 L. Ed. 2d 421 (1959) (decided under prior law).

Former Code 1933, § 92-3101 et seq. (see O.C.G.A. Art. 2, Ch. 7, T. 48) does not offend the due process clause or the commerce clause. Owens-Illinois Glass Co. v. Oxford, 216 Ga. 316, 116 S.E.2d 293 (1960).

Taxation of an airline sale of food places no burden on interstate commerce such as would offend commerce clause if it is merely a tax due to a local transaction, the sale of the meal. Undercofler v. Eastern Air Lines, 221 Ga. 824, 147 S.E.2d 436 (1966).

Commerce (Cont'd)4. Power of State to Tax (Cont'd)

No state can tax the privilege of doing interstate business, as that is within the protection of the commerce clause and subject to the power of Congress; but the mere fact that property is used for interstate commerce or has come into owner's possession as a result of interstate commerce does not diminish the protection which he may draw from a state to the upkeep of which he may be asked to bear his fair share. Independent Publishing Co. v. Hawes, 119 Ga. App. 858, 168 S.E.2d 904 (1969).

No relief from just tax burden. — It is not the purpose of the commerce clause to relieve those engaged in interstate commerce of their just share of state tax burdens, merely because an incidental or consequential effect of the tax is an increase in the cost of doing the business. Independent Publishing Co. v. Hawes, 119 Ga. App. 858, 168 S.E.2d 904 (1969); Chattanooga Glass Co. v. Strickland, 244 Ga. 603, 261 S.E.2d 599 (1979).

Taxation by states of property shipped interstate, before its movement begins or after it ends, is not forbidden by U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl. 3. Independent Publishing Co. v. Hawes, 119 Ga. App. 858, 168 S.E.2d 904 (1969).

Validity of use tax on interstate goods at rest. — Things acquired or transported in interstate commerce may be subjected, when once they are at rest, to a nondiscriminatory state tax upon use or enjoyment. Independent Publishing Co. v. Hawes, 119 Ga. App. 858, 168 S.E.2d 904 (1969).

Test for validity of tax affecting interstate commerce. — A state is free to pursue its own fiscal policies, unembarrassed by the Constitution, if, by the practical operation of a tax, the state has exerted its power in relation to opportunities which it has given, to protection which it has afforded, to benefits which it has conferred by the fact of being an orderly, civilized society. The sole constitutional test is whether the state has given anything for which it can ask return. Independent Publishing Co. v. Hawes, 119 Ga. App. 858, 168 S.E.2d 904 (1969).

Nondiscriminatory ad valorem property taxes do not interfere with the free flow of imported goods among the states. Michelin

Tire Corp. v. Wages, 423 U.S. 276, 96 S. Ct. 535, 46 L. Ed. 2d 495 (1976).

Underground storage tanks. — The participation fee provided for in O.C.G.A. § 12-13-10 does not constitute an impermissible burden on interstate commerce, in violation of U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, and art. VI. Luke v. Georgia Dep't of Natural Resources, 270 Ga. 647, 513 S.E.2d 728 (1999).

Use tax on personalty at rest not a tax on operators of interstate commerce. — A tax on privilege of using items of tangible personal property after they have come to rest in a state and commerce is at an end, is not a tax on the operators of interstate commerce. Ingalls Iron Works Co. v. Chilivis, 237 Ga. 479, 228 S.E.2d 866 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1081, 97 S. Ct. 1086, 51 L. Ed. 2d 528 (1977).

Implementation of hotel/motel tax. — A statute creating special districts for the purpose of implementing a hotel/motel tax did not violate the commerce clause. Youngblood v. State, 259 Ga. 864, 388 S.E.2d 671 (1990).

To establish that charge levied against interstate carrier imposes an impermissible burden on interstate commerce, the complaining party must show that the charge: (1) discriminates against interstate commerce in favor of intrastate commerce; (2) is imposed on the privilege of doing interstate business as distinguished from being imposed for the use of facilities provided by the state; or (3) exceeds fair compensation to the state. Southern Airways, Inc. v. City of Atlanta, 428 F. Supp. 1010 (N.D. Ga. 1977).

Amount, rather than formula, of charge determinative of fairness. — In determining whether charges for lease of space at city airport are excessive in comparison with government benefit conferred and hence constitute an impermissible burden on interstate commerce, one must focus on amount of charge rather than its formula. If amount of charge levied on interstate carrier is based on some fair approximation of use or privilege for use, it does not impose an impermissible burden upon interstate commerce. Southern Airways, Inc. v. City of Atlanta, 428 F. Supp. 1010 (N.D. Ga. 1977).

Taxation of interstate commerce does not per se violate commerce clause principles. Chattanooga Glass Co. v. Strickland, 244 Ga. 603, 261 S.E.2d 599 (1979).

Apportionment of property tax. — Since the bus company submitted evidence that some of its buses had acquired a tax situs in a state other than Georgia, the United States Constitution's commerce clause required that Georgia's ad valorem tax on property engaged in interstate commerce, such as the bus company's buses, be apportioned; accordingly, the bus company was entitled to have the ad valorem tax assessed on its bus fleet apportioned. Fulton County Bd. of Tax Assessors v. Harmon Bros. Charter Serv., 261 Ga. App. 534, 583 S.E.2d 179 (2003).

Coining of Money and Regulation of Legal Tender

Mint has no power to mint coins unless it has been authorized to do so by Congress. Mesaros v. United States, 845 F.2d 1576 (Fed. Cir. 1988).

Requirement that wrecker services accept checks and credit cards does not violate U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII since the regulation does not require a wrecker service to accept something other than legal tender to discharge a debt. Porter v. City of Atlanta, 259 Ga. 526, 384 S.E.2d 631 (1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1004, 110 S. Ct. 1297, 108 L. Ed. 2d 474 (1990).

A city code section which makes it unlawful for a wrecker service to refuse to accept checks and major credit cards is constitutional, and is not ultra vires the home rule powers conferred by O.C.G.A. § 36-35-6(a). Upton v. City of Atlanta, 260 Ga. 250, 392 S.E.2d 244 (1990).

Check backed by lawful money. — Since both Congress and the courts have found federal reserve notes to be legal tender, the court found the check given to homebuyer by a mortgage company was backed by and redeemable in federal reserve notes, coins and lawful money of the United States. Strickland v. A Mtg. Co., 179 Bankr. 979 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1995).

Bankruptcy

Bankruptcy power of Congress. — The Constitution of the United States vests authority in Congress to establish uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies throughout the United States, and the power of Congress is paramount in matters relating to this subject. Smith v. Folsom, 190 Ga. 460, 9 S.E.2d 824 (1949).

Under the bankruptcy power Congress has authority to impair obligation of contracts, but may do so only when property is not, contrary to the fifth amendment, taken without due process of law. In re Philibosian, 19 F. Supp. 787 (N.D. Ga. 1937).

The impairment or modification of contract rights under the bankruptcy power granted under clause 4 is not prohibited by the fifth amendment. In re Bullington, 80 Bankr. 590 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1987), aff'd, 89 Bankr. 1010 (M.D. Ga. 1988), 878 F.2d 354 (11th Cir. 1989).

Although the United States Constitution grants Congress the power to establish bankruptcy laws, Art. I, Sec. VIII, cl. 4, that power is subject to the fifth amendment, which proscribes taking private property for public use without just compensation. GMAC v. Johnson, 145 Bankr. 108 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1992), rev'd on other grounds, 165 Bankr. 524 (S.D. Ga. 1994).

Due process met where noteholder deprived of property through bankruptcy proceedings. — An unsecured note is property whose value rests wholly in the debtor's obligation to pay it and in the right to seize his property to satisfy a judgment on the note. The holder may be deprived of his property by a process of bankruptcy resulting in the bankrupt's discharge without any payment, and due process of law is not lacking. In re Philibosian, 19 F. Supp. 787 (N.D. Ga. 1937).

Nullification of rights of secured creditor through bankruptcy. — It is not clear that to deprive a secured creditor of his security through bankruptcy deprives him of property any more than to deprive the unsecured creditor of his debt does, or that the process of bankruptcy is any less a due process of law in the one case than in the other. The true reason why bankruptcy may not nullify a security is not the fifth amendment but the fact that it never has. It lies in the limitations inherent in the bankruptcy power. In re Philibosian, 19 F. Supp. 787 (N.D. Ga. 1937).

Delay of realization on security within bankruptcy power. — To delay realization on a security, especially when the security is ample and secured creditor will realize his debt in full or at least the full present value of the security with compensation for the delay, and there are good reasons for the delay, all adjudged by a court, is not unprecedented or unreasonable and is within bankruptcy power. In re Philibosian, 19 F. Supp. 787 (N.D. Ga. 1937).

Bankruptcy (Cont'd)

Extent of bankruptcy power. — Although it is true that the exercise of the power to draft laws on the subject of bankruptcies is subject to the strictures of the fifth amendment, the appropriate use of that power by Congress will not be found unconstitutional simply because it upsets previously settled expectations. Joyner v. Golden Dome Inv. Co., 7 Bankr. 596 (M.D. Ga. 1980).

Administration of decedent's estates. — Congress has the power to create bankruptcy jurisdiction over the administration of decedents' estates. Goerg v. Parungao, 844 F.2d 1562 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 1034, 109 S. Ct. 850, 102 L. Ed. 2d 981 (1989).

That the Bankruptcy Code's definition of "debtor" excludes decedents' estates does not mean that such exclusion applies in the context of a proceeding ancillary to a foreign proceeding pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 304. Goerg v. Parungao, 844 F.2d 1562 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 1034, 109 S. Ct. 850, 102 L. Ed. 2d 981 (1989).

Power to discharge debtor. — The power to establish uniform laws on bankruptcy throughout the country includes the power to discharge the debtor from his contracts and legal liabilities, as well as to distribute his property. Caruthers v. Fleet Fin., Inc., 87 Bankr. 723 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1988).

Power to cure and reinstate accelerated debts. — The Constitution of the United States empowered Congress to establish "uniform Laws on the subject of Bankruptcies throughout the United States," and laws enacted by Congress pursuant to this grant of authority are supreme to those of the states. Bankruptcy provisions allowing the opportunity to cure and reinstate accelerated debts and bankruptcy provisions governing the payment of secured creditors' attorney's fees are no exception to the supremacy clause. In re Centre Court Apts., Ltd., 85 Bankr. 651 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1988).

No district or bankruptcy court has any exercisable jurisdiction in bankruptcy cases, matters, or proceedings after December 24, 1982, and a district court cannot confer jurisdiction on a bankruptcy court by adoption of an emergency rule. Williamson v. General Fin. Co., 28 Bankr. 276 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1983).

Bankruptcy judges cannot decide peripheral state common-law claims. — Non-Article III bankruptcy judges cannot constitutionally be vested with jurisdictional power to decide state common-law claims brought pursuant to the Bankruptcy Act and related only peripherally to a bankruptcy case adjudicated under federal law. Pettigrew v. Kutak, Rock & Huie, 30 Bankr. 989 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Patents and Copyrights

Production to which the protection of copyright may be accorded is the property of the author and not of the United States, but the copyright is the creature of federal statutes passed in the exercise of the power vested in Congress by U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl. 8. Fox Film Corp. v. Doyal, 286 U.S. 123, 52 S. Ct. 546, 76 L. Ed. 1010 (1932).

Copyrights are not to be deemed instrumentalities of federal government and hence immune from state taxation. The mere fact that a copyright is property derived from a grant by the United States is insufficient to support the claim of exemption from state taxation. Fox Film Corp. v. Doyal, 286 U.S. 123, 52 S. Ct. 546, 76 L. Ed. 1010 (1932).

Generally, right to copyright works of science and the arts is obtained from Constitution of United States. Cartin v. Boles, 155 Ga. App. 248, 270 S.E.2d 799 (1980).

United States Congress has preempted field as to statutory copyrights. Cartin v. Boles, 155 Ga. App. 248, 270 S.E.2d 799 (1980).

Patent rights exist only by virtue of federal statute. Monumental Properties of Ga., Inc. v. Frontier Disposal, Inc., 159 Ga. App. 35, 282 S.E.2d 660 (1981).

Trademark registration that has achieved incontestable status under 15 U.S.C. § 1065 is still subject to attack based on functionality. Pudenz v. Littlefuse, Inc., 177 F.3d 1204 (11th Cir. 1999).

General ideas (theme, plot, etc.) are in public domain and cannot be copyrighted. Cartin v. Boles, 155 Ga. App. 248, 270 S.E.2d 799 (1980).

In literary works, it is not the novelty but the originality of the wording that is proected by copyright. Cartin v. Boles, 155 Ga. App. 248, 270 S.E.2d 799 (1980).

Test of pirating, infringement, or literary larceny concerns originality and whether the production is the result of independent labor or copying others. Similarities, historical facts, and incidental details which are necessary to the environment or setting of an action are not material of which copyrightable originality consists. Cartin v. Boles, 155 Ga. App. 248, 270 S.E.2d 799 (1980).

If access to the work is admitted, then inquiry as to infringement concerns what, if anything, defendant appropriated. Cartin v. Boles, 155 Ga. App. 248, 270 S.E.2d 799 (1980).

At common law, author has property right in the unpublished manuscript and can obtain redress against anyone who deprives the author of it by infringement or against anyone who obtains a copy and endeavors to realize a profit by its publication through plagiarism or otherwise. Cartin v. Boles, 155 Ga. App. 248, 270 S.E.2d 799 (1980).

Property right in unpatented product is only exclusive until it becomes property of public by being placed on the market. Monumental Properties of Ga., Inc. v. Frontier Disposal, Inc., 159 Ga. App. 35, 282 S.E.2d 660 (1981).

Charge on "common law patent" is erroneous statement of law. Monumental Properties of Ga., Inc. v. Frontier Disposal, Inc., 159 Ga. App. 35, 282 S.E.2d 660 (1981).

Similarity to substantial portion of work is infringement. — Infringement of a copyright may be found where the similarity relates to matter which constitutes a substantial portion of the copyright holder's work — i.e., matter which is of value to the copyright holder. United States v. O'Reilly, 794 F.2d 613 (11th Cir. 1986).

Copyright in a compilation does not prohibit the copying of pre-existing material that is in the compilation. CNN, Inc. v. Video Monitoring Serv. of Am., Inc., 940 F.2d 1471 (11th Cir. 1991), appeal dismissed, 959 F.2d 188 (11th Cir. 1992).

Videotaping and selling news reports. — The enforcement of the copyright statute by a television station against a business which videotaped its news broadcasts and sold the tapes to the subjects of the news reports did not violate the copyright clause. Pacific & S.

Co. v. Duncan, 744 F.2d 1490 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1004, 105 S. Ct. 1867, 85 L. Ed. 2d 161 (1985).

Typical television newscast may be copyrightable in its entirety as a compilation only. CNN, Inc. v. Video Monitoring Serv. of Am., Inc., 940 F.2d 1471 (11th Cir. 1991), appeal dismissed, 959 F.2d 188 (11th Cir. 1992).

Fair use of cable television newscasts. — Any injunction that would prevent the copying of a cable television network's newscasts "in any part" would be inconsistent with the federal Copyright Act, particularly its fair use provisions, and both the copyright clause and the first amendment to the Constitution. CNN, Inc. v. Video Monitoring Serv. of Am., Inc., 940 F.2d 1471 (11th Cir. 1991), appeal dismissed, 959 F.2d 188 (11th Cir. 1992).

War-Making Powers

Compensation for military service. — Under the war-making power conferred by Constitution, Congress is empowered to adopt any means which it may deem necessary to contribute to the success of the undertaking. From this it follows that Congress is authorized to grant allotments, bounties, pensions, and other rewards in return for military service, and may prescribe, as a condition upon which this compensation shall be given, a provision that the federal compensation for military service shall be exempt from all taxation, including state taxation. Rucker v. Merck, 172 Ga. 793, 159 S.E. 501 (1931).

In exercise of its exclusive prerogative to wage war, federal government cannot be interfered with by state legislation. City of Atlanta v. Stokes, 175 Ga. 201, 165 S.E. 270 (1932).

Even though power of state to tax generally is supreme, that power may not be used to hamper, hinder, annoy, harass, and impede the federal government in the exercise of its unlimited power to carry on war. City of Atlanta v. Stokes, 175 Ga. 201, 165 S.E. 270 (1932).

Power of Congress to exempt compensation for war veterans from state taxation. — Where Congress enacts legislation declaring that certain compensation for war veterans shall be exempt from all taxation, Congress is acting within its war powers and the exemption applies to state taxation, including taxation of property purchased by veterans with funds declared tax exempt by Congress. City of Atlanta v. Stokes, 175 Ga. 201, 165 S.E. 270 (1932).

War-Making Powers (Cont'd)

Lack of formal declaration of war by Congress is without legal effect on validity of court martial jurisdiction during such undeclared war. Torres v. Connor, 329 F. Supp. 1025 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

Regulation of Armed Forces

Although trial by military tribunal deprives one of trial by jury and other constitutional rights, it is not unconstitutional. Military jurisdiction, however, is restricted to the narrowest limits consistent with the power granted Congress in U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl. 14. Torres v. Connor, 329 F. Supp. 1025 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

Lack of formal declaration of war by Congress is without legal effect on validity of court martial jurisdiction during such undeclared war. Torres v. Connor, 329 F. Supp. 1025 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

Only within narrow limits and where first amendment rights are involved will federal courts enjoin state or military prosecution. Torres v. Connor, 329 F. Supp. 1025 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl. 14 is grant of legislative power. — Express authority of U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl. 14 to make rules for government and regulation of land and naval forces is a grant of purely legislative power, and is the prime source of the establishment of the system of military justice. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd on other grounds, 519 F.2d 184 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1976).

Exclusive Jurisdiction

Change of domicile by military personnel. — U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl. 17, properly construed, does not altogether deny a soldier the right enjoyed by others of changing his domicile from one state to another because he is stationed on a government reservation. He should not unnecessarily be thus discriminated against and limited in matters not connected with his status as a soldier. Dicks v. Dicks, 177 Ga. 379, 170 S.E. 245 (1933).

Exclusive legislation has been construed to mean exclusive jurisdiction in the sense of exclusive sovereignty. Mater v. Holley, 200 F.2d 123 (5th Cir. 1952).

Nothing in the Constitution of United States can confer upon Georgia Legislature an iota of power to legislate for Georgia. — This court rejects in toto all argument of counsel that U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl. 17 imposes or was intended to impose any duty whatever upon any state legislature to act. Its sole intent and meaning are to define the jurisdiction that will result if and when a state legislature by a valid law cedes jurisdiction or consents to purchase. Power does not lie in the federal government to invest the Legislature of Georgia with authority to legislate for this sovereign state, and any attempt to do so, whether by constitutional provision, congressional Act, or judicial decision, would utterly fail. No such attempt has been made by either the Constitution or Congress, and this court does not construe any court decision to constitute such an attempt. IBM Corp. v. Evans, 213 Ga. 333, 99 S.E.2d 220 (1957).

Surrender of state sovereignty. — U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl. 17 declares that when cession or consent by a state legislature has been given, exclusive legislative power vests in the United States. This court believes the sounder reasoning to the conclusion would be that no legislature, without express constitutional power, can surrender the state's sovereignty. Therefore, the attempt to surrender it is effective only to the extent of allowing the United States to own and use the land free from state interference by taxes or otherwise. Individuals, however, cannot be given such privileges. IBM Corp. v. Evans, 213 Ga. 333, 99 S.E.2d 220 (1957).

United States penitentiary is "needful building" within meaning of U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl. 17. Gainey v. United States, 324 F.2d 731 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 374 U.S. 842, 83 S. Ct. 1897, 10 L. Ed. 1062 (1963).

Nature of jurisdiction over lands acquired other than by purchase with state's consent. — Where lands are acquired by the United States within the limits of a state in any way other than by purchase with state's consent, the United States will hold the lands subject to this qualification: that if forts, arsenals, or other public buildings are erected upon such lands for the uses of the federal government, such buildings and their appurtenances, as instrumentalities for the execution of its powers, will be free from any such interference and jurisdiction of the state as would destroy or impair their effective use for the purposes designed. Brittain v. Reid, 220 Ga. 794, 141 S.E.2d 903 (1965).

Nature of federal possession of land acquired without state's consent. — The federal government may, without consent of the state, acquire land within a state by condemnation or purchase, but without state consent the United States does not obtain the benefits of U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl. 17 and its possession is that of an ordinary proprietor. DeKalb County v. Henry C. Beck Co., 382 F.2d 992 (5th Cir. 1967).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

ANALYSIS

COMMERCE

EXCLUSIVE JURISDICTION

Commerce

Transportation of gambling devices in interstate commerce. — It is illegal under the laws of this state to transport gambling devices within this state in intrastate commerce; however, this state does not attempt to exercise jurisdiction over the transportation of gambling devices in interstate commerce. 1960-61 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 113.

Imposition of state safety inspection standards on interstate busses registered in state. — Any reasonable safety inspection standards which this state might wish to impose upon interstate busses registered in this state would be permissible under U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl. 3 of this section. 1972 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 72-33.

Use tax on "cost price" does not violate commerce clause. — Imposition of use tax upon "cost price," as defined by paragraph (2) of O.C.G.A. § 48-8-2, does not violate commerce clause, as it treats taxpayers printing own material out-of-state and taxpayers printing own material within the state equally. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 81-93.

Exclusive Jurisdiction

U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl. 17 gives to Congress the exclusive right of legislation over property or areas within jurisdiction of state where the consent of the legislature of the state is given. 1945-47 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 49.

State authority having power to cede land and jurisdiction to federal government. — The only authority of the state which has power to consent to acquisition of property within state by federal government so as to deprive state of jurisdiction over same is the General Assembly. 1945-47 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 49.

Building safety counsel has no right or duty to inspect: (a) properties of the federal government such as military reservations; or (b) properties, such as war housing projects, owned by the government but leased to private persons for nongovernmental uses. 1948-49 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 394.

Means of acquiring jurisdiction. — Under U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cls. 17 and 18, the United States may gain exclusive jurisdiction over lands acquired within a state either by purchase with the consent of the state legislature or by cession of jurisdiction by the state legislature to the United States and acceptance of the cession by Congress. 1952-53 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 8; 1963-65 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 496.

Validity of reservations of authority by state over ceded or purchased territory. — The state legislature, in its Act consenting to purchase by the United States or ceding jurisdiction to the United States, may reserve such authority over the ceded territory as will not be incompatible with the exercise of exclusive jurisdiction by the United States. Reservations of the right to serve process and to resume full jurisdiction if the United States ceases to own the land are not incompatible with the federal requirements. Regulating public utilities in any ceded territory is not incompatible with U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl. 17, and the Act effectively cedes jurisdiction over lands used by the Department of Defense. The reservation of the right to administer the criminal laws of the state over such area or the reservation of civil and criminal jurisdiction over persons and citizens within ceded territory, however, is incompatible with the transfer of exclusive jurisdiction. 1952-53 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 8.

Exclusive Jurisdiction (Cont'd)

Military bases. — Fort Stewart remains in the exclusive jurisdiction of the federal government and the Juvenile Court of Liberty County does not have jurisdiction over juveniles who have allegedly committed delinquent acts on the military base. 1994 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U94-10.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Power of Congress to exclude commodities from transportation in interstate commerce because of the conditions under which they are produced, 3 ALR 658.

Limitation of time for deportation of alien, 8 ALR 1286.

Transportation by private means as affecting character of transaction as interstate commerce, 10 ALR 512.

Power of federal government over intrastate rates, 22 ALR 1100.

Applicability of state Anti-trust Act to interstate transaction, 24 ALR 787.

Amusement or educational enterprise as interstate commerce, 26 ALR 359; 47 ALR 782.

Interference with operation of plant producing goods destined for shipment out of state as restraint of trade or commerce among the states within inhibition of Sherman Anti-trust Act, 28 ALR 1015; 128 ALR 1075.

Subsequent dealing, by seller, with property sold conditionally in interstate commerce, as taking it out of the protection of the interstate commerce clause, 30 ALR 417.

Power of federal authorities to discontinue a branch, wholly within the state, of an interstate railroad or interurban system, 30 ALR 439.

Power of state to tax debts due from United States under contracts other than loans, 30 ALR 1462.

Right to inventions as between employer and employee, 32 ALR 1037; 44 ALR 593; 85 ALR 1512; 153 ALR 983; 61 ALR2d 356.

Implied promise of employer to pay royalty for use of patented article invented by employee, 32 ALR 1045.

State regulation of carriers by motor vehicle as affected by interstate commerce clause, 36 ALR 1110; 38 ALR 291; 47 ALR 230; 49 ALR 1203; 62 ALR 52; 85 ALR 1136; 109 ALR 1245; 135 ALR 1358.

Trademark or tradename as asset in case of bankruptcy, insolvency, or assignment for benefit of creditors, 44 ALR 706.

Statute or ordinance in relation to advertising as interference with interstate commerce, 48 ALR 563; 57 ALR 105; 115 ALR 952.

Refusal or failure of consignee to accept goods as terminating interstate shipment, 48 ALR 956.

License tax or fee on automobiles as affected by interstate commerce clause, 52 ALR 533; 115 ALR 1105.

Power of state to tax royalties from patents, 55 ALR 931.

Mill-in-transit operations or similar interruptions of movement in interstate commerce as affecting state power of taxation, 60 ALR 398.

Breaking continuity of passage or shipment as affecting its interstate character, 60 ALR 1465; 155 ALR 936.

Validity and construction of statute creating Federal Trade Commission, 68 ALR 847; 79 ALR 1200.

Constitutionality of statutes relating to grading, packing, or branding of farm products, 73 ALR 1445.

Rules of federal courts or those of state court as applicable in action for tort against carrier arising out of interstate transportation of persons, 76 ALR 428.

Constitutionality of statute relating to taxation of state banks or stock therein as affected by inapplicability of statute to national banks or national bank stock, 82 ALR 874; 83 ALR 1441.

Legal aspects of radio communication and broadcasting, 82 ALR 1106; 89 ALR 420; 104 ALR 872; 124 ALR 982; 171 ALR 765.

Requirement of license for practice of medicine or surgery as affected by interstate commerce clause of federal constitution, 82 ALR 1388.

Attachment or garnishment as interference with foreign or interstate commerce, 85 ALR 1395.

Governmental powers in peacetime emergency, 86 ALR 1539; 88 ALR 1519; 96 ALR 312; 96 ALR 826.

State income tax on resident in respect of income earned outside the state, 87 ALR 380.

Telegraphic or telephonic message between points in same state routed via points out of state as interstate commerce, 87 ALR 1333.

Conflict of Laws, § 11 – Judgment, § 374 – warrant of attorney to confess judgment – validity and effect, 89 ALR 1495.

Enumeration in constitutional provision of subjects of tax as exclusive of power of legislature to add other subjects, 100 ALR 859.

Validity, effect, and enforceability of provision of bonds, coupons, or other obligations of municipal or political body or of statute or ordinance under which they are issued, that they will be accepted in payment of taxes, 100 ALR 1339.

Constitutionality of statute permitting payment of taxes in instalments, 101 ALR 1335.

Assumption of jurisdiction by court as violation of commerce clause, 104 ALR 1075.

State statute or ordinance prohibiting or regulating transportation of intoxicating liquor as interference with interstate commerce, 110 ALR 931; 138 ALR 1150.

Constitutionality, construction, and application of statutes relating to highway transportation of automobiles for purposes of sale, 110 ALR 622.

Constitutionality of chain store tax, 112 ALR 305.

Encouragement or promotion of industry not in nature of public utility, carried on by private enterprise, as public purpose for which tax may be imposed or public money appropriated, 112 ALR 571.

Applicability of state statutes or municipal regulations to contracts for performance of work on land owned or leased by the Federal Government, 115 ALR 371; 127 ALR 827.

Tax as unlawful discrimination against interstate commerce by reason of possibility of taxation in other states, 117 ALR 444.

Right of manufacturer, producer, or wholesaler to control resale price, 125 ALR 1335.

Public regulation of dry cleaning and dyeing establishments, 128 ALR 678.

State taxation of livestock as affected by federal constitutional or statutory provisions relating to imports, exports, or interstate commerce, 130 ALR 969.

Adoption by or under authority of state statute without specific enactment or reenactment of prospective federal legislation or federal administrative rules as unconstitutional delegation of legislative power, 133 ALR 401.

Judicial decisions involving ASCAP, 136 ALR 1438.

Constitutionality and construction of Emergency Price Control Act as relating to rent, 148 ALR 1403; 149 ALR 1467; 150 ALR 1462; 151 ALR 1465; 152 ALR 1462; 153 ALR 1434; 154 ALR 1460; 155 ALR 1461; 156 ALR 1459; 157 ALR 1457; 158 ALR 1464.

Constitutionality, construction, and application of Emergency Price Control Act, 148 ALR 1429; 149 ALR 1472; 150 ALR 1470; 151 ALR 1469; 152 ALR 1472; 153 ALR 1444; 154 ALR 1468; 155 ALR 1467; 156 ALR 1467; 157 ALR 1463; 158 ALR 1474.

Constitutionality, construction, and application of statute or ordinance imposing license fee or tax upon automobiles or trailers used for habitation, 150 ALR 853.

Selective Training and Service Acts, 150 ALR 1420; 151 ALR 1456; 152 ALR 1452; 153 ALR 1422; 154 ALR 1448; 155 ALR 1452; 156 ALR 1450; 157 ALR 1450; 158 ALR 1450.

Collateral business activities incident to, or in aid of, interstate transportation, as related to interstate commerce, 152 ALR 1078.

Constitutionality, construction, and application of federal statute relating to power of national bank to engage in trust business, 153 ALR 410.

Constitutionality, construction, and application of general use tax or other compensating tax designed to complement state sales tax, 153 ALR 609.

Privilege tax in respect of business involving continuous passage and repassage over state lines of laundry or other articles for use and the return of same or similar articles to user, 153 ALR 830.

Judicial decisions involving rationing, 153 ALR 1453; 155 ALR 1475; 156 ALR 1475; 157 ALR 1472; 158 ALR 1489.

State tax in connection with transportation or distribution of oil or gas through pipe lines as affected by commerce clause, 154 ALR 623.

License or excise tax on merchandise brokers or persons performing similar functions as affected by commerce clause, 155 ALR 239.

Statute or ordinance requiring solicitor to obtain license, imposing tax or fee, as contrary to commerce clause as applied to solicitor of orders for goods to be subsequently shipped in interstate commerce, 162 ALR 857.

Immunity of state and its agencies from federal taxation as affected by the governmental or nongovernmental character of the particular functions involved, 163 ALR 542.

Decision of United States Supreme Court that insurance is interstate commerce as affecting state statutes relating to foreign insurance companies, 164 ALR 500.

Jurisdiction of state court over actions involving patents, 167 ALR 1114.

Break in transit in interstate commerce as affecting immunity of goods from local taxation, 171 ALR 283.

State tax on or in respect of goods shipped in interstate commerce to consignee for sale on consignor's account without previous sale or order for purchase, 4 ALR2d 244.

Constitutionality, construction, and application of statute respecting sale, assignment, or transfer of retail instalment contracts, 10 ALR2d 447.

Loading or unloading interstate freight in performance of obligation resting upon one other than interstate carrier as interstate commerce as regards local taxation, 10 ALR2d 651.

Subjecting radio broadcasting business to local taxation as burden on commerce, 11 ALR2d 986.

State law or state court decisions as governing, or as rule of decision in federal court, in passing upon question as to what property passes to trustee in bankruptcy under § 70(a)(5) of the Bankruptcy Act, 16 ALR2d 839.

Application and effect of "shop right rule" or license giving employer limited rights in employees' inventions and discoveries, 61 ALR2d 356.

Validity, under Federal Constitution, of state tax on, or measured by, income of foreign corporation, 67 ALR2d 1322.

Apportionment and computation of profits for which copyright infringer is liable, 2 ALR3d 1211.

Prospective assignment of renewal rights in copyright, 2 ALR3d 1403.

What constitutes uttering and passing counterfeit obligation or other security of the United States, with intent to defraud, under 18 USC § 472, 3 ALR3d 1051.

Common-law copyright in the spoken word, 32 ALR3d 618.

Literary property in lectures, 38 ALR3d 779.

Validity of municipal ordinance imposing income tax or license upon nonresident in taxing jurisdiction (commuter tax), 48 ALR3d 343.

Validity, construction, and effect of state franchising statute, 67 ALR3d 1299.

Validity and construction of statute or ordinance requiring return deposits on soft drink or similar containers, 73 ALR3d 1105.

When does statute of limitations begin to run against action for wrongful appropriation of literary property or idea, 79 ALR3d 820.

Validity of state or local regulation dealing with resale of tickets to theatrical or sporting events, 81 ALR3d 655.

Construction, application, and operation of state "retaliatory" statutes imposing special taxes or fees on foreign insurers doing business within the state, 30 ALR4th 873.

Construction and effect of provision of employment contract giving employer right to inventions made by employee, 66 ALR4th 1135.

Workers' compensation: recovery for home service provided by spouse, 67 ALR4th 765.

Validity of state statutes and administrative regulations regulating internet communications under commerce clause and First Amendment of federal constitution, 98 ALR5th 167.

Award of attorneys' fees pursuant to § 615(e)(4) of the Education of the Handicapped Act (20 USCS § 1415(e)(4), as amended by the Handicapped Children's Protection Act of 1986, 87 ALR Fed. 500.

Copyright protection for private letters, 87 ALR Fed. 871.

What constitutes a "compilation" subject to copyright protection — modern cases, 88 ALR Fed. 151.

Excuse of omission of copyright notice under 17 USCS § 405, 91 ALR Fed. 336.

Interest on award of damages and profits for federal copyright infringement, 91 ALR Fed. 839.

Burden and sufficiency of proof under

“first sale” doctrine in prosecution for copyright infringement, 94 ALR Fed. 101.

Review by federal civil courts of court-martial convictions—modern status, 95 ALR Fed. 472.

Section 9.

[Limitations upon Powers of Congress]

The Migration or Importation of such Persons as any of the States now existing shall think proper to admit, shall not be prohibited by the Congress prior to the Year one thousand eight hundred and eight, but a Tax or duty may be imposed on such Importation, not exceeding ten dollars for each Person.

The Privilege of the Writ of Habeas Corpus shall not be suspended, unless when in Cases of Rebellion or Invasion the public Safety may require it.

No Bill of Attainder or ex post facto Law shall be passed.

No Capitation, or other direct, Tax shall be laid, unless in Proportion to the Census or Enumeration herein before directed to be taken.

No Tax or Duty shall be laid on Articles exported from any State.

No Preference shall be given by any Regulation of Commerce or Revenue to the Ports of one State over those of another: nor shall Vessels bound to, or from, one State, be obliged to enter, clear, or pay Duties in another.

No Money shall be drawn from the Treasury, but in Consequence of Appropriations made by Law; and a regular Statement and Account of the Receipts and Expenditures of all public Money shall be published from time to time.

No Title of Nobility shall be granted by the United States: And no Person holding any Office of Profit or Trust under them, shall, without the Consent of the Congress, accept of any present, Emolument, Office, or Title, of any kind whatever, from any King, Prince, or foreign State.

Cross references. — State guarantee of writ of habeas corpus, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XV and Ch. 14, T. 9.

Editor's notes. — U.S. Const., art. I, sec. IX, cl. 1 referred to slave trade and was rendered obsolete by U.S. Const., amend. 13. U.S. Const., art. I, sec. IX, cl. 4 has been modified by U.S. Const., amend. 16.

Law reviews. — For article, “Georgia Water Law: Use and Control Factors,” see 19 Ga. B.J. 119 (1956). For article, “The Law of the Land,” focusing on the role of the Supreme Court, see 6 J. of Pub. L. 444 (1957). For article, “The Legal Status of the American Communist Party: 1965,” see 15 J. of Pub. L. 94 (1966). For article discussing Georgia's habeas corpus statutes in light of federal courts' requirements of exhaustion of state remedies prior to entertaining a habeas petition, see 9 Ga. St. B.J. 29 (1972). For article, “Power, Idealism, and Compromise: The Coordinate Branches and the Writ of Habeas Corpus,” see 26 Emory L.J. 149 (1977). For article, “Problems in Search of Principles: The First Amendment in the Supreme Court from 1791-1930," see 35 Emory L.J. 59 (1986). For article, "Congress: The Purse, the Purpose, and the Power," 21 Ga. L. Rev. 1 (1986). For lecture, "Government, Society, and Anarchy," see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 753 (1987). For survey of Eleventh Circuit cases on evidence, see 39 Mercer L. Rev. 1259 (1988). For article, "Ideology, Religion, and the Constitutional Protection of Private Property: 1760-1860," see 39 Emory L.J. 65 (1990). For article, "Federal and State 'State Action': The Undercritical Embrace of a Hypercriticized Doctrine," see 24 Ga. L. Rev. 327 (1990). For annual eleventh circuit survey of constitutional law — civil, see 43 Mercer L. Rev. 1075 (1992). For article, "Slavery and Race: New Ideas and Enduring Shibboleths in the Interpretation of the American Constitutional System," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 637 (1993).

For note, "In Search of the Optimum Writ: A Suggestion for the Improvement of Federal Habeas Corpus," see 22 J. of Pub. L. 465 (1973). For note, "Uncertain Waters: Tennard v. Dretke Provides Swells of Protection for the Mentally Deficient But May Cause Rising Tides of Frivolous Claims," see 56 Mercer L. Rev. 1483 (2005).

For comment on Winston v. State, 186 Ga. 573, 198 S.E. 667 (1938), see 1 Ga. B.J. 46 (1939). For comment discussing Rowe v. Peyton, 383 F.2d 709 (4th Cir. 1967), as to the availability of habeas corpus to test the validity of a sentence to commence in futuro, see 2 Ga. L. Rev. 116 (1967). For comment on Todd v. State, 228 Ga. 746, 187 S.E.2d 831 (1972), see 24 Mercer L. Rev. 491 (1973). For comment discussing interpretation of ex post facto clause, see 28 Emory L.J. 429 (1979). For comment on revival prosecutions and the ex post facto clauses, see 50 Emory L.J. 397 (2001). Garner v. Jones: Restricting prisoners' ex post facto challenges to changes in parole systems, see 52 Mercer L. Rev. 761 (2001).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

BILL OF ATTAINDER

HABEAS CORPUS

EX POST FACTO LAWS

APPROPRIATIONS

General Consideration

Cited in Edwards v. Smyly, 170 Ga. 487, 153 S.E. 184 (1930); Consolidated Utils. Co. v. Commissioner, 84 F.2d 548 (5th Cir. 1936); Williams v. Ragsdale, 209 Ga. 274, 53 S.E.2d 339 (1949); St. Clair v. Hiatt, 83 F. Supp. 585 (N.D. Ga. 1949); Sinclair v. Hiatt, 86 F. Supp. 828 (N.D. Ga. 1949); Sweeney v. Hiatt, 89 F. Supp. 416 (N.D. Ga. 1949); Compagna v. Hiatt, 100 F. Supp. 74 (N.D. Ga. 1951); Ivy v. Ferguson, 82 Ga. App. 600, 62 S.E.2d 191 (1950); United States v. Raines, 189 F. Supp. 121 (M.D. Ga. 1960); Bolton v. State, 220 Ga. 632, 140 S.E.2d 866 (1965); Johnson v. State, 134 Ga. App. 67, 213 S.E.2d 170 (1975); Bell v. Bell, 237 Ga. 464, 228 S.E.2d 850 (1976); Centrif Air Mach. Co. v. Chilivis, 239 Ga. 253, 236 S.E.2d 606 (1977); High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 449 F. Supp. 364 (N.D. Ga. 1978); Joyner v. Golden Dome Inv. Co., 7 Bankr. 596 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1980); High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 515 F. Supp. 176 (N.D. Ga. 1980); Sorora-Gonzales v. Civiletti, 515 F. Supp. 1049 (N.D. Ga. 1981); High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 673 F.2d 1225 (11th Cir. 1982); Chancey v. State, 256 Ga. 415, 349 S.E.2d 717 (1986).

Bill of Attainder

Statutory incentive program not bill of attainder. — Federal statutory incentive for physicians to become "participating" Medicare physicians (providing Medicare enrollees with lists of the specialties and phone numbers of participating physicians, more efficient processing of claims and the recognition of increased billing charges to non-Medicare patients in future calculations of participating physicians' "customary" charges) and a statutory enforcement mechanism (civil fines for raising fees and/or barring nonparticipating physicians from treating Medicare patients for a period up to five years) did not constitute a bill of attainder. Whitney v. Heckler, 780 F.2d 963 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 813, 107 S. Ct. 65, 93 L. Ed. 2d 23 (1986).

Discovery. — The amended discovery procedure of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq. is not a bill of attainder, which refers to legislative imposition of punishment on specific persons or on class of persons without any judicial proceeding. Stinski v. State, 281 Ga. 783, 642 S.E.2d 1 (2007).

Removal of county commissioner from office. — Local act, which had the effect of removing a county commissioner from office before the end of the two-year term to which she had been appointed to fill a vacancy left by a deceased commissioner, was a bill of attainder prohibited by both the Georgia and United States Constitutions. Fulton v. Baker, 261 Ga. 710, 410 S.E.2d 735 (1991).

Local deannexation statute that included the area of the city in which the mayor resided, making the mayor ineligible to hold office, was not an unconstitutional bill of attainder because it neither singled out the mayor nor punished the mayor as an officeholder. Lee v. City of Villa Rica, 264 Ga. 606, 449 S.E.2d 295 (1994).

Federal statute on firearm possession constitutional. — Federal statute prohibiting anyone convicted of a domestic violence misdemeanor from possessing or receiving a firearm did not impose punishment in violation of the bill of attainder clause. National Ass'n of Gov't Employees v. Barrett, 968 F. Supp. 1564 (N.D. Ga. 1997), aff'd sub nom Hiley v. Barrett, 155 F.3d 1276 (11th Cir. 1998).

Habeas Corpus

Nature of writ of habeas corpus. — The great writ of habeas corpus has not been, and could not be, suspended by Congress in the absence of a rebellion or invasion. The great writ is of such antiquity that its origin is unknown, but from its inception as a writ designed to put people in jail rather than to get them out its status has been far from static. It is not subject to argument that the great writ cannot be suspended in times of peace, but the proposition is also undebatable that it ought not to be abused in times of war or peace. The right to the writ has never been absolute. The statute from 1789 until the present has required that for the writ to issue it must be “agreeable to the principles and usages of law.” The petition must be in writing and under oath. Martin v. Hiatt, 174 F.2d 350 (5th Cir. 1949).

Prisoner's right to attack detainer or sentence not yet served. — Prisoners in custody under one sentence may attack a sentence which they have not yet begun to serve. A petitioner held in one state may attack a detainer lodged against him by another state. A petitioner can bring his action attacking his sentence in the court that imposed the sentence. Callahan v. State, 235 Ga. 359, 219 S.E.2d 717 (1975).

Appointment of counsel for habeas corpus petitioner. — Since habeas corpus is not a criminal proceeding, neither the U.S. Const., amend. 6 nor the Georgia Constitution requires the appointment of counsel for a habeas corpus petitioner. Spencer v. Hopper, 243 Ga. 532, 255 S.E.2d 1, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 885, 100 S. Ct. 178, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

Defendant has no right to receive or spend state funds for appointment of experts or investigators in habeas corpus proceedings, including death penalty cases. Spencer v. Hopper, 243 Ga. 532, 255 S.E.2d 1, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 885, 100 S. Ct. 178, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

Appropriate remedy for cruel and unusual punishment. — Assuming arguendo that prisoner's allegations of mistreatment demonstrate cruel and unusual punishment, he still would not be entitled to release from prison, the appropriate remedy being to enjoin continuance of any practices or to require correction of any conditions causing him cruel and unusual punishment. Cook v. Hanberry, 596 F.2d 658 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 932, 99 S. Ct. 2866, 61 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1979).

Error that deprives defendant of constitutional right, unless waived according to law, may be raised on application for habeas corpus. Rachel v. State, 247 Ga. 130, 274 S.E.2d 475 (1981).

“Intentional abandonment or withholding” doctrine obtains on a second habeas corpus petition only if petitioner has not previously presented the ground for relief in a federal habeas corpus proceeding. Fleming v. Kemp, 794 F.2d 1478 (11th Cir. 1986), cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1028, 109 S. Ct. 1764, 104 L. Ed. 2d 200 (1989).

Habeas Corpus (Cont'd)

Procedural limitations. — The procedural limitations of O.C.G.A. § 40-13-33(a) and (b) neither suspend the writ of habeas corpus, nor cause a court to dismiss an action for habeas without consideration of the equities presented. Rather, the statute provides that in a narrowly defined class of cases — those in which a petitioner who is not in custody seeks habeas relief from a misdemeanor traffic conviction — the petition for habeas corpus must be filed within 180 days of conviction. As such, it imposes a permissible procedural restriction on a limited group of cases. Earp v. Boylan, 260 Ga. 112, 390 S.E.2d 577 (1990).

The federal Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996, which, inter alia, requires a habeas petitioner to obtain leave from the appellate court before filing a second habeas petition in the district court, constitutes a restraint on abuse of the habeas writ and does not “suspend” the writ in violation of clause 2 of this section. Felker v. Turpin, 518 U.S. 651, 116 S. Ct. 2333, 135 L. Ed. 2d 827 (1996).

Ex Post Facto Laws

An ex post facto law is a retrospective criminal or penal measure that is disadvantageous to the offender because it may impose greater punishment. United States v. Reed, 924 F.2d 1014 (11th Cir. 1991).

Applicability to penal statutes only. — The ex post facto provision of the federal constitution applies only to penal statutes, and could not reach the Tort Claim’s Act’s provision for immunity for prison officials for negligence occurring prior to the act’s enactment. Datz v. Brinson, 208 Ga. App. 455, 430 S.E.2d 823 (1993).

Ex post facto laws affect substantive right of accused. — Upon the defendant’s constitutional challenge to the retrospective application of three provisions of the Criminal Justice Act, Ga. Laws 2005, p. 20, no reversible error resulted from challenges to the closing arguments and admission of character evidence, as: (1) the former was not distinctly ruled upon by the lower court; and (2) the lower court sustained objections to the admissibility of character evidence, and, thus, the state could not introduce character evidence regarding the defendant’s prior criminal convictions; moreover, a change in the number of the defendant’s peremptory challenges by the Act did not affect any protected right by the application of the amended version of O.C.G.A. § 15-12-165, as strikes were procedural and not substantive in nature. Madison v. State, 281 Ga. 640, 641 S.E.2d 789 (2007).

Law that is merely procedural and does not add to the quantum of punishment cannot violate the ex post facto clause even if it is applied retrospectively. United States v. Reed, 924 F.2d 1014 (11th Cir. 1991).

School contract unaffected by subsequent enactment. — A contract made and indebtedness incurred by county superintendent of schools in 1918, on behalf of county board of education, for school supplies and furnishings, which were placed in schoolhouses of county and put to use by pupils thereof, was prior to enactment of Code 1933, § 32-928 (see O.C.G.A. § 20-2-504), and therefore is not void under such provisions, the same not being construed as being applicable to contracts made before its passage. Board of Educ. v. Southern Mich. Nat’l Bank, 184 Ga. 641, 192 S.E. 382 (1937).

Discovery. — The amended discovery procedure of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq. is not an ex post facto law because it affects purely procedural rights and duties. Stinski v. State, 281 Ga. 783, 642 S.E.2d 1 (2007).

Ex post facto laws prohibited by state and federal Constitutions refer only to laws which aggravate the crime, increase the punishment, or allow conviction on a lesser or different weight of evidence, and not to those which reduce or mollify the penalty. Barton v. State, 81 Ga. App. 810, 60 S.E.2d 173 (1950).

Even though a statute, passed after a conviction, uses the conviction as an element of a future offense, this is not an ex post facto law, because the defendant’s punishment for the earlier conviction is not increased, since the statute punishes only for a future offense, and that punishment is rationally enhanced by the prior conviction. State v. Dean, 235 Ga. App. 847, 510 S.E.2d 605 (1998).

Amendment changing retroactive effect of prior amendment. — An amendment which changed the retroactive effect of an earlier amendment to O.C.G.A. § 40-5-67.1, the implied consent warning law, so that it applied only to stops made after the effective date of the earlier amendment, rather than to cases pending on such date, did not violate federal or state ex post facto constitutional provisions. State v. Martin, 266 Ga. 244, 466 S.E.2d 216 (1996).

Retroactive operation of county zoning plan. — In passing a comprehensive zoning plan and amending it, whereby properties of parties were classified for use as agricultural residential district, board of county commissioners did so under the police power, and action of board in changing the use classification of defendants' property from agricultural use to that of apartment use does not deny plaintiffs equal protection of law, nor operate retroactively in violation of federal and state constitutional provisions prohibiting passage of ex post facto laws, nor does such action deny plaintiffs equal protection of law in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Morgan v. Thomas, 207 Ga. 660, 63 S.E.2d 659 (1951).

Validity of zoning ordinance. — Because plaintiff, while proceeding to zone property was pending, filed application to authorize building of filling station, and ordinance was later adopted zoning plaintiff's property for residential purposes, such ordinance was not in violation of the federal and state Constitutions as an ex post facto or retroactive law. Gay v. Mayor of Lyons, 212 Ga. 438, 93 S.E.2d 352 (1956).

As a general rule, any law is ex post facto which is enacted after offense was committed, and which, in relation to offense or its consequences, alters the situation of the accused to his disadvantage. A statute, however, cannot be an ex post facto law if it is apparent that Legislature in enacting the statute did not make criminal an act which was innocent when done; did not aggravate an offense or change the punishment and make it greater than when it was committed; did not alter the rules of evidence and require less or different evidence than the law required at time of commission of offense; and did not deprive the accused of any substantial right or immunity he possessed at time of commission of offense. Todd v. State, 228 Ga. 746, 187 S.E.2d 831, answer conformed to, 125 Ga. App. 841, 189 S.E.2d 696 (1972).

Validity of statute removing prior right. — Although it is the rule that no one has a vested right in a mere mode of procedure, so that a statute merely regulating procedure and leaving untouched all substantial protections with which existing law surrounds the person accused of crime is not within the constitutional prohibition against ex post facto laws, yet a statute is void and ineffective as related to previous offenses if it takes from the accused a substantial right given to the accused by law in force at the time to which guilt relates, and such statute cannot be sustained simply because, in a general sense, it may be said to regulate procedure. Todd v. State, 228 Ga. 746, 187 S.E.2d 831, answer conformed to, 125 Ga. App. 841, 189 S.E.2d 696 (1972).

Effect of amending statute governing dates of terms of court. — Amendment of a statutory provision so as to change the dates of commencement of terms of court was not an ex post facto law as applied to defendant, who was not at any time entitled to discharge and acquittal of the offenses with which the defendant was charged. Aspinwall v. State, 201 Ga. App. 203, 410 S.E.2d 388 (1991).

In order for statute to violate prohibition against ex post facto laws, it must affect substantive right of accused. An accused does not have a vested right in a mere mode of procedure. Eades v. State, 232 Ga. 735, 208 S.E.2d 791 (1974).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1 did not implicate ex post facto concerns since an inmate could not have had a substantial right to receive probation, and the revocation of an inmate's probation did not inflict a greater punishment than was permitted at the times the offenses were committed; Jones v. State, 260 Ga. App. 401, 579 S.E. 2d 827 (2003), was overruled. Postell v. Humphrey, 278 Ga. 651, 604 S.E.2d 517 (2004).

Validity of statute altering procedural conduct of criminal trials. — If the changes effected by enactment of a law constitute merely an alteration in conditions deemed necessary for the orderly and just conduct of criminal trials, they do not deprive defendant of any substantial personal right within meaning of constitutional prohibitions of ex post facto laws. Todd v. State, 228 Ga. 746, 187 S.E.2d 831, answer conformed to, 125 Ga. App. 841, 189 S.E.2d 696 (1972).

Statute reducing peremptory strikes. — Retroactive application of O.C.G.A. § 15-12-165's amended reduction of the number of peremptory strikes from 20 to 12 did not violate ex post facto clause, as number of peremptory challenges is solely matter of procedure. Seats v. State, 210 Ga. App. 74, 435 S.E.2d 286 (1993).

Ex Post Facto Laws (Cont'd)

Jury determination of sentence is not a substantive right coming within proscriptions of ex post facto laws of U.S. Const., art. I, sec. IX, cl. 3. Adkins v. State, 134 Ga. App. 507, 215 S.E.2d 270 (1975); Mealor v. State, 134 Ga. App. 564, 215 S.E.2d 272 (1975).

Effect of amending statute to reduce number of peremptory jury challenges. — The application to a criminal defendant of the statutory amendment reducing the number of the defendant's peremptory strikes did not violate the constitutional prohibition against ex post facto laws. Stargel v. State, 210 Ga. App. 619, 436 S.E.2d 786 (1993).

Effect of amending statute to reduce number of impaneled jurors. — Application of the 1992 amendment to O.C.G.A. § 15-12-160 requiring the court to have 30, rather than 42, impaneled jurors from which the defense and prosecution may strike jurors did not violate the constitutional prohibition against ex post facto laws. Shuler v. State, 213 Ga. App. 790, 446 S.E.2d 225 (1994).

Ex post facto law is one that makes an action done before the passing of the law, and which was innocent when done, criminal; and punishes such action; or that aggravates a crime, or makes it greater than it was when committed. United States v. Brown, 555 F.2d 407 (5th Cir. 1977), appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 435 U.S. 904, 98 S. Ct. 1448, 55 L. Ed. 2d 494 (1978); Federal Election Comm'n v. Lance, 635 F.2d 1132 (5th Cir.), appeal dismissed, 453 U.S. 917, 101 S. Ct. 3151, 69 L. Ed. 2d 999 (1981).

Mail fraud convictions for conduct that started before enactment of the criminal statute and continued after the effective date thereof did not violate the ex post facto clause. United States v. Paradies, 98 F.3d 1266 (11th Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 521 U.S. 1106, 117 S. Ct. 2483, 138 L. Ed. 2d 992 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1014, 118 S. Ct. 598, 139 L. Ed. 2d 487 (1997).

Restriction on judicial, as well as legislative, powers. — The ex post facto clause is a limitation upon the powers of the Legislature; but the principle on which the clause is based — the notion that persons have a right to fair warning of that conduct which will give rise to criminal penalties — is fundamental to our concept of constitutional liberty. As such, that right is protected against judicial action by the due process clause. An unforeseeable judicial enlargement of a criminal statute, applied retroactively, operates precisely like an ex post facto law which U.S. Const., art. I, sec. IX, cl. 3 forbids. United States v. Brown, 555 F.2d 407 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 904, 98 S. Ct. 1448, 55 L. Ed. 2d 494 (1978).

Retroactive application of note to sentencing guideline. — A note to the United States Sentencing Guidelines, although it took effect after an alien had been sentenced, did not violate the ex post facto clause because the application note was added to clarify an existing guideline, and such a note does not have the force of law, as does a guideline. Thus, the note did not change the law. United States v. Adeleke, 968 F.2d 1159 (11th Cir. 1992).

Habitual violator statute allowing consideration of offenses which occurred before enactment of statute is not ex post facto. — The repetition of the criminal conduct aggravates offender's guilt and justifies heavier penalties when he is again convicted, and the penalty is imposed only for the new crime but is heavier if the offender is a habitual violator. The increased penalty is for the latest crime which is considered to be an aggravated offense because it is repetitive. Cofer v. Crowell, 146 Ga. App. 639, 247 S.E.2d 152 (1978).

Validity of post-sentence action delaying eligibility for parole. — Although changes in a statute or regulations that are procedural or remedial in nature may apply retroactively, official post-sentence action that delays eligibility for supervised release runs afoul of the ex post facto proscription. United States ex rel. Graham v. United States Parole Comm'n, 629 F.2d 1040 (5th Cir. 1980).

Validity of statute or regulations affecting prisoner's substantive right to parole. — If the Parole Commission and Reorganization Act (18 U.S.C. § 4201 et seq.) or the regulations promulgated thereunder effectuate only a procedural change in the manner in which the Parole Commission determines prisoner's eligibility for parole, then the statute and the regulations may be applied retroactively; if, however, the statute or the regulations affect prisoner's substantive right to parole eligibility, neither can be so applied retroactively without violating the ex post facto clause. Because parole regulations were amended to provide that after an interim hearing a presumptive release date or the date of a four-year reconsideration hearing shall not be advanced except under clearly exceptional circumstances, case involving petition for habeas corpus and mandamus was remanded for determination of whether the "clearly exceptional circumstances" test affected prisoner's substantive right to parole eligibility in violation of ex post facto clause. United States ex rel. Graham v. United States Parole Comm'n, 629 F.2d 1040 (5th Cir. 1980).

Retroactive change in the method for calculating the tentative parole month. — Retroactive application of Rule 475-3-.05 (2) of the Board of Pardons and Paroles, allowing the board to extend the interval between parole reconsiderations up to a period of eight years for an inmate serving a life sentence, does not violate the ex post facto clause of the United States Constitution. Ray v. Jacobs, 272 Ga. 760, 534 S.E.2d 418 (2000).

It is not a violation of ex post facto clause for individual to be sentenced to a penalty less harsh than the one it appeared the defendant would be subjected to, and was given notice of, at the moment of the crime. Federal Election Comm'n v. Lance, 617 F.2d 365 (5th Cir. 1980), appeal dismissed, 453 U.S. 917, 101 S. Ct. 3151, 69 L. Ed. 2d 999 (1980).

Application of the 1984 amendment to Rule 704 of the Federal Rules of Evidence, restricting expert testimony as to the legal insanity of the accused, to a case involving offenses occurring prior to the effective date of the amendment, did not violate equal protection nor the ex post facto clause. United States v. Alexander, 805 F.2d 1458 (11th Cir. 1986).

Enhanced sentencing statute for DUI. — Defendant who committed a DUI offense on November 11, 1990, was improperly subjected to the enhanced sentencing provisions contained in O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391(c)(3)(A), which did not become effective until January 1, 1991. Holtapp v. City of Fayetteville, 208 Ga. App. 606, 431 S.E.2d 403 (1993).

Election of application of ex post facto law. — Application of the life-without-parole statute to defendant did not violate ex post facto prohibitions where the defendant expressly elected the application, and the statute did not establish a greater penalty or alter the situation to the defendant's disadvantage. Brantley v. State, 268 Ga. 151, 486 S.E.2d 169 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 985, 118 S. Ct. 449, 139 L. Ed. 2d 384 (1997).

Firearm prohibition based on criminal activity. — Federal statute prohibiting anyone convicted of a domestic violence misdemeanor from possessing or receiving a firearm did not violate the ex post facto clause. National Ass'n of Gov't Employees v. Barrett, 968 F. Supp. 1564 (N.D. Ga. 1997), aff'd sub nom. Hiley v. Barrett, 155 F.3d 1276 (11th Cir. 1998).

Appropriations

Federal Department of Health and Human Services could not be compelled to pay federal funds contrary to the Hyde Amendment. — Congressional funding restrictions directing that no federal funds appropriated to pay the federal share of the Medicaid program were to be used to finance certain abortions — to reimburse the state for funds it expended for medically necessary abortions performed during the period when it was required to fund such abortions pursuant to court order, under the mistaken rationale that the state was liable, under federal law, to fund such abortions even absent federal financial participation. Georgia ex rel. Dep't of Medical Assistance v. Heckler, 768 F.2d 1293 (11th Cir. 1985), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1059, 106 S. Ct. 803, 88 L. Ed. 2d 779 (1986).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Determination of existence of process of exportation. — Under decisions of the United States Supreme Court, the federal Constitution gives tax immunity to the process of exportation; this process begins at that point where there is a manifest certainty that the destination of the goods is a foreign country. This certainty is established when the goods are delivered to a common carrier consigned to a destination abroad even though title may pass in this state; in a proper case this certainty may exist when the purchaser takes actual delivery in this state. 1960-61 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 552.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Constitutional or statutory changes affecting grand jury or substituting information for indictment as an ex post facto law, 53 ALR 716.

Effect of statutory change of penalty or punishment after conviction, 55 ALR 443.

Constitutionality of retroactive statute curing defect in private instrument purporting to convey title or create interest in property or as to filing or recording thereof, 57 ALR 1197.

Constitutionality and construction of statute enhancing penalty for second or subsequent offense, 82 ALR 345; 116 ALR 209; 132 ALR 91; 139 ALR 673.

Retrospective operation of statutes relating to alimony or suit money in divorce, 97 ALR 1188.

Constitutionality of retroactive statute imposing excise, license, or privilege tax, 146 ALR 1011.

Constitutionality of retrospective statutes as regards chattel mortgages, 146 ALR 1100.

Retroactive application, to previous sales, of statutes reducing period of redemption from tax sales, as unconstitutional impairment of contract obligations, 147 ALR 1123.

Retrospective statute subjecting interests of trust beneficiaries to claims of creditors, 151 ALR 1417.

Constitutionality of retroactive statute limiting time for duration or enforcement of existing mortgage, or other real estate lien, or ground rent, 158 ALR 1043.

Effect, as to prior offenses, of amendment increasing punishment for crime, 167 ALR 845.

Power to abolish or discontinue office, 172 ALR 1366.

Retrospective operation of criminal negligence statute, 14 ALR2d 726.

Retrospective operation of legislation affecting estates by the entireties, 27 ALR2d 868.

Retroactive effect of statute fixing minimum value of corporate stock shares or otherwise affecting power of corporation to change par value of existing shares, 54 ALR2d 1289.

Effect of simultaneous repeal and re-enactment of all, or part, of legislative Act, 77 ALR2d 336.

Retroactive effect of statute which imposes, removes, or changes a monetary limitation of recovery for personal injury or death, 98 ALR2d 1105.

Retrospective application of state statute substituting rule of comparative negligence for that of contributory negligence, 37 ALR3d 1438.

Retroactive effect of zoning regulation, in absence of saving clause, on validly issued building permit, 49 ALR3d 13.

Zoning provisions protecting land owner who applies for or received building permit prior to change in zoning, 49 ALR3d 1150.

Validity and construction of state or local regulation prohibiting the erection or maintenance of advertising structures within a specified distance of street or highway, 81 ALR3d 564.

Validity of statutory classifications based on population — tax statutes, 98 ALR3d 1083.

Validity, construction, and application of § 504 of Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act (29 USCS § 504), precluding certain convicted persons from serving in union office for specified period, 98 ALR Fed. 481.

Section 10.

[Restrictions upon Powers of States]

No State shall enter into any Treaty, Alliance, or Confederation; grant Letters of Marque and Reprisal; coin Money; emit Bills of Credit; make any Thing but gold and silver Coin a Tender in Payment of Debts; pass any Bill of Attainder, ex post facto Law, or Law impairing the Obligation of Contracts, or grant any Title of Nobility.

No State shall, without the Consent of the Congress, lay any Imposts or Duties on Imports or Exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection Laws; and the net Produce of all Duties and Imposts, laid by any State on Imports or Exports, shall be for the Use of the Treasury of the United States; and all such Laws shall be subject to the Revision and Controul of the Congress.

No State shall, without the Consent of Congress, lay any Duty of Tonnage, keep Troops, or Ships of War in time of Peace, enter into any Agreement or Compact with another State, or with a foreign Power, or engage in War, unless actually invaded, or in such imminent Danger as will not admit of delay.

Cross references. — Bills of attainder, ex post facto laws, or laws which impair the obligations of contracts, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. X and § 1-3-5. Authorization for state militia, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. II. Contracts declared unenforceable at law, §§ 13-8-1, 13-8-2. Cooperation with other states generally, Ch. 6, T. 28.

Law reviews. — For article, "Constitutionality of Economic Regulations," see 2 J. of Pub. L. 98 (1953). For article discussing Georgia alimony provisions allowing modification of judgments with respect to federal and state constitutional limitations, see 18 Ga. B.J. 153 (1955). For article, "Patterns of Social Legislation: Reflections on the Welfare State," see 6 J. of Pub. L. 3 (1957). For article, "The Subject-Matter Limitation Upon the Treaty-Making Power," see 11 J. of Pub. L. 122 (1962). For article, "Consolidation by Compact: A Remedy for Preemption of State Food and Drug Laws," see 14 J. of Pub. L. 276 (1965). For article discussing the constitutional parameters of state efforts to stimulate international trade, see 27 Mercer L. Rev. 391 (1976). For article, "The Development of Nonprofit Corporation Law and an Agenda for Reform," see 34 Emory L.J. 617 (1985). For article, "Georgia and the Development of Constitutional Principles: An Essay in Honor of the Bicentennial," see 24 Ga. St. B.J. 6 (1987). For article, "Metaphor and Paradox," see 23 Ga. L. Rev. 1053 (1989). For article, "Ideology, Religion, and the Constitutional Protection of Private Property: 1760-1860," see 39 Emory L.J. 65 (1990). For article, "Federal and State 'State Action': The Undercritical Embrace of a Hypercriticized Doctrine," see 24 Ga. L. Rev. 327 (1990). For annual eleventh circuit survey of constitutional law — civil, see 43 Mercer L. Rev. 1075 (1992). For article, "Of Rocks and Hard Places: The Value of Risk Choice," see 42 Emory L.J. 1 (1993). For survey of 1995 Eleventh Circuit cases on constitutional civil law, see 47 Mercer L. Rev. 745 (1996).

For note, "Annexation by Municipalities in Georgia," see 2 Mercer L. Rev. 423 (1951). For note, "Lapse or Continuation of Local Constitutional Amendments Under the Constitution of 1983," see 21 Ga. St. B.J. 78 (1984). For note, "Water Wars in the Southeast: Alabama, Florida, and Georgia Square Off Over the Apalachicola Chattahoochee-Flint River Basin," see 9 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 689 (1993).

For comment on Watson v. Employer's Liab. Assurance Corp., 348 U.S. 66, 75 S. Ct. 166, 99 L. Ed. 74 (1954), holding that a statute allowing a direct action by the policy holder against the insurer contrary to the terms of the contract and requiring the consent of the insurer to such action as a prerequisite of doing business in the state was not violative of the Constitution, see 17 Ga. B.J. 529 (1955). For comment discussing state intervention in contracts between private parties, under the contract clause, in light of Willys Motors v. Northwest Kaiser-Willys, 142 F. Supp. 469 (D. Minn.

1956), see 6 J. of Pub. L. 250 (1957). For comment on Sanders v. Harper, 220 Ga. 649, 141 S.E.2d 156 (1965), see 17 Mercer L. Rev. 311 (1965). For comment on Michelin Tire Corp. v. Wages, 423 U.S. 276, 96 S. Ct. 535, 46 L. Ed. 2d 495 (1976), see 27 Mercer L.

Rev. 1237 (1976). For comment discussing interpretation of ex post facto clause, see 28 Emory L.J. 429 (1979). For comment, "Private Citizens in Foreign Affairs: A Constitutional Analysis," see 36 Emory L.J. 285 (1987).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

EX POST FACTO LAWS

1. CIVIL

2. CRIMINAL

IMPAIRMENT OF CONTRACTS

DUTIES ON IMPORTS

General Consideration

Interstate Agreement on Detainers is congressionally sanctioned interstate compact within the context of the compact clause of the United States Constitution. The agreement is, thus, considered a law of the United States. Seymore v. Alabama, 846 F.2d 1355 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 1018, 109 S. Ct. 816, 102 L. Ed. 2d 806 (1989).

Cited in Meyers v. Whittle, 171 Ga. 509, 156 S.E. 120 (1930); Perkins v. Mayor of Madison, 175 Ga. 714, 165 S.E. 811 (1932); Trotzler v. McElroy, 182 Ga. 719, 186 S.E. 817 (1936); Hollis v. Jones, 184 Ga. 273, 191 S.E. 127 (1937); West v. Trotzler, 185 Ga. 794, 196 S.E. 902 (1938); Campbell v. Red Bud Consol. Sch. Dist., 186 Ga. 541, 198 S.E. 225 (1938); Cooper Co. v. State, 187 Ga. 497, 1 S.E.2d 436 (1939); Salter v. Bank of Commerce, 189 Ga. 328, 6 S.E.2d 290 (1939); National Sur. Corp. v. Gatlin, 192 Ga. 293, 15 S.E.2d 180 (1941); FDIC v. Beasley, 193 Ga. 727, 20 S.E.2d 23 (1942); Thompson v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 200 Ga. 856, 38 S.E.2d 774 (1946); Mayor of Savannah v. Savannah Distrib. Co., 202 Ga. 559, 43 S.E.2d 704 (1947); Co-Op Cab Co. v. Settle, 171 F.2d 40 (5th Cir. 1948); South W.R.R. v. Benton, 206 Ga. 770, 58 S.E.2d 905 (1950); Bender v. Anglin, 207 Ga. 108, 60 S.E.2d 756 (1950); Georgia R.R. & Banking Co. v. Redwine, 342 U.S. 299, 72 S. Ct. 321, 96 L. Ed. 335 (1952); City of Atlanta v. Anglin, 209 Ga. 170, 71 S.E.2d 419 (1952); MacNeill v. Fulton County, 210 Ga. 119, 78 S.E.2d 40 (1953); Crawford v. Irwin, 211 Ga. 241, 85 S.E.2d 8 (1954); Harper v. City Council, 212 Ga. 605, 94 S.E.2d 690 (1956); Southern Ry. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 218 Ga. 157, 127 S.E.2d 12 (1962); Stephenson v. State, 219 Ga. 652, 135 S.E.2d 380 (1964); Henson v. Georgia Indus. Realty Co., 220 Ga. 857, 142 S.E.2d 219 (1965); Webb v. Whitley, 221 Ga. 618, 146 S.E.2d 722 (1966); Moore v. Moore, 225 Ga. 340, 168 S.E.2d 318 (1969); Bugden v. Bugden, 225 Ga. 413, 169 S.E.2d 337 (1969); Stith v. Hudson, 226 Ga. 364, 174 S.E.2d 892 (1970); Stith v. Hudson, 231 Ga. 520, 202 S.E.2d 392 (1973); Centrif Air Mach. Co. v. Chilivis, 239 Ga. 253, 236 S.E.2d 606 (1977); Georgia Franchise Practices Comm'n v. Massey-Ferguson, Inc., 240 Ga. 743, 242 S.E.2d 69 (1978); Stith v. Morris, 241 Ga. 247, 244 S.E.2d 817 (1978); Newsome v. Richmond County, 246 Ga. 300, 271 S.E.2d 203 (1980); Stinchcomb v. Clayton County Water Auth., 177 Ga. App. 558, 340 S.E.2d 217 (1986); Baldwin v. Ledbetter, 647 F. Supp. 623 (N.D. Ga. 1986).

Ex Post Facto Laws

1. Civil

Validity of statute affecting or changing remedy only. — Statute which changes or affects remedy only and does not destroy or impair vested rights is not unconstitutional as impairing obligation of contract, although it may be retroactive and although, in changing or modifying the remedy, the rights of the parties may be incidentally affected. Morris v. Interstate Bond Co., 180 Ga. 689, 180 S.E. 819 (1935).

Validity of statute eliminating disability payments. — Former Code 1933, § 78-911

(see O.C.G.A. § 47-17-81), which eliminated, under certain conditions, payment for permanent or total disability, did not violate constitutional provisions providing that no ex post facto law, retroactive law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts shall be passed, because in passing former Code 1933, § 78-917 (see O.C.G.A. § 47-17-101) the legislature specifically provided that all rights and benefits conferred would be subject to future legislative change or revision, and that no beneficiary would be deemed to have any vested right to any annuities or benefits provided therein. Prichard v. Board of Comm'rs of Peace Officers Annuity & Benefit Fund, 211 Ga. 57, 84 S.E.2d 26 (1954).

Validity of zoning ordinance. — Because plaintiff, while proceeding to zone property was pending, filed application to authorize building of filling station, and ordinance was later adopted zoning plaintiff's property for residential purposes, such ordinance was not in violation of the federal and state Constitutions as an ex post facto or retroactive law. Gay v. Mayor of Lyons, 212 Ga. 438, 93 S.E.2d 352 (1956).

Statute is retroactive if it creates a new obligation on transactions or considerations already past, or destroys or impairs vested rights. — A statute does not operate retrospectively because it relates to antecedent facts, but if it is intended to affect transactions which occurred or rights which accrued before it became operative and ascribes to them essentially different effects, in view of the law at the time of their occurrence, it is retroactive in character. Todd v. Morgan, 215 Ga. 220, 109 S.E.2d 803 (1959); Adams v. Adams, 219 Ga. 633, 135 S.E.2d 428 (1964).

Validity of statute destroying vested right to property. — Former Code 1933, § 67-1308 (see O.C.G.A. § 44-14-80), providing that title to real property conveyed to secure debt should revert to grantor when debt became 20 years past due, unless debt was extended or renewed and such renewal recorded, or an affidavit setting out the facts of renewal was recorded with the conveyance, which section imposed conditions upon grantee not in existence at time of execution of the contract, divested the grantee of a vested right to the property, and impaired the obligation of the contract as applied to such deed, which was executed prior to passage and effective date of the Act, is unconstitutional, because in violation of U.S. Const., art. I, sec. X, cl. 1 and of Ga. Const. 1945, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. II, (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. X), which prohibited this state from passing any retroactive law or any law impairing the obligations of contracts. Todd v. Morgan, 215 Ga. 220, 109 S.E.2d 803 (1959).

Validity of statute requiring occupation tax payment pending license application. — It is competent for the legislature to enact that a person entering upon business or occupation upon which a tax provided in ordinance has been imposed, by the terms thereof, should pay the amount of the tax named for the year, or for any period of time within the year, during which the person should choose to apply for a license. Pharr Rd. Inv. Co. v. City of Atlanta, 224 Ga. 752, 164 S.E.2d 803 (1968).

2. Criminal

Phrase "ex post facto" applies to criminal, not civil, cases. Hayes v. Howell, 251 Ga. 580, 308 S.E.2d 170 (1983).

Passing on validity of constitutional amendment not affecting petitioner's rights. — In habeas corpus proceeding based on alleged invalidity of constitutional amendment placing power of granting pardons and paroles in Board of Pardons and Paroles rather than Governor, court would not pass on constitutionality of amendment, since even if it were unconstitutional the prior provision would be in effect, and petitioner would not be entitled to discharge. Court will not pass on constitutionality of law when it is challenged by party whose rights are not affected by it. Whittle v. Jones, 198 Ga. 538, 32 S.E.2d 94 (1944), appeal dismissed, 324 U.S. 829, 65 S. Ct. 915, 89 L. Ed. 1396 (1945).

Avoidance of construction rendering amendment void as ex post facto law. — Because a constitutional amendment placing power to grant pardons in Board of Pardons and Paroles instead of Governor was silent as to whether it applied to persons previously convicted, amendment would not be given retroactive operation as to those persons if such construction would render amendment void as an ex post facto law. Whittle v. Jones, 198 Ga. 538, 32 S.E.2d 94

Ex Post Facto Laws (Cont'd)
2. Criminal (Cont'd)

(1944), appeal dismissed, 324 U.S. 829, 65 S. Ct. 915, 89 L. Ed. 1396 (1945).

As a general rule, any law is ex post facto which is enacted after offense was committed, and which, in relation to offense or its consequences, alters the situation of the accused to the accused's disadvantage. A statute, however, cannot be an ex post facto law if it is apparent that legislature in enacting the statute did not make criminal an act which was innocent when done; did not aggravate an offense or change the punishment and make it greater than when it was committed; did not alter the rules of evidence and require less or different evidence than the law required at time of commission of offense; and did not deprive the accused of any substantial right or immunity that the accused possessed at the time of commission of the offense. Todd v. State, 228 Ga. 746, 187 S.E.2d 831, answer conformed to, 125 Ga. App. 841, 189 S.E.2d 696 (1972).

Delayed effective date of statute. — The application of 21 U.S.C. § 862 to deny defendant federal benefits did not violate the Constitution's ex post facto clause; although the statute applied only to persons convicted of conspiracy after September 1, 1989, it was enacted on November 18, 1988, during the course of the conspiracy, and thus defendant had adequate notice of the penalty. United States v. Bush, 28 F.3d 1084 (11th Cir. 1994).

Validity of statute removing prior right. — Although it is the rule that no one has a vested right in a mere mode of procedure, so that a statute merely regulating procedure and leaving untouched all substantial protections with which existing law surrounds the person accused of crime is not within the constitutional prohibition against ex post facto laws, yet a statute is void and ineffective as related to previous offenses if it takes from the accused a substantial right given to the accused by law in force at the time to which guilt relates, and such statute cannot be sustained simply because, in a general sense, it may be said to regulate procedure. Todd v. State, 228 Ga. 746, 187 S.E.2d 831, answer conformed to, 125 Ga. App. 841, 189 S.E.2d 696 (1972).

Validity of statute altering procedural conduct of criminal trials. — Because the changes effected by enactment of a law constitute merely an alteration in conditions deemed necessary for the orderly and just conduct of criminal trials, they do not deprive defendant of any substantial personal right within meaning of constitutional prohibitions of ex post facto laws. Todd v. State, 228 Ga. 746, 187 S.E.2d 831, answer conformed to, 125 Ga. App. 841, 189 S.E.2d 696 (1972).

To invoke protection of ex post facto clause, appellant must show harm by showing trial court's decision would have been different had it been rendered before the decision in question. Alexander v. State, 139 Ga. App. 338, 228 S.E.2d 364 (1976).

Ex post facto law is one that makes an action done before the passing of the law, and which was innocent when done, criminal; and punishes such action; or that aggravates a crime, or makes it greater than it was when committed. United States v. Brown, 555 F.2d 407 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 904, 98 S. Ct. 1448, 55 L. Ed. 2d 494 (1978).

Restriction on judicial, as well as legislative, powers. — The ex post facto clause is a limitation upon the powers of the legislature; but the principle on which the clause is based — the notion that persons have a right to fair warning of that conduct which will give rise to criminal penalties — is fundamental to our concept of constitutional liberty. As such, that right is protected against judicial action by the due process clause. An unforeseeable judicial enlargement of a criminal statute, applied retroactively, operates precisely like an ex post facto law which U.S. Const., art. I, sec. X, cl. 1 forbids. United States v. Brown, 555 F.2d 407 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 904, 98 S. Ct. 1448, 55 L. Ed. 2d 494 (1978).

Validity of laws not affecting legal protections of accused. — The prescribing of different modes of procedure and the abolition of courts and creation of new ones, leaving untouched all the substantial protections with which the existing law surrounds the person accused of crime, are not considered within the constitutional prohibition against ex post facto laws. McSears v. State, 247 Ga. 48, 273 S.E.2d 847 (1981).

After commission of offense, a reduction in size of jury is prohibited as an ex post facto law. McSears v. State, 247 Ga. 48, 273 S.E.2d 847 (1981).

Effect of amending statute to reduce number of peremptory jury challenges. — The application to a criminal defendant of the statutory amendment reducing the number of the defendant's peremptory strikes did not violate the constitutional prohibition against ex post facto laws. Stargel v. State, 210 Ga. App. 619, 436 S.E.2d 786 (1993).

Effect of amending statute to reduce number of impaneled jurors. — Application of the 1992 amendment to O.C.G.A. § 15-12-160 requiring the court to have 30, rather than 42, impaneled jurors from which the defense and prosecution may strike jurors did not violate the constitutional prohibition against ex post facto laws. Shuler v. State, 213 Ga. App. 790, 446 S.E.2d 225 (1994).

An increase in child support did not violate the ex post facto clause as applied to a defendant originally convicted of abandonment of the defendant's children and whose sentence was suspended upon condition that he pay a certain amount of child support per month, since the child support obligation was a pre-existing duty under state law and was neither a part of the sentence nor a punishment. Hudson v. Dayton, 770 F.2d 1558 (11th Cir. 1985).

Rules of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles are "laws" within the meaning of the ex post facto clause. Akins v. Snow, 922 F.2d 1558 (11th Cir.), aff'd, 987 F.2d 775 (11th Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 501 U.S. 1260, 111 S. Ct. 2915, 115 L. Ed. 2d 1079 (1991), aff'd, 987 F.2d 775 (11th Cir. 1993).

Elimination of an annual parole reconsideration hearing violated the ex post facto clause because the amendment of rules that had required an annual hearing to provide instead for a hearing at least every eight years substantially disadvantaged a prisoner's parole eligibility. Akins v. Snow, 922 F.2d 1558 (11th Cir.), aff'd, 987 F.2d 775 (11th Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 501 U.S. 1260, 111 S. Ct. 2915, 115 L. Ed. 2d 1079 (1991), aff'd, 987 F.2d 775 (11th Cir. 1993).

Retroactive change in the method for calculating the tentative parole month of certain crime severity level offenders under the parole decision guidelines did not violate the ex post facto clause because the change did not produce a sufficient risk of increasing the measure of punishment attached to the covered crimes. Jones v. Georgia State Bd. of Pardons & Paroles, 59 F.3d 1145 (11th Cir. 1995).

The retroactive application of amendments to the Georgia regulations governing parole consideration, Ga. Comp. R. & Regs. r. 475-3-.05.(2) (1986), violated the ex post facto clause of the United States Constitution. Jones v. Garner, 164 F.3d 589 (11th Cir. 1999).

The retroactive application of amendments to the Georgia regulations changing the frequency of parole reviews, Ga. Comp. R. & Regs. r. 475-3-.05.(2) (1986), does not violate the ex post facto clause of the United States Constitution. Garner v. Jones, 529 U.S. 244, 120 S. Ct. 1362, 146 L. Ed. 2d 236 (2000).

Analysis of claims that amendments to Georgia regulations eliminating annual parole reconsideration hearings violates the ex post facto clause when applied to inmates who had been entitled to more frequent parole reconsideration at the time they committed their crimes must be made on a case-by-case basis. Harris v. Hammonds, 217 F.3d 1346 (11th Cir. 2000).

Enhanced sentencing statute for DUI. — Defendant who committed a DUI offense on November 11, 1990, was improperly subjected to the enhanced sentencing provisions contained in O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391(c)(3)(A), which did not become effective until January 1, 1991. Holtapp v. City of Fayetteville, 208 Ga. App. 606, 431 S.E.2d 403 (1993).

Election of application of ex post facto law. — Application of the life-without-parole statute to defendant did not violate ex post facto prohibitions where the defendant expressly elected the application, and the statute did not establish a greater penalty or alter the situation to the defendant's disadvantage. Brantley v. State, 268 Ga. 151, 486 S.E.2d 169 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 985, 118 S. Ct. 449, 139 L. Ed. 2d 384 (1997).

Impairment of Contracts

Legislature can impose upon county into which another county is merged the burden of performing the contracts and paying the debts of the merged county; an Act so providing for the performance of the contracts and payment of the debts of the merged county does not in any way impair the obligation of the contracts of the merged county in the sense in which that term is used in the Constitution of this state and the Constitution of the United States. Hines v. Etheridge, 173 Ga. 870, 162 S.E. 113 (1931).

Impairment of Contracts (Cont'd)

Freedom of contract is a qualified and not an absolute right; there is no absolute freedom to contract as one chooses; liberty implies the absence of arbitrary restraint — not immunity from reasonable regulations. City of Newnan v. Atlanta Laundries, Inc., 174 Ga. 99, 162 S.E. 497, appeal dismissed, 286 U.S. 526, 52 S. Ct. 495, 76 L. Ed. 1269 (1932).

Contracts between individuals or corporations are impaired within the meaning of U.S. Const., art. I, sec. X, cl. 1 whenever the right to enforce them by legal process is taken away or materially lessened. A different rule prevails in respect to contracts of sovereigns. Lynch v. United States, 292 U.S. 571, 54 S. Ct. 840, 78 L. Ed. 1434 (1934).

Validity of statute affecting or changing remedy only. — Statute that changes or affects a remedy only and does not destroy or impair vested rights is not unconstitutional as impairing obligation of contract, although it may be retroactive and although, in changing or modifying the remedy, the rights of the parties may be incidentally affected. Morris v. Interstate Bond Co., 180 Ga. 689, 180 S.E. 819 (1935).

Contract between the state and an individual is protected by this constitutional prohibition. Morris v. Interstate Bond Co., 180 Ga. 689, 180 S.E. 819 (1935).

Lien once acquired under existing law is regarded as a vested property right which may not be impaired by subsequent legislation. Morris v. Interstate Bond Co., 180 Ga. 689, 180 S.E. 819 (1935).

Validity of statute affecting prior tax lien. — Former Code 1933, § 92-5712 (see O.C.G.A. § 48-5-25), providing that any party having an interest in property returned or assessed with other property for taxation shall be allowed to pay the taxes assessed against any one or more pieces of property in which he is so interested and obtain a release as to such property, is unconstitutional as applied to the lien of a tax execution previously transferred according to law and with the transfer duly recorded, because it would impair the obligation of a contract in violation of the state and federal Constitutions. Morris v. Interstate Bond Co., 180 Ga. 689, 180 S.E. 819 (1935).

Validity of statute affecting remedy expressly made part of contract. — Remedies existing by law at time of execution of contract may be modified by the legislature without impairing the obligation, provided an efficient remedy is left for its enforcement; the rule is different, however, as to a remedy that the parties have expressly made a part of the contract, because in such case the remedy is integrated as a part of the obligation, and a subsequent statute which affects the remedy impairs the obligation and is unconstitutional. Atlantic Loan Co. v. Peterson, 181 Ga. 266, 182 S.E. 15 (1935).

Validity of statute affecting remedy existing as implicit part of contract. — Remedy subsisting in a state when and where a contract is made and is to be performed is a part of its obligation, and any subsequent law of the state which so affects that remedy as substantially to impair and lessen the value of the contract is forbidden by the Constitution, and is, therefore, void. Atlantic Loan Co. v. Peterson, 181 Ga. 266, 182 S.E. 15 (1935).

Obligation of a contract, in constitutional sense, is the means provided by law by which it can be enforced, by which the parties can be obliged to perform it, and whatever legislation lessens the efficacy of these means impairs the obligation. Atlantic Loan Co. v. Peterson, 181 Ga. 266, 182 S.E. 15 (1935).

Validity of statutes affecting rights conferred by prior security deed. — Because a security deed executed in 1930 provided that in case of default in payment of debt the grantee might sell the property at the courthouse in a named county different from that in which the property was located, after first advertising the sale for a stated period in a newspaper published in the county in which the sale should be conducted, former Code 1933, § 67-1506 (see O.C.G.A. § 44-14-162), could not be constitutionally applied to such preexisting contract so as to require, in terms of the statute, that the sale should be advertised and conducted at the time and place and in the usual manner of sheriff's sales in the county in which the property, or a part thereof, was located. The same is true of former Code 1933, §§ 67-1503 through 67-1505 (see O.C.G.A. § 44-14-161), relating to confirmation of sale, which abridges the right to a deficiency judgment after a sale under the security deed. As to the rights conferred by the prior security deed, Code 1933, §§ 67-1503 through 67-1506, is invalid. Atlantic Loan Co. v. Peterson, 181 Ga. 266, 182 S.E. 15 (1935).

Ordinance prohibiting the owning, maintaining, and operating of pinball machines and the like was not violative of the provisions of the federal and state Constitutions prohibiting the passage of laws impairing the obligation of contracts. Woodward v. City of Lithonia, 191 Ga. 234, 11 S.E.2d 476 (1940).

Contractual nature of relation between electors and state upon approval and validation of school bonds. — The approval of school bonds by the electors and their validation according to statute created a status analogous to a contractual relation between such electors and the state, which relation could not be destroyed or impaired by a subsequent statute or constitutional provision. Wheeler v. Board of Trustees, 200 Ga. 323, 37 S.E.2d 322 (1946).

Claim that state statute impairs obligation of contract is an appeal to the United States Constitution and cannot be foreclosed by a state court's determination whether there was a contract or what were its obligations. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Phillips, 332 U.S. 168, 67 S. Ct. 1584, 91 L. Ed. 1977 (1947).

Contractual nature of franchise granted by city to public service corporation. — It is generally recognized that a franchise granted by a city council to a public service corporation to use its streets and public places, if the city has the charter power to grant such a franchise, is a binding contract and cannot be impaired in view of the prohibition against impairment of the obligation of contracts contained in the United States Constitution. City of Summerville v. Georgia Power Co., 205 Ga. 843, 55 S.E.2d 540 (1949).

Contract clause protects a vested ground of defense from being destroyed by an Act of the legislature. Guest v. Stone, 206 Ga. 239, 56 S.E.2d 247 (1949).

Former Code 1933, § 3-108 (see O.C.G.A. § 9-2-20), permitting beneficiary under contract between other parties to recover, could be given no retroactive effect, as to do so would violate the provisions of the United States and state Constitutions as to impairing the obligations of contracts, by creating a right for one to recover under an existing contract where he previously had no such right and subjecting a party to an existing contract to liability to a third person who previously had no right under the contract. Guest v. Stone, 206 Ga. 239, 56 S.E.2d 247 (1949).

Validity of statute eliminating ability payments. — Former Code 1933, § 78-911 (see O.C.G.A. § 47-17-81), which eliminated, under certain conditions, payment for permanent or total disability, did not violate constitutional provisions providing that no ex post facto law, retroactive law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts shall be passed, because in passing former Code 1933, § 78-917 (see O.C.G.A. § 47-17-101) the legislature specifically provided that all rights and benefits conferred would be subject to future legislative change or revision, and that no beneficiary would be deemed to have any vested right to any annuities or benefits provided therein. Prichard v. Board of Comm'rs of Peace Officers Annuity & Benefit Fund, 211 Ga. 57, 84 S.E.2d 26 (1954).

Pension is not a gratuity, but a contract based upon a consideration and gives pensioner a vested right which under U.S. Const., art. I, sec. X, cl. 1 cannot be impaired. Such contract cannot be modified, repealed, or defeated by subsequent Acts of the General Assembly after its creation. Burks v. Board of Trustees of Firemen's Pension Fund, 214 Ga. 251, 104 S.E.2d 225 (1958).

Validity of statute destroying vested right to property. — Former Code 1933, § 67-1308 (see O.C.G.A. § 44-14-80), providing that title to real property conveyed to secure debt should revert to grantor when debt became 20 years past due, unless debt was extended or renewed and such renewal recorded, or an affidavit setting out the facts of renewal was recorded with the conveyance, which section imposed conditions upon grantee not in existence at time of execution of the contract, divested the grantee of a vested right to the property, and impaired the obligation of the contract as applied to such deed, which was executed prior to passage and effective date of the Act, is unconstitutional, because in violation of U.S. Const., art. I, sec. X, cl. 1 and of Ga.

Impairment of Contracts (Cont'd)

Const. 1945, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. II, (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. X), which prohibited this state from passing any retroactive law or any law impairing the obligations of contracts. Todd v. Morgan, 215 Ga. 220, 109 S.E.2d 803 (1959).

Validity of statute empowering courts to revise alimony and support judgments. — Former Code 1933, § 30-220 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 19-6-18 and 19-6-19), conferring jurisdiction and power on courts of this state to revise judgments fixing permanent alimony or support for minor children, does not offend those constitutional provisions of this state and of the United States which provide that no law impairing the obligation of contracts shall be enacted, and this is true even though the amount of alimony or support so awarded by the judgment, as well as the time during which it is to be paid, is agreed to in writing by the parties. Nelson v. Roberts, 216 Ga. 741, 119 S.E.2d 545 (1961).

Validity of chapter governing pensions to retired judges of probate courts. — The obligation of the board to pay monthly benefits to retired ordinaries (now judges of probate courts) under former Code 1933, Ch. 24-17A (see O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 47) existed only so long as there existed funds to pay these benefits. When these funds were exhausted, the obligation of the board administering the chapter ended, and thus the chapter is not unconstitutional as violative of the contractual obligation clauses of the federal and state Constitutions. Sanders v. Harper, 220 Ga. 649, 141 S.E.2d 156 (1965).

U.S. Const., art. I, sec. X is restricted to the protection of vested rights; it does not render inviolate mere contingent or speculative interests. Webb v. Whitley, 114 Ga. App. 153, 150 S.E.2d 261 (1966).

U.S. Const., art. I, sec. X's prohibition of any state law impairing the obligation of contracts is not a limitation on the power of eminent domain. — The obligation of a contract is not impaired when it is appropriated to a public use and compensation made therefor. Such an exertion of power is a taking, and not an impairment of a contractual obligation. City of Atlanta v. Airways Parking Co., 225 Ga. 173, 167 S.E.2d 145 (1969).

Condemnation of portion of rights of condemnee under its contract with city does not violate the provision of U.S. Const., art. I, sec. X, cl. 1 prohibiting the passage of a law impairing the obligation of contracts. City of Atlanta v. Airways Parking Co., 225 Ga. 173, 167 S.E.2d 145 (1969).

U.S. Const., art. I, sec. X, cl. 1 does not forbid the equitable modification of a contract. Selby v. Gilmer, 240 Ga. 241, 240 S.E.2d 80 (1977).

Impairment of contracts by state for public welfare. — Constitutional restraints upon impairment of obligation of contracts do not prevent state from exercising such powers as are necessary in the exercise of its sovereign right to protect the lives, health, morals, comfort, and general welfare of the public, though contracts previously entered into between individuals may thereby be affected. Moore v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 242 Ga. 182, 249 S.E.2d 549 (1978).

Act of General Assembly revoking city charter, thus abolishing municipal offices, is not a law in impairment of contract since the right of an incumbent to an office is not vested, but may be revoked if the law under which the incumbent holds office is capable of being repealed. City of Mt. View v. Clayton County, 242 Ga. 163, 249 S.E.2d 541 (1978), appeal dismissed, 440 U.S. 902, 99 S. Ct. 1205, 59 L. Ed. 2d 450 (1979).

Contract clause does not prohibit state from repealing or amending statutes generally or from enacting legislation with retroactive effects. Appling County v. Municipal Elec. Auth., 621 F.2d 1301 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1015, 101 S. Ct. 574, 66 L. Ed. 2d 474 (1980).

With respect to grants of political or governmental authority to cities, towns, counties, and the like, legislative power of states is not restrained by the contract clause. Appling County v. Municipal Elec. Auth., 621 F.2d 1301 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1015, 101 S. Ct. 574, 66 L. Ed. 2d 474 (1980).

Preliminary question under contract clause analysis is whether the legislative action impaired or changed a specific contractual obligation. City of Atlanta v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 636 F.2d 1084 (5th Cir. 1981).

Constitutional provision is not applicable to individual conduct by persons acting under color of state law. Stone Mt. Game Ranch, Inc. v. Hunt, 570 F. Supp. 238 (N.D.

Ga. 1983), aff'd, 746 F.2d 761 (11th Cir. 1984).

Municipality cannot claim statutory immunity to bar employee from recovering pay. — To bar a municipal employee from recovering pay for services the employee performed by allowing the municipality to claim statutory immunity would violate the prohibition against the impairment of a contract which is found in both the state and federal constitutions. Smith v. City of Atlanta, 167 Ga. App. 458, 306 S.E.2d 720 (1983).

Reduction in future nonvested retirement benefits. — Since there is no vested right to benefits one was never entitled to receive, the reduction in future benefits to retiree did not violate the retiree's constitutional right to protection against impairment of contract. Tate v. Teachers' Retirement Sys., 257 Ga. 365, 359 S.E.2d 649 (1987).

Retrospective application of judicial construction of insurance contracts. — The interpretation of O.C.G.A. § 33-34-5 by Jones v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 156 Ga. App. 230, 274 S.E.2d 623 (1980) was based on the insurer's failure to comply with specific requirements of the law and was not an unconstitutional impairment of the insurance contract. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Bates, 542 F. Supp. 807 (N.D. Ga. 1982).

Franchise tax on gas sales. — Franchise granted in 1940 by town ordinance to gas company allowing for the sale and distribution of gas services to town inhabitants was not granted in perpetuity; thus, 1980 town ordinance providing for a three percent franchise tax on gas sales impaired no contractual rights granted to the assignor of the gas company's franchise, and trial court did not err in refusing to declare the 1980 ordinance unconstitutional as an impairment of contract. Gas Light Co. v. Town of Bibb City, 253 Ga. 498, 322 S.E.2d 250 (1984).

Subjecting retirement benefits of retired school teachers to state income taxation did not violate the constitutional prohibition against state laws impairing the obligation of contracts, where the teachers had no vested right to an irrevocable exemption, such irrevocable exemption being barred under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VII, § 1, Para. I. Parrish v. Employees' Retirement Sys., 260 Ga. 613, 398 S.E.2d 353 (1990), cert. denied, 500 U.S. 353, 111 S. Ct. 2016, 114 L. Ed. 2d 103 (1991).

Duties on Imports

Non-discriminatory ad valorem tax constitutional. — A non-discriminatory ad valorem tax does not violate this section's "import-export" clause, where the imported goods are "no longer in transit". Los Angeles Tile Co. v. Chatham County Bd. of Tax Assessors, 209 Ga. App. 245, 433 S.E.2d 82 (1993).

Nondiscriminatory ad valorem property taxes do not interfere with the free flow of imported goods among the states. Michelin Tire Corp. v. Wages, 423 U.S. 276, 96 S. Ct. 535, 46 L. Ed. 2d 495 (1976).

Imports subject to uniform taxes imposed for services supplied by state. — The import-export clause clearly prohibits state taxation based on foreign origin of imported goods, but it cannot be read to accord imported goods preferential treatment that permits escape from uniform taxes imposed without regard to foreign origin for services which the state supplies. Michelin Tire Corp. v. Wages, 423 U.S. 276, 96 S. Ct. 535, 46 L. Ed. 2d 495 (1976).

Taxable status of packaged and bulk imports. — There is a vast distinction between goods shipped in packaging, such as crates or cartons, and goods shipped in bulk. Packaged imports retain their status as imports, and are not subject to taxation. Bulk imports that have been mingled with other bulk imports, sorted, and arranged for sale do not retain their status as imports, and they are subject to taxation. Wages v. Michelin Tire Corp., 233 Ga. 712, 214 S.E.2d 349 (1975), aff'd, 423 U.S. 276, 96 S. Ct. 535, 46 L. Ed. 2d 495 (1976).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Validated bonds create a status analogous to a contractual relation which cannot be destroyed or impaired by a subsequent statute. — 1977 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U77-10.

Reciprocal child support enforcement statute not violation of treaty provisions. — So long as a reciprocal child support enforcement statute does not require more than a routine review of foreign laws, does not directly affect United States foreign policy and does not have a potential for the disruption of foreign policy or embarrassment to the United States government, it does not violate the treaty provisions of the United States Constitution. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 81-12.

Prohibiting involuntary separation benefits to state employees. — An amendment to the Georgia Constitution prohibiting the grant of involuntary separation retirement benefits to state employees who are by law currently entitled to coverage under the involuntary separation benefits section of the Employees' Retirement System Act would, in all probability, be unconstitutional under the federal Impairment Clause contained in U.S. Const., art. I, sec. X. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U83-72.

Retrospective application of provision terminating retirement benefits for conviction of crime. — The General Assembly has the authority to enact a statute which proposes the forfeiture of earned retirement benefits of future public employees due to the conviction of a crime; however, an amendment to the Georgia Constitution proposing such a forfeiture by employees who are currently by law vested with rights under the public retirement system would, in all probability, be unconstitutional under the federal Impairment Clause contained in U.S. Const., art. I, sec. X. 1985 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U85-3.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Relation of treaty to state and federal law, 4 ALR 1377; 134 ALR 882.

Franchise provisions for free or reduced rates by public service corporations as contract protected from change under contract clause of federal Constitution, 10 ALR 499.

What money is legal tender, 31 ALR 246.

Effect of war on treaty rights, 47 ALR 457.

Constitutional or statutory changes affecting grand jury or substituting information for indictment as an ex post facto law, 53 ALR 716.

Effect of statutory change of penalty or punishment after conviction, 55 ALR 443.

Constitutionality of retroactive statute curing defect in private instrument purporting to convey title or create interest in property or as to filing or recording thereof, 57 ALR 1197.

Construction of statutes of limitation as regards their retrospective application to causes of action already barred, 67 ALR 297.

Constitutionality, construction, and applicability of statute making refusal to pay for commodities a criminal offense, 76 ALR 1338.

Retroactive effect of statutes regarding provisions with reference to avoidance of fire insurance policies, 78 ALR 617.

Imposition of wharfage or dockage fees, by state or municipality, as tonnage duty, 80 ALR 388.

Constitutional provision against impairing obligation of contract as applicable to statutes affecting rights or remedies of holders or owners of improvement bonds or liens, 85 ALR 244; 97 ALR 911.

Blue Sky Laws, 87 ALR 42.

Statutes in relation to interest as obnoxious to constitutional provision against impairing obligation of contracts, 87 ALR 462.

Power to require filing of schedule of prices as a condition of license for a business or profession, 87 ALR 519.

Raising maximum limit of permissible municipal indebtedness as impairing obligation of existing municipal contracts, 90 ALR 859.

Debtor's exemption statutes as impairing obligations of existing contracts, 93 ALR 177.

Contracts for payment in gold or silver or in gold or silver coin ("gold coin" clauses), 95 ALR 1383; 101 ALR 1318; 114 ALR 820.

Constitutionality of statute changing rights of withdrawing members of building and loan association, 98 ALR 82; 133 ALR 1493.

Validity of statute or ordinance regulating barbers, 98 ALR 1088.

Constitutional provision against impairing obligation of contracts as applied to rights or remedies of owners of property subject to assessment for local improvements, 100 ALR 164.

Constitutionality, construction, and application of statute permitting release of part of property subject to tax liens or special assessments, 100 ALR 418.

Statute affecting mortgagee's rights and remedies in respect of deficiency as unconstitutional impairment of obligation of contract, 108 ALR 891; 115 ALR 435; 130 ALR 1482; 133 ALR 1473.

Tax exemption as unconstitutionally impairing public obligations antedating the exemption, 109 ALR 817.

Constitutional prohibition of ex post facto laws as applicable to statutes relating to joinder of offenses or defendants, 110 ALR 1308.

Constitutionality of crop insurance statutes, 113 ALR 739.

Constitutional provisions against impairment of obligations of contract as applied to sinking funds for retirement of municipal or other public bonds, 115 ALR 220.

Validity and effect, as to previously recorded instrument, of statute which places or changes time limit on effectiveness of record of mortgages or other instruments, 133 ALR 1325.

Constitutionality, construction, and application of compacts and statutes involving cooperation between states, 134 ALR 1411.

Constitutionality of statute which in effect limits judgment creditor after crediting thereon fair market value of property purchased by him at execution sale, 144 ALR 858.

Validity and construction of war legislation in nature of moratory statute, 144 ALR 1508.

Constitutionality and construction of repeal or modification by legislative action of teachers' tenure statute, as regards retrospective operation, 147 ALR 293.

Retroactive application, to previous sales, of statutes reducing period of redemption from tax sales, as unconstitutional impairment of contract obligations, 147 ALR 1123.

Price ceiling, adopted as a war measure, as affecting preexisting contracts, 147 ALR 1286; 149 ALR 1451; 151 ALR 1450.

Retrospective statute subjecting interests of trust beneficiaries to claims of creditors, 151 ALR 1417.

Rights of parties to contract the performance of which is interfered with or prevented by war conditions or acts of government in prosecution of war, 151 ALR 1447; 152 ALR 1447; 153 ALR 1417; 154 ALR 1445; 155 ALR 1447; 156 ALR 1446; 157 ALR 1446; 158 ALR 1446.

Constitutionality, construction, and application of statute or contract regarding deduction from, or adjustment of, wages in respect of defective workmanship, 153 ALR 866.

Constitutionality, construction, and application of statutes affecting the rights or remedies of purchasers under antecedent executory contracts for purchase of real property, 153 ALR 1209.

Retroactive application of statutes regarding enforcement of awards under workmen's compensation acts, 155 ALR 558.

Statute providing for apportionment between lessor and lessee of a tax imposed upon the producer of oil, gas, or other natural production as violation of the constitutional provision against impairment of the obligation of contracts, 160 ALR 980.

Retrospective operation of criminal negligence statute, 14 ALR2d 726.

Validity of statute establishing or authorizing minimum price schedules for barbers, 54 ALR3d 916.

Validity, construction, and effect of state franchising statute, 67 ALR3d 1299.

Validity and construction of state or local regulation prohibiting off-premises advertising structures, 81 ALR3d 486.

Validity and construction of state or local regulation prohibiting the erection or maintenance of advertising structures within a specified distance of street or highway, 81 ALR3d 564.

Mandatory retirement of public officer or employee based on age, 81 ALR3d 811.

Zoning: building in course of construction as establishing valid nonconforming use or vested right to complete construction for intended use, 89 ALR3d 1051.

Prohibition, under state civil rights laws, of racial discrimination in rental of privately owned residential property, 96 ALR3d 497.

ARTICLE II.

Law reviews. — For article, "The President as the Head of the Executive-Administrative Hierarchy: A Survey," see 8 J. of Pub. L. 437 (1959). For article discussing validity of "executive privilege" as defense to congressional demand for information, see 8 Ga. L. Rev. 809 (1974). For article, "Rights as Trumps," see 27 Ga. L. Rev. 463 (1993).

For note, "Haitian Centers Council, Inc. v. McNary: If at First You Don't Succeed ...," 44 Mercer L. Rev. 959 (1993).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Generalized assertion of privilege yields to demonstrated, specific need for evidence in pending criminal trial. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd on other grounds, 519 F.2d 184 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1976).

There is no presidential privilege to withhold evidence that is demonstrably relevant in criminal trial because of the guarantee of due process of law and the necessity to protect the basic function of the courts. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd on other grounds, 519 F.2d 184 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1976).

Assertion of presidential privilege must yield to need for evidence in pending criminal trial and to the fundamental demands of due process of law in the fair administration of justice. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650

(M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd on other grounds, 519 F.2d 184 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1976).

Neither doctrine of separation of powers nor need for confidentiality of high level communications, without more, can sustain an absolute, unqualified presidential privilege of immunity from judicial process under all circumstances, since the impediment that an absolute, unqualified privilege would place in the way of the primary constitutional duty of the judicial branch to do justice in criminal prosecutions plainly conflicts with the function of the courts under U.S. Const., art. III. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd on other grounds, 519 F.2d 184 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1976).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Presidential and vice-presidential electors, 153 ALR 1066.

Section 1.

[Executive Power, Election, Qualifications of the President]

The executive Power shall be vested in a President of the United States of America. He shall hold his Office during the Term of four Years, and, together with the Vice President, chosen for the same Term, be elected, as follows:

Each State shall appoint, in such Manner as the Legislature thereof may direct, a Number of Electors, equal to the whole Number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in the Congress: but no Senator or Representative, or Person holding an Office of Trust or Profit under the United States, shall be appointed an Elector.

The Electors shall meet in their respective States, and vote by Ballot for two Persons, of whom one at least shall not be an Inhabitant of the same State with themselves. And they shall make a List of all the Persons voted for, and of the Number of Votes for each; which List they shall sign and certify, and transmit sealed to the Seat of the Government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate. The President of the Senate shall, in the Presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the Certificates, and the Votes shall then be counted. The Person having the greatest Number of Votes shall be the President, if such Number be a Majority of the whole Number of Electors appointed; and if there be more than one who have such Majority, and have an equal Number of Votes, then the House of Representatives shall immediately chuse by Ballot one of them for President; and if no Person have a Majority, then from the five highest on the List the said House shall in like Manner chuse the President. But in chusing the President, the Votes shall be taken by States, the Representation from each State having one Vote; A quorum for this Purpose shall consist of a Member or Members from two thirds of the States, and a Majority of all the States shall be necessary to a Choice. In every Case after the Choice of the President, the Person having the greatest Number of Votes of the Electors shall be the Vice President. But if there should remain two or more who have equal Votes, the Senate shall chuse from them by Ballot the Vice President.

The Congress may determine the Time of chusing the Electors, and the Day on which they shall give their Votes; which Day shall be the same throughout the United States.

No Person except a natural born Citizen, or a Citizen of the United States, at the time of the Adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the Office of President; neither shall any Person be eligible to that Office who shall not have attained to the Age of thirty-five Years, and been fourteen Years a Resident within the United States.

In Case of the Removal of the President from Office, or of his Death, Resignation, or Inability to discharge the Powers and Duties of the said Office, the Same shall devolve on the Vice President, and the Congress may by Law provide for the Case of Removal, Death, Resignation or Inability, both of the President and Vice President, declaring what Officer shall then act as President, and such Officer shall act accordingly, until the Disability be removed, or a President shall be elected.

The President shall, at stated Times, receive for his Services, a Compensation, which shall neither be increased or diminished during the Period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that Period any other Emolument from the United States, or any of them.

Before he enter on the Execution of his Office, he shall take the following Oath or Affirmation: — “I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the Office of President of the United States, and will to the best of my Ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States.”

Cross references. — Factors disqualifying a person from nomination or election to public office, §§ 21-2-7, 21-2-8. Election of presidential electors, §§ 21-2-10 through 21-2-12.

Editor's notes. — U.S. Const., art. II, sec. I, cl. 3 has been superseded by U.S. Const., amend. 12, which makes the candidates and offices of President and Vice-President distinct in the selection process. United States Const., amend. 14, sec. III modifies U.S. Const., art. II, sec. I, cl. 5 by imposing additional, but probably anachronistic, disqualifying criteria. U.S. Const., art. II, sec. I, cl. 6, concerning the disability of a President or a vacancy of the office, has been superseded by U.S. Const., amend. 25.

Law reviews. — For article analyzing the relationship between the military and the first amendment right of individuals to engage in political activities, see 28 Emory L.J. 3 (1979). For article discussing the separation of powers implications of implied rights of actions, see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 973 (1983). For article, "Congress: The Purse, the Purpose, and the Power," 21 Ga. L. Rev. 1 (1986). For article, "Separation of Political Powers: Boundaries or Balance?," 21 Ga. L. Rev. 171 (1986). For article, "Article II Courts," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 825 (1993). For article, "The Trouble with Shadow Government," see 52 Emory L.J. 281 (2003).

For note, "Bowsher v. Synar: Bright-Line Rule or Dice-Toss Approach to Separation of Powers?," see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 969 (1987). For note, "Let Me Tell You What You Mean: An Analysis of Presidential Signing Statements," see 21 Ga. L. Rev. 755 (1987).

For comment on Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. v. Sawyer, 343 U.S. 937, 72 S. Ct. 775, 96 L. Ed. 1345 (1952), see 15 Ga. B.J. 90 (1952). For comment on United States v. Brand Jewelers, Inc., 318 F. Supp. 1293 (S.D.N.Y. 1970), as to implied power of the executive to sue, see 20 J. of Pub. L. 337 (1971).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Use of electoral college method in state-wide elections. — The inclusion of the electoral college in the Constitution validated the collegiate principle despite its inherent numerical inequality, but implied nothing about the use of an analogous system by a state in a statewide election. Gray v. Sanders, 372 U.S. 368, 83 S. Ct. 801, 9 L. Ed. 2d 821 (1963).

Cited in United States v. Raines, 189 F. Supp. 121 (M.D. Ga. 1960); Republic of Cuba v. Arcade Bldg. of Savannah, Inc., 104 Ga. App. 848, 123 S.E.2d 453 (1961); Smith v. State Executive Comm. of Democratic Party, 288 F. Supp. 371 (N.D. Ga. 1968); Allan v. Allan, 236 Ga. 199, 223 S.E.2d 445 (1976).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Constitutional inhibition of increase or decrease in compensation during term as applicable to nonconstitutional officer, 86 ALR 1263.

Constitutional inhibition of change of officer's compensation as applicable to allowance for expenses or disbursements, 106 ALR 779.

Section 2.

[Powers of the President]

The President shall be Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, and of the Militia of the several States, when called into the actual Service of the United States; he may require the Opinion, in writing, of the principal Officer in each of the executive Departments, upon any Subject relating to the Duties of their respective Offices, and he shall have the Power to grant Reprieves and Pardons for Offenses against the United States, except in Cases of Impeachment.

He shall have Power, by and with the Advice and Consent of the Senate, to make Treaties, provided two thirds of the Senators present concur; and he shall nominate, and by and with the Advice and Consent of the Senate, shall appoint Ambassadors, other public Ministers and Consuls, Judges of the supreme Court, and all other Officers of the United States, whose Appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, and which shall be established by Law: but the Congress may by Law vest the Appointment of such inferior Officers, as they think proper, in the President alone, in the Courts of Law, or in the Heads of Departments.

The President shall have Power to fill up all Vacancies that may happen during the Recess of the Senate, by granting Commissions which shall expire at the End of their next Session.

Law reviews. — For article discussing control of tenure of executive officers by the President and the Governor, see 3 Ga. B.J. 13 (1941). For article, "Jury Trials in Contempt Cases," see 20 Ga. B.J. 297 (1957). For article, "The Subject-Matter Limitation Upon the Treaty-Making Power," see 11 J. of Pub. L. 122 (1962). For article discussing the presidential power of judicial appointment, as exercised under Franklin Roosevelt and Richard Nixon, see 8 Ga. St. B.J. 145 (1971). For article, "The Treaty Power and Family Law," see 7 Ga. L. Rev. 55 (1972). For article, "The Supreme Court and Civil Liberties: 1974-1975," see 24 Emory L.J. 937 (1975). For article discussing problems in pardoning draft evaders and resisters, see 11 Ga. L. Rev. 1 (1976). For article analyzing the relationship between the military and the first amendment right of individuals to engage in political activities, see 28 Emory L.J. 3 (1979). For article, "Federal Preemption, Federal Conscription Under the New Superfund Act," see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 643 (1987). For article, "More Myths of Parity: State Court Forums and Constitutional Actions for the Right to Shelter," see 38 Emory L.J. 615 (1989). For article, "Article II Courts," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 825 (1993).

For note discussing the doctrine of federal preemption in the allocation of powers between the nation and the states, see 22 J. of Pub. L. 391 (1973). For note, "Let Me Tell You What You Mean: An Analysis of Presidential Signing Statements," see 21 Ga. L. Rev. 755 (1987). For article, "A Constitutional Structure for Foreign Affairs," see 19 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 1059 (2003).

For comment on Korematsu v. United States, 323 U.S. 214, 65 S. Ct. 193, 89 L. Ed. 194 (1944), upholding constitutionality of exclusion of Japanese-Americans from military arms, see 7 Ga. B.J. 364 (1945). For comment on Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. v. Sawyer, 343 U.S. 937, 72 S. Ct. 775, 96 L. Ed. 1345 (1952), see 15 Ga. B.J. 90 (1952). For comment on Reid v. Covert, 354 U.S. 1, 77 S. Ct. 1222, 1 L. Ed. 2d 1148 (1957) and Kinsella v. Krueger, 351 U.S. 470, 76 S. Ct. 886, 100 L. Ed. 1342 (1956) as to military authority overseas over dependents of servicemen, see 6 J. of Pub. L. 540 (1957). For comment on Goldwater v. Carter, 444 U.S. 996, 100 S. Ct. 533, 62 L. Ed. 2d 428 (1979), discussing unilateral treaty termination by the President, see 15 Ga. L. Rev. 176 (1980). For comment, "Private Citizens in Foreign Affairs: A Constitutional Analysis," see 36 Emory L.J. 285 (1987).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutional power to grant reprieves and pardons includes power to grant commutations on lawful conditions. Lupo v.

Zerbst, 92 F.2d 362 (5th Cir. 1937), cert. denied, 303 U.S. 646, 58 S. Ct. 645, 82 L. Ed. 1108 (1938).

Cited in United States v. Jenkins, 141 F. Supp. 499 (S.D. Ga. 1956); United States v. Raines, 189 F. Supp. 121 (M.D. Ga. 1960);

Block v. Compagnie Nationale Air France, 229 F. Supp. 801 (N.D. Ga. 1964); Calley v. Callaway, 519 F.2d 184 (5th Cir. 1975).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Reciprocal child support enforcement statute not violation of treaty provisions. — So long as a reciprocal child support enforcement statute does not require more than a routine review of foreign laws, does not directly affect United States foreign policy and does not have a potential for the disruption of foreign policy or embarrassment to the United States government, it does not violate the treaty provisions of the United States Constitution. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 81-12.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Relation of treaty to state and Federal law, 4 ALR 1377; 134 ALR 882.

Power of executive to pardon one for contempt, 26 ALR 21; 38 ALR 171; 63 ALR 226.

Constitutionality of statute conferring on court power to suspend sentence, 26 ALR 399; 101 ALR 402.

Distinction between office and employment, 53 ALR 595; 93 ALR 333; 140 ALR 1076.

Pardon as defense to proceeding for suspension or cancellation of license of physician, surgeon, or dentist, 126 ALR 257.

Pardon as affecting impeachment by proof of conviction of crime, 30 ALR2d 893.

Section 3.

[Powers and Duties of the President]

He shall from time to time give to the Congress Information of the State of the Union, and recommend to their Consideration such Measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient; he may, on extraordinary Occasions, convene both Houses, or either of them, and in Case of Disagreement between them, with Respect to the Time of Adjournment, he may adjourn them to such Time as he shall think proper; he shall receive Ambassadors and other public Ministers; he shall take Care that the Laws be faithfully executed, and shall Commission all the Officers of the United States.

Law reviews. — For article discussing role of court in the release of presidentially impounded funds, see 24 Emory L.J. 313 (1975). For article, "The Supreme Court and Civil Liberties: 1974-1975," see 24 Emory L.J. 937 (1975). For survey of 1987 Eleventh Circuit cases on administrative law, see 39 Mercer L. Rev. 1057 (1988).

For note, "Let Me Tell You What You Mean: An Analysis of Presidential Signing Statements," see 21 Ga. L. Rev. 755 (1987).

For comment, "Private Citizens in Foreign Affairs: A Constitutional Analysis," see 36 Emory L.J. 285 (1987).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Cited in Smith v. United States, 375 F.2d 243 (5th Cir. 1967).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

U.S. Const., art. II, sec. III means that laws must be executed as required by other constitutional provisions, such as the one that demands a request from the legislature or the Governor of the state, before troops are used to put down domestic violence under U.S. Const., art. IV, sec. IV. 1957 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 8.

Section 4.

[Impeachment]

The President, Vice President and all civil Officers of the United States, shall be removed from Office on Impeachment for, and Conviction of, Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors.

Law reviews. — For article discussing the presidential power of judicial appointment, as exercised under Franklin Roosevelt and Richard Nixon, see 8 Ga. St. B.J. 145 (1971). For article, "Judicial Removal of Federal Judges," see 11 Ga. St. B.J. 157 (1975). For article analyzing the relationship between the military and the first amendment right of individuals to engage in political activities, see 28 Emory L.J. 3 (1979). For article, "Removal and Discipline of Federal Judges," see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 681 (1980).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Physical or mental disability as disqualification or ground of removal or impeachment of public officer, 28 ALR 777. Nature of proceedings under statute providing for removal of officer on accusation by grand jury, etc., 81 ALR 1089.

Power to remove public officer without notice and hearing, 99 ALR 336. Removal of public officers for misconduct during previous term, 42 ALR3d 691.

ARTICLE III.

Law reviews. — For article, "Judicial Supremacy in America; Its Colonial and Constitutional History," see 16 Ga. B.J. 148 (1953). For article advocating judicial restraint of the federal courts, see 17 Ga. B.J. 442 (1955). For article considering the power of the United States House of Representatives to expel a member and the power of the judiciary to review such an expulsion, see 5 Ga. L. Rev. 203 (1971). For article discussing developing principles of state sovereignty limitations on Congress' exercise of its granted powers, see 11 Ga. L. Rev. 35 (1976). For article, "The Role of the Judiciary With Respect to the Other Branches of Government," see 11 Ga. L. Rev. 455 (1977). For article discussing theoretical problems raised by constitutional adjudication and judicial supremacy in the United States, see 11 Ga. L. Rev. 1069 (1977). For article discussing the evolution of judicial interpretivism, see 14 Ga. L. Rev. 389 (1980). For article, "The Limits of Judicial Supremacy: A Proposal For Checked Activism," see 14 Ga. L. Rev. 471 (1980). For article, "Congress As Constitutional Decisionmaker and Its Power to Counter Judicial Doctrine," 21 Ga. L. Rev. 57 (1986). For article, "The Jurisdictional Nature of the Time to Appeal," see 21 Ga. L. Rev. 399 (1986). For article, "Judicial Review, Foreign Affairs and Legislative Standing," see 25 Ga. L. Rev. 227 (1991). For article, "Missouri v. Jenkins: The Expansion of Federal Judicial Power," see 7 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 495 (1991). For article, "Spallone v. United States: When Constitutional Principles Collide," see 7 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 527 (1991). For article, "Individual Rights and the Powers of Government," see 27 Ga. L. Rev. 343 (1993). For article, "Rights as Trumps," see 27 Ga. L. Rev. 463 (1993). For article, "Article II Courts," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 825 (1993). For symposium articles on federal judicial independence, see 46 Mercer L. Rev. 637 et seq. (1995).

For note, "Tension Between Judicial and Legislative Powers as Reflected in Confrontations Between Congress and the Courts," see 13 Ga. L. Rev. 1513 (1979). For note, "American National Red Cross v. S.G. & A.E.: Bad Blood in the Federal Courts," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 687 (1993). For note, "Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife: The Court Maintains Its Proper Role in Environmental Issues," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 1443 (1993).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION
BANKRUPTCY
CASES AND CONTROVERSIES
STANDING AND RIPENESS

General Consideration

There is no presidential privilege to withhold evidence that is demonstrably relevant in criminal trial because of the guarantee of due process of law and the necessity to protect the basic function of the courts. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd on other grounds, 519 F.2d 184 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1976).

Neither doctrine of separation of powers nor need for confidentiality of high level communications, without more, can sustain absolute, unqualified presidential privilege of immunity from judicial process under all circumstances, since the impediment that an absolute, unqualified privilege would place in the way of the primary constitutional duty of the judicial branch to do justice in criminal prosecutions plainly conflicts with the function of the courts under U.S. Const., art. III. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd on other grounds, 519 F.2d 184 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1976).

Unlawful intrusion on lawful powers of court. — Regulation purporting to excuse compliance with a judgment and order of the federal district court which is "subject to review ... by a higher reviewing authority" was invalid insofar as it might conflict with the order in the case or affect the jurisdiction of the court to fashion a remedy in the matter. Charter Medical Corp. v. Heckler, 604 F. Supp. 638 (M.D. Ga. 1985).

Cited in Willis v. Pickrick Restaurant, 231 F. Supp. 396 (N.D. Ga. 1964); Atlas Roofing

Co. v. Occupational Safety & Health Review Comm'n, 518 F.2d 990 (5th Cir. 1975); Inmates of Henry County Jail v. Parham, 430 F. Supp. 304 (N.D. Ga. 1976); International Soc'y for Krishna Consciousness v. Eaves, 601 F.2d 809 (5th Cir. 1979); United States v. Elsoffer, 644 F.2d 357 (5th Cir. 1981); State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Bates, 542 F. Supp. 807 (N.D. Ga. 1982); Estes v. Crenshaw (In re N & D Properties, Inc.), 54 Bankr. 590 (N.D. Ga. 1985); Parker v. Dole, 668 F. Supp. 1563 (N.D. Ga. 1987); Duckworth v. Medical Electro-Therapeutics, Inc., 768 F. Supp. 822 (S.D. Ga. 1991).

Bankruptcy

Supreme Court empowered to stay decision declaring Bankruptcy Act unconstitutional. — The Supreme Court had the power to stay until October 4, 1982, the effect of its decision in Northern Pipeline Constr. Co. v. Marathon Pipe Line Co., 458 U.S. 50, 102 S. Ct. 2858, 73 L. Ed. 2d 598 (1982) declaring certain provisions of the Bankruptcy Act of 1978 unconstitutional. Anderson v. CBS, Inc., 31 Bankr. 161 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1982).

Bankruptcy jurisdiction must be exercised by Article III judges. — Bankruptcy jurisdiction is Article III power and must be exercised by Article III judges at every stage of the consideration. Ellenberg v. Henry, 38 Bankr. 24 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1983).

Federal district courts have subject matter jurisdiction to entertain bankruptcy cases. Seven Springs Apts. v. Calmark Assets, 34 Bankr. 987 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

The Supreme Court, in 1982, rendered unconstitutional only subsection (c) of 28 U.S.C. § 1471, which provided that the bankruptcy court for the district in which a bankruptcy case is commenced shall exercise “all of the jurisdiction” conferred on the district court, and left intact the bankruptcy subject matter jurisdiction of the district courts. Committee of Unsecured Creditors of FS Communications Corp. v. Hyatt Greenville Corp., 760 F.2d 1194 (11th Cir. 1985).

No district or bankruptcy court has any exercisable jurisdiction in bankruptcy cases, matters, or proceedings after December 24, 1982, and district court could not confer jurisdiction on bankruptcy court by adoption of the emergency rule. Williamson v. General Fin. Co., 28 Bankr. 276 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1983).

Bankruptcy courts are not Article III courts and therefore may not exercise the judicial power of the United States. Parklane Hosiery Co. v. Parklane/Atlanta Venture, 927 F.2d 532 (11th Cir. 1991).

Jurisdiction of bankruptcy court by referral from district court. — Bankruptcy courts obtain jurisdiction over Title 11 cases or proceedings only by referral at the discretion of the district courts, and the district court may withdraw such reference for cause. Nevertheless, the cause prerequisite should not be used to prevent the district court from properly withdrawing reference either to ensure that the judicial power of the United States is exercised by an Article III court or in order to fulfill its supervisory function over the bankruptcy courts. Parklane Hosiery Co. v. Parklane/Atlanta Venture, 927 F.2d 532 (11th Cir. 1991).

Bankruptcy court has no authority to issue an unreviewable order, to dismiss, or, alternatively, to abstain from jurisdiction over a bankruptcy case. Goerg v. Parungao, 930 F.2d 1563 (11th Cir. 1991).

Bankruptcy court cannot conduct jury trial. — Conducting a jury trial by a bankruptcy court would violate Article III of the Constitution. Ellenberg v. Bouldin, 125 Bankr. 851 (N.D. Ga. 1990).

District courts still have jurisdiction over bankruptcy cases and proceedings, and, therefore, may refer these actions to the bankruptcy court. Pettigrew v. Kutak, Rock & Huie, 30 Bankr. 989 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Article III courts have authority to promulgate local rules. — Article III courts have inherent equitable power to provide themselves with appropriate instruments required for the performance of their duties, such as local rules to administer court business properly brought before the court. Pettigrew v. Kutak, Rock & Huie, 30 Bankr. 989 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Local rule constitutional. — Local rules which provide that in “related proceedings” the bankruptcy judge may not enter a judgment or dispositive order, but shall submit findings, conclusions, and a proposed judgment or order to the district judge, unless the parties to the proceeding consent to entry of the judgment or order by the bankruptcy judge, “related proceedings” being defined to be those civil proceedings that in the absence of a petition in bankruptcy, could have been brought in a district court or a state court, are constitutional. Flint ex rel. Flint v. Speir Ins. Agency, Inc., 33 Bankr. 814 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

A non-Article III court may perform the functions of presiding over a trial and recommending a disposition, so long as the ultimate decision is made by the district judge. Implicitly then, those sections of the local bankruptcy rule permitting de novo review by the district court are constitutional. Seven Springs Apts. v. Calmark Assets, 34 Bankr. 987 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

District court authorized to promulgate Emergency Rule for bankruptcy matters. — The district court has original jurisdiction of bankruptcy matters and had authority to promulgate the Emergency Rule, which refers to the bankruptcy court all cases under Title 11 and all civil proceedings arising under Title 11 or arising in or related to cases under Title 11. Ridgefield, Inc. v. Unity Foods, Inc., 35 Bankr. 876 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1983).

Emergency Local Rule powers must be exercised by Article III judges. — The Emergency Local Rule delegates judicial responsibilities to bankruptcy judges, which may not be exercised constitutionally by non-Article III judges. Ellenberg v. Henry, 38 Bankr. 24 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1983).

Emergency Local Rule constitutional. — The temporary Emergency Model Local Rule adopted by the district court of the northern district of Georgia, which asserts jurisdiction and judicial power in the district court over Title 11 cases and proceedings filed in the bankruptcy court, then refers all bankruptcy cases and proceedings, and controversies arising out of or related thereto, to the existing United States bankruptcy judges of the United States bankruptcy court, except for certain judicial actions as prescribed in the rule, is constitutional. Committee of Unsecured Creditors of FS Communications Corp. v. Hyatt Greenville Corp., 760 F.2d 1194 (11th Cir. 1985).

Bankruptcy (Cont'd)

Bankruptcy judges cannot decide peripheral state common-law claims. — Non-Article III bankruptcy judges cannot constitutionally be vested with jurisdictional power to decide state common-law claims brought pursuant to the Bankruptcy Act and related only peripherally to a bankruptcy case adjudicated under federal law. Pettigrew v. Kutak, Rock & Huie, 30 Bankr. 989 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Bankruptcy judge cannot decide "related" civil proceedings under Bankruptcy Reform Act. — A non-Article III United States bankruptcy court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over proceedings initiated by the debtor alleging violations of the Consumer Credit Protection Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 1601, 1640. Such proceedings are "related" civil proceedings as described in 28 U.S.C. § 1471(b) and (c), as enacted by § 241(a) of the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978, which is an unconstitutional grant of Article III authority, i.e., the "judicial power of the United States," to non-Article III judges. Brown v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 32 Bankr. 590 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1983).

While a bankruptcy court may determine whether the debtor's obligation to provide educational expenses under a separation agreement is dischargeable, it is without jurisdiction to inquire into the interpretation of the agreement in order to establish or to modify the debtor's obligation for child support. Sharp v. Harrell, 33 Bankr. 989 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 754 F.2d 902 (11th Cir. 1985).

Bankruptcy judges may not exercise contempt powers. — The statutory grant of contempt powers to bankruptcy judges is unconstitutional. The power of contempt is essentially judicial and may not be constitutionally exercised by a bankruptcy court, a non-Article III court. If the bankruptcy court feels that a civil contempt sanction is necessary, it should certify the facts to the district court for an appropriate order. Tele-Wire Supply Corp. v. Presidential Fin. Corp., Inc. (In re Indus. Tool Distribs., Inc.), 55 Bankr. 746 (N.D. Ga. 1985) (Decided prior to 1987 amendment of Federal Bankruptcy Rule 9020. See Walton v. Jones (In re Shirley), 184 Bankr. 613 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1995)).

Cases and Controversies

District court jurisdiction of probate matters. — It is generally established that probate matters such as the validity of a will and the administration of a decedent's estate are so far proceedings in rem as not to be among the "controversies" of which the district courts may be given jurisdiction under U.S. Const., art. III, and have been given jurisdiction under the statutes. Heath v. Jones, 168 F.2d 460 (5th Cir. 1948).

U.S. Const., art. III limits jurisdiction of federal courts to cases and controversies. Doe v. Bolton, 319 F. Supp. 1048 (N.D. Ga. 1970), modified, 410 U.S. 179, 93 S. Ct. 739, 35 L. Ed. 2d 201 (1973).

In actions for declaratory judgments, district court may not render advisory opinion on constitutionality of state statute. Rather there must be "exigent adversity," an actual controversy in which the constitutionality of the statute is drawn into question in a truly adversary context. Doe v. Bolton, 319 F. Supp. 1048 (N.D. Ga. 1970), modified, 410 U.S. 179, 93 S. Ct. 739, 35 L. Ed. 2d 201 (1973).

Federal courts established pursuant to U.S. Const., art. III do not render advisory opinions, but are limited to deciding issues in actual cases and controversies. Baxter v. Strickland, 381 F. Supp. 487 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

Controversy, in order to be decided by federal court, must be definite and concrete, touching the legal relations of parties having adverse legal interests, and must be real and substantial, admitting of specific relief through a decree of a conclusive character, as distinguished from an opinion advising what the law would be upon a hypothetical state of facts. Baxter v. Strickland, 381 F. Supp. 487 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

Justiciability is term of art employed to give expression to limitation placed upon the federal courts by the case and controversy doctrine. Where there is no showing that a state action which forms the basis of a complaint by one affected by the action was predicated on or justified by the challenged statute, there is no actual “case or controversy” concerning the constitutionality of the statute and thus the constitutionality thereof is not justiciable. Baxter v. Strickland, 381 F. Supp. 487 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

Personal animosity between parties to lawsuit is not necessary aspect of controversy under U.S. Const., art. III. A controversy need only be definite and concrete, touching the legal relations of parties having adverse legal interests. Septum, Inc. v. Keller, 614 F.2d 456 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 992, 101 S. Ct. 527, 66 L. Ed. 2d 288 (1980).

Required showing of injury to plaintiff. — In order to meet the hurdle of U.S. Const., art. III’s “case or controversy” justiciability requirement, plaintiff must show that he has suffered some threatened or actual injury resulting from actions of the defendant. Smith v. Price, 616 F.2d 1371 (5th Cir. 1980).

In the case of regulations governing speech or conduct, threat of interference with rights of plaintiff beyond that implied by the mere existence of the regulations must be shown to constitute a “case or controversy.” Smith v. Price, 616 F.2d 1371 (5th Cir. 1980).

Contesting forfeitures. — In order to contest a forfeiture, a claimant first must demonstrate a sufficient interest in the property to give him Article III standing; otherwise there is no “case or controversy”, in the constitutional sense, capable of adjudication in the federal courts. United States v. 1419 Mount Alto Rd., 830 F. Supp. 1476 (N.D. Ga. 1993).

Standing and Ripeness

Immediate harm or threat of harm to plaintiff prerequisite to exercise of judicial power. — Federal judicial power is to be exercised to strike down legislation, whether state or federal, only at the instance of one who is himself immediately harmed, or immediately threatened with harm, by the challenged action. Baxter v. Strickland, 381 F. Supp. 487 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

Ripeness is constitutional and jurisdictional prerequisite to both injunctive and declaratory relief. Baxter v. Strickland, 381 F. Supp. 487 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

One challenging a statute must demonstrate that the person is immediately injured or jeopardized by its operation in order for ripeness to exist. Baxter v. Strickland, 381 F. Supp. 487 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

Standing is not confined to those who show economic harm, nor is it necessarily denied because alleged injury is commonly shared. Hall County Historical Soc’y, Inc. v. Georgia DOT, 447 F. Supp. 741 (N.D. Ga. 1978).

Threatened harm which is real, not “imaginary,” “speculative,” or “chimerical,” will satisfy standing prerequisites. High Ol’ Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 449 F. Supp. 364 (N.D. Ga. 1978), rev’d on other grounds, 621 F.2d 135 (5th Cir. 1980).

In order to avoid rendering advisory opinions, a federal court must evaluate substance of plaintiff’s claimed injury in fact and alleged position within the zone of interests. High Ol’ Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 449 F. Supp. 364 (N.D. Ga. 1978), rev’d on other grounds, 621 F.2d 135 (5th Cir. 1980).

Standing requirement existing in federal court requires that challenged action has caused plaintiff injury in fact, economic or otherwise, and the interest sought to be protected is arguably within the zone of interests to be protected or regulated by a statute or constitutional guarantee. Midway Youth Football Ladies Auxiliary, Inc. v. Strickland, 449 F. Supp. 418 (N.D. Ga. 1978).

Standing is question of whether plaintiff is sufficiently adversary to defendant to create a case or controversy under U.S. Const., art. III. Cherry v. AMOCO Oil Co., 481 F. Supp. 727 (N.D. Ga. 1979).

Fundamental standing requirement of U.S. Const., art. III, is that a litigant in the federal court must allege a distinct and palpable injury to the litigant. Maddox v. Southern Dist. Co., 34 Bankr. 801 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1982).

Individual taxpayers establish standing upon showing of unconstitutional expenditure. — Individual plaintiffs who are taxpayers in the relevant jurisdiction meet the test for taxpayer standing by identifying an allegedly unconstitutional expenditure of funds pursuant to a state spending statute. Birdine v. Moreland, 579 F. Supp. 412 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Renter “tester.” — A “tester” — an individual who, without an intent to rent an apartment, posed as a renter for the purpose of collecting evidence of discriminatory practices — had standing under the 1866 Civil Rights Act (42 U.S.C. § 1982). Watts v. Boyd Properties, Inc., 758 F.2d 1482 (11th Cir. 1985).

Standing and Ripeness (Cont'd)

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — May Federal court, acquiring jurisdiction because of Federal question but deciding such question adversely to party invoking jurisdiction, decide non-Federal questions, 12 ALR2d 695.

Section 1.

[Judicial Power, Tenure of Office]

The judicial Power of the United States, shall be vested in one supreme Court, and in such inferior Courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish. The Judges, both of the supreme and inferior Courts, shall hold their Offices during good Behaviour, and shall, at stated Times, receive for their Services a Compensation which shall not be diminished during their Continuance in Office.

Law reviews. — For article, "In Re: The Supreme Court of the United States, Report and Resolution of the Conference of Chief Justices," see 21 Ga. B.J. 139 (1958). For article examining Justice Cardozo's thought on legal method and the legitimacy of judicial authority, see 15 J. of Pub. L. 122 (1966). For article discussing the philosophy of Professor Philip Kurland on the extension of judicial power by the Warren Court and its entrance into the political realm, see 15 J. of Pub. L. 230 (1966). For article, "The Concept of Judicial Policy-Making: A Critique," see 15 J. of Pub. L. 286 (1966). For article, "The Selection and Tenure of Judges," see 2 Ga. St. B.J. 281 (1966). For article, "Chief Justice Burger and Extra-Case Activism," see 20 J. of Pub. L. 533 (1971). For article discussing the presidential power of judicial appointment, as exercised under Franklin Roosevelt and Richard Nixon, see 8 Ga. St. B.J. 145 (1971). For article "The Role and Impact of the Supreme Court and Judicial Decision-Making in the Evolution of American Federalism," see 8 Ga. St. B.J. 457 (1972). For article, "Judicial Removal of Federal Judges," see 11 Ga. St. B.J. 157 (1975). For article, "Removal and Discipline of Federal Judges," see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 681 (1980). For article discussing the separation of powers implications of implied rights of actions, see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 973 (1983). For article surveying 1982 Eleventh Circuit cases involving bankruptcy law, see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 1209 (1983). For article, "After ABSCAM: An Examination of Congressional Proposals to Limit Targeting Discretion in Federal Undercover Investigations," see 36 Emory L.J. 75 (1987). For article, "Plying the Erie Waters: Choice of Law in the Deterrence of Frivolous Appeals," see 21 Ga. L. Rev. 653 (1987). For article, "Judicial Privilege," see 22 Ga. L. Rev. 89 (1987). For article, "An Overview of the New Federal Sentencing Guidelines," see 25 Ga. St. B.J. 16 (1988). For article, "The Judicial Councils Reform and Judicial Conduct and Disability Act: Will Judges Judge Judges?," see 37 Emory L.J. 45 (1988). For article, "The Constitution in the Supreme Court: 1946-1953," see 37 Emory L.J. 249 (1988). For article, "Preserving Judicial Integrity: Some Comments on the Role of the Judiciary Under the 'Blending' of Powers," see 37 Emory L.J. 587 (1988). For article, "Is Disparity a Problem," see 22 Ga. L. Rev. 283 (1988). For article, "More Myths of Parity: State Court Forums and Constitutional Actions for the Right to Shelter," see 38 Emory L.J. 615 (1989).

For note on amenability of dependents of servicemen and nonmilitary employees to court-martial overseas, see 9 J. of Pub. L. 252 (1960).

For comment, "Pendent Party Jurisdiction

After Finley v. United States: A Trend Toward Its Abolition," see 24 Ga. L. Rev. 447

(1990).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

District court can entertain only such cases as Congress gives it jurisdiction to try. Jurisdiction to try any case or class of cases may be withheld altogether; but once Congress confers jurisdiction to try a case it cannot withhold power to decide the case according to the applicable law. Payne v. Griffin, 51 F. Supp. 588 (M.D. Ga. 1943).

Power to limit jurisdiction of district courts. — Congress' power to establish federal district courts includes the discretionary authority to limit and create exceptions to the jurisdiction of those courts. As a result, where Congress grants exclusive jurisdiction over a particular type of claim to a specific agency or tribunal, or explicitly takes jurisdiction away from federal district courts, the federal district courts are bound by that decision. United States v. Rockwell Int'l Corp., 795 F. Supp. 1131 (N.D. Ga. 1992).

Cited in Perkins v. Brown, 53 F. Supp. 176 (S.D. Ga. 1943); Southern Ry. v. Hogue, 117 Ga. App. 874, 162 S.E.2d 471 (1968); Bond v. White, 508 F.2d 1397 (5th Cir. 1975); Jackson v. Seaboard Coast Line R.R., 678 F.2d 992 (11th Cir. 1982); Schiffahrtsgesellschaft Leonhardt & Co. v. A. Bottacchi S.A. de Navegacion, 773 F.2d 1528 (11th Cir. 1985); Walton v. Jones (In re Shirley), 184 Bankr. 613 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1995).

Section 2.

[Jurisdiction]

The judicial Power shall extend to all Cases, in Law and Equity, arising under this Constitution, the Laws of the United States, and Treaties made, or which shall be made, under their Authority; — to all Cases affecting Ambassadors, other public Ministers and Consuls; — to all Cases of admiralty and maritime Jurisdiction; — to Controversies to which the United States shall be a Party; — to Controversies between two or more States; — between a State and Citizens of another State; — between Citizens of different States; — between Citizens of the same State claiming Lands under Grants of different States, and between a State, or the Citizens thereof, and foreign States, Citizens or Subjects.

In all Cases affecting Ambassadors, other public Ministers and Consuls, and those in which a State shall be Party, the supreme Court shall have original Jurisdiction. In all the other Cases before mentioned, the supreme Court shall have appellate Jurisdiction, both as to Law and Fact, with such Exceptions, and under such Regulations as the Congress shall make.

The Trial of all Crimes, except in Cases of Impeachment, shall be by Jury; and such Trial shall be held in the State where the said Crimes shall have been committed; but when not committed within any State, the Trial shall be at such Place or Places as the Congress may by Law have directed.

Editor's notes. — United States Const., amend. 11 modifies U.S. Const., art. III, sec. II, cl. 1 by restricting the judicial power of federal courts as to controversies commenced against a state by citizens of another or foreign state. The appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court as to questions of "fact," granted in U.S. Const., art. III, sec. II, cl. 2. has been curtailed by U.S. Const., amend. 7.

Law reviews. — For article, "Georgia Versus the United States Supreme Court," see 4 J. of Pub. L. 285 (1955). For article, "The Law of the Land," focusing on the role of the Supreme Court, see 6 J. of Pub. L. 444 (1957). For article, "Whether the Appellate Power of the Supreme Court Should Be Limited, Or More Expressly Declared," see 21 Ga. B.J. 19 (1958). For article, "In Re: The Supreme Court of the United States, Report and Resolution of the Conference of Chief Justices," see 21 Ga. B.J. 139 (1958). For article, "The Scope of Review of Facts by United States Courts of Appeals," see 21 Ga. B.J. 291 (1959). For article, "Criminal Venue and Related Problems," see 2 Ga. St. B.J. 331 (1966). For article, "Motorboat Collisions and the Family Purpose Doctrine," see 2 Ga. St. B.J. 473 (1966). For article discussing the doctrine of sovereign immunity in light of the eleventh amendment, see 2 Ga. L. Rev. 207 (1968). For article, "Chief Justice Burger and Extra-Case Activism," see 20 J. of Pub. L. 533 (1971). For article, "The Role and Impact of the Supreme Court and Judicial Decision-Making in the Evolution of American Federalism," see 8 Ga. St. B.J. 457 (1972). For article discussing the definition of the "cases" and "controversies" requirement of U.S. Const., Art. III, see 11 Ga. L. Rev. 1069 (1977). For article discussing federal civil litigation, with respect to Article III, first, fourteenth and fifteenth amendment issues, see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 821 (1979). For article, "Constitutional Criminal Litigation," see 32 Mercer L. Rev. 993 (1981). For article discussing congressional legislation which seeks to overturn or frustrate constitutional decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, see 33 Mercer L. Rev. 707 (1982). For article, "Title VII Class Actions: The End of the Era of the Irrelevant Plaintiff," see 36 Mercer L. Rev. 907 (1985). For article, "The Georgia Bill of Rights: Dead or Alive?," see 34 Emory L.J. 341 (1985). For article, "Problems in Search of Principles: The First Amendment in the Supreme Court from 1791-1930," see 35 Emory L.J. 59 (1986). For article, "Justice and Juror," see 20 Ga. L. Rev. 257 (1986). For survey of 1984-85 Eleventh Circuit cases on admiralty, see 37 Mercer L. Rev. 1169 (1986). For article, "Separation of Political Powers: Boundaries or Balance?," 21 Ga. L. Rev. 171 (1986). For article, "Georgia and the Development of Constitutional Principles: An Essay in Honor of the Bicentennial," see 24 Ga. St. B.J. 6 (1987). For survey of 1987 Eleventh Circuit cases on administrative law, see 39 Mercer L. Rev. 1057 (1988). For survey of 1986-1987 Eleventh Circuit cases on admiralty, see 39 Mercer L. Rev. 1107 (1988). For survey of Eleventh Circuit cases on trial practice and procedure, see 39 Mercer L. Rev. 1307 (1988). For article, "Eleventh Amendment Jurisprudence After Atascadero: The Coming Clash with Antitrust, Copyright, and Other Causes of Action over Which the Federal Courts Have Exclusive Jurisdiction," see 37 Emory L.J. 645 (1988). For annual eleventh circuit survey of admiralty law, see 42 Mercer L. Rev. 1209 (1991). For survey of 1995 Eleventh Circuit cases on admiralty law, see 47 Mercer L. Rev. 691 (1996). For article, "The Cauldron Boils: Supplemental Jurisdiction, Amount in Controversy, and Diversity of Citizenship Class Actions," see 53 Emory L.J. 55 (2004). For article, "Appellate Practice and Procedure," see 56 Mercer L. Rev. 1185 (2005).

For note, "Another Milepost in Jury Selection Under the Constitution," see 2 J. of Pub. L. 456 (1953). For note discussing the doctrine of federal preemption in the allocation of powers between the nation and the states, see 22 J. of Pub. L. 391 (1973). For note discussing federal courts' practice of abstention, see 22 J. of Pub. L. 439 (1973). For note, "State Standing in Police Misconduct Cases: Expanding the Boundaries of Parens Patriae," see 16 Ga. L. Rev. 865 (1982). For note, "Express Waiver of Eleventh Amendment Immunity," see 17 Ga. L. Rev. 513 (1983). For note on solid waste disposal, flow control ordinances and regulations, see 32 Ga. L. Rev. 1227 (1998).

For comment concerning standing of utility to challenge constitutionality of Tennessee Valley Authority Act, in light of Tennessee Elec. Power Co. v. T.V.A., 306 U.S. 118, 59 S. Ct. 366, 83 L. Ed. 543 (1939), see 2 Ga. B.J. 59 (1939). For comment on Hibdon v. United States, 204 F.2d 834 (6th Cir. 1953), reversing a felony conviction decided by a majority verdict upon the accused's waiver of a unanimous verdict induced by the trial court, see 16 Ga. B.J. 234 (1953). For comment on Reid v. Covert, 354 U.S. 1, 77 S. Ct. 1222, 1 L. Ed. 2d 1148 (1957) and Kinsella v. Krueger, 351 U.S. 470, 76 S. Ct. 886, 100 L. Ed. 1342 (1956), as to military authority overseas over dependents of servicemen, see 6 J. of Pub. L. 540 (1957). For comment on O'Callahan v. Parker, 395 U.S. 258, 89 S. Ct. 1683, 23 L. Ed. 291 (1969), as to limits of court-martial's jurisdiction to try serviceman, see 18 J. of Pub. L. 471 (1969). For comment on Younger v. Harris, 401 U.S. 37, 91 S. Ct. 746, 27 L. Ed. 2d 669 (1971), and Samuelo v. Mackell, 401 U.S. 66, 91 S. Ct. 764, 27 L. Ed. 2d 688 (1971), concerning a federal court's jurisdiction to grant injunction and declaratory relief in state court proceedings brought pursuant to allegedly unconstitutional state statutes, see 20 J. of Pub. L. 581 (1971). For comment discussing constitutionality of conviction upon less-than-unanimous jury vote, see 7 Ga. L. Rev. 339 (1973). For comment discussing admiralty jurisdiction over airplane crash, in light of Executive Jet Aviation, Inc. v. City of Cleveland, 409 U.S. 249, 93 S. Ct. 493, 34 L. Ed. 2d 454 (1972), see 25 Mercer L. Rev. 927 (1974). For comment, "Ancillary Jurisdiction: The Kroger Approach and The Federal Rules," see 28 Emory L.J. 463 (1979). For comment on ACLU v. Rabun County Chamber of Commerce, Inc., 698 F.2d 1098 (11th Cir. 1983), see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 1603 (1983). For comment, "Supreme Court Review of State Court Cases: Principled Federalism or Selective Bias?," see 36 Emory L.J. 1277 (1987). For comment, "Pendent Party Jurisdiction After Finley v. United States: A Trend Toward Its Abolition," see 24 Ga. L. Rev. 447 (1990).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

EXTENT OF JURISDICTION

1. IN GENERAL
2. CASES AND CONTROVERSIES
3. STANDING AND RIPENESS
4. PENDENT JURISDICTION

SUPREME COURT JURISDICTION

TRIAL BY JURY

General Consideration

"Contacts" with forum state not germane to Bankruptcy Act. — As federal district courts have personal jurisdiction in federal bankruptcy actions over any person with minimum contacts with the United States, and as the federal Bankruptcy Act permits nationwide service of process, a federal district court had ancillary personal jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant in a "non-core," related bankruptcy proceeding. This was true even though the defendant lacked minimum contacts with the forum state. Chemical Bank v. Grigsby's World of Carpet, Inc. (In re WWG Indus., Inc.), 44 Bankr. 287 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Congress clearly had the power to confer on the United States District Court subject matter jurisdiction of a suit against a nonresident by an assignee of a debtor in bankruptcy to collect on accounts allegedly owed the debtor. Chemical Bank v. Grigsby's

World of Carpet, Inc. (In re WWG Indus., Inc.), 44 Bankr. 287 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Prosecution for violation of 29 U.S.C. § 461 must occur in the District of Columbia. — Prosecution for failure to file with the Secretary of Labor the trusteeship reports required by 29 U.S.C. §§ 461(a) and (c) (1980) when an international union takes over the operation of a local union can only take place in the District of Columbia. United States v. DiJames, 731 F.2d 758 (11th Cir. 1984).

Maritime attachment procedures. — For case discussing the constitutionality of maritime attachment procedures under admiralty rules, see Schiffahrtsgesellschaft Leonhardt & Co. v. Bottacchi, 732 F.2d 1543 (11th Cir. 1984).

Composition and placement of United States Sentencing Commission, created by the federal Sentencing Reform Act of 1984 (28 U.S.C. §§ 991-998), was unconstitutional because it violated the doctrine of separation of powers. United States v. Richardson, 690 F. Supp. 1030 (N.D. Ga. 1988); United States v. Kane, 691 F. Supp. 341 (N.D. Ga. 1988).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Statute allowing removal of prosecutions against members of armed forces. — The statute allowing removal of certain state criminal prosecutions against members of the armed forces, 28 U.S.C. § 1442a, is not a statute upon which “arising under” jurisdiction can be based; it requires that a defendant must present a federal defense for removal. Georgia v. Westlake, 929 F. Supp. 1516 (M.D. Ga. 1996).

Cited in Ventimiglia v. Aderhold, 51 F.2d 308 (N.D. Ga. 1931); Farnsworth v. Zerbst, 98 F.2d 541 (5th Cir. 1938); Perkins v. Brown, 53 F. Supp. 176 (S.D. Ga. 1943); Smith v. UMW, 180 F. Supp. 796 (M.D. Ga. 1958); United States v. Raines, 203 F. Supp. 147 (M.D. Ga. 1961); Wirtz v. Alapaha Yellow Pine Prods., Inc., 217 F. Supp. 465 (M.D. Ga. 1963); Franklin v. United States, 384 F.2d 377 (5th Cir. 1967); Stevens Indus., Inc. v. Maryland Cas. Co., 391 F.2d 411 (5th Cir. 1968); Bond v. Fortson, 334 F. Supp. 1192 (N.D. Ga. 1971); United States v. Crow, Pope & Land Enters., Inc., 340 F. Supp. 25 (N.D. Ga. 1972); Steffel v. Thompson, 415 U.S. 452, 94 S. Ct. 1209, 39 L. Ed. 2d 505 (1974); Lucas v. Hope, 515 F.2d 234 (5th Cir. 1975); Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp. v. Daniel Int'l Corp., 563 F.2d 671 (5th Cir. 1977); Jackson v. Seaboard Coast Line R.R., 678 F.2d 992 (11th Cir. 1982); Athens Lumber Co. v. Federal Election Comm'n, 689 F.2d 1006 (11th Cir. 1982); United States v. Brantley, 733 F.2d 1429 (11th Cir. 1984); Cox Cable Communications, Inc. v. United States, 992 F.2d 1178 (11th Cir. 1993); Sammons v. National Comm'n on Certification of Physician Assistants, Inc., 104 F. Supp. 2d 1379 (N.D. Ga. 2000).

Extent of Jurisdiction1. In General

The language, “shall extend ... to all Cases of admiralty and maritime Jurisdiction,” imports an absolute and exclusive grant of power. Maryland Cas. Co. v. Grant, 169 Ga. 325, 150 S.E. 424 (1929), cert.

denied, 281 U.S. 690, 50 S. Ct. 240, 74 L. Ed. 1120 (1930).

Nature of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction. — Jurisdiction is conferred on the federal courts in admiralty because, as the seas are the joint property of the nations, the jurisdiction is essentially national and because of their nature such cases are closely connected with the grant of the commerce power. The jurisdiction is not restricted to admiralty, but includes all maritime jurisdiction. The constitutional provision for federal jurisdiction refers to a system of law operating uniformly in the whole country, and regard must be had to the legal history, Constitution, legislation, customs, and adjudications. The admiralty jurisdiction was not intended to be as limited as it was in England at the time of the adoption of the Constitution, and it was to guard against a narrow construction of the word “admiralty” that “maritime” was added. Maryland Cas. Co. v. Grant, 169 Ga. 325, 150 S.E. 424 (1929), cert. denied, 281 U.S. 690, 50 S. Ct. 240, 74 L. Ed. 1120 (1930).

Admiralty and maritime jurisdiction require location and nexus. — Admiralty and general maritime jurisdiction require a showing of both location in navigable waters as well as a nexus to traditional maritime activity. Cochran v. E.I. duPont de Nemours, 933 F.2d 1533 (11th Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1035, 112 S. Ct. 881, 116 L. Ed. 2d 785 (1992).

Only one jurisdiction conferred under “admiralty and maritime jurisdiction.” — Although there is no question but that originally the words “admiralty” and “maritime” were not identical in meaning, there is no question but that there was one jurisdiction given by the phrase “admiralty and maritime jurisdiction.” Renew v. United States, 1 F. Supp. 256 (S.D. Ga. 1932).

What constitutes “navigable waters.” — Strom Thurmond Lake does not constitute “navigable waters” as that term is used for invoking admiralty jurisdiction. Seymour v. United States, 744 F. Supp. 1161 (S.D. Ga. 1990).

Necessarily, the word “affecting” must be given its reasonable and sensible meaning in light of purposes of Constitution. Farnsworth v. Sanford, 33 F. Supp. 400 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 115 F.2d 375 (5th Cir. 1940), cert. denied, 313 U.S. 586, 61 S. Ct. 1109, 85 L. Ed. 1541 (1941).

Under facts, case not one “affecting” foreign ministers. — Because two Japanese officials named in an indictment were not prosecuted, nor their persons in any manner subjected to threats, arrest, punishment, or any control whatsoever, nor their property in any manner interfered with, or attempted to be interfered with, nor were they called upon to do anything whatsoever, and their prosecution or conviction was in no way necessary to the establishment of the case against petitioner, the case against petitioner was not one “affecting” foreign ministers. Farnsworth v. Sanford, 33 F. Supp. 400 (N.D. Ga.), aff’d, 115 F.2d 375 (5th Cir. 1940), cert. denied, 313 U.S. 586, 61 S. Ct. 1109, 85 L. Ed. 1541 (1941).

Jurisdiction of trial court over case involving foreign official. — U.S. Const., art. III, sec. II, cl. 1 was not intended to deny a trial court jurisdiction, even if it should appear from the evidence that a foreign minister was involved in any manner, whether innocently or criminally and however slightly. It was meant merely to prevent any interference with the person or property of such ministers. Farnsworth v. Sanford, 33 F. Supp. 400 (N.D. Ga.), aff’d, 115 F.2d 375 (5th Cir. 1940), cert. denied, 313 U.S. 586, 61 S. Ct. 1109, 85 L. Ed. 1541 (1941).

Jurisdiction over aliens. — Under U.S. Const., art. III, sec. II, the district court had subject matter jurisdiction over a permanent resident alien residing within the district and his habeas corpus petition which alleged deprivation of liberty without due process based on the prolonged determination of his deportation proceedings. Grodzki v. Reno, 950 F. Supp. 339 (N.D. Ga. 1996).

Federal restriction of jurisdiction of state courts. — The power reserved to the states under the Constitution to provide for the determination of controversies in their courts may be restricted by federal district courts only in obedience to Congressional legislation in conformity with U.S. Const., art. III. Hughes v. District Att’y, 436 F.2d 568 (5th Cir. 1970), cert. denied, 402 U.S. 914, 91 S. Ct. 1397, 28 L. Ed. 2d 656 (1971).

Federal jurisdiction of criminal liability under state law. — The arrest by the federal courts of the processes of criminal law within the states, and the determination of questions of criminal liability under state law by a federal court of equity, are to be supported only on a showing of danger of irreparable injury both great and immediate. Hughes v. District Att’y, 436 F.2d 568 (5th Cir. 1970), cert. denied, 402 U.S. 914, 91 S. Ct. 1397, 28 L. Ed. 2d 656 (1971).

In diversity case, federal court must be sensitive to doctrinal trends of state law, and the policies which inform the prior adjudications by the state courts. Timms v. Verson Allsteel Press Co., 520 F. Supp. 1147 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Jurisdiction to issue writ of attachment against businesses aboard vessel. — A federal court had the authority, under its inherent power to apply traditional maritime law, to issue a writ of attachment against bankers and stores located aboard a vessel; it did not have to rely on any grant of authority under Rule B(1), Supplemental Admiralty and Maritime Claim Rules, governing attachments. Schiffahrtsgesellschaft Leonhardt & Co. v. A. Bottacchi S.A. de Navegacion, 773 F.2d 1528 (11th Cir. 1985).

Preliminary services contract outside admiralty jurisdiction. — If the subject matter of an agency agreement deals with preliminary services, that contract is not a maritime contract and is outside the admiralty jurisdiction. The fact that plaintiff in an in rem proceeding claimed a lien on a vessel for performance of those services under the Federal Maritime Lien Act did not change the character of those services or create in the district court the admiralty jurisdiction that was otherwise lacking. E.S. Binnings, Inc. v. M/V Saudi Riyadh, 815 F.2d 660 (11th Cir. 1987).

Racial discrimination cases. — In a case against university officials involving a race discrimination claim, the critical inquiry for standing purposes was whether the plaintiff’s application had actually been treated differently at some stage in the admissions process on the basis of race. If so, then the plaintiff had not competed on an equal footing with other applicants outside plaintiff’s racial classification, and standing should have been conferred regardless of whether race was ultimately a factor in the decision to reject the application. Conversely, if the plaintiff’s application was never actually treated differently because of race, then the fact that race may have been a consideration in assessing other applicants at a different stage of the process would not by itself confer standing. Wooden v. Board of Regents of Univ. Sys. of Ga., 247 F.3d 1262 (11th Cir. 2001).

Extent of Jurisdiction (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

2. Cases and Controversies

Controversy in the constitutional sense means one that is appropriate for judicial determination. A justiciable controversy is thus distinguished from a difference or dispute of a hypothetical or abstract character. There must be a concrete case admitting of an immediate and definitive determination of the legal rights of the parties in an adversary proceeding upon the facts alleged. Southern Ry. v. Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen & Enginemen, 223 F. Supp. 296 (M.D. Ga. 1962), aff'd, 324 F.2d 503 (5th Cir. 1963).

U.S. Const., art. III, sec. II, cl. 1 limits judicial power of federal courts to decision of "cases" and "controversies." The words have an iceberg quality, containing beneath their surface simplicity, submerged complexities which go to the very heart of the constitutional form of government. Embodied in the words "cases" and "controversies" are two complementary but somewhat different limitations. In part, those words limit the business of federal courts to questions presented in an adversary context and in a form historically viewed as capable of resolution through the judicial process; and in part those words define the role assigned to the judiciary in a tripartite allocation of power to assure that the federal courts will not intrude into areas committed to the other branches of government. Justiciability is the term of art employed to give expression to this dual limitation placed upon federal courts by the case and controversy doctrine. Mathews v. Massell, 356 F. Supp. 291 (N.D. Ga. 1973); Franks v. Bowman Transp. Co., 424 U.S. 747, 96 S. Ct. 1251, 47 L. Ed. 2d 444 (1976).

Case or controversy requirement in class action. — To satisfy the case or controversy requirement, there must not only be a named plaintiff who has such a case or controversy at the time the complaint is filed and at the time the class action is certified by the district court, but there must also be a live controversy at the time the Supreme Court reviews the case. The controversy may exist, however, between a named defendant and a member of the class represented by the named plaintiff, even though the claim of the named plaintiff has become moot. Franks v. Bowman Transp. Co., 424 U.S. 747, 96 S. Ct. 1251, 47 L. Ed. 2d 444 (1976).

Article III courts have jurisdiction over actual controversies; they are not permitted luxury of issuing advisory opinions. Wilson v. Zarhadnick, 534 F.2d 55 (5th Cir. 1976).

Actual controversy must exist at stages of appellate or certiorari review, and not simply on date action is initiated. McRae v. Hogan, 576 F.2d 615 (5th Cir. 1978).

Authority to decide moot or abstract issues. — Because the judicial power conferred by Art. III depends upon the existence of cases or controversies, federal courts lack authority to decide moot questions or abstract propositions or issues that cannot affect the rights of litigants in the case before them. McRae v. Hogan, 576 F.2d 615 (5th Cir. 1978).

Mootness doctrine does not apply when challenged action is too short in duration to be fully litigated prior to its cessation or expiration, and there is a reasonable expectation that some complaining party would be subjected to the same action again. Although the power of federal courts is limited to justiciable or live controversies, a judicially carved exception to the mootness doctrine applies when a claim is capable of repetition yet evades review. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 454 F. Supp. 289 (N.D. Ga. 1978).

Existence of controversy demonstrated by showing of threats of criminal prosecution. — While the availability of declaratory relief in a federal challenge to a state criminal statute is not precluded merely because a plaintiff has not made the required showing for injunctive relief, so long as threats of prosecution are not imaginary, speculative, or chimerical, the plaintiff has demonstrated the existence of an Art. III controversy. High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 621 F.2d 135 (5th Cir. 1980), rev'd on other grounds, 673 F.2d 1225 (11th Cir. 1982).

Basic test for determining whether litigant alleges case or controversy is whether conflicting contentions of parties present real and substantial controversy between persons having adverse legal interests, a dispute that is definite and concrete. Western Bus. Sys. v. Slaton, 502 F. Supp. 746 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

There can be no case or controversy where parties seek adjudication of only political question, or merely seek advisory opinion, or where the litigation presents merely an abstract, academic, or hypothetical question, or where the question sought to be adjudicated has been mooted by subsequent developments, or where the plaintiff has no standing to maintain the action. Western Bus. Sys. v. Slaton, 502 F. Supp. 746 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Controversy must be definite and concrete, touching legal relations of parties having adverse legal interests; it must be a real and substantial controversy admitting of specific relief through a decree of a conclusive character, as distinguished from an opinion advising what the law would be upon a hypothetical statement of facts. Federal Election Comm'n v. Lance, 635 F.2d 1132 (5th Cir.), appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 453 U.S. 917, 101 S. Ct. 3151, 69 L. Ed. 2d 999 (1981).

Federal courts do not decide abstract, hypothetical, or contingent questions. This is but another way of stating the requirement for a justiciable case or controversy under U.S. Const., art. III, sec. II, cl. 1. Halder v. Standard Oil Co., 642 F.2d 107 (5th Cir. 1981).

Justiciable controversy is distinguished from dispute merely hypothetical or abstract in nature; it must be a real and substantial controversy admitting of specific relief through a decree of conclusive character, not an opinion advising what the law would be upon a hypothetical statement of facts. Halder v. Standard Oil Co., 642 F.2d 107 (5th Cir. 1981).

District courts lack jurisdiction to express legal opinions based upon hypothetical or academic facts. It is not the function of a United States District Court to sit in judgment on questions which today may readily be imagined, but may never in fact come to pass. Mere predictions of what may or may not occur cannot confer jurisdiction on a court to render an advisory opinion relating to those predictions. Halder v. Standard Oil Co., 642 F.2d 107 (5th Cir. 1981).

Establishing existence of case or controversy. — The existence of a case or controversy is established if there is "sufficient immediacy and reality" to warrant the issuance of a declaratory judgment. American Booksellers Ass'n v. McAuliffe, 533 F. Supp. 50 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Rights of parties before court must be at issue. — Article III of the Constitution conditions the exercise of federal judicial power upon the existence of a case or controversy. As a result of Article III's proscription, federal courts are without authority to decide questions which cannot affect the rights of the parties before the court. Afro-American Patrolmen's League v. City of Atlanta, 817 F.2d 719 (11th Cir. 1987).

Nature of mootness doctrine. — An action that has become moot does not present a justiciable case or controversy within the meaning of U.S. Const., art. III. A case is moot when the issues presented are no longer "live" or the parties lack a legally cognizable interest in the outcome of the litigation, such as where there is no reasonable expectation that the violation will occur again or where interim relief or events have eradicated the effects of the alleged violation. Saladin v. City of Milledgeville, 812 F.2d 687 (11th Cir. 1987).

Matters that are resolved or that have come to an end during litigation in a United States court, cease to be part of the "case" or "controversy" and become moot — unless such matters are "capable of repetition, yet evading review." Saladin v. City of Milledgeville, 630 F. Supp. 344 (M.D. Ga. 1986), rev'd on other grounds, 812 F.2d 687 (11th Cir. 1987), appeal dismissed after remand, 804 F. Supp. 1547 (M.D. Ga. 1992).

Capable of repetition, yet evading review exception to mootness doctrine. — Because the duration of a preliminary order reinstating an employee under § 405 of the Surface Transportation Act of 1982, 42 U.S.C. App. § 2305, was too short for the employer's challenge to be fully litigated, yet it could reasonably be expected that the employer would be subjected to similar preliminary orders in the future, the controversy between the employer and the Secretary of Labor as to the constitutional adequacy of the secretary's procedures prior to the issuance of the preliminary reinstatement order fell within the "capable of repetition, yet evading review" exception to the mootness doctrine. Brock v. Roadway Express, Inc., 481 U.S. 252, 107 S. Ct. 1740, 95 L. Ed. 2d 239 (1987).

Extent of Jurisdiction (Cont'd)2. Cases and Controversies (Cont'd)

The federal court may exercise jurisdiction in cases if the conduct complained of is capable of repetition, yet evading review. Chris C. v. Gwinnett County Sch. Dist., 780 F. Supp. 804 (N.D. Ga. 1991), aff'd, 968 F.2d 25 (11th Cir. 1992).

Demonstration of direct injury. — A plaintiff's request for injunctive relief fails to satisfy this section's "case or controversy" requirement if the plaintiff does not demonstrate that the plaintiff has sustained or is immediately in danger of sustaining some direct injury. McQuirter v. City of Atlanta, 572 F. Supp. 1401 (N.D. Ga. 1983), appeal dismissed, 724 F.2d 881 (11th Cir. 1984).

Unconstitutional statute interfering with plaintiff's normal conduct. — An anticipatory attack is appropriate if the allegedly unconstitutional statute interferes with the way the plaintiff would normally conduct one's affairs. American Booksellers Ass'n v. McAuliffe, 533 F. Supp. 50 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Suit brought by juror in state court murder trial against the presiding judge, claiming that the judge violated constitutional rights by singling the juror out in open court, after the verdict, as the only juror to vote against the death penalty and by commenting about the juror in a published interview, and seeking declaratory relief, failed to satisfy the threshold "case or controversy" requirement, no allegation being made that such conduct by the judge would be continued. Emory v. Peeler, 756 F.2d 1547 (11th Cir. 1985).

Temporary restraining order where obscenity statute not in issue. — Because there was no state obscenity enforcement action concerning a particular issue of a magazine, and because the complaint of the magazine's publisher sought no ultimate relief, by way of either injunction or declaration, but only a temporary restraining order, there was no "case or controversy" to authorize federal court jurisdiction. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. Webb, 594 F. Supp. 1186 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Plaintiffs demonstrated existence of requisite "case or controversy". — See American Booksellers Ass'n v. Webb, 590 F. Supp. 677 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Dispute over ownership and possession of documents which the FBI had provided to a city satisfied the requirement of a case or controversy, even though plaintiff federal government and city defendants had both previously sought to prevent dissemination of the documents. United States v. Napper, 694 F. Supp. 897 (N.D. Ga. 1988), aff'd, 887 F.2d 1528 (11th Cir. 1989).

Claims for reinstatement and front pay were moot because claimant had already had former job reinstated and reinstatement and front pay are alternative, rather than cumulative, remedies. Morris v. Roche, 182 F. Supp. 2d 1260 (M.D. Ga. 2002).

3. Standing and Ripeness

Essence of standing questions. — As part of the case or controversy requirement, a litigant must have "standing" before he may bring a lawsuit in federal court. The essence of a standing question is whether the plaintiff has alleged such a personal stake in the outcome of the controversy as to assure that concrete adverseness which sharpens the presentation of issues upon which the court so largely depends for the illumination of difficult constitutional questions. Saladin v. City of Milledgeville, 812 F.2d 687 (11th Cir. 1987).

Ripeness doctrine involves both jurisdictional limitations imposed by U.S. Const., art. III's requirement of a case of controversy and prudential considerations arising from problems of prematurity and abstractness that may present insurmountable obstacles to the exercise of the court's jurisdiction, even though jurisdiction is technically present. Johnson v. Sikes, 730 F.2d 644 (11th Cir. 1984).

Standing to attack tax statute. — A taxpayer who is not affected and thus not harmed by an alleged deficiency in a tax statute is not in a position to attack its constitutionality on the ground that such effect is unconstitutional. Lott Inv. Corp. v. Gerbing, 242 Ga. 90, 249 S.E.2d 561 (1978).

One to whom application of a statute is constitutional will not be heard to attack statute on the ground that impliedly it might also be taken as applying to other persons or other situations in which its application might be unconstitutional. Lott Inv. Corp. v. Gerbing, 242 Ga. 90, 249 S.E.2d 561 (1978).

One who would strike down state statute as violative of federal Constitution must show that the person is within class of persons with respect to whom the Act is unconstitutional and that the alleged unconstitutional feature injures the person. Lott Inv. Corp. v. Gerbing, 242 Ga. 90, 249 S.E.2d 561 (1978).

Plaintiff who challenges a state practice must demonstrate realistic danger of sustaining direct injury from its application. Western Bus. Sys. v. Slaton, 502 F. Supp. 746 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Important factor in considering ripeness is whether the tendered issue involves uncertain and contingent future events that may not occur as anticipated, or indeed may not occur at all. Federal Election Comm'n v. Lance, 635 F.2d 1132 (5th Cir.), appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 453 U.S. 917, 101 S. Ct. 3151, 69 L. Ed. 2d 999 (1981).

Standing under establishment clause. — As to scope of the establishment clause of the first amendment and ability to demonstrate Article III standing thereunder, see American Civil Liberties Union v. Rabun County Chamber of Commerce, Inc., 678 F.2d 1379 (11th Cir. 1982), aff'd on reh'g, 698 F.2d 1098 (11th Cir. 1983).

Standing to attack campaign finance system. — Individual citizens eligible to vote in Georgia elections, former and future candidates for state office, and organizations whose members are citizens eligible to vote in Georgia elections lacked standing to seek a declaratory judgment stating that the state campaign finance system violates their rights under the United States and Georgia Constitutions. Georgia State Conference of NAACP Branches v. Cox, 183 F.3d 1263 (11th Cir. 1999).

Standing to seek injunctive relief against city and police. — The plaintiff in a federal civil rights action had no standing to seek injunctive relief against a city and its police officers respecting certain allegedly unconstitutional practices, because the plaintiff failed to show that the plaintiff would have another encounter with the police and would again be subjected to unconstitutional treatment. Lambert v. McFarland, 612 F. Supp. 1252 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Standing to challenge government-sponsored religious statements. — City residents and taxpayers had standing to challenge the display of a city seal used both on city stationery and to emboss official documents, since a non-economic injury which results from a party's being subjected to unwelcome religious statements can support a standing claim. Saladin v. City of Milledgeville, 812 F.2d 687 (11th Cir. 1987).

Standing to contest forfeiture. — In order to contest a forfeiture, a claimant must first demonstrate a sufficient interest in the property to give the claimant Article III standing; otherwise, there is no "case or controversy," in the constitutional sense, capable of adjudication in the federal courts. United States v. $38,000.00 in United States Currency, 816 F.2d 1538 (11th Cir. 1987).

Standing to challenge government's timber cutting policy. — In order for timber purchasers to have standing to bring an action challenging the government's timber cutting policy, they were required to meet the minimal Article III requirement of personally suffering an actual or threatened injury due to the government's allegedly illegal conduct. Their injury must have been fairly traceable to the government's actions and redressable by order of the court. Region 8 Forest Serv. Timber Purchasers Council v. Alcock, 736 F. Supp. 267 (N.D. Ga. 1990), aff'd in part and vacated in part on other grounds, 993 F.2d 800 (11th Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1040, 114 S. Ct. 683, 126 L. Ed. 2d 651 (1994).

Standing to contest constitutionality of statutory penalty. — Defendant who was sentenced to less than the maximum penalty provided by the sodomy statute lacked standing to contest whether such maximum penalty constitutes cruel and unusual punishment. King v. State, 265 Ga. 440, 458 S.E.2d 98 (1995).

Internal Revenue Service regulations. — Institute that certifies those who offer tax service to the public failed in its attempt to enjoin the Internal Revenue Service from enforcement of a directive prohibiting the use of the term "certified" by an individual who practices as an "enrolled agent" for the Internal Revenue Service; the institute failed to establish that the directive placed an unconstitutional burden on its first amendment rights in that it did not show any instance of threatened enforcement action by the Internal Revenue Service and did not show a concrete factual situation sufficient to establish a case in controversy. Institute of Certified Practitioners, Inc. v. Bentsen, 874 F. Supp. 1370 (N.D. Ga. 1994).

Extent of Jurisdiction (Cont'd)3. Standing and Ripeness (Cont'd)

Standing to challenge prison policy. — An inmate does not have standing to assert the first amendment rights of prison guards relative to a prison policy prohibiting its employees from communicating directly with the parole board on behalf of prisoners. Harris v. Evans, 20 F.3d 1118 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1045, 115 S. Ct. 641, 130 L. Ed. 2d 546 (1994).

Teacher had standing to challenge Moment of Quiet Reflection Act. — Plaintiff's status as a teacher, the plaintiff's objection to implementing the moment of silence in the classroom, and the plaintiff's subsequent suspension and termination were sufficient to afford standing to challenge the Moment of Quiet Reflection in Schools Act. Bown v. Gwinnett County Sch. Dist., 895 F. Supp. 1564 (N.D. Ga. 1995), aff'd, 112 F.3d 1464 (11th Cir. 1997).

Bailee of currency may challenge forfeiture. — The bailee of an amount of currency, who was in constructive possession of the currency when it was seized, had Article III standing to contest forfeiture of the currency. United States v. $38,000.00 in United States Currency, 816 F.2d 1538 (11th Cir. 1987).

Uninjured plaintiff lacks standing in antitrust action. — Plaintiff, a generator of electricity, had no standing to sue under the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15, for alleged antitrust violations resulting from wholesale power sales contract requiring members of wholesaler to purchase all power therefrom, because plaintiff suffered no injuries. Greensboro Lumber Co. v. Georgia Power Co., 643 F. Supp. 1345 (N.D. Ga. 1986), aff'd, 844 F.2d 1538 (11th Cir. 1988).

Conversion of bankruptcy proceeding. — There was no case or controversy, and thus no federal jurisdiction, because debtor rendered moot Chapter 7 discharge by converting the bankruptcy proceeding to Chapter 13, and because the possibility of debtor's reconversion to Chapter 7 was not ripe for adjudication. Mann v. Hahn, 167 Bankr. 693 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1994).

Summary judgment. — Once it is determined that some of the plaintiffs have standing, standing exists for purposes of determining that a case or controversy is before the court under Article Three of the Constitution, but if it is clear that a plaintiff is without standing to maintain the action, summary judgment in favor of defendant on this ground is appropriate. International Ass'n of Firefighters, Local 349 v. City of Rome, 682 F. Supp. 522 (N.D. Ga. 1988).

Standing in bankruptcy proceeding. — Though corporation holding second security deed on debtor's property lacked standing to recover under Bankruptcy Code, 11 U.S.C. § 362(h), corporation did have standing to seek other relief, including actions to initiate contempt proceedings or to seek declaration that defendant's foreclosure was void, in action against defendant, who held first priority security deed and whose advertising of property for foreclosure violated automatic stay. Barnett Bank v. Trust Co. Bank (In re Ring), 178 Bankr. 570 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1995).

Standing to assert violation of "one person, one vote" rule. — In an action against the state, its state legislative bodies, the Fulton County House and Senate delegations, other unspecified local legislative delegations, the Governor, the Lieutenant Governor, the Speaker of the House, and other state government officials alleging that the method by which the Georgia General Assembly enacted "local legislation" violated the principle of "one person, one vote," the plaintiffs, who were residents of and registered voters in unincorporated Fulton County, had standing on the basis of their entitlement to full and equal representation without invidious discrimination. DeJulio v. Georgia, 127 F. Supp. 2d 1274 (N.D. Ga. 2001).

State flag. — African-American citizen's argument that the state flag, incorporating the stars and bars of the Confederate flag, compelled the citizen to be the courier of an ideological message that the citizen found morally objectionable failed because the flag on its face did not promulgate a sufficiently clear message of discrimination and because the record contained no evidence that the citizen was forced to acknowledge the flag in any way. Coleman v. Miller, 885 F. Supp. 1561 (N.D. Ga. 1995), aff'd, 117 F.3d 527 (11th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1011, 118 S. Ct. 1199, 140 L. Ed. 2d 328 (1998).

Standing not found. — In order to satisfy Article III's case or controversy requirement, a party must have standing to bring a case. Since the injury that plaintiffs allege, namely the monies lost as a result of the failure to perfect the security interest, is too hypothetical to constitute injury in fact, the plaintiffs lacked standing to bring a motion for class certification in their suit against the U.S. Bank. U.S. Bank's suit against other banking institutions may have the effect of recouping all funds lost as a result of the failure to perfect, thereby nullifying any injury that U.S. Bank's actions would have had on the bondholders. As the outcome of an existing suit could effectively eliminate any injury suffered by the bondholders, plaintiffs have failed to adequately demonstrate that they suffered actual, as opposed to conjectural or hypothetical, injury in fact. In re S. Fulton Hosp. Certificate Holder Litig., F. Supp. 2d , 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25567 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 28, 2003).

4. Pendent Jurisdiction

Federal district courts may decline jurisdiction of state claim if goals of judicial economy and convenience and fairness to litigants would not be furthered. Davis v. Griffin-Spalding County Bd. of Educ., 445 F. Supp. 1048 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Requirements for pendent jurisdiction. — If a federal claim has substance sufficient to confer subject matter jurisdiction on the court, and both the state and federal claims derive from a common nucleus of operative fact, but where, if considered without regard to their federal or state character, a plaintiff's claims are such that the plaintiff would ordinarily be expected to try them all in one judicial proceeding, then, assuming substantiality of the federal issues, there is power in federal courts to hear the whole. Davis v. Griffin-Spalding County Bd. of Educ., 445 F. Supp. 1048 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Pendent jurisdiction, in the sense of judicial power, exists whenever there is a claim arising under the Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority, and the relationship between that claim and the state claim permits the conclusion that the entire action before the court comprises but one constitutional case. Pope v. City of Atlanta, 240 Ga. 177, 240 S.E.2d 241 (1977), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 936, 99 S. Ct. 1281, 59 L. Ed. 2d 494 (1979).

Pendent jurisdiction relates to issues of which federal court would not have jurisdiction if raised independently of federal claim. Bailey v. Wilkes, 162 Ga. App. 410, 291 S.E.2d 418 (1982).

If federal court would have refrained from or been precluded from exercising pendent jurisdiction over state claims, then subsequent suit in state court would not be barred by res judicata. Bailey v. Wilkes, 162 Ga. App. 410, 291 S.E.2d 418 (1982).

Limitations on federal court jurisdiction. — Because federal courts are courts of limited jurisdiction, due regard for the constitutional allocation of powers between the state and federal systems requires a federal court scrupulously to confine itself to the jurisdiction conferred on it by Congress and permitted by the Constitution. In re Carter, 618 F.2d 1093 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 949, 101 S. Ct. 1410, 67 L. Ed. 2d 378 (1981).

Federal court has pendent jurisdiction over state claim not otherwise cognizable in that tribunal if and only if it has jurisdiction over the federal claim. Bailey v. Wilkes, 162 Ga. App. 410, 291 S.E.2d 418 (1982).

Lack of subject matter jurisdiction over state case. — Even after entry of final judgment, the constitutional balance of policies that underlies the Art. III grant of judicial power impels the vacation of that judgment and remand to the state court having jurisdiction when it is determined that the federal court was without power to act because of a lack of subject matter jurisdiction over a removed case. In re Carter, 618 F.2d 1093 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 949, 101 S. Ct. 1410, 67 L. Ed. 2d 378 (1981).

There are three factors for a federal district court to consider in deciding whether or not to abstain: (1) whether the disposition of a question of state law involved in the case can eliminate or narrow the scope of the federal constitutional issue; (2) whether the state law question presents difficult, obscure, or unclear issues of state law; and (3) whether a federal decision could later conflict with subsequent state court resolutions concerning the same regulatory program or scheme, thus engendering more confusion. High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 621 F.2d 135 (5th Cir. 1980).

Effect of dismissal of federal claim. — Because the federal court dismissed appellant's federal claim, there was nothing from which it could be urged that appellant's state claim would have been pendent. There otherwise being no federal jurisdiction, the federal court would not have been a competent tribunal to hear appellant's state claims. Bailey v. Wilkes, 162 Ga. App. 410, 291 S.E.2d 418 (1982).

Extent of Jurisdiction (Cont'd)
4. Pendent Jurisdiction (Cont'd)

Supreme Court Jurisdiction

Jurisdiction of Supreme Court over cases involving ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls is not exclusive. The words of the Constitution do not make the original jurisdiction of the Supreme Court exclusive, and they leave Congress free, not to infringe upon the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, but to give concurrent jurisdiction to the lower courts. Farnsworth v. Sanford, 115 F.2d 375 (5th Cir. 1940), cert. denied, 313 U.S. 586, 61 S. Ct. 1109, 85 L. Ed. 1541 (1941).

Validity of concurrent jurisdiction of district court. — In a case in which a former attache to an embassy was tried and convicted for conspiracy under the Espionage Act, 50 U.S.C. § 31 et seq. (repealed by 62 Stat. 862, effective Sept. 1, 1948), there was no unconstitutional intrusion on the original jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, and exercise of jurisdiction by a district court, which had concurrent jurisdiction by the terms of an Act of Congress, was valid. Farnsworth v. Sanford, 115 F.2d 375 (5th Cir. 1940), cert. denied, 313 U.S. 586, 61 S. Ct. 1109, 85 L. Ed. 1541 (1941).

Judicial status of former attache. — An attache to an embassy is a public minister, but only so long as the attache is attached to the embassy. When the attache ceases to be attached and returns to the attache's own country, the attache is no longer entitled to diplomatic immunity and a case against the attache afterwards instituted does not affect an ambassador or minister within the meaning of the Constitution. Farnsworth v. Sanford, 115 F.2d 375 (5th Cir. 1940), cert. denied, 313 U.S. 586, 61 S. Ct. 1109, 85 L. Ed. 1541 (1941).

Original habeas petitions. — The federal Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996 does not deprive the Supreme Court of jurisdiction to entertain original habeas petitions. Felker v. Turpin, 518 U.S. 651, 116 S. Ct. 2333, 135 L. Ed. 2d 827 (1996).

Trial by Jury

There is nothing in Constitution of United States requiring states to provide jury of 12 in trial of criminal cases, though the Constitution does require the federal courts to have that number. Trial by jury in a federal court means a trial by jury as understood and applied at common law, and includes all the essential elements as they were recognized in this country and in England when the Constitution was adopted. Among those elements was a jury composed of 12 persons, neither more nor less. Coates v. Lawrence, 46 F. Supp. 414 (S.D. Ga. 1942), aff'd, 131 F.2d 110 (5th Cir. 1942), cert. denied, 318 U.S. 759, 63 S. Ct. 532, 87 L. Ed. 1132 (1943).

No freedoms, including freedoms of speech and press, are absolute, and liberty of press is subordinate to independence of judiciary and the proper administration of justice. The latter is necessarily true, for only in the courts can freedom of the press and other constitutional rights be preserved. The freedom of the press in itself presupposes an independent judiciary through which that freedom may, if necessary, be vindicated. Atlanta Newspapers, Inc. v. State, 216 Ga. 399, 116 S.E.2d 580 (1960).

Press should be given widest latitude possible in exercise of its freedom that is consonant with orderly administration of justice, trial by a fair and impartial jury, and the freedom and independence of the courts in the exercise of their constitutional rights and duties. Atlanta Newspapers, Inc. v. State, 216 Ga. 399, 116 S.E.2d 580 (1960).

Press interference with trial of criminal case by impartial jury. — A responsible press, appreciating as it must the great power of the press in a democratic society, should refrain from publishing and distributing news articles which, in the normal course of events would, or which it could reasonably anticipate would, interfere with the trial of a criminal case by an impartial jury; and to do so may subject it to punishment for contempt of court. Atlanta Newspapers, Inc. v. State, 216 Ga. 399, 116 S.E.2d 580 (1960).

Defendant newspaper corporation would not be required to have reasonably anticipated that publication and distribution of articles regarding defendant would have come to the attention of the jurors or have interfered with the trial of the case by an impartial jury; for they had a right to expect that the jury would have been kept together until the conclusion of the trial or otherwise properly instructed upon being permitted to disperse. Atlanta Newspapers, Inc. v. State, 216 Ga. 399, 116 S.E.2d 580 (1960).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Right to jury trial in case of seizure of property alleged to be illegally used, 17 ALR 568; 50 ALR 97.

Power of the state to create and enforce liens on ships for a nonmaritime tort, 20 ALR 1095.

Workmen's Compensation Act: applicability of state compensation Act to injury within admiralty jurisdiction, 25 ALR 1029; 31 ALR 518; 56 ALR 352.

Alienage of party as affecting right of removal of suit on ground of diverse citizenship, 49 ALR 1226.

Right to jury trial in will contest, 62 ALR 82.

Jurisdiction of state courts of actions in relation to interstate shipments, 64 ALR 333.

Nature and extent of review upon appeal of causes in admiralty, 103 ALR 775.

Waiver of right to jury trial as operative after expiration of term during which it was made, or as regards subsequent trial, 106 ALR 203.

Right of user of gasoline or other commodity to question validity of a statute or ordinance imposing a tax upon dealer, 125 ALR 734.

Citizenship of executor or administrator as test of diversity of citizenship for purposes of jurisdiction of federal court, 136 ALR 938.

Right of defendant to waive right of trial by jury where he is not represented by counsel, 143 ALR 445.

What actions arise under Constitution, laws, and treaties of United States; general principles, 12 ALR2d 5.

May federal court, acquiring jurisdiction because of federal question but deciding such question adversely to party invoking jurisdiction, decide non-federal questions, 12 ALR2d 695.

Federal diversity of citizenship jurisdiction where one of the states in which multistate corporation party litigant is alleged to be incorporated is also state of citizenship of opponent, 27 ALR2d 745.

Mandamus or prohibition as remedy to enforce right to jury trial, 41 ALR2d 780.

Withdrawal of waiver of right to jury trial in criminal case, 46 ALR2d 919.

Anticipatory relief in federal courts against state criminal prosecutions growing out of civil rights activities, 8 ALR3d 301.

Modern status of the rules as to immunity of foreign sovereign from suit in federal or state courts, 25 ALR3d 322.

Choice of law in actions arising from airplane crash in territorial waters of state, 39 ALR3d 196.

Validity and efficacy of accused's waiver of unanimous verdict, 97 ALR3d 1253.

Waiver after not guilty plea, of trial in felony cases, 9 ALR4th 695.

Paternity proceedings: right to jury trial, 51 ALR4th 565.

What is "a separate and independent claim or cause of action" within 28 USCS § 1441(c) which permits nonresident codefendant to remove case from state to federal court, 58 ALR Fed. 458.

Methods other than arrest of vessel for obtaining an rem jurisdiction in admiralty, 95 ALR Fed. 225.

Admiralty jurisdiction over contracts for services in connection with off-shore drilling operations, 114 ALR Fed. 623.

Section 3.

[Treason, Proof and Punishment]

Treason against the United States, shall consist only in levying War against them, or in adhering to their Enemies, giving them Aid and Comfort. No Person shall be convicted of Treason unless on the Testimony of two Witnesses to the same overt Act, or on Confession in open Court.

The Congress shall have Power to declare the Punishment of Treason, but no Attainder of Treason shall work Corruption of Blood, or Forfeiture except during the Life of the Person attained.

Cross references. — Georgia law against treason, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIX and § 16-11-1. Georgia law proscribing the corruption of blood or forfeiture of estate by virtue of a conviction, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XX.

Law reviews. — For article, "Problems in Search of Principles: The First Amendment in the Supreme Court from 1791-1930," see 35 Emory L.J. 59 (1986).

For comment, "Private Citizens in Foreign Affairs: A Constitutional Analysis," see 36 Emory L.J. 285 (1987).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Civil effects of sentence to life imprisonment, 139 ALR 1308.

ARTICLE IV.

Section 1.

[Faith and Credit among States]

Full Faith and Credit shall be given in each State to the public Acts, Records, and judicial Proceedings of every other State. And the Congress may by general Laws prescribe the Manner in which such Acts, Records and Proceedings shall be proved, and the Effect thereof.

Cross references. — Full faith and credit given to acts and proceedings of another state generally, § 1-3-9. Qualified credit given where alimony is in issue, §§ 19-6-26, 19-6-27. Full faith and credit to orders of other states pursuant to Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act, § 19-9-93. Manner of proving Acts and proceedings of another state, § 24-7-24.

Law reviews. — For article, "Some Constitutional Problems and the Conflict of Laws and Statutes of Limitation," see 7 J. of Pub. L. 120 (1958). For article discussing convergence of standards governing limits of state's personal jurisdiction and applicability of state substantive law, see 9 J. of Pub. L. 282 (1960). For article, "The Length of the Long Arm," see 9 J. of Pub. L. 293 (1960). For survey article on domestic relations, see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 113 (1982). For article discussing full faith and credit and federalism in choice of law questions, see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 709 (1983). For article proposing an issue-by-issue analysis for resolution of choice of law questions, see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 731 (1983). For article, "Enforcing the Full Faith and Credit Clause: Congress Legislates Finality for Child Custody Decrees," see 1 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 157 (1985). For article, "Child Custody — Jurisdiction and Procedure," see 35 Emory L.J. 291 (1986). For annual survey of law of domestic relations, see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 179 (1986). For article, "Ideology, Religion, and the Constitutional Protection of Private Property: 1760-1860," see 39 Emory L.J. 65 (1990). For annual eleventh circuit survey of constitutional law — civil, see 43 Mercer L. Rev. 1075 (1992). For article, "Negotiating Tribal-State Full Faith and Credit Agreements: The Topology of the Negotiation and the Merits of the Question," see 28 Ga. L. Rev. 365 (1994).

For note, "Interstitial Lawmaking: Uniformity or Conformity?," see 32 Mercer L. Rev. 1235 (1981).

For comment on Cooledge v. Casey, 58 Ga. App. 134, 198 S.E. 96 (1938), see 1 Ga. B.J. 47 (1939). For comment discussing impact of full faith and credit clause upon divorce decrees, in light of Williams v. North Carolina, 317 U.S. 287, 63 S. Ct. 207, 87 L. Ed. 279, 143 ALR 1273 (1942), see 5 Ga. B.J. 42 (1943). For comment regarding impact of full faith and credit clause upon divorce decrees, in light of Williams v. North Carolina, 317 U.S. 287, 63 S. Ct. 207, 87 L. Ed. 279 (1942), see 8 Ga. B.J. 228 (1945). For comment on United Commercial Travelers v. Wolfe, 331 U.S. 586, 67 S. Ct. 1355, 91 L. Ed. 1687 (1947), holding full faith and credit clause requires forum state to give effect to statute of limitations provision of fraternal benefit society, see 10 Ga. B.J. 378 (1948). For comment on Azar v. Thomas, 206 Ga. 588, 57 S.E.2d 821 (1950), holding foreign decree of divorce may be collaterally attacked on grounds of fraud in its procurement and lack of jurisdiction, see 13 Ga. B.J. 334 (1951). For comment on Grandville-Smith v. Grandville-Smith, 349 U.S. 1, 75 S. Ct. 553, 99 L. Ed. 773 (1955), analyzing due process aspects of divorce jurisdiction statutes and full faith and credit problems with divorce decrees, see 4 J. of Pub. L. 206 (1955). For comment on Watson v. Employer's Liab. Assurance Corp., 348 U.S. 66, 75 S. Ct. 166, 99 L. Ed. 74 (1954), holding that statute allowing direct action by policy holder against insurer contrary to terms of the contract and requiring consent of the insurer to such action as a prerequisite of doing business in the state was not violative of the Constitution, see 17 Ga. B.J. 529 (1955). For comment on Tobin v. Tobin, 93 Ga. App. 568, 92 S.E.2d 304 (1956), holding that it is no defense to an alimony judgment in a divisible divorce that one party obtained the divorce subsequent to the judgment, see 20 Ga. B.J. 118 (1957). For comment on McGee v. International Life Ins. Co., 355 U.S. 220, 78 S. Ct. 199, 2 L. Ed. 2d 223 (1957), holding that for a state to assert jurisdiction over a foreign insurance company it is sufficient for due process purposes if the contract has a substantial connection with that state, see 21 Ga. B.J. 113 (1958). For comment concerning full faith and credit ramifications of alimony decrees, in light of Connell v. Connell, 119 Ga. App. 485, 167 S.E.2d 686 (1969), see 18 J. of Pub. L. 517 (1969). For comment on Connell v. Connell, 119 Ga. App. 485, 167 S.E.2d 686 (1969), as to enforcement of a foreign modification of a Georgia child support decree, see 21 Mercer L. Rev. 675 (1970). For comment on Whitaker v. Whitaker, 237 Ga. 895, 230 S.E.2d 486 (1976), see 11 Ga. L. Rev. 683 (1977). For comment discussing extension of the minimum contacts concept to personal jurisdiction in divorce litigation in light of Whitaker v. Whitaker, 237 Ga. 895, 230 S.E.2d 486 (1976), see 29 Mercer L. Rev. 341 (1977).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS

1. JURISDICTION
2. CHOICE OF LAW
3. JUDGMENTS GENERALLY
4. DIVORCE AND ALIMONY
5. CUSTODY AND SUPPORT OF CHILDREN

General Consideration

Full faith and credit provision is a rule of evidence rather than of jurisdiction. FTC v. American Legal Distribs., Inc., 739 F. Supp. 1535 (N.D. Ga. 1990); United States Fid. &

Guar. Co. v. Lawson, 15 F. Supp. 116 (S.D. Ga. 1936).

Full faith and credit provision is not an inexorable and unqualified command. It leaves some scope for state control within its borders of affairs which are peculiarly its own. There are limits to the extent to which the laws and policy of one state may be subordinated to those of another. Pink v. A.A.A. Hwy. Express, Inc., 314 U.S. 201, 62 S. Ct. 241, 86 L. Ed. 152 (1941).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

United States courts must give full faith and credit to judgments of state courts. Nicolson v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 50 F. Supp. 92 (S.D. Ga. 1943).

Full faith and credit clause is not binding on federal courts. FTC v. American Legal Distribs., Inc., 739 F. Supp. 1535 (N.D. Ga. 1990).

Full faith and credit clause applies only to state records and proceedings. Edmonds v. State, 201 Ga. 108, 39 S.E.2d 24 (1946).

State courts are bound to follow decisions of Supreme Court regarding what limitations upon full faith and credit clause of the United States Constitution are permissible. Woody v. Woody, 91 Ga. App. 806, 87 S.E.2d 222 (1955).

Power of Congress to prescribe state rules of evidence. — Aside from the full faith and credit clause of the Constitution, Congress would have no power to prescribe rules of evidence for state courts. Edmonds v. State, 201 Ga. 108, 39 S.E.2d 24 (1946).

Full faith and credit clause does not apply to judgments of foreign countries. Cocke v. Truslow, 91 Ga. App. 645, 86 S.E.2d 686 (1955).

Application only to judgments obtained within courts of the United States. — Comity alone could authorize recognition of a Mexican divorce. The general comity rule is that in a proper case the laws and judicial proceedings of one state will be enforced in another state, provided they do not involve anything immoral, contrary to public policy, or violative of the conscience of the state called upon to give them effect. It is fundamental that comity will not be applied where a divorce is obtained in a foreign state under circumstances which offend the public policy of this state as found in its Constitution and statutes and the decisions of its courts. Christopher v. Christopher, 198 Ga. 361, 31 S.E.2d 818 (1944).

English court decree accorded conclusive effect. — A decree of an English court of chancery, rendered when both parties were citizens of that realm, which adjudges that the defendant therein is liable to the plaintiff in a given sum of money, no question being raised as to the court having jurisdiction of the subject matter or of the parties, and there being no suggestion of fraud in its rendition, will be given conclusive effect by the courts of this state. Coulborn v. Joseph, 195 Ga. 723, 25 S.E.2d 576 (1943).

Full faith and credit will be accorded a foreign decree only when properly proved. Benefield v. Harris, 143 Ga. App. 709, 240 S.E.2d 119 (1977).

Manner of proving foreign judgments limited by federal statute. — A state cannot by merely failing or refusing to amend its code place greater restrictions upon a party seeking to rely on a foreign judgment than are imposed by the procedure enacted by Congress pursuant to the full faith and credit clause of the United States Constitution. Peebles v. Peebles, 103 Ga. App. 462, 119 S.E.2d 710 (1961).

Copy of foreign judgment only required in action based thereon. — To maintain an action based on judgment from another state, it is not necessary to show an authenticated copy of the record of the entire divorce and alimony proceedings; but a prima facie case is made by pleading and proving a properly authenticated copy of the judgment itself. Creaden v. Krogh, 75 Ga. App. 675, 44 S.E.2d 136 (1947).

Certification of copy of foreign judgment by associate judge sufficient. — A copy of the judgment of a court of a sister state attested by the clerk of such court with a certificate by one of the judges of the court that such attestation is in due form is sufficient to authorize its admission in evidence even though the judge signing the certificate was not the chief or presiding judge of such court. Peebles v. Peebles, 103 Ga. App. 462, 119 S.E.2d 710 (1961).

Full faith and credit clause does not compel state to adopt any particular set of rules of conflict of laws; it merely sets certain minimum requirements which each state must observe when asked to apply the law of a sister state. Crider v. Zurich Ins. Co., 380 U.S. 39, 85 S. Ct. 769, 13 L. Ed. 2d 641 (1965).

Mandatory judicial recognition of laws and legal proceedings of sister states. — The courts of this state must judicially recognize the laws of the several states, as published by authority, without proof, and properly authenticated judicial proceedings of a sister state are entitled to the same full faith and credit as they have by law or usage in the courts of the state from which they are taken. Kelly v. Kelly, 115 Ga. App. 700, 155 S.E.2d 732 (1967).

Foreign judgment entitled to same effect as foreign jurisdiction gives it. — Lawfully obtained judgments of the court of one state, when sued on or pleaded or introduced in evidence in another state are entitled to receive the same full faith, credit, and respect that they are accorded in the state where rendered. Earley v. Earley, 165 Ga. App. 483, 300 S.E.2d 814 (1983).

Foreign judgment subject to attack for lack of jurisdiction or fraud only. — Under the full faith and credit clause of the United States Constitution a judgment of a foreign court will be enforced by the courts of this state unless it is shown that the foreign court lacked jurisdiction of the person or subject matter or that the judgment was procured by fraud. Earley v. Earley, 165 Ga. App. 483, 300 S.E.2d 814 (1983).

Ex parte application for letters of administration. — Georgia court was not required to give full faith and credit to any findings or presumptions made by a New Jersey court on the issue of domicile in a proceeding which amounted to no more than an ex parte application for letters of administration of an estate. Wilson v. Willard, 183 Ga. App. 204, 358 S.E.2d 859 (1987).

Contractual provision that is not valid where made does not become part of the contract between the parties. GECC v. Home Indem. Co., 168 Ga. App. 344, 309 S.E.2d 152 (1983).

Conviction not precluded based on notice. — While out of state convictions must be given the same faith and credit to which they are entitled in the state where they are rendered, the full faith and credit clause does not prevent Georgia from according felony status in Georgia to out-of-state misdemeanor criminal convictions in those instances where the Georgia statute provides sufficient notice to persons of ordinary intelligence than any out-of-state misdemeanor convictions that meet the specified statutory requirements will be deemed the equivalent of a felony conviction in Georgia. Thus, since the defendant was charged with being a convicted felon in possession of a firearm, contrary to O.C.G.A. § 16-11-131, based on a misdemeanor involuntary manslaughter conviction in another state, for which the maximum penalty was five years imprisonment, if the statute had provided defendant adequate notice that the defendant's misdemeanor conviction could be used as a predicate for this charge, the full faith and credit clause would not have precluded the defendant's conviction. State v. Langlands, 276 Ga. 721, 583 S.E.2d 18 (2003).

Cited in Potter v. Potter, 40 Ga. App. 324, 149 S.E. 579 (1929); O'Malley v. Wilson, 182 Ga. 97, 185 S.E. 109 (1936); John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Yates, 184 Ga. 42, 190 S.E. 560 (1937); Fidelity-Phenix Fire Ins. Co. v. Cortez Cigar Co., 92 F.2d 882 (5th Cir. 1937); Foremost Dairy Prod., Inc. v. Sawyer, 185 Ga. 702, 196 S.E. 436 (1938); Drake v. Drake, 187 Ga. 423, 1 S.E.2d 573 (1939); Smith v. Globe Indem. Co., 65 Ga. App. 838, 16 S.E.2d 601 (1941); McAlhany v. Allen, 195 Ga. 150, 23 S.E.2d 676 (1942); Coulborn v. Joseph, 195 Ga. 723, 25 S.E.2d 576 (1943); Sanders v. Sanford, 138 F.2d 415 (5th Cir. 1943); Tademy v. Scott, 68 F. Supp. 556 (N.D. Ga. 1945); Jarrard v. Southeastern Shipbuilding Corp., 163 F.2d 960 (5th Cir. 1947); Graves v. Carter, 207 Ga. 308, 61 S.E.2d 282 (1950); Richards v. Richards, 85 Ga. App. 605, 69 S.E.2d 911 (1952); Hedquist v. Gottke, 209 Ga. 681, 75 S.E.2d 18 (1953); Blood v. Earnest, 217 Ga. 642, 123 S.E.2d 913 (1962); Watkins v. Conway, 221 Ga. 374, 144 S.E.2d 721 (1965); Funderburg v. Wold, 117 Ga. App. 638, 161 S.E.2d 376 (1968); Richardson v. Strickland, 225 Ga. 319, 168 S.E.2d 146 (1969); Connell v. Connell, 119 Ga. App. 485, 167 S.E.2d 686 (1969); Leathers v. Klebold, 227 Ga. 683, 182 S.E.2d 423 (1971); Showalter v. Sandlin, 229 Ga. 405, 191 S.E.2d 828 (1972); Mahler v. Paquin, 142 Ga. App. 582, 236 S.E.2d 512 (1977); Kronitz v. Fifth Ave. Dance Studio, Inc., 242 Ga. 398, 249 S.E.2d 80 (1978); Bailey v. London Marina, Inc., 151 Ga. App. 73, 258 S.E.2d 738 (1979); FDIC v. Windland Co., 245 Ga. 194, 264 S.E.2d 11 (1980); Hayes v. Hayes, 248 Ga. 526, 283 S.E.2d 875 (1981); City of Alma v. Benham, 170 Ga. App. 143, 316 S.E.2d 477 (1984); Wilson v. Mills, 172 Ga. App. 328, 323 S.E.2d 251 (1984).

Judicial Proceedings

1. Jurisdiction

Jurisdiction over members of class required for recognition of foreign judgment affecting them. — As a condition precedent for the application of the full faith and credit provision of the United States Constitution to the members of a class who may be affected by the judicial proceedings of another state, it must appear that such court had jurisdiction to bind the members of the class wherever located. Eminent Household of Columbian Woodmen v. Bryant, 62 Ga. App. 167, 8 S.E.2d 438 (1940).

Judgment of foreign court having jurisdiction controlling in other states. — This section compels that controversies be stilled so that if a state court has jurisdiction of the parties and subject matter, its judgment controls in other states to the same extent as it does in the state where rendered. Riley v. New York Trust Co., 315 U.S. 343, 62 S. Ct. 608, 86 L. Ed. 885 (1942).

Presumption favoring jurisdiction conclusive absent adverse evidence in record. — According to the common-law rule, adhered to at the present time in most states, the presumption in favor of the jurisdiction of a court of general jurisdiction is conclusive, and its judgment cannot be collaterally attacked if no want of jurisdiction is apparent of record. Creaden v. Krogh, 75 Ga. App. 675, 44 S.E.2d 136 (1947).

Decree partially invalid for want of jurisdiction. — A consent decree of a court of another state, which, in part, seeks to transfer title to realty in this state that had previously been set aside to a widowed spouse and minor children as a year's support, shows upon its face that, insofar as transferring title to realty, the court was without jurisdiction of the subject matter; and, accordingly, that part of the decree is not such a judgment as comes within the full faith and credit clause of the Constitution. King v. King, 203 Ga. 811, 48 S.E.2d 465 (1948).

For purpose of acquiring in personam jurisdiction in Georgia, the term "doing business" means engaging for profit in some practice either repeatedly or possibly with the intention that the practice be repeated and does not include the making of one contract with a nonresident. Allied Fin. Co.

v. Prosser, 103 Ga. App. 538, 119 S.E.2d 813 (1961).

U.S. Const. art. IV, sec. 1 has no application if the foreign judgment shows on its face that there was no jurisdiction of the person of the defendant, and thus shows a violation of due process. Greenfield v. Chronicle Printing Co., 107 Ga. App. 442, 130 S.E.2d 526 (1963).

Collateral attack on decree if foreign court record purports to show jurisdiction. — A decree might be collaterally attacked by proof that the court which rendered it has no jurisdiction of the parties or cause of action, even though the record of the proceedings in the foreign court purports to show jurisdiction. Logan v. Nunnally, 128 Ga. App. 43, 195 S.E.2d 659 (1973).

Burden of proof on party asserting lack of jurisdiction. — The burden is upon the party asserting the invalidity of an out-of-state decree to show that it is not binding, and the jurisdiction of the out-of-state court is to be presumed until it is proved by evidence or the record itself. Logan v. Nunnally, 128 Ga. App. 43, 195 S.E.2d 659 (1973).

Litigation of issue of jurisdiction of foreign court binding on other court. — In collateral attack on a judgment of another court respecting jurisdiction over the defendant, once it is shown that such issue was fully litigated in the original court, the judgment is binding under the full faith and credit clause. Fidelity Std. Life Ins. Co. v. First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 382 F. Supp. 956 (S.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 510 F.2d 272 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 864, 96 S. Ct. 125, 46 L. Ed. 2d 94 (1975).

Collateral attacks on foreign judgments for want of jurisdiction. — The broad and general statement that a collateral attack upon a foreign judgment for want of jurisdiction is not barred by the full faith and credit clause of the Constitution is subject to exceptions. Green Acres Dist., Inc. v. Freid & Appell, Inc., 135 Ga. App. 816, 219 S.E.2d 39 (1975).

If a party is personally served that party is subject to in personam jurisdiction of courts of a foreign state and cannot collaterally attack a judgment of such court. Green Acres Dist., Inc. v. Freid & Appell, Inc., 135 Ga. App. 816, 219 S.E.2d 39 (1975).

If the question of jurisdiction is raised in foreign court and decided adversely to a party, that party may not collaterally attack this determination. If the record reveals that the personal jurisdiction issue was raised by a defendant and decided adversely to the defendant by a court of otherwise competent jurisdiction, the judgment of that court is conclusive, is res judicata, and may not be collaterally attacked. Green Acres Dist., Inc. v. Freid & Appell, Inc., 135 Ga. App. 816, 219 S.E.2d 39 (1975).

A judgment of a foreign court will be enforced by the courts of this state. However, that judgment may be collaterally attacked where the foreign court lacked jurisdiction of the person or subject matter. Yet, if the defendant fails to appear at trial but makes a post-judgment appearance and moves to set aside the judgment, the issues raised and decided adversely to the defendant in the post-judgment hearing by a foreign court of otherwise competent jurisdiction are conclusive, res judicata, and may not be collaterally attacked in the Georgia court. International Sys. v. Bladen County, 168 Ga. App. 316, 308 S.E.2d 679 (1983).

Presumption of jurisdiction where merely dependent on existence of facts. — If the question as to the jurisdiction of the court depends merely upon the existence or non-existence of a fact, and the judgment is otherwise regular, and the court otherwise a court of competent jurisdiction, it is to be presumed that the court found facts to exist such as warranted its assuming jurisdiction, and such finding of fact cannot be collaterally attacked. Green Acres Dist., Inc. v. Freid & Appell, Inc., 135 Ga. App. 816, 219 S.E.2d 39 (1975).

On facts, jurisdictional issue not subject to collateral attack. — Because a defendant made a special appearance to contest personal jurisdiction, was fully heard, was overruled as to this objection and took no further part in the case or sought review of the adverse ruling, the judgment entered against the party on the merits was res judicata with regard to the jurisdictional issue and not subject to collateral attack on that ground when sued upon in another state. Green Acres Dist., Inc. v. Freid & Appell, Inc., 135 Ga. App. 816, 219 S.E.2d 39 (1975).

Effect of foreign statute conferring continuing jurisdiction over minor upon court granting divorce on nonresident. — The Indiana statute that confers continuing jurisdiction over the minor child upon the court that granted the divorce decree cannot confer jurisdiction on a trial court in Indiana over an out-of-state resident who does not consent to or become subject in some way to the jurisdiction of the Indiana court. Schowe v. Amster, 236 Ga. 720, 225 S.E.2d 289 (1976).

Foreign adjudications of jurisdictional issues res judicata in other courts. — The doctrine of res judicata must be applied to questions of jurisdiction in cases arising in state courts involving the application of the full faith and credit clause where, under the law of the state in which the original judgment was rendered, such adjudications are not susceptible to collateral attack. Kingdon v. Foster, 238 Ga. 37, 230 S.E.2d 855 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 916, 97 S. Ct. 2179, 53 L. Ed. 2d 226 (1977).

Personal jurisdiction of foreign court is necessary before judgment from foreign jurisdiction will be given full faith and credit. Benefield v. Harris, 143 Ga. App. 709, 240 S.E.2d 119 (1977).

Effect of section on attacking jurisdiction of foreign courts. — Neither the full faith and credit clause of the United States Constitution nor any Act of Congress passed in pursuance thereof, forbids or prevents an inquiry into the jurisdiction of the court by which the judgment offered in evidence in another state was rendered. Masters v. ESR Corp., 150 Ga. App. 658, 258 S.E.2d 224 (1979).

Judgment of foreign court lacking personal jurisdiction is not entitled to full faith and credit in the State of Georgia, inasmuch as a judgment of any court that lacks jurisdiction is void. Capital Bank v. Levy, 151 Ga. App. 819, 261 S.E.2d 722 (1979).

The Mississippi rule that a surety is bound to a judgment against its principal is entitled to no extraterritorial effect in a suit against the surety in Georgia, where the surety was not a party or privy to the Mississippi litigation involving the principal. Rouse Constr., Inc. v. Transamerica Ins. Co., 750 F.2d 1492 (11th Cir. 1985).

Sole basis for precluding collateral attack on jurisdiction of foreign court. — A collateral attack upon a petition to domesticate a foreign (sister state) judgment that it was based on lack of personal jurisdiction is precluded in this state only if the defendant has appeared in the foreign court and has thus had an opportunity to litigate the issue. Maxwell v. Columbia Realty Venture, 155 Ga. App. 289, 270 S.E.2d 704 (1980).

Judicial Proceedings (Cont'd)1. Jurisdiction (Cont'd)

In a suit brought to domesticate a Pennsylvania judgment for back taxes where the record showed that the defendant appeared, by and through counsel, and contested the Pennsylvania suit on its merits, an attack on the jurisdiction of the Pennsylvania court was without merit. Hopkins v. City of Philadelphia, 155 Ga. App. 534, 271 S.E.2d 672 (1980).

Personal jurisdiction in revival action. — Because a defendant had the requisite minimum contacts with the forum state for that state to exercise personal jurisdiction over the defendant during the original litigation, those same contacts were sufficient to provide personal jurisdiction to the trial court for any revival action concerning the judgment entered in the course of the original litigation. Kaylor v. Turner, 210 Ga. App. 2, 435 S.E.2d 233 (1993).

2. Choice of Law

In general. — A class of cases in which recognition of the law of the situs of the contract has been required comprises cases in which a right validly acquired under the law of the other state is set up by way of defense to an action in the forum, the law of which is opposed or contrary to the defensive matter. In such cases the requirement of the full faith and credit provisions is aided by the due process and contract provisions of the Constitution, to bring about recognition of foreign law, since enforcing the contract or other right stripped of the defensive provision valid under the applicable law would be making a new and different contract or creating a new right, and this would amount to a taking of property without due process of law, or in violation of the contract. Terry v. Mays, 161 Ga. App. 328, 291 S.E.2d 44 (1982).

Validity, form, and effect of contracts are to be determined generally by law of place where made. John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Yates, 299 U.S. 178, 57 S. Ct. 129, 81 L. Ed. 106 (1936).

Effect on section of prosecution for possession of whiskey bearing revenue stamps from sister state only. — The offense of possessing whiskey in Georgia not bearing the required revenue stamps is not mitigated, nor is the prosecution defeated, by the fact that the whiskey bears the revenue stamps of another state; such prosecution is not a violation of the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States or of U.S. Const., art. IV, sec. I. Herbert v. State, 60 Ga. App. 633, 4 S.E.2d 843 (1939).

Rights of contractual parties governed by statutes and decisions of state where contract made. — The rights of the parties to a contract made and to be performed in another state are controlled not only by that state's pertinent statutes but by the decisions of its appellate courts construing and applying those statutes. Motz v. Alropa Corp., 192 Ga. 176, 15 S.E.2d 237 (1941).

Nonresident policyholder subject to liabilities imposed by laws of insurance corporation's domicile. — If a resident of this state accepts a policy of insurance issued by a mutual insurance corporation of another state, by the terms of which the insured becomes a member of the corporation, the insured thereby is subject to the liabilities imposed upon its members by the laws of the domiciliary state. Gaston v. Keehn, 69 Ga. App. 500, 26 S.E.2d 107 (1943).

Giving effect to foreign statute absent compliance by plaintiff with domestic statute. — Because plaintiff knew at time of sale of automobiles to Georgia dealer that they were to be brought into Georgia, and failed to have executed either a title retention contract or a bill of sale to secure debt and to record such an instrument, either of which, under Georgia law, would have been an appropriate step to protect his interest in the automobiles, the full faith and credit clause of the United States Constitution did not require, under the circumstances, that Georgia courts give extraterritorial effect to the Florida automobile title registration law. Cook Motor Co. v. Richardson, 103 Ga. App. 129, 118 S.E.2d 502 (1961).

Extraterritorial effect of state's exclusive statutory remedy for injuries to its residents outside state. — A state can fix one exclusive remedy for personal injuries involving its residents wherever the accident happens and the full faith and credit clause requires the other states to refuse to enforce any inconsistent remedy. Crider v. Zurich Ins. Co., 380 U.S. 39, 85 S. Ct. 769, 13 L. Ed. 2d 641 (1965).

Burden of showing superiority of foreign state's interest over that of forum on party so asserting. — Every state is prima facie entitled to enforce in its own courts its own statutes, lawfully enacted. One who challenges that right, because of the force given to a conflicting statute of another state by the full faith and credit clause or for any other reason, assumes the burden of showing, upon some rational basis, that of the conflicting interests involved those of the foreign state are superior to those of the forum. Security Ins. Group v. Plank, 133 Ga. App. 815, 212 S.E.2d 471 (1975).

Application of forum's statute absent proof of foreign statute. — In a case in which the plaintiffs sought to domesticate action in Maryland for debt against a partnership in which a Georgia resident was served by allegedly mailing to the Georgia resident a copy of the pleadings in the State of Georgia, the law of Georgia as to validity of service would apply in the absence of any proof of the Maryland statute. Maxwell v. Columbia Realty Venture, 155 Ga. App. 289, 270 S.E.2d 704 (1980).

3. Judgments Generally

Effect given to judgments of sister state to same extent as given in sister state. — Action on a foreign judgment, being properly authenticated and rendered by a court of a sister state, is to be given the same full faith and credit in the courts of this state as it would have in the courts of the state where it was rendered. Albert v. Albert, 86 Ga. App. 560, 71 S.E.2d 904 (1952).

Full faith and credit clause requires that judgment in one state must be given such full effect in another state as it is given by the law and usage of the state of its origin. Peebles v. Peebles, 103 Ga. App. 462, 119 S.E.2d 710 (1961).

Foreign judgments given such effect as accorded in rendering state. — It is fundamental that under the full faith and credit clause the courts of this state are required to give only such effect to a judgment of a sister state as it would have in that state. Jackson v. Jackson, 231 Ga. 751, 204 S.E.2d 297 (1974).

Judgments of courts of one state must be given the same faith and credit in another state as they have by law or usage in the courts of the state rendering them. Fidelity Std. Life Ins. Co. v. First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 382 F. Supp. 956 (S.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 510 F.2d 272 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 864, 96 S. Ct. 125, 46 L. Ed. 2d 94 (1975).

Full faith and credit accorded judgments based on constitutional laws of sister states. — Full faith and credit will be accorded by Georgia to judgments rendered in sister states based upon the constitutional laws of those states. Allied Fin. Co. v. Prosser, 103 Ga. App. 538, 119 S.E.2d 813 (1961).

Recognition of foreign judgment under review by supreme court of state rendering judgment. — This section requires courts of Georgia to give full faith and credit to a judgment of another state's court even where it is shown that the supreme court of that state has such judgment under review. Ferster v. Ferster, 220 Ga. 319, 138 S.E.2d 674 (1964).

Under U.S. Const., art. IV, sec. I, judgment of foreign court will be enforced by courts of this state. That judgment, however, may be collaterally attacked where the foreign court lacked jurisdiction of the person or subject matter or where the judgment was procured by fraud. Gordon v. Gordon, 237 Ga. 171, 227 S.E.2d 53 (1976).

Foreign judgments entitled to full faith and credit. — Under the full faith and credit clause, a judgment of a foreign court will be enforced by the courts of this state unless it is shown that the foreign court lacked jurisdiction of the person or subject matter or that the judgment was procured by fraud. Dropkin v. Dropkin, 237 Ga. 768, 229 S.E.2d 621 (1976); Veazey v. Veazey, 246 Ga. 376, 271 S.E.2d 449 (1980); Paris v. Cooper, 158 Ga. App. 212, 279 S.E.2d 507 (1981).

Courts of Georgia are required by U.S. Const., art. IV, sec. I to give full faith and credit to judgments of sister states. A judgment in one state is conclusive upon the merits in every other state, but only if the court of the first state had jurisdiction. Haire v. Eide, 150 Ga. App. 52, 256 S.E.2d 658 (1979).

Proper foreign judgments entitled to full faith and credit. — The judgment of a court of one state, when sued on, pleaded, or introduced in evidence in another state, is entitled to receive the same full faith, credit, and respect that is accorded to it in the state where rendered. If it is valid and conclusive there, it is so in all other states. Masters v. ESR Corp., 150 Ga. App. 658, 258 S.E.2d 224 (1979).

Judicial Proceedings (Cont'd)3. Judgments Generally (Cont'd)

Foreign judgment properly proved entitled to full faith and credit. — The full faith and credit clause of the United States Constitution requires the courts of this state to give effect to a judgment granted in a sister state when the same is properly proved in a proceeding in which it may be relevant. Melnick v. Bank of Highwood, 151 Ga. App. 261, 259 S.E.2d 667 (1979).

Judgment rendered by competent court of another state is conclusive on merits in courts of this state when made the basis of an action or defense, and the merits cannot be reinvestigated. A foreign judgment is conclusive as to all matters which were decided or could have been heard at the time of the obtaining of the foreign judgment. Melnick v. Bank of Highwood, 151 Ga. App. 261, 259 S.E.2d 667 (1979).

Foreign judgments given same effect as accorded in rendering state. — Under the full faith and credit clause, the Georgia courts are required to give only such effect to a foreign judgment as it would have in the foreign state. Capital Bank v. Levy, 151 Ga. App. 819, 261 S.E.2d 722 (1979).

Foreign judgments entitled to full faith and credit conclusive on merits in forum. — Lawfully obtained judgments of the court of one state, when sued on or pleaded or introduced in evidence in another state, are entitled to receive the same full faith, credit, and respect that they are accorded in the state where rendered, and the foreign judgment is conclusive as to all matters which were decided or could have been heard at the time of the obtaining of the foreign judgment. Trammell v. Burke, 154 Ga. App. 366, 268 S.E.2d 417 (1980).

Prerequisites of foreign judgments entitled to full faith and credit. — If a judgment sued on is complete and regular upon its face and contains recitals as to the jurisdictional facts, it is entitled to full faith and credit. Lowther v. Mathers, 147 Ga. App. 82, 248 S.E.2d 161 (1978).

U.S. Const., art. IV, sec. I makes the valid in personam judgment of one state enforceable in all other states. Williamson v. Williamson, 247 Ga. 260, 275 S.E.2d 42, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1097, 102 S. Ct. 669, 70 L. Ed. 2d 638 (1981).

Recognition of judgment based on fraud. — There is no obligation on the part of one state to recognize a judgment rendered in another that originated in a fraudulent intention maintained and carried out on the same basis. Cochran v. Cochran, 173 Ga. 856, 162 S.E. 99 (1931).

Decree in court of domicile of corporation is evidence in every other state that corporation is insolvent, and that a proper case exists in that state for the appointment of a receiver, and it is to be respected accordingly in obedience to the full faith and credit provision of the United States Constitution; but it is for the court to which an application for appointment of a receiver is made to decide whether the proper administration of the assets requires the appointment of a receiver. Ordinarily, in comity to the proceeding of another court of coordinate jurisdiction, it will appoint an ancillary receiver and assume administration in aid of the primary receiver. Isaac Silver & Bros. Co. v. Kalmon, 175 Ga. 244, 165 S.E. 434 (1932).

Satisfied judgment against garnishee recognized as payment of original debt in action by original creditor. — A judgment against a garnishee, properly obtained according to the law of the state and paid, must, under the full faith and credit clause of the federal Constitution, be recognized as a payment of the original debt by the courts of another state in an action brought against the garnishee by the original creditor. H.J. Heinz Co. v. Fortson, 61 Ga. App. 52, 6 S.E.2d 594 (1939).

Foreign judgment having effect of former adjudication in matters pending in forum state. — Under the full faith and credit clause of the Constitution, a judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction in Tennessee, if properly proved, may have the effect of former adjudication in matters pending in the courts of this state. Roadway Express, Inc. v. McBroom, 61 Ga. App. 223, 6 S.E.2d 460 (1939).

Proper foreign judgments regarding contracts of fraternal societies binding on non-resident members. — Decisions of the United States Supreme Court affecting fraternal benefit societies have universally held that a decision by a court having jurisdiction in the state where the society or company is incorporated respecting matters of interpretation of its charter or contracts is binding on members similarly situated in other states. Eminent Household of Columbian Woodmen v. Bryant, 62 Ga. App. 167, 8 S.E.2d 438 (1940).

Effect of judgment assessing corporation members on nonresident policyholder. — If a court of the domiciliary state of an insolvent mutual corporation having jurisdiction thereof proceeds according to the applicable statutes to determine the necessity for and the amount of an assessment against its members, such proceedings are conclusive as to the necessity for and the amount of the assessment, when asserted against a nonresident policyholder who by the express terms of his policy became a member of the corporation, although he was not made a party to said proceedings. An assessment levied by court order upon members of such a corporation, in conformity with the statutes of the state of its organization, against a nonresident member who is not a party to the proceedings, involves no want of due process and is entitled to full faith and credit so far as the necessity and amount of the assessment are concerned. Gaston v. Keehn, 69 Ga. App. 500, 26 S.E.2d 107 (1943).

Validity of a judgment when collaterally attacked must be tried by an inspection of the judgment roll alone, and no other or further evidence on the subject is admissible, not even evidence that no notice had been given. Creaden v. Krogh, 75 Ga. App. 675, 44 S.E.2d 136 (1947).

Validity of foreign judgment by confession of attorney in court. — Full faith and credit is given by Georgia courts to valid judgments from other states, where such judgments do not contravene Georgia laws. A valid judgment by confession of an attorney in a court is not such a judgment as would contravene Code 1933, Ch. 110-6. Cocke v. Truslow, 91 Ga. App. 645, 86 S.E.2d 686 (1955).

Recitation in final order that service was perfected imports absolute verity until properly controverted in the Georgia court by pleadings raising the issue that such service was not legal service and that the judgment rendered on such service would not be entitled to credit according to the law or usage of Florida. Peeples v. Peeples, 103 Ga. App. 462, 119 S.E.2d 710 (1961).

Effect of foreign decree on one not party to original proceeding where evidence shows it to be nullity. — If the evidence of one relying upon a foreign decree conclusively shows that such decree is a nullity, the courts of this state are not required to give it full faith and credit and a person not a party to such divorce proceeding whose rights are materially and adversely affected by it may collaterally attack its validity in the courts of this state. Cole v. Cole, 221 Ga. 171, 143 S.E.2d 637 (1965).

Proper foreign judgment conclusive on its merits in forum. — A litigant in the courts of this state relying on the judgment of a sister state in support of or in defense to an action is in general entitled to have such a judgment accorded the same full faith and credit, and no more, as it would receive in the state where rendered, and such a judgment by a court of competent jurisdiction of another state is to this extent conclusive on its merits in the courts of this state. Kelly v. Kelly, 115 Ga. App. 700, 155 S.E.2d 732 (1967).

Collateral attack of judgment of foreign court having jurisdiction on ground of fraud. — A judgment of a court of a foreign state having jurisdiction of the subject matter and the parties cannot be collaterally attacked in the courts of this state on the ground of fraud. Johnson v. Johnson, 115 Ga. App. 749, 156 S.E.2d 186 (1967).

Valid judgment cannot be attacked collaterally until set aside or reversed. Costello v. Costello, 230 Ga. 40, 195 S.E.2d 408 (1973).

Proper foreign judgment offered as evidence in forum court unimpeachable for fraud. — A judgment rendered by a court having jurisdiction of the subject matter, and apparently legal on its face, when offered as evidence in a cause pending in this state, cannot be collaterally impeached for fraud. Logan v. Nunnally, 128 Ga. App. 43, 195 S.E.2d 659 (1973).

Nonfinal foreign judgments not entitled to full faith and credit. — If an action is based upon a foreign judgment which is not final in the state where rendered, such judgment is not entitled to recognition under the full faith and credit doctrine. Ryle v.

Judicial Proceedings (Cont'd)3. Judgments Generally (Cont'd)

Ryle, 130 Ga. App. 680, 204 S.E.2d 339 (1974).

Only final judgments accorded full faith and credit. — A judgment of a state court, in order to be given full faith and credit in another jurisdiction, must be a final judgment adjudicating the litigation in a conclusive manner. Fidelity Std. Life Ins. Co. v. First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 382 F. Supp. 956 (S.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 510 F.2d 272 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 864, 96 S. Ct. 125, 46 L. Ed. 2d 94 (1975).

Recognition of foreign judgments subject to appeal. — The fact that a foreign judgment is subject to an appeal does not render it interlocutory within the meaning of the rule denying full faith and credit to interlocutory judgments; the full faith and credit clause of the United States Constitution applies as soon as a judgment is enforceable, and not merely after the time to appeal has elapsed. Fidelity Std. Life Ins. Co. v. First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 382 F. Supp. 956 (S.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 510 F.2d 272 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 864, 96 S. Ct. 125, 46 L. Ed. 2d 94 (1975).

Judgment from which appeal has been taken without supersedeas is final judgment entitled to be accorded full faith and credit, even though the appeal is still pending in the court of the original jurisdiction. Fidelity Std. Life Ins. Co. v. First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 382 F. Supp. 956 (S.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 510 F.2d 272 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 864, 96 S. Ct. 125, 46 L. Ed. 2d 94 (1975).

Effect of collateral attack for fraud on recognition of foreign judgment. — Full faith and credit does not have to be accorded a judgment where the collateral attack is based on its procurement through fraud. Fidelity Std. Life Ins. Co. v. First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 382 F. Supp. 956 (S.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 510 F.2d 272 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 864, 96 S. Ct. 125, 46 L. Ed. 2d 94 (1975).

Impeachment of a foreign judgment is limited to existence of fraud that is extrinsic in its nature, that is, fraud preventing one from having a real contest of the action based on conduct or activities outside of the court proceedings themselves. Fraudulent acts that pertain to an issue involved in the original action which was litigated or could have been litigated therein may not be relitigated in another state's courts. Fidelity Std. Life Ins. Co. v. First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 382 F. Supp. 956 (S.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 510 F.2d 272 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 864, 96 S. Ct. 125, 46 L. Ed. 2d 94 (1975).

Foreign judgment entitled to full faith and credit where issues fully and fairly litigated in original court. — A judgment is entitled to full faith and credit, even as to questions of jurisdiction, when the second court's inquiry discloses that those questions have been fully and fairly litigated and finally decided in the court which rendered the original judgment. Fidelity Std. Life Ins. Co. v. First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 382 F. Supp. 956 (S.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 510 F.2d 272 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 864, 96 S. Ct. 125, 46 L. Ed. 2d 94 (1975); Green Acres Disct., Inc. v. Freid & Appell, Inc., 135 Ga. App. 816, 219 S.E.2d 39 (1975).

When party appears and defends, judgment of court, regular upon its face, may not be attacked in the courts of this state. Green Acres Disct., Inc. v. Freid & Appell, Inc., 135 Ga. App. 816, 219 S.E.2d 39 (1975).

Effect of conflict of laws on according full faith and credit to foreign judgment. — Even if the statutory law of this state is different from that of the sister state, and even if this would prevent recovery (conceding arguendo that there is such a difference), the forum state (Georgia) must give full faith and credit to that judgment rendered by the sister state. Colodny v. Krause, 136 Ga. App. 379, 221 S.E.2d 239 (1975).

Judgment in corporate liquidation proceedings. — Because the Delaware Chancery Court, pursuant to applicable statute, had power to wind up the affairs of a corporation that is a creature of the laws of that state, and, as part of that winding up, state court disposed of property of such company although majority stockholder was not named as party in the liquidation proceeding but was merely notified, the United States District Court properly gave full faith and credit to the state court proceeding by granting summary judgment in favor of the state court's holding, thus, effectively causing such proceeding to be enforceable against the majority stockholder. CMS Indus., Inc. v.

L.P.S. Int'l, Ltd., 643 F.2d 289 (5th Cir. 1981).

Judgment rendered by court of another state is conclusive on merits in courts of this state when made the basis of an action and the merits cannot be reinvestigated. Flagship Bldrs., Inc. v. Sentinel Star Co., 143 Ga. App. 624, 239 S.E.2d 235 (1977).

Foreign judgment conclusive on merits only if rendering court had jurisdiction. — A judgment in one state is conclusive upon the merits in every other state, but only if the court of the first state had power to pass on the merits — had jurisdiction, that is, to render the judgment. Benefield v. Harris, 143 Ga. App. 709, 240 S.E.2d 119 (1977).

Enforcement of foreign judgments subject to collateral attack. — A judgment of a foreign court will be enforced by the courts of Georgia. That judgment, however, may be collaterally attacked where the foreign court lacked jurisdiction of the person or subject matter. Collins v. Peacock, 147 Ga. App. 424, 249 S.E.2d 142 (1978).

Proper foreign judgment not subject to collateral attack. — A judgment rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction of a sister state, properly authenticated, is conclusive on the merits in the courts of this state when made the basis of action and the merits cannot be reinvestigated, i.e., such a judgment is not subject to collateral attack. Sun First Nat'l Bank v. Gainesville 75, Ltd., 155 Ga. App. 70, 270 S.E.2d 293 (1980).

Georgia is not required by the full faith and credit clause to recognize nonfinal decrees. Blue v. Blue, 243 Ga. 22, 252 S.E.2d 452 (1979).

Only final foreign judgments entitled to full faith and credit. — To entitle the judgment of the court of a sister state to full faith and credit and to endow it with conclusive effect, the judgment must be final. Sun First Nat'l Bank v. Gainesville 75, Ltd., 155 Ga. App. 70, 270 S.E.2d 293 (1980).

Law of state of rendition determines whether judgment is final and, if not, what issues remain subject to further determination. Sun First Nat'l Bank v. Gainesville 75, Ltd., 155 Ga. App. 70, 270 S.E.2d 293 (1980).

Nature of final judgments. — Final judgments are such as at once put an end to the action, by declaring that the plaintiff has either entitled himself, or has not, to recover the remedy he sues for. Sun First Nat'l Bank

v. Gainesville 75, Ltd., 155 Ga. App. 70, 270 S.E.2d 293 (1980).

Allowing actions based on unsatisfied final foreign judgments. — Under the full faith and credit clause, Georgia must recognize the final and unmodifiable judgments of sister states, and permit actions for amounts due and unpaid thereunder up until the time of action. Williamson v. Williamson, 247 Ga. 260, 275 S.E.2d 42, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1097, 102 S. Ct. 669, 70 L. Ed. 2d 638 (1981).

Modification of foreign decree modifiable by rendering state. — Modification of a sister state decree does not offend the full faith and credit clause so long as the decree is modifiable by the rendering state, because the forum state has at least as much leeway to disregard the judgment, to qualify it, or to depart from it as does the state where it was rendered. Blue v. Blue, 243 Ga. 22, 252 S.E.2d 452 (1979).

Foreign judgment void as against public policy of forum entitled to full faith and credit. — That the North Carolina consent judgment contains a clause making it void as against the public policy of this state does not change the rule that local policy considerations must give way to this constitutional provision. Cannon v. Cannon, 244 Ga. 299, 260 S.E.2d 19 (1979).

Foreign order void as violating Georgia public policy. — Michigan order, by facially prohibiting consultant from testifying as to matters outside the scope of any privilege, violated Georgia public policy; therefore, the full faith and credit clause did not require the federal district court in Georgia to give full effect to the Michigan court order. Williams v. GMC, 147 F.R.D. 270 (S.D. Ga. 1993).

Interpretation of foreign decree by forum enforcing it. — While a foreign decree may not be altered or modified by the courts of this state, it may be interpreted and effect given to its legal intentment by a court of this state in which an action is brought to enforce such decree. Sun First Nat'l Bank v. Gainesville 75, Ltd., 155 Ga. App. 70, 270 S.E.2d 293 (1980).

Domestication of foreign judgment separate issue from enforcement of judgment. — Domestication in this state of a foreign judgment is a separate issue from the extent to which enforcement of that domesticable judgment will be authorized. Sun First Nat'l Bank v. Gainesville 75, Ltd., 155 Ga. App. 70, 270 S.E.2d 293 (1980).

Judicial Proceedings (Cont'd)3. Judgments Generally (Cont'd)

Foreign judgments must be domesticated.

— Because a foreign judgment cannot be enforced until it is domesticated, a Georgia judgment had priority over an earlier obtained, but later domesticated, foreign judgment against the same debtor. NationsBank v. Gibbons, 226 Ga. App. 610, 487 S.E.2d 417 (1997).

Payment is complete defense to enforcement of foreign judgment entitled to full faith and credit and domestication in this state, and the defendant may plead partial satisfaction or any other affirmative defense to the enforcement sought in an action on the domesticable judgment. Sun First Nat'l Bank v. Gainesville 75, Ltd., 155 Ga. App. 70, 270 S.E.2d 293 (1980).

Workers' compensation award decision.

— The full faith and credit clause does not require that the decision in another state that a person is no longer entitled to benefits is a bar to an award under Georgia law when jurisdiction is invoked under O.C.G.A. § 34-9-242. Roadway Express, Inc. v. Warren, 163 Ga. App. 759, 295 S.E.2d 743 (1982), cert. dismissed as improvidently granted, 464 U.S. 988, 104 S. Ct. 476, 78 L. Ed. 2d 675 (1983).

Discharge or payment of judgment is defense to execution of a foreign judgment. Armstrong v. Strand, 167 Ga. App. 723, 307 S.E.2d 528 (1983).

4. Divorce and AlimonyForeign divorce decree unentitled to recognition absent personal service on wife.

— A Nevada decree, rendered without personal service of process on a spouse and therefore without personal jurisdiction over the spouse, was not entitled to enforcement in this state by virtue of the full faith and credit clause of the federal Constitution. Cochran v. Cochran, 173 Ga. 856, 162 S.E. 99 (1931).

Foreign alimony decree enforceable as to unpaid payments. — A decree for alimony from a sister state, providing for future monthly payments, is such a decree as is enforceable in this state under the full faith and credit clause of the Constitution of the United States as to such payments as have become due and remain unpaid at the time of the rendition of the judgment in this state, although the foreign court retains jurisdiction for the purpose of modifying the judgment. Roberts v. Roberts, 174 Ga. 645, 163 S.E. 735 (1932); Lawrence v. Lawrence, 196 Ga. 204, 26 S.E.2d 283 (1943); McLendon v. McLendon, 66 Ga. App. 156, 17 S.E.2d 252 (1941), later appeal, 70 Ga. App. 664, 29 S.E.2d 97 (1944); Johnson v. Johnson, 115 Ga. App. 749, 156 S.E.2d 186 (1967).

On facts, foreign divorce decree collaterally attackable for fraud. — A decree of divorce rendered in the State of Alabama on a bill of complaint by the husband alleging himself to be a bona fide resident of that state and the respondent to be a nonresident of the state, which was based upon appearance and pleading alone by the respondent as waiver of service and submission to the jurisdiction, may be collaterally attacked for fraud in its procurement. Durden v. Durden, 184 Ga. 421, 191 S.E. 455 (1937).

Foreign decree obtained on service by publication not entitled to full faith and credit. — Where a decree of divorce is obtained in another state on service by publication and there is no appearance or response by the defendant, such decree is not binding on the courts of this state under the full faith and credit clause of the United States Constitution. Barnett v. Barnett, 191 Ga. 501, 13 S.E.2d 19 (1941).

On facts, foreign decree obtained on service by publication collaterally attackable for want of jurisdiction. — Because only service upon the wife in the husband's suit for divorce in foreign state was by publication, and the wife made no appearance and contested none of the allegations of that suit, the wife had a right to collaterally attack the foreign decree upon the grounds that the court was without jurisdiction because the husband had not been a bona fide resident of the foreign state for a period of one year as required by the laws of that state to give the court jurisdiction and that the husband's representation to the court that the husband had been such a bona fide resident was false and fraudulent. Marchman v. Marchman, 198 Ga. 739, 32 S.E.2d 790 (1945).

Foreign decree obtained without personal service on nonresident subject to collateral attack. — The full faith and credit clause of the Constitution of the United States has no application to a decree of divorce where the defendant in the divorce action was a non-resident, made no appearance, and the only service had was by publication; such a divorce decree is subject to a collateral attack showing that the court rendering the same was without jurisdiction or that the decree was procured by the perpetration of a fraud upon the court. Marchman v. Marchman, 198 Ga. 739, 32 S.E.2d 790 (1945).

Procedure for enforcement of foreign alimony decree. — An order and decree for alimony from another state, providing for future weekly payments, is such a decree as is enforceable in Georgia under the full faith and credit clause of the Constitution of the United States as to such payments as have become due and remain unpaid, when an action is brought in a court of competent jurisdiction in Georgia on a judgment entered in another state for the total of the unpaid payments which have accrued to the date of the judgment rendered in such other state. Creaden v. Krogh, 75 Ga. App. 675, 44 S.E.2d 136 (1947).

Jurisdiction of foreign court rendering decree prima facie presumed valid. — Because the record of the proceedings and decree in the Nevada court, which the defendant offered in evidence, shows on its face that the court had jurisdiction of the plaintiff and the defendant had his residence in Nevada, under the full faith and credit clause of the federal Constitution, the trial court was under a duty to accord prima facie validity to the Nevada decree; and, upon the admission of the judgment and record in that case, the burden was upon the plaintiff, if the plaintiff would escape the operation of the decree, to show that it was not binding upon the plaintiff, and such jurisdiction of the Nevada court over the cause of action and the parties is to be presumed until disproved by evidence or by the record itself. Patterson v. Patterson, 208 Ga. 7, 64 S.E.2d 441 (1951).

Presumption rebuttable by evidence showing domicile outside foreign decree forum. — The presumption of validity of a foreign divorce decree is rebuttable by evidence of the attacking party showing a lack of domicile of the plaintiff in the foreign divorce forum; and, if the evidence shows that the plaintiff was not a bona fide resident of the foreign state at the time the divorce action was instituted, the court may decline to give full faith and credit to the decree, notwithstanding the finding of the foreign decree that he was such a resident. Patterson v. Patterson, 208 Ga. 7, 64 S.E.2d 441 (1951).

Foreign divorce decree showing jurisdiction entitled to recognition in in-state divorce action. — An amendment to the husband's answer, in an in-state divorce action by the wife, setting up a final divorce decree from a court of foreign state, which decree showed on its face that such court had jurisdiction over the parties and the cause of action for a divorce, is prima facie entitled to respect by the courts of this state under the full faith and credit clause of the federal Constitution. Cherry v. Cherry, 208 Ga. 213, 65 S.E.2d 805 (1951).

Full faith and credit clause places Georgia courts under duty to accord prima facie validity to Texas divorce decree. Meeks v. Meeks, 209 Ga. 588, 74 S.E.2d 861 (1953).

Effect of foreign divorce decree on temporary alimony order. — Full faith and credit under the Constitution of the United States does not demand that support and maintenance due the wife under a temporary alimony order of the courts of Georgia cease when a valid divorce is granted between the parties in another state. Meeks v. Meeks, 209 Ga. 588, 74 S.E.2d 861 (1953).

Effect of pending divorce action on divorce decree procured in sister state. — The mere fact that spouse had a divorce action pending in a court in Georgia at the time he procured a Texas divorce is not sufficient to rebut the prima facie validity of the Texas decree, since whether or not there was an action pending in Georgia for the same cause was not a jurisdictional fact in the cause in Texas. Meeks v. Meeks, 209 Ga. 588, 74 S.E.2d 861 (1953).

Mere production of copy of foreign divorce decree without more insufficient to invalidate it. — Although it is true that a Texas divorce decree may be collaterally attacked in the courts of Georgia on the grounds of lack of jurisdiction in the Texas court or fraud in the procurement of the decree, and that the Georgia courts may determine those questions for themselves, where the only evidence produced in proceeding by wife to have husband adjudged in contempt for failure to pay temporary alimony was a copy of the husband's Texas divorce decree, and no question regarding the jurisdiction of the Texas court or of fraud in the procurement of the decree is presented, the Constitution of the United States demands that the Texas decree be given full faith and credit. Meeks v. Meeks, 209 Ga. 588, 74 S.E.2d 861 (1953).

Judicial Proceedings (Cont'd)4. Divorce and Alimony (Cont'd)

Foreign decree obtained on personal service or by appearance of both parties valid.

— If there has been personal service or if the parties both actually appear and participate in the trial by pleading and personal appearance, this court holds that a divorce decree rendered by the courts of another state, under these circumstances, is not subject to collateral attack. Smith v. Smith, 211 Ga. 615, 87 S.E.2d 320 (1955).

Full faith and credit not accorded foreign decree subject to collateral attack. — If the only service obtained in a divorce action is by publication, when the defendant is a nonresident and does not appear and defend the action and has no actual notice of the pendency of the action, the decree is subject to attack on the ground that the court rendering the decree had no jurisdiction of the parties, or that the decree was obtained by the perpetration of a fraud upon the court rendering the decree, and the full faith and credit clause of the Constitution of the United States and the Act of Congress enacted pursuant thereto, 28 U.S.C. § 1738, have no application under these circumstances. Smith v. Smith, 211 Ga. 615, 87 S.E.2d 320 (1955).

Decree unattackable in rendering state is unattackable in any state. — If a divorce cannot be attacked for lack of jurisdiction by parties actually before the court or by strangers in the rendering state, the full faith and credit clause forbids an attack by them anywhere in the United States. A state by virtue of U.S. Const., art. IV, sec. I must give full faith and credit to a foreign divorce decree by barring either party to that divorce who has been personally served or who has entered a personal appearance from collaterally attacking the decree, where the decree is not susceptible to such collateral attack in the courts of the state which rendered it.

Woody v. Woody, 91 Ga. App. 806, 87 S.E.2d 222 (1955).

Elements essential to foreign divorce decree for full faith and credit. — The decisions of this court up to this time have uniformly held that the full faith and credit clause of the Constitution of the United States and the Act of Congress enacted in pursuance thereof, 28 U.S.C. § 1738, have no application to a decree of divorce if the defendant in the divorce action was a nonresident, made no appearance, and the only service had was by publication, and that such a divorce decree is subject to a collateral attack showing that the court rendering the same was without jurisdiction or that the petitioner therein procured the decree by the perpetration of a fraud upon the court rendering the same. But if there has been personal service or the defendant appears and defends, a decree of divorce rendered by a court of another state and regular upon its face is not subject to attack in the courts of this state. Wade v. Wade, 213 Ga. 886, 102 S.E.2d 557 (1958).

Foreign alimony decree subject to revocation or modification unenforceable. — A decree for alimony of a sister state, providing for future monthly payments, which by its own terms is subject to be revoked or modified as to the amount to be paid thereunder by the court rendering such decree, is not enforceable in this state under U.S. Const., art. IV, sec. I or upon principles of comity. Ferster v. Ferster, 219 Ga. 543, 134 S.E.2d 600 (1964).

Effect of foreign divorce on support and maintenance order. — Full faith and credit under the Constitution of the United States does not demand that support and maintenance due the spouse under an order of the courts of Georgia cease when a valid divorce is granted between the parties in another state. Spadea v. Spadea, 225 Ga. 80, 165 S.E.2d 836 (1969).

Foreign divorce properly proved entitled to full faith and credit. — U.S. Const., art. IV, sec. I requires the courts of this state to give effect to a divorce granted in a sister state when the same is properly proved in a proceeding in which it may be relevant in this state. Spadea v. Spadea, 225 Ga. 80, 165 S.E.2d 836 (1969).

Foreign divorce decree properly rendered not subject to collateral attack. — Under U.S. Const., art. IV, sec. I, a divorce decree of a sister state rendered after personal service on the defendant and after the defendant has appeared in person or by attorney and defended the same on the merits, which decree is regular upon its face, is not subject to collateral attack in the courts of this state but must be given full force and effect as if rendered by a court of this state. Joyner v. Joyner, 227 Ga. 545, 181 S.E.2d 842 (1971).

Foreign divorce decree attacked for fraud as bar to alimony action. — The rule prevailing in this state is that a decree of divorce, obtained by a husband in another state, wherein service is perfected on the wife, a resident of this state, by publication, and in which the plaintiff in such foreign judgment is not in fact a bona fide resident of the state in which the judgment is rendered, can be attacked collaterally for fraud when offered in the courts of this state, as a bar to the wife's action for alimony. Logan v. Nunnally, 128 Ga. App. 43, 195 S.E.2d 659 (1973).

Ex parte divorce decree valid in other states if one spouse domiciled in forum. — An ex parte judgment that only grants a divorce is entitled to full faith and credit in other states if one of the spouses was domiciled in the forum that granted the divorce judgment. Whitaker v. Whitaker, 237 Ga. 895, 230 S.E.2d 486 (1976).

Foreign divorce decree unimpeachable in rendering state is unimpeachable in any state. — If a decree of divorce cannot be attacked on jurisdictional grounds by parties who were actually before the court, or by their privies, or by strangers, in the courts of the state in which the decree was rendered, the full faith and credit clause precludes their attacking it in the courts of a sister state. Kingdon v. Foster, 238 Ga. 37, 230 S.E.2d 855 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 916, 97 S. Ct. 2179, 53 L. Ed. 2d 226 (1977).

U.S. Const., art. IV, sec. I requires courts of this state to give effect to divorce decree of sister state when properly proved. Benefield v. Harris, 143 Ga. App. 709, 240 S.E.2d 119 (1977).

Foreign divorce decree obtained by domiciliary of rendering state by constructive service valid. — A divorce decree granted by a state to one of its domiciliaries is entitled to full faith and credit in another state even though the other spouse is given notice only through constructive service.

Benefield v. Harris, 143 Ga. App. 709, 240 S.E.2d 119 (1977).

Foreign divorce decree invalid as to non-resident on issue of alimony absent personal service. — Even though a divorce decree is entitled to full faith and credit insofar as it affects marital status, it is ineffective as to a nonresident on the issue of alimony (an in personam judgment) unless there was personal service. Benefield v. Harris, 143 Ga. App. 709, 240 S.E.2d 119 (1977).

Actions on unsatisfied and unmodifiable foreign alimony decrees permitted. — If a decree for installment payments of alimony or child support is given in a sister state, and the decree constitutes a final and unmodifiable judgment as to amounts due and unpaid under it, the full faith and credit clause requires that Georgia permit actions for the amount due and unpaid up until the time the action is brought. Blue v. Blue, 243 Ga. 22, 252 S.E.2d 452 (1979).

Foreign modified alimony order rendered without personal service unenforceable. — As a personal judgment for alimony cannot be rendered against a nonresident defendant upon service by publication, and accordingly, an action for modification of alimony cannot be maintained against a nonresident defendant who has not been personally served or has not waived personal service, nor can Mississippi statute which purports to grant court rendering divorce continuing jurisdiction to modify alimony award confer personal jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant who has not consented or subjected herself to the jurisdiction of the Mississippi courts, Mississippi modification order against resident of Georgia who was served by publication and who did not waive personal service was not entitled to full faith and credit in the courts of this state. Veazey v. Veazey, 246 Ga. 376, 271 S.E.2d 449 (1980).

Vested right to due alimony installments entitled to full faith and credit. — Generally speaking, if a decree is rendered for alimony and is made payable in future installments, the right to such installments becomes absolute and vested upon becoming due and is protected by the full faith and credit clause, provided no modification of the decree has been made prior to the maturity of the installments. Alimony decreed to a spouse in a divorce is as much a debt of record, until the decree has been recalled, as any other judgment for money is. Williamson v. Williamson, 247 Ga. 260, 275 S.E.2d 42, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1097, 102 S. Ct. 669, 70 L. Ed. 2d 638 (1981).

Judicial Proceedings (Cont'd)4. Divorce and Alimony (Cont'd)

Modifiable alimony decree unenforceable. — If the law of the state in which a judgment for future alimony is rendered makes the right to demand and receive such alimony discretionary with the court that rendered the decree, to the extent that no absolute or vested right attaches to receive the installments ordered by the decree to be paid, even though no application to annul or modify the decree in respect of alimony has been made prior to installments falling due, the decree is not protected by the full faith and credit clause. Williamson v. Williamson, 247 Ga. 260, 275 S.E.2d 42, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1097, 102 S. Ct. 669, 70 L. Ed. 2d 638 (1981).

Decrees subject to further order of court. — Georgia law distinguishes between an action to enforce an award for support rendered in connection with a divorce decree, although such award is subject to modification, and an action to enforce such award if it is not rendered in connection with a divorce decree and is made subject to "further order of the court," and will not enforce the latter judgment of a sister state. Jagiella v. Jagiella, 647 F.2d 561 (5th Cir. 1981).

Foreign modification of Georgia child support award requires in personam jurisdiction. — A Kentucky court would be required to have in personam jurisdiction over defendant in order to modify a Georgia award of child support. Earley v. Earley, 165 Ga. App. 483, 300 S.E.2d 814 (1983).

When foreign divorce decree given effect. — U.S. Const., art. IV, sec. I requires the courts of this state to give effect to a divorce decree of a sister state when properly proved. Tallman v. Tallman, 161 Ga. App. 447, 287 S.E.2d 703 (1982).

Nature of action to enforce alimony decree. — The action to enforce a decree for alimony of a sister state does not make such action an alimony case; rather it is an action on a debt of record. Tallman v. Tallman, 161 Ga. App. 447, 287 S.E.2d 703 (1982).

Judgments subject to retroactive modification lack requisite finality. — Final divorce decrees of other states are recognized under the full faith and credit clause. Even those which may be prospectively modified are properly domesticated and enforced in Georgia under principles of comity. Nevertheless, judgments of other states which may be modified retroactively lack the requisite finality to be entitled to full faith and credit. Apple v. Apple, 186 Ga. App. 325, 367 S.E.2d 109 (1988).

Contempt action held unenforceable. — Although it was not error to domesticate 1975 and 1978 New York divorce and alimony decrees, there was no basis to enforce an action for contempt based on unpaid sums allegedly owed under those decrees, because a reduction of the sums owed to judgment, they were not enforceable in New York. Apple v. Apple, 186 Ga. App. 325, 367 S.E.2d 109 (1988).

5. Custody and Support of Children

Foreign decree awarding custody void for lack of jurisdiction. — A father's leaving his wife and minor child in Georgia to obtain employment for himself in Michigan, and failing to provide for them, except sending them about $12.00 in two years, held to authorize a finding that the father had voluntarily relinquished parental authority over the child to the mother, thereby rendering the domicile of the child that of its mother, so that a Michigan divorce decree awarding custody of the child to the father was void for lack of jurisdiction, even though the mother filed an answer in the divorce proceeding, asking to be awarded the child; and the court was authorized to determine the habeas corpus case filed by father to regain custody without regard to the foreign judgment, and solely in view of the welfare of the child as an original proposition. Elliott v. Elliott, 181 Ga. 545, 182 S.E. 845 (1935).

Custody decree void for lack of jurisdiction of child. — On habeas corpus by a father to recover the custody of a minor child living with the mother in Georgia, predicated upon a decree of a Michigan court dissolving the marriage and awarding the child to the father, the full faith and credit clause of the federal Constitution did not preclude the Georgia court from declaring the Michigan decree void for lack of jurisdiction of the child. Elliott v. Elliott, 181 Ga. 545, 182 S.E. 845 (1935).

Foreign custody decree subject to modification in other state for welfare of child. —

A decree of divorce awarding the custody of the children of the parties, rendered by the court of another state having jurisdiction of the subject matter and of the parties, shall be given full effect in this state; but such decree cannot anticipate changes which may occur in the condition of the parents, or in their character and fitness for the care of their children. Accordingly, if, in a proceeding in this state involving the custody of a child, a change is shown in the circumstances of the parties materially affecting the welfare of the child since the foreign decree, the court in the exercise of a sound discretion may protect such welfare accordingly, the same as if there has been such a change since a decree rendered in this state. If the mother and child now reside in this state, and if the father filed his petition in a superior court of this state for injunction against the mother, the court would be authorized, if there was competent evidence of a change in the condition of the parties since the decree materially affecting the child's welfare, to make a new award of custody. Kniepkamp v. Richards, 192 Ga. 509, 16 S.E.2d 24 (1941).

Custody decree rendered without jurisdiction of mother collaterally attackable. —

Although a decree in another state awarding the custody of a child to the father is conclusive as between the parties to the decree and as to the right and fitness for such custody at that time, such a judgment rendered without jurisdiction of the mother may be collaterally attacked without offending the full faith and credit clause of the Constitution of the United States. Carter v. Carter, 201 Ga. 850, 41 S.E.2d 532 (1947).

Divorce decree awarding custody and properly rendered entitled to full faith and credit. —

If the defendant appears and defends, a decree of divorce rendered by a court of another state and regular upon its face is not subject to attack in the courts of this state, and such a decree awarding custody of the children of the parties, rendered by the court of another state having jurisdiction of the subject matter and of the parties, shall be given full effect in this state. Beggs v. Beggs, 208 Ga. 415, 67 S.E.2d 135 (1951).

Valid jurisdiction over parents confers same over minors' custody and support. — A divorce suit embraces within its scope the care and disposition of minor children, and jurisdiction over the parents confers eo ipso jurisdiction over the minors' custody and support; and if in a foreign court jurisdiction is not claimed by virtue of service by publication on a nonresident, but rests upon an answer and cross-bill filed therein by the nonresident, wherein the custody of the children and alimony for their support is put in issue, such court acquires complete jurisdiction of the marriage status and the custody of the children. Beggs v. Beggs, 208 Ga. 415, 67 S.E.2d 135 (1951).

Foreign custody decree properly obtained entitled to full faith and credit. —

A judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction in another state, awarding the custody of a child to a named person, which judgment is regular on its face and unimpeached for fraud, is conclusive of the status at the time of its rendition, and will be accorded full faith and credit if introduced in proceedings in Georgia for the custody of the child. Peeples v. Newman, 209 Ga. 53, 70 S.E.2d 749 (1952).

Any custody decree subject to modification if welfare of child at issue. —

A judgment awarding the custody of a child, whether rendered by the courts of a sister state or by the courts of Georgia, may be modified upon application if it is shown that there is such a change of conditions since the rendition of the decree as will affect the welfare of the child. Peeples v. Newman, 209 Ga. 53, 70 S.E.2d 749 (1952).

Foreign custody decree unimpeached for fraud entitled to full faith and credit. —

The judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction of a sister state, awarding the custody of a minor child, which is regular on its face and unimpeached for fraud, is entitled to full faith and credit in proceedings for the custody of the child in this state. Belden v. Strickland, 218 Ga. 105, 126 S.E.2d 670 (1962).

Original foreign custody award not res judicata in proceeding for custody where child's welfare at issue. —

An original custody award in a foreign court, under U.S. Const., art. IV, sec. 1, is not res judicata as to a subsequent claim of custody based on changes of conditions affecting the child's welfare. Oliver v. Oliver, 225 Ga. 61, 165 S.E.2d 863 (1969).

Judicial Proceedings (Cont'd)5. Custody and Support of Children (Cont'd)

Duty of courts to modify foreign custody decree if change in conditions adversely affect child. — Although a decree of a court of a sister state granting custody of a child temporarily for a period of one year must be given effect by the courts of this state under the full faith and credit clause of the United States Constitution, it is nevertheless the duty of the trial courts of this state, if the issues are presented to it, to determine whether there has been a change in conditions subsequent to the entry of the previous decree which adversely affects the welfare of the child, and to determine, based on the present conditions as shown by the evidence, whether the best interests of the child dictate a change in custody. Glover v. Sink, 230 Ga. 81, 195 S.E.2d 443 (1973).

Allowance of evidence of effect of foreign custody decree in rendering state. — In order to determine the effect of a Maryland decree in regard to child support and custody sought to be enforced by the husband in a divorce action, evidence of the effect of such decree in Maryland should be allowed and the refusal to permit the wife to introduce such evidence is error. Jackson v. Jackson, 231 Ga. 751, 204 S.E.2d 297 (1974).

Foreign custody judgment not incident to divorce decree and without jurisdiction invalid. — If a foreign court changes or fixes custody of a child, not incident to a divorce decree, without personal jurisdiction over the parties to the action, the judgment so issued need not be recognized under the full faith and credit clause of the Constitution. Schowe v. Amster, 236 Ga. 720, 225 S.E.2d 289 (1976).

Child custody judgment may be entitled to recognition under former Code 1933, Ch. 5, T. 74 (see O.C.G.A. Ch. 9, T. 19) even though such judgment would not be entitled to full faith and credit. Youmans v. Youmans, 247 Ga. 529, 276 S.E.2d 837 (1981).

Prosecution for abandonment. — Because a North Carolina divorce decree making the divorced wife responsible for the total maintenance of the children would not have barred a North Carolina prosecution of the father for abandonment, the full faith and credit clause did not have the effect of barring a criminal prosecution for abandonment in Georgia. Chapman v. State, 177 Ga. App. 580, 340 S.E.2d 237 (1986).

Supreme Court without jurisdiction where full faith issue not raised in state court. — Because petitioner failed, in the state proceedings, to raise question of whether the United States Constitution demanded that Georgia give full faith and credit to a Florida custody decree and, the Georgia Supreme Court failed to rule on a federal issue, the United States Supreme Court was without jurisdiction on the petition for certiorari. Webb v. Webb, 451 U.S. 493, 101 S. Ct. 1889, 68 L. Ed. 2d 392 (1981).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Refusal to entertain an action upon a judgment rendered in another state upon a cause of action which it would have been contrary to statute or public policy of the forum to have entertained, 4 ALR 968; 10 ALR 719; 24 ALR 1437.

Pendency of appeal from judgment as affecting right to enforce it in another state, 5 ALR 1269.

Full-faith and credit provision as applying to decree of another state admitting a will to probate, 13 ALR 498.

Refusal to entertain an action upon a judgment rendered in another state on a cause of action which it would have been contrary to public policy of the forum to have entertained, 24 ALR 1437.

Conflict of laws as to contributory negligence, 32 ALR 796.

Inhibition by decree of divorce, or statute of state or country in which it is granted, against remarriage, as affecting a marriage celebrated in another state or country, 32 ALR 1116; 51 ALR 325.

Conclusiveness of decision of sister state on a contested hearing as to its own jurisdiction, 52 ALR 740.

Foreign judgment based upon, or which fails to give effect to, a judgment previously rendered at the forum, or in a third jurisdiction, 53 ALR 1146.

Conclusiveness of officer's return of service of process on which judgment in sister state was rendered, 59 ALR 1398.

Limitation applicable to cause of action created by statute of another state which allows a longer period than the statute of the forum, 68 ALR 217; 146 ALR 1356.

Duty of courts to follow decisions of other states, on questions of common law or unwritten law, in which the cause of action had its situs, 73 ALR 897.

Federal Constitution and conflict of laws as to rights not based on judgments, 74 ALR 710; 100 ALR 1143; 134 ALR 1472.

Duty of court of one state, under the full faith and credit clause of federal Constitution, to recognize and enforce a judgment rendered in another state upon a claim which such court has no jurisdiction to enforce, 76 ALR 1364.

Conflict of laws as to construction and effect of will devising real property, 79 ALR 91.

Extraterritorial recognition and effect on marital status of decree of divorce rendered upon constructive or substituted service, 86 ALR 1329; 143 ALR 1294; 157 ALR 1399; 163 ALR 368.

Conflict of laws as regards survival of cause of action and revival of pending action upon death of party, 87 ALR 852; 42 ALR2d 1170. Reciprocity as affecting comity, 87 ALR 973.

Conflict of laws as to conditional sale of chattels, 87 ALR 1308; 13 ALR2d 1312.

Assumption of or refusal to assume jurisdiction by court of one state or country, of action on contract involving foreign elements, 87 ALR 1425; 90 ALR2d 1109.

Right to enjoin an action in another state in respect of matters adjudicated in local action or proceeding, 91 ALR 570.

Judgment or order upholding prior judgment in the same state against direct attack upon ground of lack of jurisdiction, as conclusive in another state under the full faith and credit provision or doctrine of res judicata, 104 ALR 1187.

Conflict of laws as to period of limitation to enforce stockholders' statutory liability, 113 ALR 510; 143 ALR 1442.

Full faith and credit provisions as affecting insurance contracts, 114 ALR 250; 119 ALR 483; 173 ALR 1138.

Recognition of foreign marriage as affected by policy in respect of incestuous marriages, 117 ALR 186.

Decree of court of domicil respecting validity or construction of will, or admitting it or denying its admission to probate, as conclusive as regards real estate in another state devised by will, 131 ALR 1023.

Conflict of laws regarding deficiency in respect of debt secured by mortgage or deed of trust, 136 ALR 1057.

Duty of courts of one state to recognize and give effect to decrees of divorce rendered in other states, as affected by constructive service of process or lack of domicil at divorce forum, 143 ALR 1294.

Revival of judgment by constructive service of process upon nonresident, as affected by due process and full faith and credit clauses, 144 ALR 403.

Domestic decree of divorce based upon a finding of invalidity of a previous divorce in another state, as estopping party to the domestic suit to assert, in a subsequent litigation, the validity of the divorce decree in the other state, 150 ALR 465.

Recognition of status created by foreign adoption or legitimation for purposes of testate or intestate distribution of decedent's estate in a jurisdiction in which such status could not have been created even in the case of one domiciled there, 153 ALR 199.

Decree for alimony in installments as within full faith and credit provision, 157 ALR 170.

Duty to recognize and give effect to decrees of divorce rendered in other states, or in foreign country, as affected by constructive service of process or lack of domicil at divorce forum, 157 ALR 1399.

Extraterritorial effect of provision in decree of divorce as to custody of child, 160 ALR 400.

Judgment for defendant based on the statute of limitations as bar to maintenance of action in another state, 164 ALR 693.

Right to maintain action or proceeding in one state or country to collect or enforce tax due to another state or country or political subdivision thereof, 165 ALR 796.

Estoppel to assert invalidity of decree of divorce for lack of domicil at the divorce forum or failure to obtain jurisdiction of person, 175 ALR 538.

Recognition as to marital status of foreign divorce decree attacked on ground of lack of domicil, since Williams decision, 1 ALR2d 1385; 28 ALR2d 1303.

Consent decree as affecting title to real estate in another state, 2 ALR2d 1188.

Denial of divorce in sister state or foreign country as res judicata in another suit for divorce between the same parties, 4 ALR2d 107.

Inclusion in domestic judgment or record, in action upon a judgment of a sister state, of findings respecting the cause of action on which the judgment in the sister state was rendered, 10 ALR2d 435.

Foreign divorce decree as subject to attack by spouse in state of which neither spouse is resident, 12 ALR2d 382.

Standing of strangers to divorce proceeding to attack validity of divorce decree, 12 ALR2d 717.

Foreign filiation or support order in bastardy proceedings, requiring periodic payments, as extraterritorially enforceable, 16 ALR2d 1098.

Validity and enforceability of judgment entered in sister state under a warrant of attorney to confess judgment, 39 ALR2d 1232.

Enforceability in another jurisdiction of personal liability of stockholders for debts of corporation whose organization is incomplete or defective, 42 ALR2d 659.

Enforceability of provision in agreement for attorney's fees, valid in state of its execution or performance, but invalid under law of forum, 54 ALR2d 1053.

Injunction against suit in another state or country for divorce or separation, 54 ALR2d 1240.

Fraud as defense to action on judgment of sister state, 55 ALR2d 673.

Conflict of laws as to attorneys' liens, 59 ALR2d 564.

Conflict of laws as to interest recoverable as part of the damages in a tort action, 68 ALR2d 1337.

What law governs effect of release of one tort-feasor upon liability of another tort-feasor, 69 ALR2d 1034.

Doctrine of forum non conveniens: assumption or denial of jurisdiction of contract action involving foreign elements, 90 ALR2d 1109.

Conflict of laws as to right of action between husband and wife or parent and child, 96 ALR2d 973.

Law governing assignment of wages or salary, 1 ALR3d 927.

Judgment subject to appeal as entitled to full faith and credit, 2 ALR3d 1384.

Power of divorce court to deal with real property located in other state, 34 ALR3d 962.

Conflict of laws as to presumptions and burden of proof concerning facts of civil case, 35 ALR3d 289.

Extraterritorial effect of valid award of custody of child of divorced parents, in absence of substantial change in circumstances, 35 ALR3d 520.

Requirement of full faith and credit to foreign judgment for punitive damages, 44 ALR3d 960.

Conflict of laws as to right of action for loss of consortium, 46 ALR3d 880.

Disbarment or suspension of attorney in one state as affecting right to continue practice in another state, 81 ALR3d 1281.

Extraterritorial application of statute permitting injured person to maintain direct action against tort-feasor's automobile liability insurer, 83 ALR3d 338.

Choice of law as to application of comparative negligence doctrine, 86 ALR3d 1206.

Full faith and credit "last-in-time" rule as applicable to sister state divorce or custody judgment which is inconsistent with the forum state's earlier judgment, 36 ALR5th 527.

Section 2.

[Privileges and Immunities, Fugitives]

The Citizens of each State shall be entitled to all Privileges and Immunities of Citizens in the several States.

A Person charged in any State with Treason, Felony, or other Crime, who shall flee from Justice, and be found in another State, shall on Demand of the executive Authority of the State from which he fled, be delivered up, to be removed to the State having Jurisdiction of the Crime.

No Person held to Service or Labour in one State, under the Laws thereof, escaping into another, shall, in Consequence of any Law or Regulation therein, be discharged from such Service or Labour, but shall be delivered up on Claim of the Party to whom such Service or Labour may be due.

Cross references. — Criminal extradition, Ch. 13, T. 17.

Editor's notes. — U.S. Const., art. IV, sec. II, cl. 3 concerned slaves and indentured servants and has been rendered obsolete by U.S. Const., amend. 13.

Law reviews. — For article discussing fishing rights along maritime belt of the United States, in light of Toomer v. Witsell, 334 U.S. 385, 68 S. Ct. 1157, 92 L. Ed. 1460 (1948), see 11 Ga. B.J. 191 (1948). For article, "Interstate Extradition and State Sovereignty," see 1 Mercer L. Rev. 147 (1950). For article, "Problems in Search of Principles: The First Amendment in the Supreme Court from 1791-1930," see 35 Emory L.J. 59 (1986). For article, "Georgia and the Development of Constitutional Principles: An Essay in Honor of the Bicentennial," see 24 Ga. St. B.J. 6 (1987). For article, "Ideology, Religion, and the Constitutional Protection of Private Property: 1760-1860," see 39 Emory L.J. 65 (1990). For article, "Slavery and Race: New Ideas and Enduring Shibboleths in the Interpretation of the American Constitutional System," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 637 (1993).

For note, "Interstate Extradition," see 1 J. Pub. L. 463 (1952). For note discussing the constitutional implications of higher nonresident tuition fees charged by state universities, see 8 Ga. St. B.J. 86 (1971).

For comment on Toomer v. Witsell, 334 U.S. 385, 68 S. Ct. 1157, 92 L. Ed. 1460 (1948), holding unconstitutional discriminatory license tax on foreign shrimp boats within three-mile limit, see 11 Ga. B.J. 83 (1948). For comment discussing cruel and unusual punishment and scope of review of proceedings through writ of habeas corpus of convict escaped from chain gang, in light of Dye v. Johnson, 338 U.S. 864, 70 S. Ct. 146, 94 L. Ed. 530 (1949), see 12 Ga. B.J. 356 (1950). For comment on Watson v. Grimes; Harper v. Grimes, 218 Ga. 631, 129 S.E.2d 795 (1963), see 26 Ga. B.J. 92 (1963).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

CITIZENS' PRIVILEGES AND IMMUNITIES EXTRADITION

1. IN GENERAL
2. PROCEDURE

Citizens' Privileges and Immunities

Former Code 1933, § 57-117 (see O.C.G.A. § 7-4-18) was not violative of United States Constitution on ground that it was in deprivation of defendant's rights. Atterberry v. State, 212 Ga. 778, 95 S.E.2d 787 (1956).

Prohibition of application of doctrine of forum non conveniens to nonresidents in FELA actions. — The privileges and immunities clause of the United States Constitution prohibits Georgia courts from applying the doctrine of forum non conveniens to citizens of other states who are nonresidents of Georgia in Federal Employers' Liability Act cases and declining to exercise jurisdiction of such actions brought by them. Brown v. Seaboard Coast Line R.R., 229 Ga. 481, 192 S.E.2d 382, answer conformed to, 127 Ga. App. 342, 193 S.E.2d 192 (1972).

Validity of statute denying medical care to nonresidents. — Absent some relationship to the availability of post-procedure medical care for an aborted patient, the constitutionality of a residence requirement could not be upheld. The privileges and immunities clause protects persons who enter Georgia seeking the medical services that are available there. Doe v. Bolton, 410 U.S. 179, 93 S. Ct. 739, 35 L. Ed. 2d 201 (1973).

Cited in Jollie v. Hughes, 184 Ga. 860, 193 S.E. 769 (1937); Southern Ry. v. Parker, 194

Citizens' Privileges and Immunities (Cont'd)

Ga. 94, 21 S.E.2d 94 (1942); Coates v. Lawrence, 46 F. Supp. 414 (S.D. Ga. 1942); Mainer v. Plunkett, 216 Ga. 820, 120 S.E.2d 175 (1961); Pahno v. Mathews, 226 Ga. 216, 173 S.E.2d 704 (1970); Johnstone v. Deyton, 233 Ga. 146, 210 S.E.2d 692 (1974); High Oil Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 449 F. Supp. 364 (N.D. Ga. 1978).

Extradition

1. In General

Duty to honor demand of sister state for extradition of fugitive. — The Constitution imposes a duty upon the executive authority of each state of this Union to honor the demand of another state for the extradition of a fugitive from the demanding state. Hart v. Mount, 196 Ga. 452, 26 S.E.2d 453 (1943).

It is not by virtue of mere comity that extradition warrant is issued, but in obedience to constitutional mandate. Hart v. Mount, 196 Ga. 452, 26 S.E.2d 453 (1943).

Extradition based on constitutional mandate, not merely comity. — The matter of rendering one from an asylum state to another state by extradition proceedings is not founded merely on comity between the states, but is in response to a requirement under U.S. Const., art. IV, sec. II, cl. 2. House v. Grimes, 214 Ga. 572, 105 S.E.2d 745 (1958).

Law governing extradition proceedings. — The primary law governing extradition proceedings is found in the Constitution of the United States, and the acts of Congress in pursuance thereof. McFarlin v. Shirley, 209 Ga. 794, 76 S.E.2d 1 (1953).

Elements necessary to authorize extradition. — If a request for extradition is premised on the constitutional provision, one arrested and held on the governor's warrant issued in response to the request is entitled to habeas corpus relief upon establishing that he is not a fugitive from justice. Jenkins v. Garrison, 265 Ga. 42, 453 S.E.2d 698 (1995).

In order to authorize an extradition under the Constitution and laws of the United States, the alleged criminal act must have been committed by an individual who was at the time of its commission personally within the state which demands the individual's surrender, and that such person must have fled from the demanding state to the state where the individual is found, either directly or indirectly. Such a person is defined as a fugitive from justice. Jackson v. Pittard, 211 Ga. 427, 86 S.E.2d 295 (1955).

Convicted felon leaving state before serving full term is fugitive from justice. — Where a person is convicted of felony committed by the person in one state, and that person goes into another state, whether voluntarily or involuntarily, before serving the full term for which that person was sentenced, that person thereby becomes a fugitive from justice. Brown v. Lowry, 185 Ga. 539, 195 S.E. 759 (1937); King v. Mount, 196 Ga. 461, 26 S.E.2d 419 (1943); Broyles v. Mount, 197 Ga. 659, 30 S.E.2d 48 (1944); Taylor v. Foster, 205 Ga. 36, 52 S.E.2d 314 (1949); House v. Grimes, 214 Ga. 572, 105 S.E.2d 745 (1958); Frazier v. Grimes, 221 Ga. 375, 145 S.E.2d 39 (1965); Ingram v. Dodd, 243 Ga. 788, 256 S.E.2d 778 (1979).

Parole violator subject to extradition. — A person who has been convicted of a felony in another state and released on parole by the authorities of that state with permission to go into this state, upon the violation of the terms of parole by the commission of a felony in this state, becomes a fugitive from justice within the meaning of U.S. Const., art. IV, sec. II, cl. 2 and the Act of Congress enacted pursuant thereto, 18 U.S.C. § 662, and subject to extradition by the state where the person was convicted, although that person has committed no crime in that state subsequent to parole. Beavers v. Lowry, 186 Ga. 557, 198 S.E. 692 (1938).

A paroled convict who violates the terms of parole may be extradited from one state to another on the ground that the person is a convict whose term has not expired, and therefore is charged with crime under the provision of United States Constitution relating to interstate extradition. Broyles v. Mount, 197 Ga. 659, 30 S.E.2d 48 (1944); Mathews v. Foster, 209 Ga. 699, 75 S.E.2d 427 (1953); Soviero v. State, 220 Ga. 119, 137 S.E.2d 471 (1964); Frazier v. Grimes, 221 Ga. 375, 145 S.E.2d 39 (1965).

Parole violator committing another felony is fugitive from justice. — If a person who has been convicted of a felony or other crime in another state, and released on parole by the authorities of that state with permission to go into another state, violates the terms of his parole by the commission of another felony, or a federal offense amounting to a felony, that person becomes a fugitive from justice within the meaning of U.S. Const., art. IV, sec. II, cl. 2. Mathews v. Foster, 209 Ga. 699, 75 S.E.2d 427 (1953).

Convicted felon involuntarily brought into state from convicting jurisdiction to serve sentence fugitive from justice. — Petitioner, brought into Georgia after conviction in the state of Massachusetts for the purpose of serving the sentence imposed by the federal court, and consequently not coming into Georgia from Massachusetts voluntarily, was nevertheless a fugitive from justice. Scheinfaïn v. Aldredge, 191 Ga. 479, 12 S.E.2d 868 (1940).

Violator of conditional pardon still charged with crime. — A person who is out on a conditional pardon which has been revoked, is nevertheless still a person who is charged with crime within the meaning of U.S. Const., art. IV, sec. II, cl. 2. Deering v. Mount, 194 Ga. 833, 22 S.E.2d 828 (1942).

Felon serving only part of sentence subject to later extradition. — Where an individual who had been convicted and sentenced for the offense of embezzlement in the state of Louisiana was taken into custody by federal authorities and convicted and sentenced for a federal offense, was then returned to the authorities of Louisiana, and after serving a part of the sentence imposed upon the individual by the court of that state, was reprieved to the United States authorities to permit the individual to serve a federal sentence and after said sentence was served, was then arrested on a warrant issued by the Governor of Georgia on a requisition from the Governor of Louisiana, in order that the individual might be extradited and required to serve out an incomplete sentence in that state, in the circumstances the individual was a fugitive from the justice of Louisiana within the purview of the Constitution and laws of the United States, and was subject to extradition to that state. King v. Mount, 196 Ga. 461, 26 S.E.2d 419 (1943).

Extradition not violative of right to fair trial. — One accused of crime has a right to a full and fair trial according to the law of the government whose sovereignty he is alleged to have offended, but he has no more than that. He should not be permitted to use the machinery of one sovereignty to obstruct his trial in the courts of the other, unless the necessary operation of such machinery prevents his having a fair trial, and he may not complain if one sovereignty waives its strict right to exclusive custody of him for vindication of its laws in order that the other may also subject him to conviction of crime against it. House v. Grimes, 214 Ga. 572, 105 S.E.2d 745 (1958).

On facts, conditional pardon violator subject to extradition. — Petitioner, who was granted a conditional pardon on 10-year sentence imposed in Florida, provided that the petitioner leave the state of Florida immediately, and thereafter remain outside the state and lead a sober, peaceable, and law-abiding life, and was later arrested and tried in the federal courts and sentenced to serve ten years, was a fugitive from justice subject to extradition to Florida, when that state revoked the conditional pardon and placed a detainer with the federal authorities. House v. Grimes, 214 Ga. 572, 105 S.E.2d 745 (1958).

2. Procedure

Precedence of extradition warrant over bill of exceptions in habeas corpus. — The filing of a bill of exceptions to the decision of the judge in the hearing of a habeas corpus case, if the petitioner is being detained under an extradition warrant, does not operate as a supersedeas, and, pending the decision on appeal, the petitioner must remain in the condition in which the petitioner is placed by the judgment; in such a case there is no provision in the law of this state for bail. Hames v. Sturdivant, 181 Ga. 472, 182 S.E. 601 (1935).

Laws of demanding state control as to sufficiency of indictment. — The question as to whether or not the alleged fugitive from the justice of another state is charged with a crime is one of law, and is always open upon the face of the papers to judicial inquiry, but if the indictment which forms the basis of the extradition proceedings substantially charges a crime in conformity to the laws of the demanding state, the prisoner should not be released, however defective such indictment might be either at common law or under the well-known rules of criminal procedure. Scheinfain v. Aldredge, 191 Ga. 479, 12 S.E.2d 868 (1940).

Extradition (Cont'd)2. Procedure (Cont'd)

When requisition papers make a case under the Constitution, the Governor without more should honor demand and issue the warrant for extradition. Hart v. Mount, 196 Ga. 452, 26 S.E.2d 453 (1943).

Evidence insufficient to show petitioner not person named in extradition proceeding. — In habeas corpus proceedings against sheriff who was holding petitioner in custody under warrant of Governor, evidence that at a hearing held by a secretary of the Governor proof was offered showing that the petitioner was not the person named in the extradition proceeding, afforded no ground for discharging the petitioner from custody; and there being no evidence on the habeas corpus trial showing that the petitioner was not in fact the person described in the extradition proceeding, and there being an identity of names, it was not error to remand the petitioner to the custody of the sheriff. Hart v. Mount, 196 Ga. 452, 26 S.E.2d 453 (1943).

Authority of state to postpone service of remainder of term pending service of federal sentence. — After convict had served a part of the sentence imposed by the court of Louisiana, the authorities of the state could waive immediate service of the remainder and postpone such service until after service of a federal sentence, and in so doing they did not waive or release jurisdiction of Louisiana to demand the extradition of such convict. King v. Mount, 196 Ga. 461, 26 S.E.2d 419 (1943).

Burden on petitioner to show insufficiency of executive extradition warrant. — If, in the trial of a habeas corpus case, it appears that the respondent holds the petitioner in custody under an executive warrant based upon an extradition proceeding and the warrant is regular on its face, the burden is cast upon the petitioner to show some valid and sufficient reason why the warrant should not be executed. The presumption is that the Governor has complied with the Constitution and the law, and this presumption continues until the contrary appears. King v. Mount, 196 Ga. 461, 26 S.E.2d 419 (1943); Ellis v. Grimes, 198 Ga. 51, 30 S.E.2d

921 (1944); Mathews v. Foster, 209 Ga. 699, 75 S.E.2d 427 (1953); McFarlin v. Shirley, 209 Ga. 794, 76 S.E.2d 1 (1953); Baldwin v. Grimes, 216 Ga. 390, 116 S.E.2d 207 (1960).

Refusal to discharge alleged parole violator not error. — Refusal on the hearing of a writ of habeas corpus to discharge applicant, held under an extradition warrant as a fugitive from justice for allegedly violating parole, was not error. Broyles v. Mount, 197 Ga. 659, 30 S.E.2d 48 (1944).

Question of law as to substantiality of crime charged against person goes to indictment. — In cases involving extradition, it is a question of law open to judicial inquiry on habeas corpus as to whether the person demanded is substantially charged with a crime against the laws of the demanding state; but this rule applies to the sufficiency of the indictment or affidavit as a pleading, and not to extraneous evidence as to actual guilt. Ellis v. Grimes, 198 Ga. 51, 30 S.E.2d 921 (1944).

Courts of asylum state cannot, upon writ of habeas corpus, inquire into guilt or innocence of accused. Ellis v. Grimes, 198 Ga. 51, 30 S.E.2d 921 (1944).

Evidence insufficient to show applicant not in state at time of offense. — Although in a habeas proceeding the applicant, being held under an executive warrant based on an extradition proceeding, could urge, as a ground for release, that as a matter of fact the applicant was not within the state in question at the time of the commission of the alleged offense, the evidence authorized, even if it did not demand, the finding against the applicant upon such issue. Ellis v. Grimes, 198 Ga. 51, 30 S.E.2d 921 (1944).

Question of law as to sufficiency of indictment or affidavit charging crime. — Whether or not alleged fugitive from the justice of another state is charged with a crime, is a question of law, which is always open upon the face of the papers to judicial inquiry; but as to this question, the law requires only that the crime be substantially charged in an indictment found or in an affidavit made before a magistrate, as a matter of pleading. Ellis v. Grimes, 198 Ga. 51, 30 S.E.2d 921 (1944).

Closer scrutiny of sufficiency of charge of crime by affidavit rather than indictment. — Although in passing upon the legal question as to whether a crime against the laws of the demanding state is sufficiently charged, there may be need for closer scrutiny if the requisition is based upon an affidavit instead of an indictment, yet if the charge as pleaded is in law sufficient for the purpose of extradition, the same presumptions and incidents will follow, upon grant by the Governor of the extradition, as if the demand had been based upon an indictment. Ellis v. Grimes, 198 Ga. 51, 30 S.E.2d 921 (1944).

Courts of asylum state cannot, upon writ of habeas corpus, inquire into guilt or innocence of accused. No such jurisdiction is given them by law, and it would be a manifestly unwise provision if authority to investigate such a question was conferred on a tribunal that had no power to compel the attendance of witnesses who resided in another state, and whose testimony would be necessary to throw light on the issue. Mathews v. Foster, 209 Ga. 699, 75 S.E.2d 427 (1953).

Petitioner illegally restrained if extradition warrant not based on valid requisition. — In habeas corpus proceedings, although the evidence offered by the petitioner could not be held, as a matter of law, to be sufficient to overcome the presumption that the Governor had complied with the Constitution and the laws, because the respondent tendered in evidence, over proper objections of the petitioner, the requisition of the Governor of the state of South Carolina without a copy of an indictment found or an affidavit made before a magistrate pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 3182 the respondent in effect contradicted the prima facie showing made by the warrant alone and thus showed that the petitioner was being illegally restrained, in that the warrant was not based on a valid requisition, and the trial court erred in remanding the petitioner to the respondent. McFarlin v. Shirley, 209 Ga. 794, 76 S.E.2d 1 (1953).

Probation violator subject to extradition without proof of commission of additional crime. — A probationer whose probation has been revoked because of a violation of its conditions may be extradited from one state to another on the ground that the probationer is a convict whose sentence has not expired, and who is charged with crime within the meaning of the United States Constitution; there is no constitutional requirement that a fugitive be shown to have committed an additional crime while a fugitive; a showing of the probationer's status as a fugitive is sufficient to support extradition proceedings. Ingram v. Dodd, 243 Ga. 788, 256 S.E.2d 778 (1979).

Extradition proceedings are of summary nature only. — Once a habeas corpus court has found the extradition papers to be legally sufficient, a further inquiry into a petitioner's statutory and constitutional defenses violates the clear intention that an extradition proceeding be of a summary nature. Defenses that the statute of limitations has run on the offense for which the petitioner is being extradited, that the petitioner has been denied a speedy trial, and all other due process questions are issues to be properly decided by courts in the demanding state, not by courts in any asylum state. Hutson v. Stoner, 244 Ga. 52, 257 S.E.2d 539, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 967, 100 S. Ct. 455, 62 L. Ed. 2d 379 (1979).

Lack of presence in demanding state at time of commission of alleged crime is no longer a defense that is cognizable in an extradition proceeding. Once the Governor has granted extradition, a court considering release on habeas corpus can do no more than decide (1) whether the extradition documents on their face are in order; (2) whether the petitioner has been charged with a crime in the demanding state; (3) whether the petitioner is the person named in the request for extradition; and (4) whether the petitioner is a fugitive. Hutson v. Stoner, 244 Ga. 52, 257 S.E.2d 539, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 967, 100 S. Ct. 455, 62 L. Ed. 2d 379 (1979).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Constitutionality of discrimination as regards degree of penalty or punishment for violation of Sunday law, 8 ALR 566.

Permitting prisoner under sentence in federal court to be taken for trial before state court, 22 ALR 886; 62 ALR 279.

One charged with desertion or failure to support wife or child as fugitive from justice, subject to extradition, 32 ALR 1167; 54 ALR 281.

Validity of license statute or ordinance which discriminates against nonresidents, 61 ALR 337; 112 ALR 63.

Extradition of escaped or paroled convict, or one at liberty on bail, 78 ALR 419.

Sufficiency of recitals in rendition warrant in extradition as regards copy of indictment or affidavit, 89 ALR 595.

Constitutionality, construction, and application of statute authorizing extradition of one who commits an act within the state or a third state resulting in a crime in the demanding state, 151 ALR 239.

Validity of municipal ordinance imposing income tax or license upon nonresident in taxing jurisdiction (commuter tax), 48 ALR3d 343.

Necessity that demanding state show probable cause to arrest fugitive in extradition proceedings, 90 ALR3d 1085.

Modern status of rule relating to jurisdiction of state court to try criminal defendant brought within jurisdiction illegally or as result of fraud or mistake, 25 ALR4th 157.

Court-authorized permanent or temporary removal of child by parent to foreign country, 30 ALR4th 548.

"Guilty but mentally ill" statutes: validity and construction, 71 ALR4th 702.

Right of extraditee to bail after issuance of governor's warrant and pending final disposition of habeas corpus claim. 13 ALR5th 118.

State statutes or ordinances requiring persons previously convicted of crime to register with authorities, 36 ALR5th 161.

Jurisdiction of federal court to try criminal defendant who alleges that he was brought within United States jurisdiction illegally or as result of fraud or mistake, 28 ALR Fed. 685.

Section 3.

[Admission of New States, Territory and Other Property]

New States may be admitted by the Congress into this Union; but no new State shall be formed or erected within the Jurisdiction of any other State; nor any State be formed by the Junction of two or more States, or Parts of States, without the Consent of the Legislatures of the States concerned as well as of the Congress.

The Congress shall have Power to dispose of and make all needful Rules and Regulations respecting the Territory or other Property belonging to the United States; and nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed as to Prejudice any Claims of the United States, or of any particular State.

Law reviews. — For article, "Georgia Water Law: Use and Control Factors," see 19 Ga. B.J. 119 (1956). For article, "The Federal Loyalty Security Program — A Constitutional Dilemma," see 20 Ga. B.J. 473 (1958).

Section 4.

[Guarantee of Republican Government]

The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a Republican Form of Government, and shall protect each of them against Invasion; and on Application of the Legislature, or of the Executive (when the Legislature cannot be convened) against domestic Violence.

Law reviews. — For article “Free Speech and the Interest in Local Law and Order,” see 1 J. of Pub. L. 41 (1952). For article, “The Law of the Land,” focusing on the role of the Supreme Court, see 6 J. of Pub. L. 444 (1957). For article arguing against constitutional justification for the sending of federal troops to Little Rock, Arkansas and the federalization of Arkansas troops, see 20 Ga. B.J. 325 (1957). For article, “Whether the Appellate Power of the Supreme Court Should Be Limited, Or More Expressly Declared,” see 21 Ga. B.J. 19 (1958). For article, “Reapportionment Recapitulated: 1960-1970,” see 7 Ga. St. B.J. 191 (1970). For article, “Constitutional Issues In Federal No-Fault,” see 27 Mercer L. Rev. 273 (1975). For article, “Problems in Search of Principles: The First Amendment in the Supreme Court from 1791-1930,” see 35 Emory L.J. 59 (1986). For article, “Ideology, Religion, and the Constitutional Protection of Private Property: 1760-1860,” see 39 Emory L.J. 65 (1990).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

United States is a democratic country with a republican form of government. Leoles v. Landers, 184 Ga. 580, 192 S.E. 218, appeal dismissed, 302 U.S. 656, 58 S. Ct. 364, 87 L. Ed. 507 (1937).

Cited in Carr v. State, 176 Ga. 747, 169 S.E.

201 (1933); South v. Peters, 89 F. Supp. 672 (N.D. Ga. 1950); Cox v. Georgia Educ. Auth., 225 Ga. 542, 170 S.E.2d 240 (1969); Revels v. Tift County, 235 Ga. 333, 219 S.E.2d 445 (1975).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Effect of section on state constitutional provision. — United States Const., art. II, sec. III, means that the laws must be executed as required by other constitutional provisions, such as the one that demands a request from the Legislature or the Governor of the state before federal troops are used to put down domestic violence (U.S. Const., art. IV, sec. IV). 1957 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 8.

Circumstances necessary for implementation of section. — The Constitution only authorizes the United States to take protective action against domestic violence in any state on application of the Legislature or of the executive; U.S. Const., art. IV, sec. IV has been construed in a number of cases, and there are several Supreme Court decisions that call attention to the fact that the United States can only intervene to suppress violence in a state on application of the Legislature or of the executive of that state. 1957 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 8.

ARTICLE V.

[Amendment of the Constitution]

The Congress, whenever two thirds of both Houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose Amendments to this Constitution, or, on the Application of the Legislatures of two thirds of the several States, shall call a Convention for proposing Amendments, which, in either Case, shall be valid to all Intents and Purposes, as Part of this Constitution, when ratified by the Legislatures of three fourths of the several States, or by Conventions in three fourths thereof, as the one or the other Mode of Ratification may be proposed by the Congress; Provided that no Amendment which may be made prior to the Year One thousand eight hundred and eight shall in any Manner affect the first and fourth Clauses in the Ninth Section of the first Article; and that no State, without its Consent, shall be deprived of its equal Suffrage in the Senate.

Editor's notes. — House Resolution 105 of the 1991 Session of the General Assembly (Ga. L. 1991, p. 2041) petitions the U.S. Congress to call a constitutional convention for the purpose of amending the U.S. Constitution relative to disrespectful acts toward the United States and state flags.

Ga. L. 2004, p. 1081, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "the General Assembly does hereby rescind, repeal, cancel, void, nullify, and supersede, to the same effect as if they had never been passed, any and all prior applications by the General Assembly to the Congress of the United States of America to call a convention to propose amendments to the Constitution of the United States of America, pursuant to the terms of Article V thereof, regardless of when and regardless of whether such applications were for a more limited convention to propose one or more amendments regarding one or more specific subjects and purposes or for a general convention to propose an unlimited number of amendments upon an unlimited number of subjects.

"Be it further resolved that the General Assembly hereby specifically repeals Resolution Act No. 53 (Ga. L. 1952, p. 472), passed during the 1952 Regular Session of the Georgia General Assembly; Resolution Act No. 61 (Ga. L. 1952, p. 480), passed during the 1952 Regular Session of the Georgia General Assembly; Resolution Act No. 2 (Ga. L. 1955, p. 4), passed during the 1955 Regular Session of the Georgia General Assembly; Resolution Act No. 45 (Ga. L. 1959, p. 383), passed during the 1959 Regular Session of the Georgia General Assembly; Senate Resolution No. 39, passed during the 1961 Regular Session of the Georgia General Assembly; Resolution Act No. 89 (Ga. L.

1965, p. 559), passed during the 1965 Regular Session of the Georgia General Assembly; Resolution Act No. 96 (Ga. L. 1967, p. 894), passed during the 1967 Regular Session of the Georgia General Assembly; Resolution Act No. 93 (Ga. L. 1976, p. 184), passed during the 1976 Regular Session of the Georgia General Assembly; and House Resolution No. 105 (Ga. L. 1991, p. 2041), passed during the 1991 Regular Session of the Georgia General Assembly.

"Be it further resolved that the General Assembly urges the legislatures of each and every state that has applied to Congress to call a convention for either a general or limited constitutional convention to repeal and withdraw such applications.

"Be it further resolved that the Clerk of the House of Representatives is authorized and directed to transmit an appropriate copy of this resolution to the presiding officers of both houses of the legislatures of each state in the Union, the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, each member of the Georgia Congressional delegation, and the Administrator of General Services."

Law reviews. — For article discussing Article V and the constitutional convention as a method of amending the Constitution, see 20 J. of Pub. L. 543 (1971). For article, "The Convention Method of Amending the United States Constitution," see 14 Ga. L. Rev. 1 (1979).

For note, "ERA: The Effect of Extending the Time for Ratification on Attempts to Rescind Prior Ratifications," see 28 Emory L.J. 71 (1979). For note, "Informed Voter Initiatives and Uninformed Judicial Review Under Article V," see 34 Ga. L. Rev. 1701 (2000).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Cited in South v. Peters, 89 F. Supp. 672 (N.D. Ga. 1950); Wesberry v. Sanders, 376 U.S. 1, 84 S. Ct. 526, 11 L. Ed. 2d 481 (1964).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Judicial decisions relating to adoption or repeal of amendments to federal Constitution, 87 ALR 1321; 122 ALR 717.

Removal or suspension of constitutional limitation as affecting statute previously enacted, 171 ALR 1070.

ARTICLE VI.

[Debts, Supremacy, Oath]

All Debts contracted and Engagements entered into, before the Adoption of this Constitution, shall be as valid against the United States under this Constitution, as under the Confederation.

This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in Pursuance thereof; and all Treaties made, or which shall be made, under the Authority of the United States, shall be the supreme Law of the Land; and the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, any Thing in the Constitution or Laws of any State to the Contrary notwithstanding.

The Senators and Representatives before mentioned, and the Members of the several State Legislatures, and all executive and judicial Officers, both of the United States and of the several States, shall be bound by Oath or Affirmation, to support this Constitution; but no religious Test shall ever be required as a Qualification to any Office or public Trust under the United States.

Cross references. — Taking of oath to support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of Georgia, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IV, Para. II (members of General Assembly); Art. V, Sec. I, Para. VI and § 45-12-4 (Governor); §§ 15-2-3, 15-3-5, 15-6-6 (judges); Ch. 3, T. 45 (public officers generally).

Editor's notes. — U.S. Const., amend. 14, sec. III, disqualifies from office those persons who fail to honor the oath required by Clause 3 of this article.

Law reviews. — For article, "Interposition, Nullification and the Delicate Division of Power in a Federal System," see 5 J. of Pub. L. 2 (1956). For article, "The Law of the Land," focusing on the role of the Supreme Court, see 6 J. of Pub. L. 444 (1957). For article criticizing statutory interpretation of Federal Power Act extending federal authority through the commerce clause, and proposing a balancing of interests test to protect state jurisdiction over production and gathering of natural gas and electricity when they are local activities, see

10 Mercer L. Rev. 226 (1959). For article, "The Subject-Matter Limitation Upon the Treaty-Making Power," see 11 J. of Pub. L. 122 (1962). For article, "Consolidation by Compact: A Remedy for Preemption of State Food and Drug Laws," see 14 J. of Pub. L. 276 (1965). For article, "The Treaty Power and Family Law," see 7 Ga. L. Rev. 55 (1972). For article, "The Role and Impact of the Supreme Court and Judicial Decision-Making in the Evolution of American Federalism," see 8 Ga. St. B.J. 457 (1972). For article discussing the "void from inception" doctrine as applied to statutory law in Georgia, see 8 Ga. L. Rev. 101 (1973). For article discussing the constitutional parameters of state efforts to stimulate international trade, see 27 Mercer L. Rev. 391 (1976). For article suggesting federal preemption implications of state attempts to regulate foreign investment in domestic corporations, see 27 Mercer L. Rev. 615 (1976). For article discussing the interrelationship between state and federal authority in regulating scientific and technological expansion sion, see 11 Ga. L. Rev. 785 (1977). For article discussing theoretical problems raised by constitutional adjudication and judicial supremacy in the United States, see 11 Ga. L. Rev. 1069 (1977). For article, "The Georgia Bill of Rights: Dead or Alive?," see 34 Emory L.J. 341 (1985). For article, "Separation of Political Powers: Boundaries or Balance?," 21 Ga. L. Rev. 171 (1986). For article, "State Taxation of Interstate Banking," see 21 Ga. L. Rev. 283 (1986). For article, "Georgia and the Development of Constitutional Principles: An Essay in Honor of the Bicentennial," see 24 Ga. St. B.J. 6 (1987). For article, "Georgia's Current Anti-takeover Law: A Look at Management's New Shield," see 24 Ga. St. B.J. 176 (1988). For article, "Exclusion of Evidence in Federal Prosecutions on the Basis of State Law," see 22 Ga. L. Rev. 667 (1988). For article, "Children, Poverty and State Constitutions," see 38 Emory L.J. 577 (1989).

For note discussing habeas corpus as a means of exerting control by the central government in protecting the constitutional rights of criminal defendants and the ramifications for federalism, see 16 Mercer L. Rev. 281 (1964). For note, "The State Action Doctrine and State Antitrust Laws — Thirty-five Years of Struggle," see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 1039 (1969). For note discussing the doctrine of federal preemption in the allocation of powers between the nation and the states, see 22 J. of Pub. L. 391 (1973). For note, "Oil Spills — State Prevention and the Possibility of Pre-emption," see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 559 (1973). For note, "Overcoming Tobacco Company Immunity: Cipollone Clears an Uncertain Path," see 27 Ga. L. Rev. 253 (1992). For note, "Federal Preemption of State Products Liability Claims: Adding Clarity and Respect for State Sovereignty to the Analysis of Federal Preemption Defenses," see 36 Ga. L. Rev. 797 (2002).

For comment criticizing Sei Fujii v. State, 217 P.2d 481 (Cal. 1950), holding suspending California Alien Land Law as discriminatory in violation of United States Treaty, see 2 Mercer L. Rev. 276 (1950). For comment on Commonwealth of Pa. v. Nelson, 350 U.S. 497, 76 S. Ct. 477, 100 L. Ed. 640 (1956), holding that the Federal Alien Registration Act (Smith Act), 54 Statute 670, as amended, 18 U.S.C. § 2385, superseded the enforceability of Pennsylvania Sedition Act, see 19 Ga. B.J. 100 (1956). For comment concerning state taxation of federal property in light of Offutt Hous. Co. v. County of Sarpy, 351 U.S. 253, 76 S. Ct. 814, 100 L. Ed. 1151 (1956), see 19 Ga. B.J. 247 (1956). For comment on Reid v. Covert, 354 U.S. 1, 77 S. Ct. 1222, 1 L. Ed. 2d 1148 (1957), and Kinsella v. Krueger, 351 U.S. 470, 76 S. Ct. 886, 100 L. Ed. 1342 (1956), as to military authority overseas over dependents of servicemen, see 6 J. of Pub. L. 540 (1957). For comment on United States v. Barash, 428 F.2d 328 (2d Cir. 1970), as to the constitutionality under the principle of double jeopardy, of increasing severity of punishment on retrial following successful appeal, see 5 Ga. L. Rev. 194 (1971). For comment on Anderson v. Laird, 316 F. Supp. 1081 (D.D.C. 1970), as to religious regulations at military academies, see 5 Ga. L. Rev. 400 (1971). For comment discussing federal immunity from state taxation, in light of United States v. County of Fresno, 429 U.S. 452, 97 S. Ct. 699, 50 L. Ed. 2d 683 (1977), see 26 Emory L.J. 709 (1977). For comment, "Verizon Maryland, Inc. v. Public Service Commission of Maryland: Reaffirming Ex Parte Young and the Necessity of Finding Regulatory Hand-Back Schemes to a Gift or Gratuity," see 52 Emory L.J. 1519 (2003).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

SUPREME LAW OF LAND

OATH OF OFFICE

General Consideration

Hague Conventions are binding in Georgia (as in all states) under the supremacy clause of the United States Constitution. Edwards v. Edwards, 254 Ga. App. 849, 563 S.E.2d 888 (2002).

Cited in Featherstone v. Norman, 170 Ga. 370, 153 S.E. 58 (1930); In re Moore, 42 F.2d 475 (N.D. Ga. 1930); Carr v. State, 176 Ga. 747, 169 S.E. 201 (1933); United States v. One Chevrolet Truck, 79 F.2d 651 (5th Cir. 1935); Morris Plan Bank v. Simmons, 201

Ga. 157, 39 S.E.2d 166 (1946); Regents of Univ. Sys. v. Carroll, 338 U.S. 586, 70 S. Ct. 370, 94 L. Ed. 363 (1950); Grayson-Robinson Stores, Inc. v. Oneida, Ltd., 209 Ga. 613, 75 S.E.2d 161 (1953); Georgia v. Rachel, 384 U.S. 780, 86 S. Ct. 1783, 16 L. Ed. 2d 925 (1966); Bond v. Floyd, 251 F. Supp. 333 (N.D. Ga. 1966); McDaniel v. Gangarosa, 126 Ga. App. 666, 191 S.E.2d 578 (1972); Granese v. State, 232 Ga. 193, 206 S.E.2d 26 (1974); High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 515 F. Supp. 176 (N.D. Ga. 1980); Zimmerman v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 159 Ga. App. 429, 283 S.E.2d 639 (1981); High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 673 F.2d 1225 (11th Cir. 1982); Southern Motor Carriers Rate Conference, Inc. v. United States, 471 U.S. 48, 105 S. Ct. 1721, 85 L. Ed. 2d 36 (1985); Mayor of City of Forsyth v. Monroe County, 260 Ga. 296, 392 S.E.2d 865 (1990); Ragsdale v. Blaw Knox Corp. (In re Hydro-Chem Processing, Inc.), 190 Bankr. 129 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1995).

Supreme Law of Land

Inconsistent state law. — The supremacy clause of the United States Constitution dictates that federal law preempts inconsistent state law. Poloney v. Tambrands, Inc., 260 Ga. 850, 412 S.E.2d 526 (1991).

Direct conflict between state law and federal constitutional provisions raises question under supremacy clause of broader scope than where the alleged conflict is only between a state statute and a federal statute that might be resolved by the construction given either the state or the federal law. United States v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 371 U.S. 285, 83 S. Ct. 397, 9 L. Ed. 2d 317 (1963).

State policy opposed to federal policy must give way. A state is without power to provide the conditions on which the federal government will effectuate its policies. United States v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 371 U.S. 285, 83 S. Ct. 397, 9 L. Ed. 2d 317 (1963).

Regulations promulgated by federal agencies under a statutory authorization have the force of federal law and can preempt conflicting state law. Crowe v. Fleming, 749 F. Supp. 1135 (S.D. Ga. 1990).

Motorist's tort claim, alleging that a tractor-trailer was defective because it did not have adequate reflective materials along its side, was preempted by federal regulations promulgated under the National Traffic and Motor Vehicle Safety Act. Crowe v. Fleming, 749 F. Supp. 1135 (S.D. Ga. 1990).

Supreme Court ruling on a constitutional issue is a constitutional rule binding upon the states. Sims v. Georgia, 385 U.S. 538, 87 S. Ct. 639, 17 L. Ed. 2d 593 (1967).

Application of supremacy clause requires determination of, and balancing of, state and local action against federal policy. DeKalb County v. Henry C. Beck Co., 382 F.2d 992 (5th Cir. 1967).

United States Supreme Court decisions construing federal statute binding on state supreme court. — The Bankruptcy Act being a federal statute, decisions of the United States Supreme Court construing and applying it are binding upon the state Supreme Court as precedents. Branch v. Human, 215 Ga. 209, 109 S.E.2d 732 (1959).

Limitation on state power of direct taxation. — In the field of direct taxation, the power of the sovereign state is supreme, except when the exercise of that supreme right brings it into collision with the operation of a government instrumentality necessary to the existence of the federal government and to the exercise of its powers upon a subject as to which exclusive jurisdiction was delegated to Congress in the Constitution of 1789. City of Atlanta v. Stokes, 175 Ga. 201, 165 S.E. 270 (1932).

State courts cannot award federal tax exemption. — Georgia state courts do not have the authority to award the federal income tax dependency exemption to a noncustodial parent. Blanchard v. Blanchard, 261 Ga. 11, 401 S.E.2d 714 (1991).

Federal power to wage war superior to state power to tax. — Even though the power of a state to tax generally is supreme, that power may not be used to hamper, hinder, annoy, harass, and impede the federal government in the exercise of its unlimited power to carry on war. City of Atlanta v. Stokes, 175 Ga. 201, 165 S.E. 270 (1932).

Nothing in Constitution requires State of Georgia to make conviction of federal offense grounds for disqualification to serve as juror. Brady v. State, 199 Ga. 566, 34 S.E.2d 849 (1945).

Strict local rules of pleading cannot be used to impose unnecessary burdens upon rights of recovery authorized by federal laws. Brown v. Western Ry., 338 U.S. 294, 70 S. Ct. 105, 94 L. Ed. 100 (1949).

Supreme Law of Land (Cont'd)

Federal bankruptcy law preempts state law, owing to the supremacy clause. As one of Congress' enumerated powers, the power to enact bankruptcy laws is limited only by the substantive guarantees contained in the federal Constitution. Goerg v. Parungao, 844 F.2d 1562 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 1034, 109 S. Ct. 850, 102 L. Ed. 2d 981 (1989).

The Constitution of the United States empowered Congress to establish "uniform Laws on the subject of Bankruptcies throughout the United States," and laws enacted by Congress pursuant to this grant of authority are supreme to those of the states. Bankruptcy provisions allowing the opportunity to cure and reinstate accelerated debts and bankruptcy provisions governing the payment of secured creditors' attorney's fees are no exception to the supremacy clause. In re Centre Court Apts., Ltd., 85 Bankr. 651 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1988).

The federal Bankruptcy Code, rules, and official forms, rather than Georgia law, apply and control in prescribing the procedure whereby exemptions are to be claimed in a bankruptcy case and, as a result, debtors in bankruptcy are not required to comply with O.C.G.A. § 44-13-101. Caruthers v. Fleet Fin., Inc., 87 Bankr. 723 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1988).

Federal law preempted plaintiff's state law claims against defendants for actions they took in violation of plaintiff's bankruptcy stay. Smith v. Mitchell Constr. Co., 225 Ga. App. 383, 481 S.E.2d 558 (1997).

State statute affecting area not addressed by federal law. — The enactment of a state statute affecting an area of the law that is not addressed by the federal statute concerning child pornography law (18 U.S.C. § 2251) does not violate the supremacy clause of the United States Constitution. Aman v. State, 261 Ga. 669, 409 S.E.2d 645 (1991).

Treaty as to service of process on foreign corporation. — In action involving sufficiency of service of process on foreign corporation, judicial notice had to be taken of a treaty concerning service abroad, and it predominates over any statutory provision of the State of Georgia. Camp v. Sellers & Co., 158 Ga. App. 646, 281 S.E.2d 621 (1981).

Deliberate violations of state law for federal purposes. — Investigators and prosecutors must be as aware as are the courts of the delicate interface between state and federal law enforcement. Deliberate violations of state law for federal purposes must be the rare exception, and be clearly seen to be reasonable, necessary, and proper. Otherwise, federal officers will have to be abandoned by federal courts as the supremacy clause will not save them. Baucom v. Martin, 677 F.2d 1346 (11th Cir. 1982).

That a deliberate violation of state law may render federal law enforcement more convenient is insufficient to shield the agent from state prosecution. More is required lest the issue, at least initially, be left to state court resolution. Baucom v. Martin, 677 F.2d 1346 (11th Cir. 1982).

Child support guidelines. — O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 is not unconstitutional under the supremacy clause. Ward v. McFall, 277 Ga. 649, 593 S.E.2d 340, cert. denied, 543 U.S. 818, 125 S. Ct. 57, 160 L. Ed. 2d 26 (2004).

State defenses to civil rights claims. — Supremacy clause of federal Constitution prevents state court from construing federal rule to permit state immunity defense to claim made under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, the Civil Rights Act of 1871. Davis v. City of Roswell, 250 Ga. 8, 295 S.E.2d 317 (1982), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1122, 106 S. Ct. 1640, 90 L. Ed. 2d 185 (1986).

Using state law to interpret federal act. — Applicability of the general provisions of state contract law to the determination of the "making of an arbitration agreement" did not violate the Federal Arbitration Act and, thus, the supremacy clause. Hull v. Norcom, Inc., 750 F.2d 1547 (11th Cir. 1985).

Under the supremacy clause, § 2 of the Federal Arbitration Act preempts O.C.G.A. § 34-4-6 and thus employee employed under contract requiring arbitration of any claims or disputes cannot bring action under O.C.G.A. § 34-4-6 for unpaid wages. Haluska v. RAF Fin. Corp., 875 F. Supp. 825 (N.D. Ga. 1994).

State is prohibited from implementing employment reclassification proposal that was flawed and likely to have an adverse racial impact. Williams v. Ledbetter, 685 F. Supp. 247 (M.D. Ga. 1988).

Georgia "anti-takeover" statute enjoyed a presumption of validity under the supremacy and interstate commerce clauses, because it could not be established with the required degree of legal certainty that the statute denied hostile tender offers for Georgia corporations a meaningful opportunity to succeed. West Point-Pepperell, Inc. v. Farley, Inc., 711 F. Supp. 1096 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

Treaty duly entered into is the supreme law of the land. Butler's Shoe Corp. v. Pan Am. World Airways, Inc., 514 F.2d 1283 (5th Cir. 1975).

Treaty lawfully entered into stands on same footing of supremacy as do the Constitution and laws of the United States. — A treaty must be regarded as a part of the law of the state as much as are the state's own statutes and it may override the power of the state even with respect to the great body of private relations which usually fall within the control of the state. Block v. Compagnie Nationale Air France, 229 F. Supp. 801 (N.D. Ga. 1964), aff'd, 386 F.2d 323 (5th Cir. 1967), cert. denied, 392 U.S. 905, 88 S. Ct. 2053, 20 L. Ed. 2d 1363 (1968).

Warsaw Convention, as a treaty, constitutes part of the law of this land, overriding state law and policies. — One is not bound to seek redress in the courts of this country. One may submit to the jurisdiction of the foreign state and, presumably, have one's rights determined in accordance with the law of that place; but if one institutes action here, the law which the court will apply is that set forth by the convention, even though it be inconsistent with the law of the forum. Block v. Compagnie Nationale Air France, 229 F. Supp. 801 (N.D. Ga. 1964), aff'd, 386 F.2d 323 (5th Cir. 1967), cert. denied, 392 U.S. 905, 88 S. Ct. 2053, 20 L. Ed. 2d 1363 (1968).

Use of the words "Anything in this Act to the contrary notwithstanding" means that the statute in which the phrase is used takes precedence over, and is intended to exclude and not include, the operation of other statutes which may not be in harmony therewith. Dinkler v. Jenkins, 118 Ga. App. 239, 163 S.E.2d 443, rev'd on other grounds, 224 Ga. 785, 164 S.E.2d 799 (1968).

Legislation conflicting with a court order drawing its authority from U.S. Const., amend. 14 is unconstitutional. Stell v. Board of Pub. Educ., 334 F. Supp. 909 (S.D. Ga. 1971).

Laws or regulations promoting racial discrimination unconstitutional. — Any law or regulation of a state, county, or municipality requiring or furthering racial discrimination in the public schools violates the federal Constitution. Stell v. Board of Pub. Educ., 334 F. Supp. 909 (S.D. Ga. 1971).

Federal court decisions other than Supreme Court's not binding on Georgia appellate courts. — While the decisions of the United States Supreme Court are binding upon the Georgia appellate courts, those of other federal courts are not binding upon the Georgia appellate courts. Security Mgt. Co. v. King, 132 Ga. App. 618, 208 S.E.2d 576 (1974).

Constitutionally obtained evidence in violation of state law admissible in federal courts. — Wiretap or other evidence obtained without violating the federal Constitution or federal law is admissible in a federal criminal trial even though obtained in violation of state law. United States v. Hayes, 445 F. Supp. 455 (M.D. Ga. 1977).

Supremacy clause denies state legislatures control over jurisdiction or procedure in courts of the United States. United States v. Hayes, 445 F. Supp. 455 (M.D. Ga. 1977).

Applicability of preemption doctrine. — The preemption doctrine may apply: (1) if there is direct conflict between state and federal regulation; (2) if state law stands as an obstacle to the accomplishment and execution of the full purposes and objectives of Congress; or (3) if Congress has "occupied the field" in a given area so as to oust all state regulation, whether friendly or hostile. Exxon Corp. v. Georgia Ass'n of Petro. Retailers, 484 F. Supp. 1008 (N.D. Ga. 1979), aff'd sub nom. Exxon Corp. v. Busbee, 644 F.2d 1030 (5th Cir. 1981), 644 F.2d 1030 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 932, 102 S. Ct. 430, 70 L. Ed. 2d 239 (1981).

With statutory conflicts, preemption largely a matter of construction. — If preemption is deemed to occur by virtue of conflict with a federal statute, the extent of preemption is largely a question of statutory construction. Exxon Corp. v. Georgia Ass'n of Petro. Retailers, 484 F. Supp. 1008 (N.D. Ga. 1979), aff'd sub nom. Exxon Corp. v. Busbee, 644 F.2d 1030 (5th Cir. 1981), 644 F.2d 1030 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 932, 102 S. Ct. 430, 70 L. Ed. 2d 239 (1981).

Supreme Law of Land (Cont'd)

Preemption may be either express or implied, and is compelled whether Congress' command is explicitly stated in the statute's language or implicitly contained in its structure and purpose. Poloney v. Tambrands, Inc., 260 Ga. 850, 412 S.E.2d 526 (1991).

States may not statutorily burden access to federal courts with requirements federal courts are prohibited from imposing. Ehlers v. City of Decatur, 614 F.2d 54 (5th Cir. 1980).

Allegations concerning federal rights insufficient to confer jurisdiction. — Because the federal rights of which plaintiff was allegedly deprived were those arising under the Social Security Act and the supremacy clause of the Constitution, such allegations were insufficient to confer subject matter jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1343. Seagraves v. Harris, 629 F.2d 385 (5th Cir. 1980).

Federal FDA tampon warning label requirements expressly preempted state tampon warning label requirements for toxic shock syndrome, including those that emanated from state tort law. Poloney v. Tambrands, Inc., 260 Ga. 850, 412 S.E.2d 526 (1991).

Supremacy clause does not apply to the regulatory scheme promulgated under the Medicare and Medicaid Acts. See Brogdon v. National Healthcare Corp., 103 F. Supp. 2d 1322 (N.D. Ga. 2000).

Train speed limits are part of federal statutory scheme that explicitly preempts state regulations covering the same subject matter. Easterwood v. CSX Transp., Inc., 933 F.2d 1548 (11th Cir. 1991), aff'd, 507 U.S. 658, 113 S. Ct. 1732, 123 L. Ed. 2d 387 (1993).

In a wrongful death action that alleged negligence under Georgia law, federal regulations pre-empted the negligence action only insofar as it asserted that the train was traveling at an excessive speed. CSX Transp., Inc. v. Easterwood, 507 U.S. 658, 113 S. Ct. 1732, 123 L. Ed. 2d 387 (1993), superseded by statute as stated in Armijo v. Atchison, T. & S.F. Ry., 87 F.3d 1188 (10th Cir. 1996) (decided under prior law). But see CSX Transp., Inc. v. Trism Specialized Carriers, Inc., 9 F. Supp. 2d 1374 (N.D. Ga. 1998), aff'd, 182 F.3d 788 (11th Cir. 1999).

Federal Survivor Benefit Plan (10 U.S.C. § 1447 et seq.) preempted the authority of state law regarding the payment of annuity benefits. King v. King, 225 Ga. App. 298, 483 S.E.2d 379 (1997).

Federal Aviation Safety Noise Abatement Act of 1979 preempts state law with regard to suits seeking redress for airport noise. City of Atlanta v. Watson, 267 Ga. 185, 475 S.E.2d 896 (1996).

Common-law railroad grade crossing liability not affected. — In the absence of a decision by a federally designated policymaker, state common-law liabilities relating to the adequacy of railroad grade crossings are not affected by the federal highway aid provisions of the United States Code. Easterwood v. CSX Transp., Inc., 933 F.2d 1548 (11th Cir. 1991), aff'd, 507 U.S. 658, 113 S. Ct. 1732, 123 L. Ed. 2d 387 (1993).

Wrongful death claim that the owner and operator of a train was negligent under Georgia law for failing to maintain adequate warning devices at a crossing was not pre-empted by federal law. CSX Transp., Inc. v. Easterwood, 507 U.S. 658, 113 S. Ct. 1732, 123 L. Ed. 2d 387 (1993), superseded by statute as stated in Armijo v. Atchison, T. & S.F. Ry., 87 F.3d 1188 (10th Cir. 1996) (decided under prior law). But see CSX Transp., Inc. v. Trism Specialized Carriers, Inc., 9 F. Supp. 2d 1374 (N.D. Ga. 1998), aff'd, 182 F.3d 788 (11th Cir. 1999).

Electric cooperative not exempt from state and local taxation. — An electric cooperative's right and privilege to distribute electric power purchased by it from the Tennessee Valley Authority pursuant to contract does not render it an instrumentality of the federal government exempt from state and local taxation. North Ga. Elec. Membership Corp. v. City of Calhoun, 264 Ga. 769, 450 S.E.2d 410 (1994), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1109, 115 S. Ct. 1960, 131 L. Ed. 2d 852 (1995).

The Federal Election Campaign Act preempts O.C.G.A. § 21-5-35, pertaining to the acceptance of campaign contributions during legislative sessions, insofar as applies to candidates for federal office. Teper v. Miller, 82 F.3d 989 (11th Cir. 1996).

Oath of Office

Oath provisions of the United States and Georgia Constitutions do not violate U.S.

Const., amend. 1: but this requirement does not authorize a majority of state legislators to test the sincerity with which another duly elected legislator can swear to uphold the Constitution. Bond v. Floyd, 385 U.S. 116, 87 S. Ct. 339, 17 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1966).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Supremacy clause of federal Constitution prohibits United States military personnel from serving on state juries. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-125.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Relation of treaty to state and Federal law, 4 ALR 1377; 134 ALR 882.

Conflict between federal and state statutes of limitations, 82 ALR 808.

Power of state or municipality to impose license fee or tax upon safe-deposit vaults maintained by national bank, 115 ALR 684.

Jurisdiction of state court to enforce or control performance by federal officer or employee of duties imposed upon him by a federal statute, 138 ALR 1200.

Effect of unreasonableness, or variance from constitutional, charter, or statutory provision, of penalty prescribed by ordinance, 138 ALR 1208.

Validity of ordinance relating to usury or interest rates as affected by variations from statutory provisions, 138 ALR 1492.

Duty of state courts to follow decisions of federal courts, other than the Supreme Court, on federal questions, 147 ALR 857.

Enforceability of federal penal statutes in state courts. 162 ALR 373; 172 ALR 231.

Federal court's adoption of state period of limitation, in action to enforce federally created right, as including related or subsidiary state laws or rules as to limitations, 90 ALR2d 265.

Constitutionality of statutory provision requiring reimbursement of public by child for financial assistance to aged parents, 75 ALR3d 1159.

Validity, construction, and application of state statutory provisions limiting amount of recovery in medical malpractice claims, 26 ALR5th 245.

Application of state and local construction and building regulations to contractors engaged in construction projects for the federal government, 131 ALR Fed. 583.

ARTICLE VII.

[Ratification and Establishment]

The Ratification of the Conventions of nine States shall be sufficient for the Establishment of this Constitution between the States so ratifying the Same.

Done in Convention by the Unanimous Consent of the States present the Seventeenth Day of September in the Year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and Eighty seven and of the Independance of the United States of America the Twelfth IN WITNESS whereof We have hereunto subscribed our Names,

Go. WASHINGTON —

President and deputy from Virginia

New Hampshire

JOHN LANGDON

NICHOLAS GILMAN

Massachusetts

NATHANIEL GORHAM

RUFUS KING

Connecticut

WM. SAML. JOHNSON

ROGER SHERMAN

New York

ALEXANDER HAMILTON

New Jersey

WIL: LIVINGSTON

WM. PATERSON

DAVID BREARLEY

JONA: DAYTON

Pennsylvania

B FRANKLIN

THOMAS MIFFLIN

ROBT MORRIS

GEO. CLYMER

THOS. FITZSIMONS

JARED INGERSOLL

JAMES WILSON

GOUV MORRIS

Delaware

GEO: READ

GUNNING BEDFORD jun

JOHN DICKINSON

RICHARD BASSETT

JACO: BROOM

Maryland

JAMES MCHENRY

DAN of ST

DANL CARROLL

Virginia

JOHN BLAIR

JAMES MADISON JR

North Carolina

WM. BLOUNT

RICHD. DOBBS SPAIGHT

HU WILLIAMSON

South Carolina

J RUTLEDGE

CHARLES COTESWORTH PINCKNEY

CHARLES PINCKNEY

PIERCE BUTLER

Georgia

WILLIAM FEW

ABR BALDWIN

Attest:

WILLIAM JACKSON, Secretary.

Editor's notes. — The Constitution was submitted by resolution of the Constitutional Convention on September 17, 1787. It became effective on March 4, 1789, the day fixed for commencement of the operation of the government, by virtue of its ratification by the conventions of 11 states, as follows: Delaware, December 7, 1787; Pennsylvania, December 12, 1787; New Jersey, December 18, 1787; Georgia, January 2, 1788; Connecticut, January 9, 1788; Massachusetts, February 6, 1788; Maryland, April 28, 1788; South Carolina, May 23, 1788; New Hampshire, June 21, 1788; Virginia, June 26, 1788; and New York, July 26, 1788. The conventions of North Carolina and Rhode Island subsequently ratified the Constitution on November 21, 1789, and May 29, 1790, respectively.

Law reviews. — For note, "ERA: The Effect of Extending the Time for Ratification on Attempts to Rescind Prior Ratifications," see 28 Emory L.J. 71 (1979).

AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION

Editor's notes. — The first ten amendments were all proposed by Congress on September 25, 1789, and subsequently declared ratified by the constitutionally required number of states on December 15, 1791. The later amendments were proposed and declared ratified on the following dates: Amendment 11, proposed March 4, 1794 and ratified January 8, 1798; Amendment 12, proposed December 12, 1803 and ratified September 25, 1804; Amendment 13, proposed February 1, 1865 and ratified December 18, 1865; Amendment 14, proposed June 16, 1866 and ratified July 28, 1868; Amendment 15, proposed February 27, 1869 and ratified March 30, 1870; Amendment 16, proposed July 12, 1909 and ratified February 25, 1913; Amendment 17, proposed May 16, 1912 and ratified May 13, 1913; Amendment 18, proposed December 17, 1917 and ratified January 29, 1919; Amendment 19, proposed June 5, 1919 and ratified August 26, 1920; Amendment 20, proposed March 2, 1932 and ratified February 6, 1933; Amendment 21, proposed February 20, 1933 and ratified December 5, 1933; Amendment 22, proposed March 24, 1947 and ratified March 1, 1951; Amendment 23, proposed June 16, 1960 and ratified April 3, 1961; Amendment 24, proposed August 27, 1962 and ratified February 4, 1964; Amendment 25, proposed July 6, 1965 and ratified February 23, 1967; and Amendment 26, proposed March 23, 1971, and ratified July 5, 1971.

Cross references. — Bill of Rights Day, § 1-4-13.

[AMENDMENT I]

[Freedom of Religion, of Speech, and of the Press]

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

Cross references. — Freedom of religion, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. III; Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. IV. Freedom of speech and press, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. V. Freedom of assembly and petition, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. IX. Forbidding direct or indirect aid to any church institution, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. VII. Tax exemptions for religious groups, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VII, Sec. II, Para. I-IV. Common day of rest, § 10-1-570 et seq. Prohibition against mass gatherings without a permit, § 31-27-2. Discrimination in public employment on basis of religion, §§ 45-19-29, 45-19-34. Access of news media to public meetings of departments, agencies, etc., of states, counties, etc., § 50-14-1. Immunity of broadcasters from liability for Levi's Call: Georgia's Amber Alert Program, § 51-1-50.

Editor's notes. — The Supreme Court has declared that the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14, protects the personal rights specified in this amendment from state, as well as Congressional acts. See Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 60 S. Ct. 900, 84 L. Ed. 1213 (1940) (freedom of religion); Fiske v. Kansas, 274 U.S. 380, 47 S. Ct. 655, 71 L. Ed. 1108 (1927) (freedom of speech); Near v. Minnesota, 283 U.S. 697, 51 S. Ct. 625, 75 L. Ed. 1357 (1931) (freedom of the press); and Dejonge v. Oregon, 299 U.S. 353, 57 S. Ct. 255, 81 L. Ed. 278 (1937) (freedom of assembly).

Law reviews. — For article, "Religious Liberty and the Fourteenth Amendment," see 9 Ga. B.J. 141 (1946). For article criticizing operation of this amendment in relation to right of privacy, see 10 Ga. B.J. 53 (1947). For article discussing conflict between free speech guarantees and municipal ordinances protecting public tranquility, see 14 Ga. B.J. 191 (1951). For article "Free Speech and the Interest in Local Law and Order," see 1 J. of Pub. L. 41 (1952). For article, "Freedoms of the First Amendment in Georgia," see 15 Ga. B.J. 405 (1953). For article, "Crime Comic Books: Government Control and Their Impact on Juvenile Conduct," see 7 Mercer L. Rev. 331 (1956). For article, "State Precedents for the Bill of Rights," see 7 J. of Pub. L. 323 (1958). For article, "Civil Liberties and Statutory Construction," see 8 J. of Pub. L. 66 (1959). For article, "Interpreting the Georgia Constitution Today," see 10 Mercer L. Rev. 219 (1959). For article, "Government Encouragement of Religious Ideology: A Study of the Current Conscientious Objector Exemption from Military Service," see 13 J. of Pub. L. 16 (1964). For article on this amendment's separation of church and state and state aid to parochial schools under the child benefit theory, see 13 J. of Pub. L. 76 (1964). For article "Religion and the Constitution — A Symposium on the Supreme Court Decisions on Prayer and Bible Reading in the Public Schools," see 13 J. of Pub. L. 247 et seq. (1964). For article, "The Supreme Court and Religion in Public Higher Education," see 13 J. of Pub. L. 343 (1964). For article, "Public Law, Politics, and the Local Courts: Obscene Literature in Portland," see 14 J. of Pub. L. 105 (1965). For article characterizing nonviolent demonstrations on the property of another as illegitimate exercises of the freedom of speech and espousing the "right not to listen," see 16 Mercer L. Rev. 389 (1965). For article, "The Legal Status of the American Communist Party: 1965," see 15 J. of Pub. L. 94 (1966). For article, "Free Speech: The 'Missing Link' in the Law of Obscenity," see 16 J. of Pub. L. 81 (1967). For article, "Civil Disobedience: A New Credo?" see 2 Ga. L. Rev. 16 (1967). For article, "The Right to Denounce Public Officials in England and the United States," see 17 J. of Pub. L. 78 (1968). For article discussing this amendment's restrictions on judicial power to punish for contempt outside the courtroom, see 2 Ga. L. Rev. 341 (1968). For article discussing treatment by Georgia appellate courts of controversies arising from the use of streets and public parks as forums for expression of views, see 3 Ga. L. Rev. 80 (1968). For article, "Allegedly Disruptive Student Behavior and the Legal Authority of School Officials," see 19 J. of Pub. L. 209 (1970). For article analyzing relationship of religion and government in United States from a sociological and theological perspective, see 19 J. of Pub.

L. 283 (1970). For article, "Obscenity Law: A Public Policy Analysis," see 20 J. of Pub. L. 503 (1971). For article, "The Principle of Nondivisiveness and the Constitutionality of Public Aid to Parochial Schools," see 5 Ga. L. Rev. 429 (1971). For article discussing Presbyterian Church v. Mary Elizabeth Blue Hull Mem. Presbyterian Church, 396 U.S. 1041, 90 S. Ct. 680, 24 L. Ed. 2d 685 (1970), and the status of the theory of the implied trust on local church properties in favor of parent organization, see 22 Mercer L. Rev. 515 (1971). For article on the judicial development of U.S. Const., Amend. 14 due process clause and the selective incorporation of the Bill of Rights, see 22 Mercer L. Rev. 533 (1971). For article advocating absolutist interpretation of this amendment and rejecting clear and present danger, and balancing tests, see 23 Mercer L. Rev. 473 (1972). For article, "Privacy in the Corporate State: A Constitutional Value of Dwindling Significance," see 22 J. of Pub. L. 3 (1973). For article discussing the validity of contempt of court sanctions based upon a party's disobedience of an injunction constituting a void prior restraint of constitutionally-protected activity, see 7 Ga. L. Rev. 246 (1973). For article, "The Response of Georgia's Public School Systems to the School Prayer Decisions: 'Whipping a Dead Horse,'" see 9 Ga. St. B.J. 425 (1973). For article, "The Supreme Court and Civil Liberties: 1973-1974," see 23 Emory L.J. 905 (1974). For article discussing obscenity laws and their conflict with this amendment, see 8 Ga. L. Rev. 291 (1974). For article, "Teachers' Freedom of Expression Within the Classroom: A Search for Standards," see 8 Ga. L. Rev. 837 (1974). For article, "The Supreme Court and Civil Liberties: 1974-1975," see 24 Emory L.J. 937 (1975). For article discussing uncertainty in the law of obscenity and suggesting proposals for avoiding resultant chilling effect, see 9 Ga. L. Rev. 533 (1975). For article, "Personal Liability of State Officials Under State and Federal Law," see 9 Ga. L. Rev. 821 (1975). For article, "Permissible Entanglement Under the Establishment Clause," see 25 Emory L.J. 17 (1976). For article discussing commercial speech and this amendment's protection, see 25 Emory L.J. 815 (1976). For article, "Sexual Privacy — Recent U.S. Supreme Court Decisions," see 13 Ga. St. B.J. 93 (1976). For article discussing constitutional rights of students to form religious clubs in the public school setting, and possible establishment problems, see 27 Emory L.J. 3 (1978). For article, "Federal Antibias Legislation and Academic Freedom: Some Problems With Enforcement Procedures," see 27 Emory L.J. 609 (1978). For article, "The Supreme Court on Privacy and the Press," see 12 Ga. L. Rev. 215 (1978). For article discussing private actions for invasion of privacy, see 12 Ga. L. Rev. 513 (1978). For article surveying cases dealing with criminal law and criminal procedure from June 1, 1977, through May 1978, see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 27 (1978). For article analyzing the relationship between the military and the right of individuals under this amendment to engage in political activities, see 28 Emory L.J. 3 (1979). For article, "Abortion, Poverty and the Equal Protection of the Laws," see 13 Ga. L. Rev. 505 (1979). For article, "Watchdogs and Leash Laws: Restraints on the Press," see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 615 (1979). For article discussing federal civil litigation, with respect to U.S. Const., Art. III, U.S. Const., Amends. 1, 14, and 15 issues, see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 821 (1979). For article surveying judicial and legislative developments in Georgia's tort laws, see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 229 (1979). For article, "Speech and Campaign Reform: Congress, The Courts and Community," see 14 Ga. L. Rev. 195 (1980). For article surveying 1979 fifth circuit decisions concerning rights of both public employees and prisoners, see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 885 (1980). For article discussing the concept of a mandatory public service obligation for lawyers, see 29 Emory L.J. 997 (1980). For article, "The Constitutionality of Labor Unions' Collection and Use of Forced Dues for Non-Bargaining Purposes," see 32 Mercer L. Rev. 561 (1981). For article, "Constitutional Criminal Litigation," see 32 Mercer L. Rev. 993 (1981). For article surveying developments in Georgia constitutional law from mid-1980 through mid-1981, see 33 Mercer L. Rev. 51 (1981). For article, "Regulation of Advertising by Lawyers in Georgia," see 18 Ga. St. B.J. 6 (1981). For article discussing eleventh circuit court cases in the year 1981 dealing with constitutional civil law, see 33 Mercer L. Rev. 1061 (1982). For survey article on constitutional law, see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 53 (1982). For survey article on local government law, see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 225 (1982). For article discussing and proposing a plan for regulation of corporate spending in ballot issue campaigns, see 17 Ga. L. Rev. 675 (1983). For article surveying 1982 Eleventh Circuit cases involving constitutional civil law, see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 1221 (1983). For annual survey of constitutional law, see 35 Mercer L. Rev. 73 (1983). For annual survey on constitutional law, see 36 Mercer L. Rev. 137 (1984). For article, "Problems in Search of Principles: The First Amendment in the Supreme Court from 1791-1930," see 35 Emory L.J. 59 (1986). For article, "The Right to Refuse Psychiatric Treatment: Law and Medicine at the Interface," see 35 Emory L.J. 139 (1986). For article, Introduction to Symposium on Cable TV Regulation, see 35 Emory L.J. 555 (1986). For article, "Cable Leased Access and the Conflict Among First Amendment Rights and First Amendment Values," see 35 Emory L.J. 563 (1986). For article, "Religion and Law: The First Amendment in Historical Perspective," see 35 Emory L.J. 777 (1986). For article, "Constitutional Judgment on Non-public School Aid: Fresh Guidelines or New Roadblocks?," see 35 Emory L.J. 795 (1986). For article, "Employer and Consultant Reporting Under the LMRDA," see 20 Ga. L. Rev. 533 (1986). For survey of 1985 Eleventh Circuit cases on civil constitutional law, see 37 Mercer L. Rev. 1253 (1986). For survey of 1985 Eleventh Circuit cases on employment discrimination, see 37 Mercer L. Rev. 1315 (1986). For essay, "Standing and Rights," see 36 Emory L.J. 1195 (1987). For article, "Judicial Privilege," see 22 Ga. L. Rev. 89 (1987). For article, "Religious Liberty Law and the States," see 3 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 19 (1987). For article, "A Case for Press Responsibility," see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 771 (1987). For article, "Libel in the Media: A Reporter's Perspective," see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 779 (1987). For article, "Philadelphia Newspapers, Inc. v. Hepps: New Hope for Preserving Freedom of the Press," see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 785 (1987). For article, "Taking Libel Reform Seriously," see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 793 (1987). For article, "A Suggestion to End the Struggle over Libel," see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 809 (1987). For article, "There's Got to Be a Better Way: Alternatives to the High Cost of Libel," see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 819 (1987). For article, "Privacy, Emotional Distress, and the Limits of Libel Law Reform," see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 835 (1987). For article, "Media Defendants Rediscover Common Law's 'Fair Report' Privilege As Supreme Court Expands Access to Judicial Proceedings While Limiting First Amendment Protection," see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 859 (1987). For article, "Awards of Damages for Mental Anguish Without Proof of Harm to Reputation: Is There Parasitic or Independent Life After Gertz?," see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 881 (1987). For article, "Contempt of Court in Georgia," see 23 Ga. St. B.J. 66 (1987). For article, "State Bar Strengthens Legislative Efforts," see 23 Ga. St. B.J. 116 (1987). For article, "Georgia and the Development of Constitutional Principles: An Essay in Honor of the Bicentennial," see 24 Ga. St. B.J. 6 (1987). For article, "Is Disparity a Problem," see 22 Ga. L. Rev. 283 (1988). For article, "Juvenileness: A Single-Edged Constitutional Sword," see 22 Ga. L. Rev. 949 (1988). For article, "Religious Symbols and the Establishment of a National 'Religion,'" see 39 Mercer L. Rev. 495 (1988). For survey of 1987 Eleventh Circuit cases on constitutional law—civil, see 39 Mercer L. Rev. 1169 (1988). For survey of 1987 Eleventh Circuit cases on employment discrimination, see 39 Mercer L. Rev. 1215 (1988). For survey of Eleventh Circuit cases on evidence, see 39 Mercer L. Rev. 1259 (1988). For annual survey of constitutional law, see 40 Mercer L. Rev. 117 (1988). For article, "Public Employees and the First Amendment," see 25 Ga. St. B.J. 24 (1988). For article, "Rethinking the Ban on General Solicitation," see 38 Emory L.J. 67 (1989). For article, "The Illegitimacy of the Public Interest Standard at the FCC," see 38 Emory L.J. 714 (1989). For article, "A Senate of Five: An Essay on Sexuality and Law," see 23 Ga. L. Rev. 859 (1989). For article, "Metaphor and Paradox," see 23 Ga. L. Rev. 1053 (1989). For article, "On a Medical Moraine: Religious Dimensions of American Constitutionalism," see 39 Emory L.J. 9 (1990). For article, "Ideology, Religion, and the Constitutional Protection of Private Property: 1760-1860," see 39 Emory L.J. 65 (1990). For article, "Religious Freedom and the Challenge of the Modern State," see 39 Emory L.J. 149 (1990). For article, "Religion and the Constitution of the American Political System," see 39 Emory L.J. 165 (1990). For article, "Republic and Liberal State: The Place of Religion in an Ambiguous Polity," see 39 Emory L.J. 191 (1990). For article, "Securities Regulation and the First Amendment," see 24 Ga. L. Rev. 223 (1990). For article, "Federal and State 'State Action': The Undercritical Embrace of a Hypercriticized Doctrine," see 24 Ga. L. Rev. 327 (1990). For essay, "The Prospects for a Revival of Conservative Activism in Constitutional Jurisprudence," see 24 Ga. L. Rev. 629 (1990). For article, "Lemon or Marsh? An Establishment Clause Conundrum," see 41 Mercer L. Rev. 1131 (1990). For article surveying developments in Georgia constitutional law during 1989, see 41 Mercer L. Rev. 1261 (1990). For article, "Religious Exemptions As Affirmative Action," see 40 Emory L.J. 77 (1991). For annual eleventh circuit survey of constitutional law — civil, see 42 Mercer L. Rev. 1313 (1991). For article, "The Theology and Politics of the First Amendment Religion Clauses: A Bicentennial Essay," see 40 Emory L.J. 489 (1991). For article, "Introduction: The United States Bill of Rights, International Bill of Human Rights, and Other 'Bills'," see 40 Emory L.J. 731 (1991). For article on free speech and school governance, see 26 Ga. L. Rev. 253 (1992). For annual eleventh circuit survey of constitutional law — civil, see 43 Mercer L. Rev. 1075 (1992). For annual eleventh circuit survey of constitutional criminal law, see 43 Mercer L. Rev. 1113 (1992). For article, "Secrecy Orders and Government Litigants: A Northwest Passage Around the Freedom of Information Act?," see 27 Ga. L. Rev. 121 (1992). For article, "Individual Rights and the Powers of Government," see 27 Ga. L. Rev. 343 (1993). For article, "Conceptual Interdependence and Comparative Competence," see 27 Ga. L. Rev. 391 (1993). For article, "The Structure of Rights," see 27 Ga. L. Rev. 415 (1993). For article, "Rights as Trumps," see 27 Ga. L. Rev. 463 (1993). For article, "Comment On: Making the Case for a Constitutional Right to Minimum Entitlements," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 567 (1993). For article, "On Legal Autonomy," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 737 (1993). For article, "Souring on Lemon: The Supreme Court's Establishment Clause Doctrine in Transition," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 881 (1993). For article, "Constitutional Civil Law," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 1107

(1993). For article, "Distinguishing Speech from Conduct," see 45 Mercer L. Rev. 621 (1994). For article, "The Fairness Doctrine and the First Amendment: Phoenix Rising," see 45 Mercer L. Rev. 705 (1994). For article, "Camouflaged Incitement: Freedom of Speech, Communication Torts, and the Borderline of the Brandenburg Test," see 29 Ga. L. Rev. 1 (1994). For article, "The First Amendment's Challenge Function and the Confusion in the Supreme Court's Contemporary Free Exercise Jurisprudence," see 29 Ga. L. Rev. 81 (1994). For article, "Annual Eleventh Circuit Survey January 1, 1993 — December 31, 1993: Constitutional Civil Law," see 45 Mercer L. Rev. 1217 (1994). For article, "The Power of Government to Regulate Class Discrimination by Religious Entities: A Study in Conflicting Values," see 43 Emory L.J. 1189 (1994). For article, "Tilting at Crosses: Nontaxpayer Standing to Sue Under the Establishment Clause," see 11 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 495 (1995). For article, "Slouching Towards Secularism: A Comment on Kiryas Joel School District v. Grument," see 44 Emory L.J. 433 (1995). For article, "1994 Eleventh Circuit Survey: Constitutional Civil Law," see 46 Mercer L. Rev. 1275 (1995). For article, "Proposed Guidelines for Student Religious Speech and Observance in Public Schools," see 46 Mercer L. Rev. 1017 (1995). For article, "Graduation Prayer After Lee v. Weisman: A Cautionary Tale," see 46 Mercer L. Rev. 1097 (1995). For article, "The Threat to the American Idea of Religious Liberty," see 46 Mercer L. Rev. 1123 (1995). For article, "The Ironic State of Religious Liberty in America," see 46 Mercer L. Rev. 1157 (1995). For article, "The First Amendment: Has the Supreme Court Overlooked its Role as Guardian of our Freedom by Failing to Distinguish Between Real Threat and Mere Shadow?" see 46 Mercer L. Rev. 1167 (1995). For survey of 1995 Eleventh Circuit cases on constitutional civil law, see 47 Mercer L. Rev. 745 (1996). For survey of 1995 Eleventh Circuit cases on employment discrimination, see 47 Mercer L. Rev. 797 (1996). For article, "Silence Is Not Golden: Protecting Lawyer Speech Under the First Amendment," see 47 Emory L.J. 859 (1998). For article, "Speaking Out Outside the Courtroom," see 47 Emory L.J. 889 (1998). For article, "Means and Ends and Food

Lion: The Tension Between Exemption and Independence in Newsgathering by the Press," see 47 Emory L.J. 895 (1998). For article, "To Say 'I Do': Shahar v. Bowers, Same-Sex Marriage, and Public Employee Free Speech Rights," see 15 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 381 (1998). For article, "Of Communists and Anti-Abortion Protestors: The Consequences of Falling into the Theoretical Abyss," see 33 Ga. L. Rev. 1 (1998). For article, "Core Societal Values Deserve Federal Aid: Schools, Tax Credits, and the Establishment Clause," see 34 Ga. L. Rev. 1 (1999). For article, "Employment Law Responsibilities of Public Employers in Georgia," see 5 Ga. St. B.J. 10 (1999). For article, "Expressive Commerce in Cyberspace: Public Goods, Network Effects, and Free Speech," see 16 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 789 (2000). For article, "Three Arguments Against Mt. Healthy: Tort Theory, Constitutional Torts, and Freedom of Speech," see 51 Mercer L. Rev. 583 (2000). For article, "Mt. Healthy and Causation-in-Fact: The Court Still Doesn't Get It!" see 51 Mercer L. Rev. 603 (2000). For article, "An Essay on Texas v. Lesage," see 51 Mercer L. Rev. 621 (2000). For article, "Mt. Healthy, Causation, and Affirmative Defenses," see 51 Mercer L. Rev. 637 (2000). For article, "Purveyors of Hate on the Internet: Are We Ready for Hate Spam?" see 17 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 379 (2000). For article, "Polygamists Out of the Closet: Statutory and State Constitutional Prohibitions Against Polygamy Are Unconstitutional Under the Free Exercise Clause," see 17 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 691 (2001). Section 183, the First Amendment, and public employee speech: shaping the right to fit the remedy (and vice versa), see 35 Ga. L. Rev. 939 (2001). The mischief of Cohen v. Cowles Media Co., see 35 Ga. L. Rev. 1087 (2001). Rewriting Near v. Minnesota: creating a complete definition of prior restraint, see 52 Mercer L. Rev. 1087 (2001). Constitutional civil rights, see 52 Mercer L. Rev. 1279 (2001). For article, "Free Speech and the Right to Offend: Old Wars, New Battles, Different Media," see 18 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 671 (2002). For article, "Statutory Civil Rights," see 53 Mercer L. Rev. 1499 (2002). For article, "Constitutional Civil Rights," see 53 Mercer L. Rev. 1315 (2002). For article, "Freedom of Expression, Democratic Norms, and Internet Governance," see 52

Emory L.J. 187 (2003). For article, "Constitutional Civil Rights," see 54 Mercer L. Rev. 1379 (2003). For article, "Qualified Immunity in the Eleventh Circuit After Hope v. Pelzer," see 9 Ga. St. B.J. 22 (2003). For article, "Hanging the Ten Commandments on the Wall Separating Church and State: Toward a New Establishment Clause Jurisprudence," see 38 Ga. L. Rev. 1329 (2004). For Eleventh Circuit survey article on constitutional civil rights decisions in 2003, see 55 Mercer L. Rev. 1131 (2004). For article, "Video Games as a Protected Form of Expression," 40 Ga. L. Rev. 153 (2005). For annual survey of criminal law, see 57 Mercer L. Rev. 113 (2005). "Government Regulation or Other 'Abridgements' of Scientific Research: The Proper Scope of Review under the First Amendment," see 54 Emory L.J. 979 (2005).

For note, "Communist Aliens and the Right to Bail," see 2 J. of Pub. L. 165 (1953). For note discussing compulsory medical attention in light of constitutional protection of freedom of religion, see 22 Ga. B.J. 558 (1960). For note criticizing court reliance on "wall of separation" doctrine in interpreting "no establishment" clause, see 25 Ga. B.J. 319 (1963). For note discussing prejudicial publicity before and during trial in light of Sheppard v. Maxwell, 384 U.S. 333, 86 S. Ct. 1507, 16 L. Ed. 2d 600 (1966), see 16 J. of Pub. L. 215 (1967). For note advocating a separate obscenity standard for youth as a potential court escape route from the United States Supreme Court's "Supercensor" role, see 1 Ga. L. Rev. 707 (1967). For note suggesting the demise of the "Child Benefit" theory in regards to appropriation of public funds for transportation of pupils to private and public schools, see 18 Mercer L. Rev. 453 (1967). For note criticizing school policies governing student personal appearance, see 17 J. Pub. L. 151 (1968). For note criticizing Quiner v. Quiner, 57 Cal. Rptr. 503 (Ct. App. 1967), holding abnormal religious convictions of mother were not sufficient grounds upon which to deny custody of child, see 17 J. of Pub. L. 193 (1968). For note, "Substantive Due Process and Felony Treatment of Pot Smokers: The Current Conflict," see 2 Ga. L. Rev. 247 (1968). For notes, "Extension of Sullivan's Actual Malice Standard to Defamation of Public Figures," see 2 Ga. L. Rev. 393

(1968). For note discussing free speech and the parameters of the concept of "state action" in light of Food Employees Local 590 v. Logan Valley Plaza, Inc., 391 U.S. 308, 88 S. Ct. 1601, 20 L. Ed. 2d 603 (1968), see 20 Mercer L. Rev. 297 (1969). For note discussing the constitutional origins of the substantive right to family autonomy, see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 719 (1969). For note discussing limitations on national police power under this amendment, see 4 Ga. L. Rev. 359 (1970). For note discussing the unique position of policemen and firemen in reference to labor-management relations, see 5 Ga. L. Rev. 540 (1971). For note on public aid to private sectarian schools in light of this amendment, see 25 Mercer L. Rev. 349 (1974). For note discussing this amendment's protections afforded probationers, see 8 Ga. L. Rev. 466 (1974). For note discussing teachers' freedom of expression outside the classroom, see 8 Ga. L. Rev. 900 (1974). For note, "Behind Closed Doors: An Empirical Inquiry Into the Nature of Prison Discipline in Georgia," see 8 Ga. L. Rev. 919 (1974). For note, "Constitutionality of State Residency Requirements for Bar Admission," see 24 Emory L.J. 425 (1975). For note discussing constitutionality of zoning ordinances prohibiting clustering of adult movie theatres, in light of American Mini Theatres, Inc. v. Gribbs, 518 F.2d 1014 (6th Cir. 1975), see 10 Ga. L. Rev. 275 (1975). For note discussing the constitutionality of limiting political campaign costs and contributions in light of Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. 1, 96 S. Ct. 612, 46 L. Ed. 2d 659 (1976), see 25 Emory L.J. 400 (1976). For note analyzing sovereign immunity in this state and proposing implementation of a waiver scheme and creation of a court of claims pursuant to Ga. Const., Art. VI, Sec. V, see 27 Emory L.J. 717 (1978). For note applying this amendment's free speech tests to commercial and non-commercial defamation of corporations and their products and services, see 27 Emory L.J. 755 (1978). For note discussing this amendment's right of free speech as a source of enlightened and effective decision making by the citizenry, see 29 Mercer L. Rev. 811 (1978). For note on standards of fault governing litigants in defamation actions in light of this amendment's rights, see 29 Mercer L. Rev. 841 (1978). For note discussing the constitutional conflicts between civil rights and the free exercise of religion in private, racially segregated sectarian schools, see 29 Mercer L. Rev. 1099 (1978). For note, "Constitutionally Implied Causes of Action: A Policy of Protection, Expansion, or Restriction?" see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 1023 (1979). For note, "Christmas Carols in School Assemblies May be Constitutional," see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 627 (1980). For note, "Municipal Display of Religious Symbol Enjoined in California," see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 637 (1980). For note as to this amendment's rights of expression on shopping center property, see 32 Mercer L. Rev. 637 (1981). For note discussing abortion regulation in light of Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113, 93 S. Ct. 705, 35 L. Ed. 2d 147 (1973), see 15 Ga. L. Rev. 681 (1981). For note on broadcast negligence and the first amendment, see 33 Mercer L. Rev. 423 (1981). For note, "The Common Law Right to Inspect and Copy Judicial Records: In Camera or on Camera," see 16 Ga. L. Rev. 659 (1982). For note, "Conditioning Access to the Public Forum on the Purchase of Insurance," see 17 Ga. L. Rev. 815 (1983). For note, "An Assessment of the Use of Cameras in State and Federal Courts," see 18 Ga. L. Rev. 389 (1984). For note discussing the constitutionality of publicly displaying a crèche, see 36 Mercer L. Rev. 409 (1984). For note, "Circling the Wagons: Informational Privacy and Family Testimonial Privileges," see 20 Ga. L. Rev. 173 (1985). For note, "Clark v. Community for Creative Nonviolence: The Demise of First Amendment Protection for Symbolic Expression?" see 36 Mercer L. Rev. 1371 (1985). For note, "Zanderer v. Office of Disciplinary Counsel: More Competition in the Legal Marketplace Through Advertising," see 37 Mercer L. Rev. 1649 (1986). For note, "The Striker Amendment to the Food Stamp Act: Politics Chipping Away at the Union, Family, and Social Welfare," see 22 Ga. L. Rev. 741 (1988). For note, "Sexual Orientation Discrimination in the Wake of Bowers v. Hardwick," see 22 Ga. L. Rev. 773 (1988). For note, "Sharpening the Prongs of the Establishment Clause: Applying Stricter Scrutiny to Majority Religions," see 23 Ga. L. Rev. 1085 (1989). For note, "The Equal Access Act and Mergens: Balancing the Religion Clauses in Public Schools," see Ga. L. Rev. 1141 (1990). For note, "Webster v. Reproductive Health Services: What Remains of the Right to Choose?," see 41 Mercer L. Rev. 769 (1990). For note, "Florida Star v. B.J.F.: Can the State Regulate the Press in the Interest of Protecting the Privacy of Rape Victims?," see 41 Mercer L. Rev. 1061 (1990). For note, "Freedom of Religion Doesn't Mean Freedom From All Taxes: A Study of Jimmy Swaggart Ministries v. Board of Equalization of California," see 41 Mercer L. Rev. 1481 (1990). For note, "Free Exercise: A 'Hollow Promise' for the Native American in Employment Division, Department of Human Resources of Oregon v. Smith," see 42 Mercer L. Rev. 1597 (1991). For note, "Klan, Cloth and Constitution: Anti-mask Laws and the First Amendment," see 25 Ga. L. Rev. 819 (1991). For note, "Stalking the Stalker: Developing New Laws to Thwart Those Who Terrorize Others," see 27 Ga. L. Rev. 285 (1992). For note, "Haitian Centers Council, Inc. v. McNary: If at First You Don't Succeed . . .," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 959 (1993). For note, "Lee v. Weisman: No Reason to Give Thanks," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 985 (1993). For note, "R.A.V. v. City of St. Paul: The Right Decision, Flawed Reasoning," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 1015 (1993). For note, "Braun v. Soldier of Fortune Magazine, Inc.: Advertisement for Hit Man Brings Four Million Dollar Hit to Publisher," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 1349 (1993). For note on First Amendment protection of a religion's practice of animal sacrifice, see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 1357 (1993). For note, "Constitutional Conflict: The Establishment Clause Meets the Free Speech Clause in Lamb's Chapel v. Center Moriches Union Free School District," see 45 Mercer L. Rev. 875 (1994). For note, "Discussing Constitutional Problems with the 1992 Cable Act Must-Carry Regulation," see 11 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 429 (1995). For note, "Discussing Regulation of Pornography on Integrated Broadband Telecommunications Networks," see 11 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 465 (1995). For note on peremptory challenges based on religious affiliation in the jury selection process, see 29 Ga. L. Rev. 493 (1995). For note, "Board of Education of Kiryas Joel Village School District v. Grumet: A Missed Opportunity for the Supreme Court to Clarify Establishment Clause Analysis," see 46 Mercer L. Rev. 1189 (1995). For note, "First Amendment Facelift?: Rehnquist Court Crafts New Scrutiny Level for Content-Neutral, Speech Restricting Injunctions in Madsen v. Women's Health Center," see 46 Mercer L. Rev. No. 3 (1995). For note, "Women's Medical Professional Corp. v. Voinovich: Applying Overbreath Analysis to Post-Viability Abortion Regulations", see 30 Ga. L. Rev. 1151 (1996). For note, "Tilting at Windmills: Defamation and the Private Person in Cyberspace", see 13 Ga. St. U. L. Rev. 547 (1996). For review of 1996 civil practice legislation, see 13 Ga. St. U. L. Rev. 23 (1996). For review of 1996 legislation relating to filming or videotaping in the courtroom, see 13 Ga. St. U. L. Rev. 83 (1996). For note, "Another Case of Freedom vs. Safety: Stretching the First Amendment to Protect the Publication of Murder Manuals - Brandenburg Need Not Apply?" see 14 Ga. St. U.L. 875 (1998). For note, "National Endowment for the Arts v. Finley: First Amendment Free Speech No Longer Guaranteed for the Arts," see 50 Mercer L. Rev. 791 (1999). For note, "Dale v. Boy Scouts of America: New Jersey's Law Against Discrimination Weighs the Balance Between The First Amendment and the State's Compelling Interest in Eradicating Discrimination," see 16 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 3871 (1999). For note, "Chandler v. James: Welcoming Student Prayer Back in the Schoolhouse Gate," see 51 Mercer L. Rev. 1309 (2000). For note, "Greater New Orleans Broadcasting Ass'n v. United States: A Retreat from Full First Amendment Protection for Commercial Speech," see 51 Mercer L. Rev. 945 (2000). For note, "Bartnicki v. Vopper: The First Amendment versus Privacy and the Ghost of Louis Brandeis," see 53 Mercer L. Rev. 893 (2002). For note, see "Filtering Software in Public Libraries: Traditional Collection Decision or Congressionally Induced First Amendment Violation?," see 55 Mercer L. Rev. 1029 (2004). For note, "Locke v. Davey: The Fine Line Between Free Exercise and Establishment," see 56 Mercer L. Rev. 1093 (2005). For note, "Sticks and Stones and Shotguns at School: The Ineffectiveness of Constitutional Antibullying Legislation as a Response to School Violence," 39 Ga. L. Rev. 1109 (2005). For note, "Where's the Wall? Church Property Disputes within the Civil Courts and the Need for Consistent Application of the Law," 39 Ga. L. Rev. 1027 (2005). For note, "The Future of the Lemon Test: A Sweeter Alternative for Establishment Clause Analysis," 40 Ga. L. Rev. 1171 (2006). For note, "Holy Moses: What Do We Do With the Ten Commandments?," see 57 Mercer L. Rev. 645 (2006).

For comment on Hague v. Committee for Indus. Organization, 307 U.S. 496, 59 S. Ct. 954, 83 L. Ed. 1423 (1939), holding unconstitutional ordinances denying permission to hold meetings and distribute pamphlets to labor organizers, see 2 Ga. B.J. 61 (1939). For comment on Minersville School Dist. v. Gobitis, 108 F.2d 683 (3d Cir. 1939), holding unconstitutional compulsory flag-salute regulation in school, see 2 Ga. B.J. 74 (1940). For comment on Schneider v. New Jersey, 308 U.S. 147, 60 S. Ct. 146, 84 L. Ed. 155 (1939), holding unconstitutional municipal ordinances prohibiting distribution of handbills in public places, see 2 Ga. B.J. 76 (1940). For comment on Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 60 S. Ct. 900, 84 L. Ed. 1213 (1940), holding power of public official to determine what is a religious cause is unconstitutional infringement upon religious liberty, see 3 Ga. B.J. 68 (1940). For comment on Bridges v. California, 314 U.S. 252, 62 S. Ct. 190, 86 L. Ed. 192 (1941), holding free speech and press guarantees extend to publication concerning judicial proceedings pending in court, see 4 Ga. B.J. 63 (1942). For comment as to constitutional permissibility of state and municipal ordinances requiring permit to distribute religious literature, in light of Jamison v. Texas, 318 U.S. 413, 63 S. Ct. 669, 87 L. Ed. 869 (1943), see 5 Ga. B.J. 70 (1943). For comment on West Virginia State Bd. of Educ. v. Barnette, 319 U.S. 624, 63 S. Ct. 1178, 87 L. Ed. 1628 (1943), holding unconstitutional state law requiring flag salute by students, see 6 Ga. B.J. 249 (1944). For comment on United Pub. Workers v. Mitchell, 330 U.S. 75, 67 S. Ct. 556, 91 L. Ed. 754 (1947), upholding constitutionality of Hatch Act curbing political activity of state and federal employees, see 9 Ga. B.J. 459 (1947). For comment on Everson v. Board of Educ., 330 U.S. 1, 67 S. Ct. 504, 91 L. Ed. 711 (1947), upholding constitutionality of public transportation to children attending parochial schools, see 9 Ga. B.J. 461 (1947). For comment on McCullum v. Board of Educ., 333 U.S. 203, 68 S. Ct. 461, 92 L. Ed. 649 (1948), holding constitutionally impermissible religious education classes held during school hours, see

10 Ga. B.J. 499 (1948). For comment on Local 309, United Furn. Workers v. Gates, 75 F. Supp. 620 (N.D. Ind. 1948), holding presence of state police officers at union meeting denies workers' freedoms of speech and assembly, see 11 Ga. B.J. 233 (1948). For comment discussing permissible scope of statutes defining unlawful speech, in light of Terminiello v. City of Chicago, 337 U.S. 1, 69 S. Ct. 894, 93 L. Ed. 1131 (1949), see 1 Mercer L. Rev. 114 (1949). For comment discussing right to distribute religious material in apartment house, in light of Hall v. Commonwealth, 188 Va. 72, 49 S.E.2d 369 (1948), see 11 Ga. B.J. 369 (1949). For comment discussing right of parents to teach and instruct children, in light of Rice v. Commonwealth, 188 Va. 224, 49 S.E.2d 342 (1948), see 11 Ga. B.J. 376 (1949). For comment on Lawson v. United States, 176 F.2d 49 (D.C. Cir. 1949), holding rights of privacy and free association permitted script writers to refuse answers to H.U.A.C. questions on Communist party affiliations, see 12 Ga. B.J. 222 (1949). For comment discussing constitutionality of local motion picture censorship laws, in light of RD-DR Corp. & Film Classics, Inc. v. Smith, 183 F.2d 562 (5th Cir. 1950), see 13 Ga. B.J. 248 (1950). For comment on Doremus v. Board of Educ., 5 N.J. 435, 75 A.2d 880 (1950), holding constitutional statutes requiring Bible reading without comment in public school classrooms, see 13 Ga. B.J. 360 (1951). For comment discussing clear and present danger test, in light of United States v. Dennis, 183 F.2d 201 (2d Cir. 1950), see 13 Ga. B.J. 361 (1951). For comment discussing the constitutional issues involved in releasing students from public schools for periodic religious training, in light of Zorach v. Clauson, 303 N.Y. 161, 100 N.E.2d 463 (1951), aff'd, 343 U.S. 306, 72 S. Ct. 679, 96 L. Ed. 954 (1952), see 1 J. of Pub. L. 212 (1952). For comment discussing the constitutional conflicts involved where outside events, especially press coverage, tends to influence a defendant's opportunity for a fair trial, in light of Shepherd v. Florida, 341 U.S. 50, 71 S. Ct. 549, 95 L. Ed. 40 (1951), see 1 J. of Pub. L. 217 (1952). For comment "Moving Picture Censorship and the First Amendment," focusing on Burstyn v. Wilson, 278 App. Div. 253, 104 N.Y.S.2d 470 (1951), see 1 J. of Pub. L. 224 (1952). For comment "State Regulation of the Hatemonger," focusing on Beauharnais v. Illinois, 343 U.S. 250, 72 S. Ct. 725, 96 L. Ed. 919 (1952), see 1 J. of Pub. L. 519 (1952). For comment on Wieman v. Updegraff, 344 U.S. 183, 73 S. Ct. 215, 97 L. Ed. 216 (1952), as to constitutionality of loyalty oath for public employees, see 2 J. of Pub. L. 188 (1953). For comment on limits of state's control over church's disposition of property, in light of Kedroff v. St. Nicholas Cathedral, 344 U.S. 94, 73 S. Ct. 143, 97 L. Ed. 120 (1952), see 2 J. of Pub. L. 191 (1953). For comment on Zorach v. Clauson, 343 U.S. 306, 72 S. Ct. 679, 96 L. Ed. 954 (1952), see 15 Ga. B.J. 363 (1953). For comment on Beauharnais v. Illinois, 343 U.S. 250, 72 S. Ct. 725, 96 L. Ed. 919 (1952), see 15 Ga. B.J. 366 (1953). For comment on Fowler v. Rhode Island, 345 U.S. 67, 73 S. Ct. 526, 97 L. Ed. 828 (1953), see 16 Ga. B.J. 95 (1953). For comment discussing motion picture censorship, in light of Commercial Pictures Corp. v. Regents of Univ. of State of N.Y., 346 U.S. 587, 74 S. Ct. 286, 98 L. Ed. 329 (1954), see 5 Mercer L. Rev. 325 (1954). For comment on United States v. Rumely, 345 U.S. 41, 73 S. Ct. 543, 97 L. Ed. 770 (1953), holding the term "lobbying activities" within the meaning of a congressional resolution authorizing committee investigation does not include all activities other than representations made to members of Congress of one intending to influence legislation, such as the sale of books of a particular political nature, see 16 Ga. B.J. 350 (1954). For comment on New Am. Library of World Literature v. Allen, 114 F. Supp. 823 (N.D. Ohio 1953), holding police chief's threatening of local distributors with prosecution for sale of obscene literature published by plaintiff to the extralegal and beyond the scope of his authority, see 16 Ga. B.J. 494 (1954). For comment, "The 'Right to Work': Individual or Collective Right," focusing on Railway Employees' Dep't v. Hanson, 351 U.S. 225, 76 S. Ct. 714, 100 L. Ed. 1112 (1956), see 6 J. of Pub. L. 263 (1957). For comment on International Bhd. of Teamsters v. Vogt, Inc., 354 U.S. 284, 77 S. Ct. 1166, 1 L. Ed. 2d 1347 (1957) as to the constitutionality of enjoining picketing, see 6 J. of Pub. L. 534 (1957). For comment on Kingsley Books, Inc. v. Brown, 354 U.S. 436, 77 S. Ct. 1325, 1 L. Ed. 2d 1469 (1957), upholding the enjoining under a New York statute of distribution of certain obscene books, see 6 J. of Pub. L. 548 (1957). For comment on First Unitarian Church v. County of Los Angeles, 48 Cal. 2d 419, 311 P.2d 508 (1957), upholding requirement of loyalty oath as prerequisite to tax exemption, see 6 J. of Pub. L. 555 (1957). For comment on Methodist Fed'n for Social Action v. Eastland, 141 F. Supp. 729 (D.C. Cir. 1956) (three judges sitting), holding that the federal district court could not prevent the publication of a congressional handbook even though it falsely and defamatorily stated that plaintiff organization was a communist front, see 19 Ga. B.J. 366 (1957). For comment on Railway Employees' Dep't v. Hanson, 351 U.S. 225, 76 S. Ct. 714, 100 L. Ed. 1112 (1956), see 19 Ga. B.J. 550 (1957). For comment on Sweezy v. New Hampshire, 354 U.S. 234, 77 S. Ct. 1203, 1 L. Ed. 2d 1311 (1957), reversing a contempt conviction where appellant refused to testify on this amendment grounds, see 20 Ga. B.J. 411 (1958). For comment on Looper v. Georgia S. & F. Ry., 213 Ga. 279, 99 S.E.2d 101 (1957), holding that a shop agreement requiring employees to become a member of a labor organization and contribute dues to be distributed among various political organizations was in violation of the employees' rights as one cannot constitutionally be compelled to contribute moneys to support ideas which one opposes, see 20 Ga. B.J. 540 (1958). For comment on applicability of this amendment to the gathering of news, in light of Garland v. Torre, 259 F.2d 545 (2d Cir. 1958), see 8 J. of Pub. L. 596 (1959). For comment discussing the constitutionality of the statutory prohibition against expenditures by labor unions in connection with federal elections, 18 U.S.C. § 610, see 21 Ga. B.J. 575 (1959). For comment on Atlanta Newspapers, Inc. v. State, 101 Ga. App. 105, 113 S.E.2d 148 (1960), see 12 Mercer L. Rev. 284 (1960). For comment regarding right of witness in congressional contempt proceeding to refuse to testify under this amendment and U.S. Const., Amend. 5, in light of Barrenblatt v. United States, 360 U.S. 109, 79 S. Ct. 1081, 3 L. Ed. 2d 1115 (1959), see 22 Ga. B.J. 404 (1960). For comment discussing constitutionality of prior restraint of distribution of anonymous handbills, in light of California v. Talley, 172 Cal. App. 2d 797, 332 P.2d 447 (1958), see 23 Ga. B.J. 123 (1960). For comment on Nelson

v. County of Los Angeles, 362 U.S. 1, 80 S. Ct. 527, 4 L. Ed. 2d 494 (1959), holding due process not denied employees summarily dismissed for invocation of this amendment and U.S. Const., Amend. 5 before congressional subcommittee, see 23 Ga. B.J. 267 (1960). For comment on Atlanta Newspapers, Inc. v. Grimes, 216 Ga. 74, 114 S.E.2d 421 (1960), see 23 Ga. B.J. 406 (1961). For comment on Times Film Corp. v. Chicago, 365 U.S. 43, 81 S. Ct. 391, 5 L. Ed. 2d 403 (1961), holding censorship standards set by state to prevent public display of obscenity do not constitute prior restraint, see 23 Ga. B.J. 554 (1961). For comment discussing constitutionality of state loyalty oaths, in light of Shelton v. Tucker, 364 U.S. 479, 81 S. Ct. 247, 5 L. Ed. 2d 231 (1960), see 23 Ga. B.J. 556 (1961). For comment on Engel v. Vitale, 370 U.S. 421, 82 S. Ct. 1261, 8 L. Ed. 2d 601 (1962), and the unconstitutionality of state composed prayer in a public school, see 14 Mercer L. Rev. 284 (1962). For comment discussing constitutionality of legislation requiring employees to pay dues to railway union in order to maintain employment, in light of International Ass'n of Machinists v. Street, 367 U.S. 740, 81 S. Ct. 784, 6 L. Ed. 2d 1141 (1961), see 24 Ga. B.J. 432 (1962). For comment on Pierce v. LaVallee, 293 F.2d 233 (2d Cir. 1961), holding black muslimism is religion within meaning of this amendment, see 24 Ga. B.J. 519 (1962). For comment on Anderson v. Martin, 206 F. Supp. 700 (D. La. 1962), holding designation of race of candidates on ballot does not violate constitutional rights, see 25 Ga. B.J. 416 (1963). For comment discussing motion picture as protected as speech, in light of Atlanta v. Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp., 219 Ga. 271, 133 S.E.2d 12 (1963), see 26 Ga. B.J. 442 (1964). For comment discussing immunity of the press from libel or slander suit by "public official" in light of Rosenblatt v. Baer, 383 U.S. 75, 86 S. Ct. 669, 15 L. Ed. 2d 597 (1966), see 17 Mercer L. Rev. 476 (1966). For comment on Corinth Publications, Inc. v. Wesberry, 221 Ga. 704, 146 S.E.2d 767 (1966), as to determination of obscenity, see 17 Mercer L. Rev. 478 (1966). For comment on Reed v. Garner, 261 F. Supp. 87 (C.D. Cal. 1966), holding denial of medicare benefits to member of communist affiliated group as an infringement on this amendment's rights, see 16 J. of Pub. L.

240 (1967). For comment on Reed v. Gardner, 261 F. Supp. 87 (C.D. Cal. 1966) as to constitutionality of inquiry into Medicare applicant's political affiliation, see 18 Mercer L. Rev. 495 (1967). For comment discussing standard of malice in cases involving reckless disregard of truth, in light of St. Amant v. Thompson, 390 U.S. 727, 88 S. Ct. 1323, 20 L. Ed. 2d 262 (1968), see 17 J. of Pub. L. 426 (1968). For comment on Davis v. Firmant, 269 F. Supp. 524 (E.D. La. 1967) as to constitutionality of public schools regulation of student appearance, see 19 Mercer L. Rev. 252 (1968). For comment discussing probable cause for search warrant in obscenity case, in light of Lee Art Theatre, Inc. v. Virginia, 392 U.S. 636, 88 S. Ct. 2103, 20 L. Ed. 2d 1313 (1968) (per curiam), see 18 J. of Pub. L. 205 (1969). For comment on Tinker v. Des Moines Independent Community School Dist., 393 U.S. 503, 89 S. Ct. 733, 21 L. Ed. 2d 731 (1969), discussing limits on regulation of students' symbolic speech, see 20 Mercer L. Rev. 505 (1969). For comment on Stanley v. Georgia, 394 U.S. 557, 89 S. Ct. 1243, 22 L. Ed. 2d 542 (1969) as to constitutional protection of private possession of obscene material, see 21 Mercer L. Rev. 337 (1969). For comment on Sams v. Olah, 225 Ga. 497, 169 S.E.2d 790 (1969) as to the constitutionality of the State Bar Act (Art. 2, Ch. 19, T. 15), see 21 Mercer L. Rev. 355 (1969). For comment concerning free speech aspects of F.C.C. fairness doctrine, in light of Red Lion Broadcasting Co. v. F.C.C., 381 F.2d 908 (D.C. Cir. 1967), see 19 J. of Pub. L. 129 (1970). For comment discussing Machsky v. Bizzell, 414 F.2d 283 (5th Cir. 1969), as to federal court injunctions against state court actions banning picketing and urging of boycotts by civil rights organization, see 4 Ga. L. Rev. 610 (1970). For comment on Brooks v. Auburn Univ., 412 F.2d 1171 (5th Cir. 1969), as to the constitutionality of barring a speaker from appearing at a state university, see 21 Mercer L. Rev. 689 (1970). For comment on Presbyterian Church in the United States v. Mary Elizabeth Blue Hull Mem. Presbyterian Church, 225 Ga. 259, 167 S.E.2d 658 (1969), cert. denied, 396 U.S. 1041, 90 S. Ct. 680, 24 L. Ed. 2d 685 (1970), see 6 Ga. St. B.J. 438 (1970). For comment on Rosenbloom v. Metromedia, 403 U.S. 29, 91 S. Ct. 1811, 29 L. Ed. 2d 296 (1971), holding the application of this amendment's privilege in libel actions to be dependent upon whether or not the publication is a matter of public interest, see 20 J. of Pub. L. 601 (1971). For comment on Anderson v. Laird, 316 F. Supp. 1081 (D.C. Cir. 1970), as to religious regulations at military academies, see 5 Ga. L. Rev. 400 (1971). For comment discussing In re Adoption of "E.", 59 N.J. 36, 279 A.2d 785 (1971), as to the constitutionality of state court's refusal to approve adoption of child solely because of adopting parent's lack of religious beliefs, see 6 Ga. L. Rev. 221 (1971). For comment on Mary Doe v. Bolton, 319 F. Supp. 1048 (N.D. Ga. 1970), modified and aff'd, 410 U.S. 179, 93 S. Ct. 739, 35 L. Ed. 2d 201 (1973), as to unconstitutionality of statutory limitation on reasons for abortion, see 22 Mercer L. Rev. 461 (1971). For comment on Maddox v. Fortson, 226 Ga. 71, 172 S.E.2d 595, cert. denied, 397 U.S. 149, 90 S. Ct. 999, 25 L. Ed. 2d 183 (1970), as to the constitutionality under this amendment and U.S. Const., Amend. 14, of prohibiting succession by an incumbent Governor until after the expiration of a four-year period, see 22 Mercer L. Rev. 473 (1971). For comment discussing Lloyd Corp. v. Tanner, 407 U.S. 551, 92 S. Ct. 2219, 33 L. Ed. 2d 131 (1972), as to this amendment's protection for distribution of handbills in privately owned shopping center in situation where reasonable alternative locations for such activity are present, see 7 Ga. L. Rev. 177 (1972). For comment on Hobbs v. Thompson, 448 F.2d 456 (5th Cir. 1971), as to political activities by public employees, see 23 Mercer L. Rev. 995 (1972). For comment on Jenkins v. State, 230 Ga. 726, 199 S.E.2d 183 (1973), see 8 Ga. L. Rev. 225 (1973). For comment on Slaton v. Paris Adult Theatre I, 231 Ga. 312, 201 S.E.2d 456 (1973), see 8 Ga. L. Rev. 225 (1973). For comment discussing compulsory school attendance duty of parents despite religious convictions protected under this amendment in light of Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S. 205, 92 S. Ct. 1526, 32 L. Ed. 2d 15 (1972), see 24 Mercer L. Rev. 479 (1973). For comment discussing the constitutional standard for judging obscenity, in light of Miller v. California, 413 U.S. 15, 93 S. Ct. 2607, 37 L. Ed. 2d 419 (1973), see 10 Ga. St. B.J. 327 (1973). For comment criticizing Miller v. California, 413 U.S. 15, 93 S. Ct. 2607, 37 L. Ed. 2d 419 (1973), calling for application of contemporary community standards to determine obscenity, see 23 Emory L.J. 551 (1974). For comment criticizing Miami Herald Publishing Co. v. Tornillo, 418 U.S. 241, 94 S. Ct. 2831, 41 L. Ed. 2d 730 (1974), holding state right-of-reply statute intrudes upon the freedom of the press, see 24 Emory L.J. 217 (1975). For comment criticizing Bigelow v. Virginia, 421 U.S. 809, 95 S. Ct. 2222, 44 L. Ed. 2d 600 (1975), holding abortion advertisement protected by commercial speech doctrine, see 24 Emory L.J. 1165 (1975). For comment on Cox Broadcasting Corp. v. Cohn, 420 U.S. 469, 95 S. Ct. 1029, 43 L. Ed. 2d 328 (1975), holding a state may not impose sanctions on accurate publication of name of rape victim obtained from official court records, see 24 Emory L.J. 1205 (1975). For comment on Cox Broadcasting Corp. v. Cohn, 420 U.S. 469, 95 S. Ct. 1029, 43 L. Ed. 2d 328 (1975), see 9 Ga. L. Rev. 963 (1975). For comment on permissibility of court rules restricting attorney's right to comment publicly on litigation, in light of Chicago Council of Lawyers v. Bauer, 522 F.2d 242 (7th Cir. 1975), see 10 Ga. L. Rev. 289 (1975). For comment discussing defamatory falsehoods and this amendment's protection in light of Time, Inc. v. Firestone, 424 U.S. 448, 96 S. Ct. 958, 47 L. Ed. 2d 154 (1976), see 25 Emory L.J. 705 (1976). For comment on constitutionality of municipal ban on "for sale" and "sold" signs on residential property to prevent panic selling, in light of Linmark Assocs. v. Township of Willingboro, 535 F.2d 786 (3d Cir. 1976), see 11 Ga. L. Rev. 230 (1976). For comment on Eastland v. United States Servicemen's Fund, 421 U.S. 491, 95 S. Ct. 1813, 44 L. Ed. 324 (1975), refusing to allow this amendment's exception to the privilege of legislative immunity, see 27 Mercer L. Rev. 1195 (1976). For comment on Linmark Assocs. v. Township of Willingboro, 431 U.S. 85, 97 S. Ct. 1614, 52 L. Ed. 2d 155 (1977), as to free speech violation by local ordinance banning "for sale" and "sold" signs on residential property, see 26 Emory L.J. 913 (1977). For comment discussing constitutionality of regulating location of "Adult Theaters" on basis of film content in light of Young v. American Mini Theaters, 427 U.S. 50, 96 S. Ct. 2440, 49 L. Ed. 2d 310 (1976), see 28 Mercer L. Rev. 587 (1977). For comment on Coleman v. Bradford, 238 Ga. 505, 233 S.E.2d 764 (1977), see 29 Mercer L. Rev. 335 (1977). For comment on Jones v. North Carolina Prisoners' Labor Union, Inc., 433 U.S. 119, 97 S. Ct. 2532, 53 L. Ed. 2d 629 (1977) upholding certain prison regulations relating to prisoners "union," see 27 Emory L.J. 137 (1978). For comment discussing doctrine of substituted judgment and constitutional underpinnings of a qualified right to refuse medical treatment asserted for an incompetent, in light of Superintendent of Belchertown State School v. Saikewicz, 370 N.E.2d 417 (Mass. 1977), see 27 Emory L.J. 425 (1978). For comment on Zacchini v. Scripps-Howard Broadcasting Co., 433 U.S. 562, 97 S. Ct. 2849, 53 L. Ed. 2d 965 (1977), as to media's nonprotection under this amendment and U.S. Const., Amend. 14 from suit by performer whose "right of publicity" has been infringed, see 29 Mercer L. Rev. 861 (1978). For comment discussing impact of this amendment upon state statute prohibiting corporate spending to influence voters on referenda not materially affecting corporation's business in light of First Nat'l Bank v. Bellotti, 435 U.S. 765, 98 S. Ct. 1407, 55 L. Ed. 2d 707 (1978), see 28 Emory L.J. 183 (1979). For comment on Givhan v. Western Line Consol. School Dist., 439 U.S. 410, 99 S. Ct. 693, 58 L. Ed. 2d 619 (1979), see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 1079 (1979). For comment, "Church Property Disputes: The Trend and the Alternative," see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 559 (1980). For comment, "The Extent of Accommodation to Employees' Religious Practices Under Title VII: Developments Since Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Hardison," see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 595 (1980). For comment, "Private Search and Prior Restraint of Obscene Materials: The Interaction of Two Doctrines," see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 1029 (1980). For comment on Shakman v. Democratic Organization, 481 F. Supp. 1315 (N.D. Ill. 1979), regarding constitutionality of patronage hiring practices based on political affiliation, see 29 Emory L.J. 1217 (1980). For comment discussing the forcible medication of involuntarily committed mental patients with antipsychotic drugs in light of Rogers v. Okin, 634 F.2d 650 (1st Cir. 1980), see 15 Ga. L. Rev. 739 (1981). For comment discussing the legality of secondary boycotts, in light of NLRB v. Retail Store Employees Local 1001 (Safeco), 447 U.S. 607, 100 S. Ct.

2372, 65 L. Ed. 2d 377 (1980), and Soft Drink Workers Local 812 v. NLRB, No. 79-1888 (D.C. Cir. Oct. 3, 1980), see 15 Ga. L. Rev. 763 (1981). For comment on the definition of religion under the federal Constitution, see 31 Emory L.J. 973 (1982). For comment on Widmar v. Vincent, 450 U.S. 909, 102 S. Ct. 269, 67 L. Ed. 2d 332 (1981), and discussion of the conflict between the religion clauses of the first amendment, see 33 Mercer L. Rev. 1283 (1982). For comment on Terrebonne v. Blackburn, 646 F.2d 997 (5th Cir. 1981), and discussion of proportionality principle in sentencing, see 33 Mercer L. Rev. 1365 (1982). For comment on Widmar v. Vincent, 454 U.S. 263 (1981), holding that a state university's policy of equal access to campus facilities for all organizations including those of a religious character does not violate the establishment of religion clause of the first amendment, see 32 Emory L.J. 319 (1983). For comment, "First Amendment Right of Access to Pre-trial Proceedings in Criminal Cases," see 32 Emory L.J. 619 (1983). For comment, "Free Press, Privacy, and Privilege: Protection of Researcher-Subject Communications," see 17 Ga. L. Rev. 1009 (1983). For comment on ACLU v. Rabun County Chamber of Commerce, Inc., 698 F.2d 1098 (11th Cir. 1983), see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 1603 (1983). For comment, "A Regulatory Theory of Copyright: Avoiding a First Amendment Conflict," see 35 Emory L.J. 163 (1986). For comment, "The Federal Highway Beautification Act After Metromedia," see 35 Emory L.J. 419 (1986). For comment, "Private Citizens in Foreign Affairs: A Constitutional Analysis," see 36 Emory L.J. 285 (1987). For comment, "Misrepresentation in Political Advertising: The Role of Legal Sanctions," see 36 Emory L.J. 853 (1987). For comment, "The Constitutional Implications of Mandatory Testing for Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome — AIDS," see 37 Emory L.J. 217 (1988). For case comment, "Stein v. Plainwell Community Schools: The Constitutionality of Prayer in Public High School Commencement Exercises," see 22 Ga. L. Rev. 469 (1988). For comment, "Lee v. Dong-A Ilbo: Use of Official Report Privilege to Protect Defamatory Statements in Press Account Based on Foreign Government Report," see 23 Ga. L. Rev. 275 (1988). For comment, "First Amendment Implications of State Takeover Legislation," see 38 Emory L.J. 827 (1989). For comment, "Defamation and Employment Relationships: the New Meanings of Private Speech, Publication, and Privilege," see 38 Emory L.J. 871 (1989). For comment, "An Establishment Clause Analysis of Webster v. Reproductive Health Services," see 24 Ga. L. Rev. 399 (1990). For comment, "Closing the Campus Gates to Free Expression: The Regulation of Offensive Speech at Colleges and Universities," see 39 Emory L.J. 1351 (1990). For comment, "The Politicization of Art: The National Endowment for the Arts, the First Amendment, and Senator Helms," see 40 Emory L.J. 241 (1991). For comment, "Employment Division, Department of Human Resources v. Smith: The Supreme Court Deserts the Free Exercise Clause," see 25 Ga. L. Rev. 567 (1991). For comment, "Dances With Justice: Peyotism in the Courts," see 41 Emory L.J. 1121 (1992). For comment, "Can Anyone Own a Piece of the Clock?: The Troublesome Application of Copyright Law to Works of Historical Fiction, Interpretation, and Theory," see 42 Emory L.J. 253 (1993). For comment, "Phone, Fax, and Frustration: Electronic Commercial Speech and Nuisance Law," see 42 Emory L.J. 359 (1993). For comment, "Fishkin and Precedent: Liberal Political Theory and the Normative Uses of History," see 42 Emory L.J. 647 (1993). For comment, "Must God Regulate Religious Corporations? A Proposal for Reform of the Religious Corporation Provisions of the Revised Model Nonprofit Corporation Act," see 42 Emory L.J. 721 (1993). For comments, "First Covenant Church v. City of Seattle: The Washington Supreme Court Fortifies the Free Exercise Rights of Religious Landmarks Against Historic Preservation Restrictions," see 27 Ga. L. Rev. 589 (1993). For comment, "Sex, Violence, and Profanity: Rap Music and the First Amendment," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 667 (1993). For comment, "The Reporter's Privilege in Georgia: 'Qualified' to Do the Job?," see 9 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 495 (1993). For comment, "Media Hybrids and the First Amendment: Constitutional Signposts Along the Information Superhighway," see 44 Emory L.J. 213 (1995). For comment on the use of federal statutes against abortion protestors, see 44 Emory L.J. 433 (1995). For comment on hunter harassment statutes, see 48 Emory

L.J. 1023 (1999). For comment, “The Government’s Right to Read: Maintaining State Access to Digital Data in the Age of Impenetrable Encryption,” see 49 Emory L.J. 711 (2006). For comment, “Personal Jurisdiction and the Internet: Waiting for the Other Shoe to Drop on First Amendment Concerns,” see 51 Mercer L. Rev. 919 (2000). Dale v. Boy Scouts of America: Whether the application of New Jersey’s Public Accommodations Law, forcing the Boy Scouts to include an avowed homosexual, violates the Scouts’ First Amendment Freedom of Expressive Association, see 52 Mercer L. Rev.

745 (2001). For comment, “No Need to Stand on Ceremony: The Corruptive Influence of Ceremonial Deism and the Need for a Separationist Reconfiguration of the Supreme Court’s Establishment Clause Jurisprudence,” see 54 Mercer L. Rev. 1669 (2003). For comment, “‘The Forgotten Child of Our Constitution’: The Parental Free Exercise Right to Direct the Education and Religious Upbringing of Children,” see 54 Emory L.J. 641 (2005). For comment, “Regulating Nonconnected 527s: Unnecessary, Unwise, and Inconsistent with the First Amendment,” see 55 Emory L.J. 193 (2006).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

SCOPE AND PURPOSE

- 1. IN GENERAL
- 2. BALANCING INTERESTS OF CITIZEN AND STATE
- 3. OVERBROAD LEGISLATION
- 4. INTERVENTION AND INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

FREEDOM OF RELIGION

- 1. SCOPE OF FREE EXERCISE
- 2. STATE ACTIONS AFFECTING RELIGION
- 3. FEDERAL ACTIONS AFFECTING RELIGION
- 4. CLERGY
- 5. PRISONERS
- 6. SCHOOLS AND EDUCATION

FREEDOM OF SPEECH AND PRESS

- 1. IN GENERAL
- 2. LIMITATIONS
- 3. REGULATORY POWERS
- 4. PRIOR RESTRAINT
- 5. BROADCASTING
- 6. EMPLOYER — EMPLOYEE RELATIONS
- 7. LIBEL AND SLANDER
- 8. OBSCENITY
- 9. POLITICAL ACTIVITIES
- 10. PRISONERS
- 11. SCHOOLS AND UNIVERSITIES
- 12. COMMERCIAL SPEECH
- 13. ELECTRONIC COMMUNICATION
- 14. CRIMINAL MATTERS

FREEDOM OF ASSOCIATION

REDRESS OF GRIEVANCES

General Consideration

Where plaintiff alleges statutory and constitutional predicates, federal court must assume jurisdiction. — Where a plaintiff alleges 28 U.S.C. § 1343(3), in conjunction with 42 U.S.C. § 1983, as the jurisdictional predicate, and alleges federal constitutional predicates, such as fourteenth amendment property rights, first amendment rights to free speech and association, and fifth amendment just compensation or “taking” clause, a federal court must assume jurisdiction to decide whether the allegations state a cause of action on which the court can grant relief, as well as to determine issues of fact arising in the controversy. Stone Mt. Game Ranch, Inc. v. Hunt, 570 F. Supp. 238 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 746 F.2d 761 (11th Cir. 1984).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Conspiracy claims may be asserted against federal officials. — Conspiracy claims based on alleged violations of U.S. Const., amend. 1 may be asserted against federal officials as well as against those acting under color of state law. McDowell v. Cheney, 718 F. Supp. 1531 (M.D. Ga. 1989), aff'd, 9 F.3d 1559 (11th Cir. 1993).

Statute of limitations. — Where plaintiff's original complaint, based on 42 U.S.C. § 1983 violations, was filed within two years after the injury, and plaintiff asserted a first amendment claim in an amendment, even though the first amendment expression arose out of the plaintiff's prior activities, the plaintiff's claim for violation of such right arose out of defendant's acts which were the basis of the § 1983 claim and related back to the date of the original complaint. Blue Ridge Mt. Fisheries, Inc. v. Department of Natural Resources, 217 Ga. App. 89, 456 S.E.2d 651 (1995).

Cited in RD-DR Corp. v. Smith, 183 F.2d 562 (5th Cir. 1950); McGill v. State, 209 Ga. 282, 71 S.E.2d 548 (1952); Atlanta Newspapers, Inc. v. State, 101 Ga. App. 105, 113 S.E.2d 148 (1960); Wolfe v. City of Albany, 189 F. Supp. 217 (M.D. Ga. 1960); Suggs v. Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen & Enginemen, 219 F. Supp. 770 (M.D. Ga. 1960); Wilkinson v. United States, 365 U.S. 399, 81 S. Ct. 567, 5 L. Ed. 2d 633 (1961); Braden v. United States, 365 U.S. 431, 81 S. Ct. 584, 5 L. Ed. 2d 653 (1961); International Ass'n of Machinists v. Street, 367 U.S. 740, 81 S. Ct. 1784, 6 L. Ed. 2d 1141 (1961); Williams v. State, 217 Ga. 312, 122 S.E.2d 229 (1961); City of Atlanta v. Lopert Pictures Corp., 217 Ga. 432, 122 S.E.2d 916 (1961); International Longshoremen's Ass'n v. Georgia Ports Auth., 217 Ga. 712, 124 S.E.2d 733 (1962); City of Atlanta v. Columbia Pictures Corp., 218 Ga. 714, 130 S.E.2d 490 (1963); Anderson v. City of Albany, 321 F.2d 649 (5th Cir. 1963); Rogers v. Mayor of Atlanta, 219

Ga. 799, 136 S.E.2d 342 (1964); Walker v. State, 220 Ga. 415, 139 S.E.2d 278 (1964); Mack v. Connor, 220 Ga. 450, 139 S.E.2d 286 (1964); Willis v. Pickrick Restaurant, 231 F. Supp. 396 (N.D. Ga. 1964); Curtis Publishing Co. v. Butts, 351 F.2d 702 (5th Cir. 1965); Barnum v. Chambliss, 247 F. Supp. 794 (M.D. Ga. 1965); Georgia v. Rachel, 384 U.S. 780, 86 S. Ct. 1783, 16 L. Ed. 2d 925 (1966); Carmichael v. Allen, 267 F. Supp. 985 (N.D. Ga. 1966); Wilson v. State, 223 Ga. 531, 156 S.E.2d 446 (1967); Southwire Co. v. NLRB, 383 F.2d 235 (5th Cir. 1967); Epstein v. Maddox, 277 F. Supp. 613 (N.D. Ga. 1967); Troutman v. Southern Ry., 296 F. Supp. 963 (N.D. Ga. 1968); Sams v. Olah, 225 Ga. 497, 169 S.E.2d 790 (1969); Graves v. Walton County Bd. of Educ., 410 F.2d 1153 (5th Cir. 1969); Walker v. Blackwell, 411 F.2d 23 (5th Cir. 1969); Wesley v. City of Savannah, 294 F. Supp. 698 (S.D. Ga. 1969); Bon Air Hotel, Inc. v. Time, Inc., 295 F. Supp. 704 (S.D. Ga. 1969); Great Speckled Bird v. Stynchcombe, 298 F. Supp. 1291 (N.D. Ga. 1969); Cato v. Georgia, 302 F. Supp. 1143 (N.D. Ga. 1969); Wilson v. Gooding, 431 F.2d 855 (5th Cir. 1970); Porter v. Kimzey, 309 F. Supp. 993 (N.D. Ga. 1970); United States v. Bob Lawrence Realty, Inc., 313 F. Supp. 870 (N.D. Ga. 1970); Georgia Socialist Workers Party v. Fortson, 315 F. Supp. 1035 (N.D. Ga. 1970); Jenness v. Fortson, 403 U.S. 431, 91 S. Ct. 1970, 29 L. Ed. 2d 554 (1971); 1024 Peachtree Corp. v. Slaton, 228 Ga. 102, 184 S.E.2d 144 (1971); Edwards v. Sammons, 437 F.2d 1240 (5th Cir. 1971); United States ex rel. Huguley v. Martin, 325 F. Supp. 489 (N.D. Ga. 1971); United States v. Mitchell, 327 F. Supp. 476 (N.D. Ga. 1971); Cooley v. Endictor, 340 F. Supp. 15 (N.D. Ga. 1971); Dudley v. State, 228 Ga. 551, 186 S.E.2d 875 (1972); Breaux v. State, 230 Ga. 506, 197 S.E.2d 695 (1973); Fishman v. State, 128 Ga. App. 505, 197 S.E.2d 467 (1973); Sonesta Int'l Hotels Corp. v. Colony Square Co., 482 F.2d 281 (5th Cir. 1973); Goodman v. Ault, 358 F. Supp. 743 (N.D. Ga. 1973); United States v. Best, 363 F. Supp. 11 (S.D. Ga. 1973); Hipple v. Warner, 368 F. Supp. 301 (N.D. Ga. 1973); Jenkins v. Georgia, 418 U.S. 153, 94 S. Ct. 2750, 41 L. Ed. 2d 642 (1974); Granese v. State, 232 Ga. 193, 206 S.E.2d 26 (1974); Dyke v. State, 232 Ga. 817, 209 S.E.2d 166 (1974); Jones v. Ault, 67 F.R.D. 124 (S.D. Ga. 1974); State v. Young, 234 Ga.

488, 216 S.E.2d 586 (1975); Calley v. Callaway, 519 F.2d 184 (5th Cir. 1975); Board of Educ. v. AFSCME, 401 F. Supp. 687 (N.D. Ga. 1975); Davis v. Griffin-Spalding County Bd. of Educ., 445 F. Supp. 1048 (N.D. Ga. 1975); United States v. Miller, 425 U.S. 435, 96 S. Ct. 1619, 48 L. Ed. 2d 71 (1976); Ballew v. State, 138 Ga. App. 530, 227 S.E.2d 65 (1976); Hall v. State, 139 Ga. App. 488, 229 S.E.2d 12 (1976); Thomas v. State, 237 Ga. 690, 229 S.E.2d 458 (1976); Watts v. Six Flags Over Ga., Inc., 140 Ga. App. 106, 230 S.E.2d 34 (1976); United States v. King, 532 F.2d 505 (5th Cir. 1976); Nelson v. Rosenthal, 539 F.2d 1034 (5th Cir. 1976); Ashworth v. Fortson, 424 F. Supp. 1178 (N.D. Ga. 1976); Scott v. McDonald, 70 F.R.D. 568 (N.D. Ga. 1976); Pittman v. Cohn Communities, Inc., 240 Ga. 106, 239 S.E.2d 526 (1977); Cargal v. State, 144 Ga. App. 238, 241 S.E.2d 8 (1977); Roberts v. Cameron-Brown Co., 556 F.2d 356 (5th Cir. 1977); United States v. Southern Motor Carriers Rate Conference, 439 F. Supp. 29 (N.D. Ga. 1977); Simpson v. State, 144 Ga. App. 657, 242 S.E.2d 265 (1978); Underwood v. State, 144 Ga. App. 684, 242 S.E.2d 339 (1978); Pierce v. State, 145 Ga. App. 680, 244 S.E.2d 589 (1978); Farmer v. Holton, 146 Ga. App. 102, 245 S.E.2d 457 (1978); Hess v. State, 146 Ga. App. 874, 247 S.E.2d 546 (1978); Beall v. Department of Revenue, 148 Ga. App. 5, 251 S.E.2d 4 (1978); Speight v. State, 148 Ga. App. 87, 251 S.E.2d 36 (1978); Paperback Book Mart, Inc. v. State, 148 Ga. App. 377, 251 S.E.2d 396 (1978); Love v. Sessions, 568 F.2d 357 (5th Cir. 1978); Rosanova v. Playboy Enters., Inc., 580 F.2d 859 (5th Cir. 1978); Willingham v. Carter, 447 F. Supp. 301 (S.D. Ga. 1978); United States v. Brown Transp. Corp., 448 F. Supp. 773 (N.D. Ga. 1978); High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 449 F. Supp. 364 (N.D. Ga. 1978); Evans v. Just Open Gov't, 242 Ga. 834, 251 S.E.2d 546 (1979); Wilson v. Thompson, 593 F.2d 1375 (5th Cir. 1979); Doe v. Busbee, 471 F. Supp. 1326 (N.D. Ga. 1979); Playmate Cinema, Inc. v. State, 154 Ga. App. 871, 269 S.E.2d 883 (1980); Hodges v. Tomberlin, 510 F. Supp. 1280 (S.D. Ga. 1980); Gateway Books, Inc. v. State, 247 Ga. 16, 276 S.E.2d 1 (1981); Williams v. Church's Fried Chicken, Inc., 158 Ga. App. 26, 279 S.E.2d 465 (1981); McCrary v. Poythress, 638 F.2d 1308 (5th Cir. 1981); Thomasville Branch of NAACP v. Thomas County, 639 F.2d 1384 (5th Cir.

1981); Exxon Corp. v. Busbee, 644 F.2d 1030 (5th Cir. 1981); Gresham Park Community Org. v. Howell, 652 F.2d 1227 (5th Cir. 1981); Bailey v. Vining, 514 F. Supp. 452 (M.D. Ga. 1981); Dunten v. Kibler, 518 F. Supp. 1146 (N.D. Ga. 1981); Windfaire, Inc. v. Busbee, 523 F. Supp. 868 (N.D. Ga. 1981); Dills v. City of Marietta, 674 F.2d 1377 (11th Cir. 1982); Ambassador College v. Geotzke, 675 F.2d 662 (5th Cir. 1982); Kyle v. Hanberry, 677 F.2d 1386 (11th Cir. 1982); Lamar v. Banks, 684 F.2d 714 (11th Cir. 1982); Clemons v. Dougherty County, 684 F.2d 1365 (11th Cir. 1982); Pierson v. News Group Publications, Inc., 549 F. Supp. 635 (S.D. Ga. 1982); Rhodes v. Gwinnett County, 557 F. Supp. 30 (N.D. Ga. 1982); Ray v. Edwards, 557 F. Supp. 664 (N.D. Ga. 1982); Hill Aircraft & Leasing Corp. v. Fulton County, 561 F. Supp. 667 (N.D. Ga. 1982); Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 702 F.2d 925 (11th Cir. 1983); Fiske v. Lockheed-Georgia Co., 568 F. Supp. 590 (N.D. Ga. 1983); Kleiner v. First Nat'l Bank, 102 F.R.D. 754 (N.D. Ga. 1983); Caldwell v. Bateman, 252 Ga. 144, 312 S.E.2d 320 (1984); Ray v. Edwards, 725 F.2d 655 (11th Cir. 1984); Stone Mt. Game Ranch, Inc. v. Hunt, 746 F.2d 761 (11th Cir. 1984); Cotton States Mut. Ins. Co. v. Anderson, 749 F.2d 663 (11th Cir. 1984); American Booksellers Ass'n v. Webb, 590 F. Supp. 677 (N.D. Ga. 1984); Watkins v. State, 254 Ga. 267, 328 S.E.2d 537 (1985); Holley v. Seminole County Sch. Dist., 763 F.2d 399 (11th Cir. 1985); Kelly v. Macon-Bibb County Bd. of Elections, 608 F. Supp. 1036 (M.D. Ga. 1985); Jersawitz v. Hanberry, 610 F. Supp. 535 (N.D. Ga. 1985); Stevens v. Gay, 792 F.2d 1000 (11th Cir. 1986); Speedway Grading Corp. v. Gardner, 206 Ga. App. 439, 425 S.E.2d 676 (1992); Top Shelf, Inc. v. Mayor & Alderman ex rel. City of Savannah, 832 F. Supp. 361 (S.D. Ga. 1993); Ford v. City of Oakwood, 905 F. Supp. 1063 (N.D. Ga. 1995); Anderson v. State, 231 Ga. App. 807, 499 S.E.2d 717 (1998); Cox v. Barber, 275 Ga. 415, 568 S.E.2d 478 (2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1109, 123 S. Ct. 851, 154 L. Ed. 2d 780 (2003).

Scope and Purpose

1. In General

Right to receive information and ideas, regardless of their social worth, is fundamental to free society. Stanley v. Georgia, 394 U.S. 557, 89 S. Ct. 1243, 22 L. Ed. 2d 542 (1969).

Scope and Purpose (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

U.S. Const., amend. 1 gives freedom of mind the same security as freedom of conscience. Stoner v. Thompson, 377 F. Supp. 585 (M.D. Ga. 1974).

Clear and present danger required for restricting rights. — No public official, absent a showing of clear and present danger, can restrict rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1. Stoner v. Thompson, 377 F. Supp. 585 (M.D. Ga. 1974).

Great secular causes, with small ones, are guarded. — The grievances for redress of which the right of petition was ensured, and with it the right of assembly, are not solely religious or political ones; the rights of free speech and free press are not confined to any field of human interest. Stoner v. Thompson, 377 F. Supp. 585 (M.D. Ga. 1974).

Guarantees in U.S. Const., amend. 1 are protected by U.S. Const., amend. 14. Westberry v. Gilman Paper Co., 507 F.2d 206 (5th Cir. 1975).

First amendment rights take priority over national policy promoting racial integration. — Rights guaranteed under U.S. Const., amend. 1 are rights more compelling than any national policy promoting racial integration. Daugherty v. City of E. Point, 447 F. Supp. 290 (N.D. Ga. 1978).

Constitutional protection is presumed. — Constitutional protection under U.S. Const., amend. 1 is presumed, and exceptions to protection are few in number. High Oil Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 456 F. Supp. 1035 (N.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 621 F.2d 141 (5th Cir. 1980).

Under U.S. Const., amend. 1 there is no such thing as a false idea. Lindsey v. Board of Regents, 607 F.2d 672 (5th Cir. 1979).

Independent review of constitutional claims. — The first amendment values applicable to states are protected by powers vested in appellate courts to make an independent review of constitutional claims. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 610 F.2d 1353 (5th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 447 U.S. 931, 100 S. Ct. 3031, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1131 (1980).

The first amendment values applicable to states through U.S. Const., amend. 14 are adequately protected by the ultimate power of appellate courts to conduct an independent review of constitutional claims when necessary. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 610 F.2d 1353 (5th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 447 U.S. 931, 100 S. Ct. 3031, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1131 (1980).

First amendment, in conjunction with fourteenth, prohibits governments from "abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances." These expressly guaranteed freedoms share a common core purpose of assuring freedom of communication on matters relating to the functioning of government. CNN, Inc. v. ABC, 518 F. Supp. 1238 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

When rights subject to regulation. — First amendment rights are not immunized from regulation when they are used as an integral part of conduct which violates a valid statute. United States v. Southern Motor Carriers Rate Conference, Inc., 672 F.2d 469 (5th Cir. 1982), on rehearing, 702 F.2d 532 (5th Cir. 1984), rev'd on other grounds, 471 U.S. 48, 105 S. Ct. 1721, 85 L. Ed. 2d 36 (1985).

Collection of records implicating rights. — Even where records implicating an individual's first amendment rights are involved, the prohibition against collection of such records is not absolute. Clarkson v. IRS, 678 F.2d 1368 (11th Cir. 1982), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1031, 107 S. Ct. 1961, 95 L. Ed. 2d 533 (1987).

No first amendment right to accident reports. — Private investigator seeking information for commercial solicitation has no first amendment constitutional right of special access to motor vehicle accident reports. Spottsville v. Barnes, 135 F. Supp. 2d 1316 (N.D. Ga. 2001).

Motorcycle helmet law. — There is no first amendment right to ride a motorcycle wearing a baseball cap, a bandanna, or bareheaded. ABATE of Ga., Inc. v. Georgia, 137 F. Supp. 2d 1349 (N.D. Ga. 2001), aff'd, 264 F.3d 1315 (11th Cir. 2001).

2. Balancing Interests of Citizen and State

Limitation upon individual liberty must have appropriate relation to the safety of the state. — Legislation which goes beyond this need violates the principle of the Constitution. Wolfe v. City of Albany, 104 Ga. App. 264, 121 S.E.2d 331 (1961).

Rights protected by U.S. Const., amend. 1, though fundamental, are not absolute, and must be tempered to a degree by the concepts of order and a healthy respect for the rights of other citizens. Alonso v. State, 231 Ga. 444, 202 S.E.2d 37 (1973), appeal dismissed, 417 U.S. 938, 94 S. Ct. 3062, 41 L. Ed. 2d 661 (1974).

Civil liberties, as guaranteed by the Constitution, imply the existence of an organized society maintaining public order without which liberty itself would be lost in the excesses of unrestrained abuses. Community Action Group v. City of Columbus, 473 F.2d 966 (5th Cir. 1973).

Two-tier test is utilized to determine whether an infringement of first amendment's rights is permissible. — First, there must be shown to exist a significant or compelling state interest served by the statute in question. Second, it must be determined whether there is a substantial relationship between the statute and the stated purpose, or compelling interest, of the state. Stoner v. Fortson, 379 F. Supp. 704 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

Ordinance regulating sale and consumption of alcohol on adult premises. — The constitutionality of the ordinance was upheld and the County Board of Commissioners committed no error in employing a "reasonable belief" standard in scrutinizing the studies the county relied upon in enacting the ordinance that prohibited the sale and consumption of alcohol at adult entertainment establishments. In re Gaff, 272 Ga. 7, 524 S.E.2d 728 (2000).

First amendment freedoms are not absolute. — They are properly restricted when sufficiently important governmental interest appears. Therault v. Carlson, 495 F.2d 390 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1003, 95 S. Ct. 323, 42 L. Ed. 2d 279 (1974), later appeal, 547 F.2d 1279 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 871, 98 S. Ct. 216, 54 L. Ed. 2d 150 (1977).

Conflict between legislative power and individual rights must be accommodated by legislation drawn more narrowly to avoid the conflict. A statute touching protected rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1 must be narrowly drawn to define and punish specific conduct as constituting a clear and present danger to a substantial interest of the state. Hobbs v. Thompson, 448 F.2d 456 (5th Cir. 1971).

States bear the burden of proving exceptions to constitutional protection. — States bear the burden of proving that a particular exception to the protection of U.S. Const., amend. 1 is applicable. High Oil Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 456 F. Supp. 1035 (N.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 621 F.2d 141 (5th Cir. 1980).

Ultimate balancing of interests of citizen and state with regard to first amendment protection remains in sphere of court. Williams v. Board of Regents, 629 F.2d 993 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 452 U.S. 926, 101 S. Ct. 3063, 69 L. Ed. 2d 428 (1981).

U.S. Const., amend. 1 is a restraint on government, not on private persons. Belluso v. Turner Communications Corp., 633 F.2d 393 (5th Cir. 1980).

3. Overbroad Legislation

Standards of permissible statutory vagueness are strict in the area of free expression. Because U.S. Const., amend. 1's freedoms need breathing space to survive, government may regulate in the area only with narrow specificity. Wilson v. Gooding, 303 F. Supp. 952 (N.D. Ga.), appeal dismissed, 396 U.S. 112, 90 S. Ct. 397, 24 L. Ed. 2d 306 (1969), aff'd, 431 F.2d 855 (5th Cir. 1970), 405 U.S. 518, 92 S. Ct. 1103, 31 L. Ed. 2d 408 (1972).

First amendment rights have assumed a protected place in the jurisprudence. Great care must be taken to assure that vague or overbroad laws do not infringe upon constitutional rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1. Wilson v. Gooding, 303 F. Supp. 952 (N.D. Ga.), appeal dismissed, 396 U.S. 112, 90 S. Ct. 397, 24 L. Ed. 2d 306 (1969), aff'd, 431 F.2d 855 (5th Cir. 1970), 405 U.S. 518, 92 S. Ct. 1103, 31 L. Ed. 2d 408 (1972).

O.C.G.A. § 16-10-20 was not void for vagueness. — O.C.G.A. § 16-10-20 was not unconstitutionally vague under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I, as: (1) the statute gave a defendant ample notice that the prohibited conduct; (2) the statute also provided sufficient objective standards to those who were charged with enforcing it; and (3) a defendant's act was made criminal when a false statement was made, without regard to the result of that act, and the fact that application of the statute's standards sometimes required an assessment of the surrounding circumstances to determine if the statute was violated, did not render it unconstitutional. Banta v. State, 281 Ga. 615, 642 S.E.2d 51 (2007).

Scope and Purpose (Cont'd)3. Overbroad Legislation (Cont'd)

Broad prophylactic rules in the area of free expression are suspect. Hobbs v. Thompson, 448 F.2d 456 (5th Cir. 1971).

Improper restrictive pretrial publicity order. — Ga. St. Bar R. 4-102(d):3.6 required a finding that extrajudicial statements to media members would have had a substantial likelihood of materially prejudicing the trial; where, in restricting the extrajudicial statements to the media members by the non-lawyers, the parties, experts, witnesses, and investigators involved in a criminal trial, a trial court failed to find, based on evidence in the record, that the extrajudicial statements would have had a substantial likelihood of materially prejudicing the trial, and to the extent the order contravened Ga. St. Bar R. 4-102(d):3.6, it was overbroad, and was reversed. Atlanta Journal-Constitution v. State, 266 Ga. App. 168, 596 S.E.2d 694 (2004).

Purpose of striking down overbroad or vague statutes. — Overbreadth doctrine condemns those means to that legitimate end whereby first amendment rights may justifiably be infringed, which comprehend too broad an incursion upon the realm of first amendment activity. Hobbs v. Thompson, 448 F.2d 456 (5th Cir. 1971).

One of the purposes of striking down statutes which are "overbroad" is to assure the public that the dissemination of materials protected by the first amendment will not be suppressed. American Booksellers Ass'n v. McAuliffe, 533 F. Supp. 50 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

The purpose of striking down statutes which are "vague" is to prevent the arbitrary enforcement of laws that fail to give officials or the public any notice of what is prohibited. American Booksellers Ass'n v. McAuliffe, 533 F. Supp. 50 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Abstention by federal courts inappropriate. — Abstention by federal courts, remitting controversy to state courts, is particularly inappropriate in an overbreadth or vagueness case grounded upon U.S. Const., amend. 1. Hobbs v. Thompson, 448 F.2d 456 (5th Cir. 1971).

No showing of appropriateness of narrower statute required. — Attacks on overly broad statutes are allowed with no requirement that the person making the attack demonstrate that the person's own conduct could not be regulated by a statute drawn with the requisite narrow specificity. Hobbs v. Thompson, 448 F.2d 456 (5th Cir. 1971).

Standing requirement relaxed for one attacking overly broad statute. — The Supreme Court has altered its traditional rules of standing to permit — in the area of U.S. Const., amend. 1 — attacks on overly broad statutes with no requirement that the person making the attack demonstrate that the person's own conduct could not be regulated by a statute drawn with the requisite narrow specificity. Federal Election Comm'n v. Lance, 635 F.2d 1132 (5th Cir. 1981), appeal dismissed and cert denied, 453 U.S. 917, 101 S. Ct. 3151, 69 L. Ed. 2d 999 (1981) '.

Judicial remedy where no rehabilitative construction possible. — Where a law is substantially overbroad, in that it sweeps within its scope a wide range of both protected and nonprotected expressive activity, and where no readily apparent construction suggests itself as a vehicle for rehabilitating the statute in a single proceeding, the courts may reject simple interest balancing and require the legislature to achieve its ends by less drastic means. Hobbs v. Thompson, 448 F.2d 456 (5th Cir. 1971); Smith v. Price, 446 F. Supp. 828 (M.D. Ga. 1977), rev'd on other grounds, 616 F.2d 1371 (5th Cir. 1980).

Invalidation of statute to prevent "chilling" of protected conduct. — Rather than await case-by-case excision of a statute's overbreadth or vagueness through review of its application to particular conduct, which would be needlessly time-consuming and ineffective, courts, under the rubric of the overbreadth doctrine, may invalidate such a statute facially so as to end its deterrence of constitutionally protected activity, since otherwise the overbroad law would remain as a deterrent to others who, because of fear of statutory reprisals, might forego protected activity rather than test their privileges under U.S. Const., amend. 1 administratively or judicially. Hobbs v. Thompson, 448 F.2d 456 (5th Cir. 1971).

Governmental purposes should be narrowly achieved. — Even though a governmental purpose may be legitimate and substantial, that purpose cannot be pursued by means that broadly stifle fundamental personal liberties when the end can more narrowly be achieved. A governmental purpose to control or prevent activities constitutionally subject to state regulation may not be achieved by means which sweep unnecessarily broadly and thereby invade the area of protected freedoms. Melton v. City of Atlanta, 324 F. Supp. 315 (N.D. Ga. 1971); Smith v. Price, 446 F. Supp. 828 (M.D. Ga. 1977), rev'd on other grounds, 616 F.2d 1371 (5th Cir. 1980).

Indecent or obscene speech statute overbroad. — Defendant's conviction for violating O.C.G.A. § 46-5-21(a)(1) was reversed as the statute was an overbroad infringement on defendant's first amendment and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. V rights to free speech; the statute does not contain the necessary language setting out the least restrictive means to further a compelling state interest as it applies to indecent or obscene speech, whether heard by children or adults, and whether unwelcomed by listeners or spoken with intent to please. McKenzie v. State, 279 Ga. 265, 626 S.E.2d 77 (2005).

Vague statutes violate due process. — The test that has been enunciated is whether the terms of a statute are so vague that men of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application. DeKalb Real Estate Bd., Inc. v. Chairman & Bd. of Comm'rs of Rds. & Revenues, 372 F. Supp. 748 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Vague statutes requiring people of common intelligence to guess at meaning are unconstitutional. — A statute concerning rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1 must not forbid or require the doing of an act in terms so vague that people of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application, because lack of a fair warning to actors or lack of adequate standards to guide enforcers also may lead to a "chill" on privileged activity. Hobbs v. Thompson, 448 F.2d 456 (5th Cir. 1971).

Absent some qualification on "bias or prejudice", O.C.G.A. § 17-10-17 is left so vague that persons of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application; thus, § 17-10-17 is too vague to justify the imposition of enhanced criminal punishment for its violation. Furthermore, § 17-10-17 may not be upheld because it impermissibly delegates basic policy matters to policemen, judges, and juries for resolution on an ad hoc and subjective basis, with the attendant dangers of arbitrary and discriminatory applications; therefore, the sentence enhancement that defendants selected their victims because of racial bias and prejudice violated defendants' due process rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1, 5, 8, and 14 and the corresponding state constitutional provisions and the sentence enhancements were reversed. Botts v. State, 278 Ga. 538, 604 S.E.2d 512 (2004).

United States Supreme Court has the duty to say where individual's freedom ends and state's power begins. — Choice on that border, always delicate, is perhaps more so where the usual presumption supporting legislation is balanced by the preferred place given in our scheme to the great, the indispensable democratic freedoms secured by U.S. Const., amend. 1. Stoner v. Thompson, 377 F. Supp. 585 (M.D. Ga. 1974).

4. Intervention and Injunctive Relief

Loss of first amendment freedoms, for even minimal periods, unquestionably constitutes irreparable injury. CNN, Inc. v. ABC, 518 F. Supp. 1238 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Injunctive relief where irreparable harm to first amendment rights probable. — The United States Supreme Court recognized that mere prosecution under a statute which regulates expression and which is unconstitutional on its face, or under a statute which is being applied in bad faith for purposes of discouraging the exercise of protected rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1, gives rise to the irreparable harm which is a prerequisite to injunctive relief; but injunctive relief is not appropriate to interfere with the enforcement of state criminal laws which do not affect these rights, for in such cases mere prosecution will not produce irreparable harm. Eberhart v. Massell, 311 F. Supp. 654 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

Enjoining of state or military prosecution by federal court. — Only within narrow limits and where first amendment rights are involved will federal courts enjoin state or military prosecution. Torres v. Connor, 329 F. Supp. 1025 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

Ex parte temporary restraining orders without notice in area of first amendment freedoms. — There is a place in jurisprudence for ex parte issuance, without notice, of temporary restraining orders of short duration; but there is no place within the area of basic freedoms guaranteed by U.S. Const., amend. 1 for such orders where no showing is made that it is impossible to serve or to notify the opposing parties and to give them an opportunity to participate. Sumbry v. Land, 127 Ga. App. 786, 195 S.E.2d 228 (1972), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1079, 94 S. Ct. 598, 38 L. Ed. 2d 486 (1973); Anderson v. Dean, 354 F. Supp. 639 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Scope and Purpose (Cont'd)4. Intervention and Injunctive Relief (Cont'd)

Order involving first amendment must be narrowly couched. — Order issued in area of rights of U.S. Const., amend. 1 must be couched in the narrowest terms that will accomplish the pin-pointed objective permitted by constitutional mandate and the essential needs of the public order. Anderson v. Dean, 354 F. Supp. 639 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Circumstances necessary for federal court intervention in ongoing state proceeding. — Even in the area of first amendment rights, special circumstances such as bad faith and harassment must be present before a federal court may intervene in an ongoing state proceeding. Sanders v. McAuliffe, 364 F. Supp. 654 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Elements indicating injunction not illegal prior restraint. — If prior to the issuance of the injunction an adequate determination is made that certain communication is unprotected by U.S. Const., amend. 1; that the order is based on a continuing course of repetitive conduct; and that the order is clear and sweeps no more broadly than necessary, then the injunction is not invalid as an illegal prior restraint. Retail Credit Co. v. Russell, 234 Ga. 765, 218 S.E.2d 54 (1975).

Freedom of Religion1. Scope of Free Exercise

Scope of establishment clause. — See American Civil Liberties Union v. Rabun County Chamber of Commerce, Inc., 678 F.2d 1379 (11th Cir. 1982), aff'd on reh'g, 698 F.2d 1098 (11th Cir. 1983).

Religious belief not justification for criminal act. — A party's religious belief cannot be accepted as justification for committing an overt act made criminal by the law of the land. Coleman v. City of Griffin, 55 Ga. App. 123, 189 S.E. 427 (1936), appeal dismissed, 302 U.S. 636, 58 S. Ct. 23, 82 L. Ed. 495 (1937).

Personal beliefs are not to be considered religious for purposes of U.S. Const., amend. 1. Sapp v. Renfro, 511 F.2d 172 (5th Cir. 1975).

Restraints upon free exercise of religion unlawful. — Restraints upon the free exercise of religion according to the dictates of conscience are unlawful under the state and federal constitutions. Coleman v. City of Griffin, 55 Ga. App. 123, 189 S.E. 427 (1936), appeal dismissed, 302 U.S. 636, 58 S. Ct. 23, 82 L. Ed. 495 (1937).

Limits to free exercise of religion. — No external authority is to place itself between the finite being and the infinite when the former is seeking to render the homage that is due, and in a mode which commends itself to the finite being's conscience and judgment as being suitable for the finite being to render, and acceptable to its object; but religious liberty does not include the right to introduce and carry out every scheme or purpose which individuals see fit to claim as a part of their religious system. Coleman v. City of Griffin, 55 Ga. App. 123, 189 S.E. 427 (1936), appeal dismissed, 302 U.S. 636, 58 S. Ct. 23, 82 L. Ed. 495 (1937).

Only gravest abuses permit limitation on free exercise of religion. — Only the gravest abuses, endangering paramount interests, give occasion for permissible limitation of the free exercise of religion. Restrictions on the free exercise of religion are allowed only when it is necessary to prevent grave and immediate danger to interests which the state may lawfully protect. McClure v. Salvation Army, 460 F.2d 553 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 896, 93 S. Ct. 132, 34 L. Ed. 2d 153 (1972).

First amendment mandates governmental neutrality between religion and religion, and between religion and nonreligion. The state must be steadfastly neutral in all matters of faith, and neither favor nor inhibit religion. Polakoff v. Henderson, 370 F. Supp. 690 (N.D. Ga. 1973), aff'd, 488 F.2d 977, (5th Cir. 1974).

Validity of ordinance prohibiting distribution of literature impacting Jehovah's Witness. — Ordinance prohibiting the distributing of literature within the city limits without prior written permission from the city manager did not deprive the defendant, a Jehovah's Witness, of the constitutional right of free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, even though it prohibited the defendant from introducing and carrying out a scheme or purpose which the defendant saw fit to claim as a part of the defendant's religious system. Coleman v. City of Griffin, 55 Ga. App. 123, 189 S.E. 427 (1936), appeal dismissed, 302 U.S. 636, 58 S. Ct. 23, 82 L. Ed. 495 (1937).

Municipal ordinance restricting distribution of magazines valid for public safety. — A municipal ordinance providing that it shall be illegal "for any person, firm, or corporation to sell or offer for sale any goods, wares, merchandise, pamphlets, magazines, maps, or other article of value, on any Saturday between the hours of 12 noon and 9 P.M. on any of the following congested sidewalks of said city," designating certain sidewalks and providing a penalty therefore, is a valid and reasonable regulation for public safety and convenience, under the police power of the city; and where plaintiffs seek to enjoin enforcement against them of the ordinance, on the grounds that the magazines sold and offered for sale are devoted to religious subjects, and advocate the adoption of a particular form of religion, the distribution of which being a part of their religious belief, and urge that to prohibit the sale of the magazines would be in violation of their rights of religious freedom under the state and federal constitutions, it is not error to deny an injunction. Jones v. City of Moultrie, 196 Ga. 526, 27 S.E.2d 39 (1943).

Ordinance forbidding sale of pamphlets for public safety invalid as applied to sale of religious literature. — Ordinance forbidding the sale of pamphlets between the hours of 10 A.M. and 9 P.M., on certain designated sidewalks, and providing a penalty therefore, is a valid reasonable regulation for public safety and convenience, but a proper interpretation excludes its application to the distribution of religious pamphlets or literature by selling or offering them for sale at the prohibited time and place, when such distribution does not interfere with the traffic, and the safety, comfort, or convenience of the public in the use of the street, as such an application would render the ordinance unconstitutional, as a violation of the defendant's constitutional guarantee of freedom of religion. Burns v. City of Carrollton, 72 Ga. App. 628, 34 S.E.2d 621 (1945).

Exercise of religious freedom with due regard for others' rights. — A person's right to exercise religious freedom, which may be manifested by acts, ceases where it overlaps and transgresses the rights of others. Everyone's rights must be exercised with due regard for the rights of others. Jones v. City of Moultrie, 196 Ga. 526, 27 S.E.2d 39 (1943).

Balancing of religious freedom with ordered liberty. — Although a determination of what is a "religious" belief or practice entitled to constitutional protection may present a most delicate question, the very concept of ordered liberty precludes allowing every person to make their own standards on matters of conduct in which society as a whole has important interests. Theriault v. Carlson, 495 F.2d 390 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1003, 95 S. Ct. 323, 42 L. Ed. 2d 279 (1974), later appeal, 547 F.2d 1279 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 871, 98 S. Ct. 216, 54 L. Ed. 2d 150 (1977).

Unlimited constitutional right to practice any religion. — Under the constitutional provisions, both state and federal, the right to adopt, profess, entertain, or advocate any religious views, or to fail or refuse to do so, is unlimited, and cannot be controlled by any law. There is no authority under the system of jurisprudence to alter, modify, or infringe upon this right. Jones v. City of Moultrie, 196 Ga. 526, 27 S.E.2d 39 (1943).

Constitutional guarantee of religious freedom excludes objectionable acts. — While there is no power to control what a person may believe about religion or the type of religion a person may adopt or profess, yet there is a power under the law to limit the person's acts, even though to do such acts may be part of the person's religious belief. The constitutional guarantee of the exercise of religious freedom does not extend to acts which are inimical to the peace, good order, and morals of society. Jones v. City of Moultrie, 196 Ga. 526, 27 S.E.2d 39 (1943).

Acts inimical to peace, good order, and morals not protected. — Constitutional guarantee of exercise of religious freedom does not extend to acts inimical to the peace, good order, and morals of society. A person's right to exercise religious freedom, which may be manifested by acts, ceases where it overlaps and transgresses the rights of others. Ferguson v. City of Moultrie, 71 Ga. App. 13, 29 S.E.2d 786 (1944).

Freedom of Religion (Cont'd)1. Scope of Free Exercise (Cont'd)

Balancing of freedoms of speech and religion. — The constitutional right of one to freedom of speech is counterbalanced by the right of the many to their constitutional freedom in the practice of their religion; neither occupies a preferred position in the constitution. Jones v. State, 219 Ga. 848, 136 S.E.2d 358, cert. denied, 379 U.S. 935, 85 S. Ct. 330, 13 L. Ed. 2d 345 (1964).

Zoning ordinance excluding church from residential area invalid. — Generally, any zoning ordinance that absolutely excludes churches from residential areas is invalid under constitutional guarantees. Churches are, however, subject to reasonable regulation both referring to property in the zone generally and to churches specifically, provided that the regulations are reasonable and contain some standards. Rogers v. Mayor of Atlanta, 110 Ga. App. 114, 137 S.E.2d 668 (1964).

First amendment enjoins the employment of organs of government for essentially religious purposes. Presbyterian Church v. Mary Elizabeth Blue Hull Mem. Presbyterian Church, 393 U.S. 440, 89 S. Ct. 601, 21 L. Ed. 2d 658 (1969).

Civil courts forbidden from deciding ecclesiastical issues. — U.S. Const., amend. 1 commands civil courts to decide church property disputes without resolving underlying controversies over religious doctrine. Hence, states, religious organizations, and individuals must structure relationships involving church property so as not to require the civil courts to resolve ecclesiastical questions. Presbyterian Church v. Mary Elizabeth Blue Hull Mem. Presbyterian Church, 393 U.S. 440, 89 S. Ct. 601, 21 L. Ed. 2d 658 (1969).

Although civil courts are the proper forum for resolving property disputes, in the case of disputes over church properties, they are forbidden from determining ecclesiastical questions in the process. Presbyterian Church v. Eastern Heights Presbyterian Church, 225 Ga. 259, 167 S.E.2d 658 (1969), cert. denied, 396 U.S. 1041, 90 S. Ct. 680, 24 L. Ed. 2d 685 (1970).

U.S. Const., amend. 1 prohibits civil courts from resolving church property disputes on the basis of religious doctrine and practice; as a corollary to this commandment, the amendment requires that civil courts defer to the resolution of issues of religious doctrine or polity by the highest court of a hierarchical church organization. Jones v. Wolf, 443 U.S. 595, 99 S. Ct. 3020, 61 L. Ed. 2d 775 (1979).

A court could not, consistent with the first amendment, adjudicate a dispute concerning a parliamentary ruling at the 1985 Southern Baptist Convention. The first amendment bars civil court resolution of any controversy concerning a matter of ecclesiastical government. Crowder v. Southern Baptist Convention, 828 F.2d 718 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 1066, 108 S. Ct. 1028, 98 L. Ed. 2d 992 (1988).

Courts can consider distribution of assets.

— While it is true that the courts may not inquire into a controversy relating to religious matters such as internal church procedures and expulsion from church membership, the trial court does have jurisdiction to resolve issues that do not require an impermissible intrusion or excessive entanglement into ecclesiastical matters without intruding upon religious or doctrinal matters; thus, trial courts may legitimately consider matters such as the distribution or disposition of tangible church property such as bank accounts, realty, and other temporal assets. Members of Calvary Missionary Baptist Church v. Jackson, 259 Ga. App. 647, 578 S.E.2d 275 (2003).

Trial court had jurisdiction to issue an interlocutory injunction against a minister from coming onto church property in order to protect the property rights of the property owner. Anderson v. Dowd, 268 Ga. 146, 485 S.E.2d 764 (1997).

Principle of separation of church and state guaranteed by U.S. Const., amend. 1 cannot extend beyond the grave any punishment imposed by sentence of courts for whatever term of years, and any attempt to do so will not be effective beyond the limit of the defendant's earthly span of existence. Hill v. State, 119 Ga. App. 612, 168 S.E.2d 327 (1969).

Prohibition of employment of government organs for religious purposes. — Because of the hazards to free development of religious doctrine and of implicating secular interests in matters of purely ecclesiastical concern, the first amendment enjoins the employment of organs of government for essentially religious purposes. Hickman v. Owens, 322 F. Supp. 1278 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

“Church” defined. — The term “church” is one of very comprehensive signification, and imports an organization for religious purposes, for the public worship of God. McClure v. Salvation Army, 323 F. Supp. 1100 (N.D. Ga. 1971), aff’d, 460 F.2d 553 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 896, 93 S. Ct. 132, 34 L. Ed. 2d 153 (1972).

Salvation Army is a religion regardless of its lack of traditional houses of worship. McClure v. Salvation Army, 323 F. Supp. 1100 (N.D. Ga. 1971), aff’d, 460 F.2d 553 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 896, 93 S. Ct. 132, 34 L. Ed. 2d 153 (1972).

Freedom of religious organizations from state interference. — U.S. Const., amend. 1 grants a spirit of freedom for religious organizations, an independence from secular control or manipulation, and, in short, power to decide for themselves, free from state interference, matters of church government as well as those of faith and doctrine. McClure v. Salvation Army, 460 F.2d 553 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 896, 93 S. Ct. 132, 34 L. Ed. 2d 153 (1972).

Compelling state interest required for regulation of religion. — Only in rare instances where a compelling state interest in the regulation of a subject within the state’s constitutional power to regulate is shown can a court uphold state action which imposes even an incidental burden on the free exercise of religion. McClure v. Salvation Army, 460 F.2d 553 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 896, 93 S. Ct. 132, 34 L. Ed. 2d 153 (1972).

Congressional inhibition of religious acts for public welfare. — Congress may inhibit or prevent acts, as opposed to beliefs, even where those acts are in accord with religious convictions or beliefs, where the public interest concerns outweigh first amendment protections. McClure v. Salvation Army, 323 F. Supp. 1100 (N.D. Ga. 1971), aff’d, 460 F.2d 553, (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 896, 93 S. Ct. 132, 34 L. Ed. 2d 153 (1972).

Judiciary as well as legislature prohibited from interfering with religious freedom. — Constitutional principles prevent the judiciary, as well as the legislature, from interfering with the free exercise of religion. McClure v. Salvation Army, 460 F.2d 553 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 896, 93 S. Ct. 132, 34 L. Ed. 2d 153 (1972).

Decisions of church tribunals conclusive in secular courts. — In the absence of fraud, collusion, or arbitrariness, the decisions of the proper church tribunals on matters purely ecclesiastical, although affecting civil rights, are accepted in litigation before the secular courts as conclusive, because the parties in interest made them so by contract or otherwise. Whenever the questions of discipline, or of faith, or ecclesiastical rule, custom, or law have been decided by the highest church judicatories to which the matter has been carried, legal tribunals must accept such decisions as final, and as binding on them, in their application to the case before them. McClure v. Salvation Army, 460 F.2d 553 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 896, 93 S. Ct. 132, 34 L. Ed. 2d 153 (1972).

Exclusion from church conclusive upon court. — The validity of the exclusion of individuals from membership in a church is conclusive upon the civil courts. Anderson v. Dowd, 268 Ga. 146, 485 S.E.2d 764 (1997).

Blanket prohibition of religious solicitation in public areas overbroad. — The blanket prohibition on the use of the public streets, areas, and parks for solicitation or propagation of religious doctrine, regardless of any other circumstances, between the hours of 6:00 P.M. and 9:00 A.M. is overbroad. Westfall v. Board of Comm’rs, 477 F. Supp. 862 (N.D. Ga. 1979).

Court order requiring mother to undergo surgery to save her baby not violative of religious freedom. — Court order requiring a mother to undergo surgery against her religious convictions in order to preserve the life of her fully developed unborn child did not violate U.S. Const., amend. 1. Jefferson v. Griffin Spalding County Hosp. Auth., 247 Ga. 86, 274 S.E.2d 457 (1981).

Tithing under Bankruptcy Code. — A constitutional challenge to a determination that tithing is an unreasonable expense, subjecting a Chapter 7 debtor to dismissal under 11 U.S.C. § 707(b), is not sustainable, as the free exercise clause does not require the Bankruptcy Code to yield to the debtor's desire to tithe. In re Lee, 162 Bankr. 31 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1993).

Freedom of Religion (Cont'd)1. Scope of Free Exercise (Cont'd)

Private employment terminated due to religious beliefs. — U.S. Const., amend. 1 did not bar an action by an employee of a for-profit corporation who was terminated because of the employee's rejection of certain religious beliefs. Halverson v. Murzynski, 226 Ga. App. 276, 487 S.E.2d 19 (1997).

Removal of board of directors of church was secular issue. — Trial court erred in entering summary judgment for the former board of directors of a church for want of jurisdiction as it could resolve the dispute between the church members and the church's former board of directors as to the removal of the former board of directors, under the Georgia Nonprofit Corporation Code, O.C.G.A. § 14-3-101 et seq., and as to the disposition of church property without considering ecclesiastical matters. Members of Calvary Missionary Baptist Church v. Jackson, 259 Ga. App. 647, 578 S.E.2d 275 (2003).

2. State Actions Affecting Religion

Establishment clause of first amendment is applicable to state governments by virtue of the fourteenth amendment. American Civil Liberties Union v. Rabun County Chamber of Commerce, Inc., 510 F. Supp. 886 (N.D. Ga. 1981), aff'd, 678 F.2d 1379 (11th Cir. 1982), aff'd on reh'g, 698 F.2d 1098 (11th Cir. 1983).

Limitations on applicability to states. — The establishment clause only speaks to acts of the United States Congress, and, as applied to the states under the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment, it still is limited only to governmental action respecting an establishment of religion. American Civil Liberties Union v. Rabun County Chamber of Commerce, Inc., 510 F. Supp. 886 (N.D. Ga. 1981), aff'd, 678 F.2d 1379 (11th Cir. 1982), aff'd on reh'g, 698 F.2d 1098 (11th Cir. 1983).

Challenged state action must pass three-part test. — To pass muster under the establishment clause, the challenged state action must pass a three-part constitutional test: such action must have a secular as opposed to a religious purpose; the principal or primary effect of the state action must be one that neither advances nor inhibits religion; and, the challenged state action must not foster excessive government entanglement with religion. The third portion of the test actually raises two questions: it must not appear that the state is involved in the questioned action to an extent sufficient to justify the application of first amendment analysis; and the results of the action must not foster excessive entanglement between the state and religion. American Civil Liberties Union v. Rabun County Chamber of Commerce, Inc., 510 F. Supp. 886 (N.D. Ga. 1981), aff'd, 678 F.2d 1379 (11th Cir. 1982), aff'd on reh'g, 698 F.2d 1098 (11th Cir. 1983).

"Excessive entanglement" defined. — Excessive entanglement between state and religion for purposes of the establishment clause is defined as an impermissible merging or intermeddling of the proper spheres of religion and government. American Civil Liberties Union v. Rabun County Chamber of Commerce, Inc., 510 F. Supp. 886 (N.D. Ga. 1981), aff'd, 678 F.2d 1379 (11th Cir. 1982), aff'd on reh'g, 698 F.2d 1098 (11th Cir. 1983).

It is effect of state's acts which brings constitutional scrutiny to bear, not the manner of their implementation; state acts may be legislative, administrative, or judicial; so long as they use state resources in a manner offensive to the United States Constitution, federal courts may act. American Civil Liberties Union v. Rabun County Chamber of Commerce, Inc., 510 F. Supp. 886 (N.D. Ga. 1981), aff'd, 678 F.2d 1379 (11th Cir. 1982), aff'd on reh'g, 698 F.2d 1098 (11th Cir. 1983).

Religious accommodation provision of Title VII of Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(j), violates establishment clause of U.S. Const., amend. 1 where the true purpose of such provision was the advancement of religion, the provision's principal and primary effect was to directly benefit religions, and the enforcement of the provision would result in an impermissible entanglement of government with religion. Isaac v. Butler's Shoe Corp., 511 F. Supp. 108 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

There is no conflict between establishment and free exercise clause where a court strikes down the religious accommodation provision of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(j), as unconstitutional because no free exercise problem arises, since no congressional action has taken place; the first amendment religious freedoms are not triggered by congressional inaction, but rather by the United States Congress' failure to adhere to the admonition that "Congress shall make no law". Isaac v. Butler's Shoe Corp., 511 F. Supp. 108 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Standing to challenge government-sponsored religious statements. — City residents and taxpayers had standing to challenge the display of the city seal used both on city stationery and to emboss official documents, since a non-economic injury which results from a party's being subjected to unwelcome religious statements can support a standing claim. Saladin v. City of Milledgeville, 812 F.2d 687 (11th Cir. 1987).

Standing to sue under establishment clause. — Normally to have standing in order to bring a suit a party must allege that the challenged action has caused the party injury in fact, economic or otherwise, and the United States Supreme Court has limited citizen standing to bring suits challenging government action when plaintiffs have no interest in the suits other than that shared by all Americans; but, in the context of an establishment clause case, standing is more broadly permitted. American Civil Liberties Union v. Rabun County Chamber of Commerce, Inc., 510 F. Supp. 886 (N.D. Ga. 1981), aff'd, 678 F.2d 1379 (11th Cir. 1982), aff'd on reh'g, 698 F.2d 1098 (11th Cir. 1983).

For the ability to demonstrate Article III standing under the establishment clause, see American Civil Liberties Union v. Rabun County Chamber of Commerce, Inc., 678 F.2d 1379 (11th Cir. 1982), aff'd on reh'g, 698 F.2d 1098 (11th Cir. 1983).

When establishment clause claim is raised, requirements for standing do not include proof that particular religious freedoms are infringed; rather, a spiritual stake in first amendment values will be sufficient to give standing to raise issues concerning the establishment clause. American Civil Liberties Union v. Rabun County Chamber of Commerce, Inc., 510 F. Supp. 886 (N.D. Ga. 1981), aff'd, 678 F.2d 1379 (11th Cir. 1982), aff'd on reh'g, 698 F.2d 1098 (11th Cir. 1983).

Standing of organization or association. — In order to have standing to sue under the establishment clause, a plaintiff that is not a natural person, such as an organization or an association, must have individual persons or members with a constitutionally protected interest that is being infringed upon. American Civil Liberties Union v. Rabun County Chamber of Commerce, Inc., 510 F. Supp. 886 (N.D. Ga. 1981), aff'd, 678 F.2d 1379 (11th Cir. 1982), aff'd on rehearing, 698 F.2d 1098 (11th Cir. 1983).

Standing adequately shown. — Where the individual plaintiffs in the instant case gave testimony on their concerns with the separation of church and state, this was sufficient to demonstrate standing to sue because they have alleged injury in fact to an interest protected by the establishment clause which each has a personal right to enforce. American Civil Liberties Union v. Rabun County Chamber of Commerce, Inc., 510 F. Supp. 886 (N.D. Ga. 1981), aff'd, 678 F.2d 1379 (11th Cir. 1982), aff'd on reh'g, 698 F.2d 1098 (11th Cir. 1983).

City residents and taxpayers had standing to challenge city's use of word "Christianity" on its official seal, since they unquestionably had a direct stake in the outcome of the litigation. Saladin v. City of Milledgeville, 628 F. Supp. 839 (M.D. Ga. 1986).

Roman Catholic priest's status as clergyman is sufficient to confer standing to sue under the establishment clause. American Civil Liberties Union v. Rabun County Chamber of Commerce, Inc., 510 F. Supp. 886 (N.D. Ga. 1981), aff'd, 678 F.2d 1379 (11th Cir. 1982), aff'd on reh'g, 698 F.2d 1098 (11th Cir. 1983).

Showing required by those seeking immunity from laws on religious grounds. — Those who seek immunity from requirements of law on religious grounds must, at the very least, demonstrate adherence to ethical standards and a spiritual discipline. McClure v. Salvation Army, 323 F. Supp. 1100 (N.D. Ga. 1971), aff'd, 460 F.2d 553 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 896, 93 S. Ct. 132, 34 L. Ed. 2d 153 (1972).

Religious groups not immune from property tax. — Religious groups do not enjoy a general immunity from the imposition of property taxes under U.S. Const., amend. 1.

Freedom of Religion (Cont'd)2. State Actions Affecting*Religion (Cont'd)

Leggett v. Macon Baptist Ass'n, 232 Ga. 27, 205 S.E.2d 197 (1974).

Unorthodoxy will not serve to disqualify a religious group from tax exemption, as long as the group holds a sincere and meaningful belief in God occupying in the life of its possessors a place parallel to that occupied by God in traditional religions, and dedicates itself to the practice of that belief. Roberts v. Ravenwood Church of Wicca, 249 Ga. 348, 292 S.E.2d 657 (1982).

Organizations affecting commerce may not escape the coverage of social legislation by showing that they were created for fraternal or religious purposes. McClure v. Salvation Army, 460 F.2d 553 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 896, 93 S. Ct. 132, 34 L. Ed. 2d 153 (1972).

Cult's claims dismissed. — Cult's claims against several denominations alleging spiritual fraud and financial extortion were dismissed as beyond the appropriate judicial exercise of constitutional powers in accordance with the first amendment's separation between church and state. U-John v. Composite Bible-Based Religious Body, 839 F. Supp. 861 (N.D. Ga. 1993).

Jurisdiction over church property dispute. — The first amendment did not prohibit appellate jurisdiction over an action by church members against a pastor and church seeking dissolution of the church, appointment of a receiver, an injunction against the defendant's disposing of corporate assets, and proper disposition of the assets since the dispute was capable of resolution by reference to neutral principles of law, i.e., applicable provisions of the Georgia Nonprofit Corporation Code, O.C.G.A. § 14-3-101 et seq., without infringing upon any first amendment values. Crocker v. Stevens, 210 Ga. App. 231, 435 S.E.2d 690 (1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1053, 114 S. Ct. 1613, 128 L. Ed. 2d 340 (1994).

Trial court was not prohibited by the first amendment from exercising judicial authority over competing claims of church groups for ownership of a certificate of deposit. Kidist Mariam Ethiopian Orthodox Tawahedo Church, Inc. v. Kidist Mariam Ethiopian Orthodox Tawahedo Church, Inc., 219 Ga. App. 470, 465 S.E.2d 491 (1995).

Trial court's order that a church call for an annual meeting of its membership in accordance with the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 14-3-701 constituted an unconstitutional judicial interference in the government of the church. First Born Church of Living God, Inc. v. Hill, 267 Ga. 633, 481 S.E.2d 221 (1997).

Dispute between parishioners and their bishop. — The first amendment barred the court from exercising judicial authority in a dispute between parishioners and their bishop concerning the bishop's order that icons and an iconscreen in the church be replaced because they were not compatible with the religious organization's practices and principles. Leopold v. St. Paul's Greek Orthodox Church, 235 Ga. App. 188, 509 S.E.2d 121 (1998).

Presence of cross on state park land impermissibly enmeshes state and church by creating the appearance of official backing for Christianity. American Civil Liberties Union v. Rabun County Chamber of Commerce, Inc., 510 F. Supp. 886 (N.D. Ga. 1981), aff'd, 678 F.2d 1379 (11th Cir. 1982), aff'd on rehearing, 698 F.2d 1098 (11th Cir. 1983).

Use of religious grave markers in public cemetery permissible. — The erection and maintenance of religiously symbolic grave markers in a public graveyard in compliance with the religious sentiments of known descendants does not conflict with U.S. Const., amend. 1 or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. VII. Birdine v. Moreland, 579 F. Supp. 412 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Erection of statue of Jesus in public cemetery impermissible. — The proposed erection and maintenance of a statue of Jesus as a part of a public cemetery memorial has an impermissible religious purpose and, therefore, violates the establishment clause. Birdine v. Moreland, 579 F. Supp. 412 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

County courthouse display of the Ten Commandments. — Framed panel of the Ten Commandments and the Great Commandment displayed in a county courthouse violated the establishment clause, warranting court order requiring removal of panel unless remounted within a larger display of non-religious, historical items, to bring it within constitutional parameters. Harvey v. Cobb County, 811 F. Supp. 669 (N.D. Ga. 1993), aff'd, 15 F.3d 1097 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1129, 114 S. Ct. 2138, 128 L. Ed. 2d 867 (1994).

Menorah allowed in public plaza. — Because the state would not contravene the dictates of the establishment clause by neutrally and nonpreferentially allowing a religious organization to display its menorah in a public plaza, the state's exclusion of the menorah was neither necessary, nor narrowly tailored to achieve a compelling state interest. Chabad-Lubavitch v. Miller, 5 F.3d 1383 (11th Cir. 1993).

Licensing of church-operated children's home. — A requirement that the Department of Human Resources license a church-operated children's home as a child caring institution pursuant to the Children and Youth Act and department regulations governing child caring institutions does not violate the free exercise clause of the first amendment, nor would it violate the establishment clause of the first amendment, since such a requirement in no way aids, furthers, or confers a special benefit on any religious group. Darrell Dorminey Children's Home v. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources, 260 Ga. 25, 389 S.E.2d 211 (1990).

Appeal by state to single religious group in effort to promote tourism is in any case constitutionally questionable. American Civil Liberties Union v. Rabun County Chamber of Commerce, Inc., 510 F. Supp. 886 (N.D. Ga. 1981), aff'd, 678 F.2d 1379 (11th Cir. 1982), aff'd on reh'g, 698 F.2d 1098 (11th Cir. 1983).

Jury's use of Christian Bible during sentencing phase after capital conviction. — No first amendment issue was presented when the court permitted the Christian Bible to go into the jury room at the request of the jurors apparently for consultation, although the possible use of the Bible by jurors cannot be reconciled with the eighth amendment's requirement that any decision to impose death must be the result of discretion which is carefully and narrowly channeled and circumscribed by the secular law of the jurisdiction. Jones v. Kemp, 706 F. Supp. 1534 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

Violation of zoning ordinance by minister. — Zoning ordinance that allowed only single family residences in agricultural-residential areas did not violate a minister's right to free exercise of the minister's religion, where the minister rented a portion of the minister's home to a bankrupt family, and the minister was not acting on behalf of the minister's church by accepting rent. Lacey v. State, 270 Ga. 37, 507 S.E.2d 441 (1998).

Right to control church property. — If the church government is hierarchical, then "neutral principles of law" are used to determine whether the local church or parent church has the right to control local property; "neutral principles" are state statutes, corporate charters, relevant deeds, and the organizational constitutions of the denomination. St. Mary of Egypt Orthodox Church, Inc. v. Townsend, 243 Ga. App. 188, 532 S.E.2d 731 (2000).

Hierarchical religious organizations. — A hierarchical church is associated with other churches that share similar faith and doctrine and have a common ecclesiastical head and, as a matter of constitutional law, a hierarchical religious organization must be permitted to establish the rules and regulations by which it is governed. St. Mary of Egypt Orthodox Church, Inc. v. Townsend, 243 Ga. App. 188, 532 S.E.2d 731 (2000).

3. Federal Actions Affecting Religion

IRS summons of religious organization members' records permissible. — An IRS summons to a bank requesting records relevant to the tax liability of an individual member of a religious organization did not violate U.S. Const., amend. 1, as the summons imposed no restriction on the religious organization's freedom to espouse doctrine or solicit support. United States v. Saunders, 621 F. Supp. 745 (N.D. Ga. 1985).

4. Clergy

Legislation regulating church administration violative of first amendment. — Legislation that regulates church administration, the operation of the churches, or the appointment of clergy, prohibits the free exercise of religion and violates U.S. Const., amend. 1. Regulation of the employment relationship between a minister and church by the state would result in an encroachment into an area of religious freedom which government is forbidden to enter and would violate the free exercise clause of the first amendment. McClure v. Salvation Army, 460 F.2d 553 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 896, 93 S. Ct. 132, 34 L. Ed. 2d 153 (1972).

Freedom of Religion (Cont'd)4. Clergy (Cont'd)

Matters involving clergy. — Civil court could not take jurisdiction of an ecclesiastical issue involving a clergyman's termination from the clergyman's capacity as minister of two mission churches, because U.S. Const., amend. 1 prohibits such action by the civil judicial system. McDonnell v. Episcopal Diocese, 191 Ga. App. 174, 381 S.E.2d 126, cert. denied, 493 U.S. 935, 110 S. Ct. 328, 107 L. Ed. 2d 318 (1989).

Superior court lacked jurisdiction to determine whether pastor was wrongfully terminated in violation of church's constitution and bylaws. Bledsoe v. Morningside Baptist Church, 232 Ga. App. 122, 501 S.E.2d 292 (1998).

Courts of Georgia are prohibited from determining issues of expulsion of members, pastors, and the internal procedures of a religious entity. United Baptist Church, Inc. v. Holmes, 232 Ga. App. 253, 500 S.E.2d 653 (1998).

Subject matter jurisdiction was lacking over plaintiff pastor's action alleging that the plaintiff's bishop transferred the plaintiff from one church to another without complying with church rules. Jay v. Christian Methodist Episcopal Church, 242 Ga. App. 833, 531 S.E.2d 369 (2000).

5. Prisoners

Denial of a prisoner's petition for a name change for religious purposes did not violate the freedom of religion clause. In re Redding, 218 Ga. App. 376, 461 S.E.2d 558 (1995).

Validity of prison regulations affecting religious and racial beliefs. — Arbitrary discrimination based upon the religious or racial beliefs of those concerned is constitutionally impermissible. But, rules and regulations are constitutionally valid when they are reasonable and justifiable in the administration of a large prison population, in light of the necessity to maintain prison discipline, and control any dangers and hazards presented. Bethea v. Daggett, 329 F.

Supp. 796 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 444 F.2d 112 (5th Cir. 1971).

Prisoner's right to exercise religion. — Under U.S. Const., amend. 1, a prisoner has the right to exercise the prisoner's religion, and refusal to permit a prisoner access to religious publications states a cause of action. Neal v. Georgia, 469 F.2d 446 (5th Cir. 1972).

Failure of prison authorities to provide Islamic meals minor infringement of religious freedom. — Failure of prison authorities to provide means strictly in compliance with Islamic dietary laws and to specially prepare foods under the strict instructions of their religious practice, where the prisoners were otherwise allowed substantial time to practice their religion, was a very minor inconvenience which impinged on the prisoner's full exercise of their religious preferences only in a very limited way. Elam v. Henderson, 472 F.2d 582 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 868, 94 S. Ct. 177, 38 L. Ed. 2d 117 (1973).

Prison grooming regulation. — Prison regulation, to the extent that it prohibited Sunni Muslim inmate at a maximum security prison from growing a beard in conformity with the inmate's religious beliefs, was not violative of the first amendment. Furqan v. Georgia State Bd. of Offender Rehabilitation, 554 F. Supp. 873 (N.D. Ga. 1982).

Prison visits by ministers. — Inmate's complaint that prison officials did not make reasonable arrangements for the visitation of ministers from the Nation of Islam Muslim sect stated a prima facie case for relief. Saleem v. Evans, 866 F.2d 1313 (11th Cir. 1989).

6. Schools and Education

Religious invocations at high school games. — Practice of having religious invocations delivered prior to public high school football games violates the establishment clause of the first amendment. Jager v. Douglas County Sch. Dist., 862 F.2d 824 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1090, 109 S. Ct. 2431, 104 L. Ed. 2d 988 (1989).

Announcement of "secular" activities sponsored by religious organizations. — A school district's policy and practice of announcing "secular" activities sponsored by religious organizations through the use of various schools' public address systems and bulletin boards creates excessive entanglement problems. Nartowicz v. Clayton County Sch. Dist., 736 F.2d 646 (11th Cir. 1984).

Use of school property by religious youth group. — A junior high school's practice of permitting a religious youth group to meet on school property under faculty supervision had the primary effect of advancing or promoting religion when the school district also supported religious assemblies, religious signs, and announcements of church-sponsored activities via bulletin boards and the public address system. Nartowicz v. Clayton County Sch. Dist., 736 F.2d 646 (11th Cir. 1984).

Georgia's Moment of Quiet Reflection in Schools Act is constitutional in its entirety, both facially and as applied and did not violate the establishment clause of the first amendment to the United States Constitution when the school principal announced over the intercom the quiet moment. Bown v. Gwinnett County Sch. Dist., 895 F. Supp. 1564 (N.D. Ga. 1995), aff'd, 112 F.3d 1464 (11th Cir. 1997).

The Georgia Moment of Quiet Reflection in Schools Act does not violate the establishment clause because it satisfies all three prongs of the Lemon test. The Act does not have the primary effect of advancing or inhibiting religion and does not create an excessive government entanglement with religion. Bown v. Gwinnett County Sch. Dist., 112 F.3d 1464 (11th Cir. 1997).

A biology textbook which noted creationism was an explanation for the beginning of life in many cultures that could not be scientifically proved and that science could not resolve disputes about the origin of life did not sponsor religious actions or beliefs, so it did not violate the prohibition of a government establishment of religion, and it was unnecessary to analyze whether it: (1) had a secular purpose; (2) had a primary effect that advanced or inhibited religion; and (3) fostered excessive state entanglement with religion. Moeller v. Schrenko, 251 Ga. App. 151, 554 S.E.2d 198 (2001).

Biology textbook which contained a neutral discussion of creationism did not impinge upon the free exercise of a student's religious beliefs. Moeller v. Schrenko, 251 Ga. App. 151, 554 S.E.2d 198 (2001).

Freedom of Speech and Press

1. In General

Rights protected by first amendment. — Freedom of speech and of the press — which are protected by U.S. Const., amend. 1 from abridgment by Congress — are among the fundamental personal rights and liberties protected by the due process clause of the U.S. Const., amend. 14, from impairment by the states. Carr v. State, 176 Ga. 55, 166 S.E. 827 (1932), later appeal, 176 Ga. 747, 169 S.E. 201 (1933).

Statements can be without first amendment protection. Masson v. Slaton, 320 F. Supp. 669 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

Freedoms of expression must be ringed about with adequate bulwarks. Anderson v. Dean, 354 F. Supp. 639 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Purpose of amendment. — Purpose of U.S. Const., amend. 1 includes the need to protect parties in the free publication of matters of public concern, to secure their right to a free discussion of public events and public measures, and to enable every citizen at any time to bring the government and any person in authority to the bar of public opinion by any just criticism upon their conduct in the exercise of the authority which the people have conferred upon them. Wood v. Georgia, 370 U.S. 375, 82 S. Ct. 1364, 8 L. Ed. 2d 569 (1962).

Broad prohibitions prohibited. — Content-neutral restrictions on the exercise of first amendment rights in traditional public forums such as streets, are valid only when narrowly tailored to serve significant governmental interests and when the restrictions leave open ample alternative channels of communication. A broad prohibition of all picketing in all streets, alleys, roads, highways, and driveways predominantly dedicated to the use of vehicular traffic did not serve the city's interests in the narrow fashion demanded by the first amendment. United Food & Com. Workers Union Local 422 v. City of Valdosta, 861 F. Supp. 1570 (M.D. Ga. 1994).

Content neutral. — Principal inquiry in determining whether a legislative act is content-neutral is whether the government has adopted a regulation of speech because of disagreement with the message it conveys; the government's purpose is the controlling consideration. Thus, regulations that serve purposes unrelated to the content of expression are deemed neutral, even if they have an incidental effect on some speakers or messages but not others; an ordinance designed to combat the undesirable secondary effects of sexually explicit businesses is content-neutral. I.D.K., Inc. v. Ferdinand, 277 Ga. 548, 592 S.E.2d 673 (2004).

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)

1. In General (Cont'd)

Discussion and communication involving matters of public concern protected. — U.S. Const., amend. 1 grants constitutional protection to all discussion and communication involving matters of public or general concern, without regard to whether the persons involved are famous or anonymous. Credit Bureau of Dalton, Inc. v. CBS News, 332 F. Supp. 1291 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

First amendment embraces publication, circulation and distribution of books and films. Purple Onion, Inc. v. Jackson, 511 F. Supp. 1207 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Gathering of news protected. — Freedom to publish news, without some protected ability to gather it, would render freedom of the press an unduly gossamer right. CNN, Inc. v. ABC, 518 F. Supp. 1238 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

It is apparent that the first amendment right to publish must logically include to some degree a right to gather news fit for publication. CNN, Inc. v. ABC, 518 F. Supp. 1238 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Music as speech which incites imminent lawless activity. — Creators and disseminators of a song entitled "Suicide Solution" were protected by the first amendment after the parents of a teenage boy who committed suicide after repeatedly listening to the song were unable to demonstrate any manner in which the music could be categorized as speech which incited imminent lawless activity. Waller v. Osbourne, 763 F. Supp. 1144 (M.D. Ga. 1991), aff'd, 958 F.2d 1084 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 916, 113 S. Ct. 325, 121 L. Ed. 2d 245 (1992).

Access to information protected. — U.S. Const., amend. 1 protects the public and press from abridgment of their rights of access to information about the operation of their government. CNN, Inc. v. ABC, 518 F. Supp. 1238 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Access to information not available to public generally. — First amendment does not guarantee press constitutional right of special access to information not available to the public generally. CNN, Inc. v. ABC, 518 F. Supp. 1238 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Arbitrary interference with access to important information is abridgment of the freedoms of speech and press protected by U.S. Const., amend. 1. CNN, Inc. v. ABC, 518 F. Supp. 1238 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Highly protected status of even provocative speech. — A function of free speech under the system of government is to invite dispute. It may indeed best serve its high purpose when it induces a condition of unrest, creates dissatisfaction with conditions as they are, or even stirs people to anger. Speech is often provocative and challenging. It may strike at prejudices and preconceptions and have profound unsettling effects as it presses for acceptance of an idea. That is why freedom of speech is protected against censorship or punishment, unless shown likely to produce a clear and present danger of a serious substantive evil that rises far above public inconvenience, annoyance, or unrest. Wilson v. Gooding, 303 F. Supp. 952 (N.D. Ga.), appeal dismissed, 396 U.S. 112, 90 S. Ct. 397, 24 L. Ed. 2d 306 (1969), aff'd, 431 F.2d 855 (5th Cir. 1970), 405 U.S. 518, 92 S. Ct. 1103, 31 L. Ed. 2d 408 (1972).

Narrow construction of statutes prohibiting speech. — To withstand constitutional attack, a statute or ordinance which prohibits speech must be carefully drawn or be authoritatively construed to punish only unprotected speech and not be susceptible of application to protected expression. State v. Davis, 246 Ga. 761, 272 S.E.2d 721 (1980).

One person's right to free speech must be balanced with another's right. — Freedom of speech or press does not mean that one can talk or distribute literature where, when, and how one chooses, but the right to do so must be adjusted to the rights of others. Durham v. State, 219 Ga. 830, 136 S.E.2d 322 (1964).

Dissemination of individual's opinions on matters of public interest is an "unalienable right" that "governments are instituted among men to secure." The founders were not always convinced that unlimited discussion of public issues would be "for the benefit of all of us" but they firmly adhered to the proposition that the "true liberty of the press" permitted "every man to publish his opinion." Curtis Publishing Co. v. Butts, 388 U.S. 130, 87 S. Ct. 1975, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1094 (1967).

Freedom of expression by public officials.

— Role that elected officials play in society makes it imperative that they be allowed freely to express themselves on matters of current public importance. Wood v. Georgia, 370 U.S. 375, 82 S. Ct. 1364, 8 L. Ed. 2d 569 (1962).

U.S. Const., amend. 1 in a representative government requires that legislators be given the widest latitude to express their views on issues of policy. The central commitment of the first amendment is that debate on public issues should be uninhibited, robust, and wide-open. Bond v. Floyd, 385 U.S. 116, 87 S. Ct. 339, 17 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1966).

Proper construction of "speech" and "press". — When taken as it must be as a harmonious part of the entire Constitution, and in light of history, a construction is demanded that the first amendment, by the words "speech" and "press", means only speech and press outside of infringement of the rights of others. K. Gordon Murray Prods., Inc. v. Floyd, 217 Ga. 784, 125 S.E.2d 207 (1962).

Guarantee of freedom from abridgment of rights by federal or state government. — Constitutional guarantee of free speech is a guarantee only against abridgment by government, federal or state. Hudgens v. NLRB, 424 U.S. 507, 96 S. Ct. 1029, 47 L. Ed. 2d 196 (1976).

Rights protected from invasion by state action. — Freedom of speech and freedom of the press, which are protected by U.S. Const., amend. 1 from infringement by Congress, are among the fundamental personal rights and liberties which are protected by U.S. Const., amend. 14 from invasion by state action. Lovell v. City of Griffin, 303 U.S. 444, 58 S. Ct. 666, 82 L. Ed. 949 (1938); Staub v. City of Baxley, 355 U.S. 313, 78 S. Ct. 277, 2 L. Ed. 2d 302 (1958); Walter v. State, 131 Ga. App. 667, 206 S.E.2d 662, appeal dismissed, 233 Ga. 10, 209 S.E.2d 605 (1974).

State burden on fundamental right requires strong justification. — When a state burdens the exercise of a fundamental right, its attempt to justify that burden as a rational means for the accomplishment of some significant state policy requires more than a bare assertion that the burden is connected to such a policy. High Oil' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 456 F. Supp. 1035 (N.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 621 F.2d 141 (5th Cir. 1980).

Interference with rights by states and municipalities. — States and municipalities may no more interfere with the freedom of speech than may the national government. Southeastern Promotions, Ltd. v. City of Atlanta, 334 F. Supp. 634 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Ultimate responsibility to define limits of state power regarding freedom of speech and expression rests with the Supreme Court. Wood v. Georgia, 370 U.S. 375, 82 S. Ct. 1364, 8 L. Ed. 2d 569 (1962).

Penalizing speech because of its nonspeech aspect. — Under U.S. Const., amend. 1 even activity which is itself communicative may nevertheless be penalized because of its nonspeech aspect. United States v. Southern Motor Carriers Rate Conference, Inc., 467 F. Supp. 471 (N.D. Ga. 1979), rev'd on other grounds, 471 U.S. 48, 105 S. Ct. 1721, 85 L. Ed. 2d 36 (1984).

Speech advocating use of force or violation of law. — Constitutional guarantees of free speech and press do not permit state to forbid or proscribe advocacy of use of force or of law violation except where such advocacy is directed to inciting or producing lawless action and is likely to incite or produce such action. However, the mere abstract teaching of the moral propriety or even moral necessity for a resort to force and violence is not the same as preparing a group for violent action and steeling it to such action. Wilson v. Gooding, 303 F. Supp. 952 (N.D. Ga.), appeal dismissed, 396 U.S. 112, 90 S. Ct. 397, 24 L. Ed. 2d 306 (1969), aff'd, 431 F.2d 855 (5th Cir. 1970), 405 U.S. 518, 92 S. Ct. 1103, 31 L. Ed. 2d 408 (1972).

Speech causing clear and present danger. — In order for state to proscribe printed material, it must foment imminent lawless conduct, and the threat from such incitement must be seen as posing a clear and present danger. High Oil' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 456 F. Supp. 1035 (N.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 621 F.2d 141 (5th Cir. 1980).

Talk of clear and present danger arising out of criticism is idle unless the criticism makes it impossible in a very real sense for a court to carry on the administration of justice. Wood v. Georgia, 370 U.S. 375, 82 S. Ct. 1364, 8 L. Ed. 2d 569 (1962).

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)

1. In General (Cont'd)

Curbing speech provoking others to action. — Since speech is normally intended to change the opinions or reinforce the opinions of others, problems arise as to the extent to which mere speech may be curbed when it provokes others into action. A speaker sometimes passes the bounds of arguments and persuasion and undertakes incitement to riot. Wilson v. Gooding, 303 F. Supp. 952 (N.D. Ga.), appeal dismissed, 396 U.S. 112, 90 S. Ct. 397, 24 L. Ed. 2d 306 (1969), aff'd, 431 F.2d 855 (5th Cir. 1970), 405 U.S. 518, 92 S. Ct. 1103, 31 L. Ed. 2d 408 (1972).

Aberrant, unpopular, and revolutionary speech protected. — The expanse of U.S. Const., amend. 1 by necessity includes speech which is aberrant, unpopular, and even revolutionary. High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 456 F. Supp. 1035 (N.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 621 F.2d 141 (5th Cir. 1980).

Speech drawing adverse reaction from majority protected. — Speech cannot be stifled by the state merely because it might draw an adverse reaction from a majority of the people. Reineke v. Cobb County Sch. Dist., 484 F. Supp. 1252 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Speech advocating illegal action in future. — Material merely advocating illegal action at some future time may not be criminally proscribed by the state. Printed matter either assailing the state's controlled substances laws or extolling the attractions of certain unlawful substances and glorifying the drug culture may not be generally restricted. High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 456 F. Supp. 1035 (N.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 621 F.2d 141 (5th Cir. 1980).

Freedom of speech does not always prevail over property rights. Property rights do not always prevail over the right of free speech. Griffin v. Trustees of Atlanta Univ., 225 Ga. 859, 171 S.E.2d 618 (1969).

Ordinary forms of taxation not violative of freedom of press. — Businesses which exercise freedom of press are not thereby immune from ordinary forms of taxation. Airport Bookstore, Inc. v. Jackson, 242 Ga. 214, 248 S.E.2d 623 (1978), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 952, 99 S. Ct. 2182, 60 L. Ed. 2d 1057 (1979).

Private property becomes subject to protest or propaganda activity when both of the following are satisfied: (a) the protest is related to the use to which the property is put; and (b) there exists no reasonably effective alternative means of communication to reach the intended audience. Hudgens v. NLRB, 501 F.2d 161 (5th Cir. 1974), vacated on other grounds, 424 U.S. 507, 96 S. Ct. 1029, 47 L. Ed. 2d 196 (1976).

Public forum for expression must be available to all members of the public for the exercise of rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1. Southeastern Promotions, Ltd. v. City of Atlanta, 334 F. Supp. 634 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Protection accorded ideas disapproved by some in area where advanced. — Under the constitutionally protected right of freedom of speech, an organization cannot be penalized for disseminating ideas which are not opposed to our system of government, even though such ideas may not meet with the approval of all of the people in the area in which they are advanced. Williamson v. Southern Regional Council, Inc., 223 Ga. 179, 154 S.E.2d 21 (1967).

Purpose of liberty of press. — Liberty of the press was intended to prevent all previous restraints upon publications as had been practiced by other governments in early times to stifle the efforts of patriots towards enlightening their fellow subjects upon their rights and the duties of rulers. The liberty of the press was to be unrestrained, but a person who used it was to be responsible in case of its abuse. 106 Forsyth Corp. v. Bishop, 362 F. Supp. 1389 (M.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 482 F.2d 280 (5th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 422 U.S. 1044, 95 S. Ct. 2660, 45 L. Ed. 2d 696 (1975).

Liberty of press must be responsibly exercised. — Guarantees of freedom of speech and press are not designed to prevent censorship of the press merely, but any action of the government by means of which it might prevent such free and general discussion of public matters as seems absolutely essential. Curtis Publishing Co. v. Butts, 388 U.S. 130, 87 S. Ct. 1975, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1094 (1967).

The liberty of the press is indeed essential to the nature of a free state; but this consists in laying no previous restraints upon publications, and not in freedom from censure for criminal matter when published. Every free person has an undoubted right to lay what sentiments that person pleases before the public; to forbid this, is to destroy the freedom of the press; but if the person publishes what is improper, mischievous, or illegal, the person must take the consequence of the person's own temerity. 106 Forsyth Corp. v. Bishop, 362 F. Supp. 1389 (M.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 482 F.2d 280 (5th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 422 U.S. 1044, 95 S. Ct. 2660, 45 L. Ed. 2d 696 (1975).

Pamphlets and leaflets protected. — The liberty of the press is not confined to newspapers and periodicals. It necessarily embraces pamphlets and leaflets. Lovell v. City of Griffin, 303 U.S. 444, 58 S. Ct. 666, 82 L. Ed. 949 (1938).

Access by press to news. — Inherent in the right of freedom of the press is a limited right of reasonable access to certain kinds of news. CNN, Inc. v. ABC, 518 F. Supp. 1238 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

The right of access of the news media representatives is no greater and no less than any other member of the general public. R.W. Page Corp. v. Lumpkin, 249 Ga. 576, 292 S.E.2d 815 (1982).

Access to information concerning government activities. — Rights guaranteed and protected by the first amendment include the right of access to news or information concerning the operations and activities of government. This right is held by both the general public and the press, with the press acting as a representative or agent of the public as well as on its own behalf. Without such a right, the goals and purposes of the first amendment would be meaningless. CNN, Inc. v. ABC, 518 F. Supp. 1238 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Qualified right of access to information concerning government activities. — The right of access to news and information concerning activities of government is qualified, rather than absolute, and is subject to limiting considerations such as confidentiality, security, orderly process, spatial limitation, and doubtless many others. CNN, Inc. v. ABC, 518 F. Supp. 1238 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

The first amendment's protection of a citizen's right to obtain information concerning "the way the country is being run" does not extend to every conceivable avenue a citizen may wish to employ in pursuing this right. CNN, Inc. v. ABC, 518 F. Supp. 1238 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

There does exist a limited right of the public and the press, under the first amendment, to access to information concerning governmental activities. CNN, Inc. v. ABC, 518 F. Supp. 1238 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Material printed by law publisher rating attorneys is protected by the first amendment. Bergen v. Martindale-Hubbell, Inc., 248 Ga. 599, 285 S.E.2d 6 (1981).

Live theatre protected by U.S. Const., amend. 1. — Live theatrical productions, no less than novels or motion pictures, are media and organs for the expression of public opinion and the propagation of ideas and critical comments and are entitled to first amendment protection. Southeastern Promotions, Ltd. v. City of Atlanta, 334 F. Supp. 634 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Theatrical productions are "speech" protected by U.S. Const., amend. 1. A musical play is a unitary form of constitutionally protected expression, and may not be separated into speech and nonspeech components. Southeastern Promotions, Ltd. v. City of Atlanta, 334 F. Supp. 634 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Motion pictures protected. — Motion pictures are within the basic protection of U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14, and are afforded the full protection constitutionally guaranteed to all speech or press. K. Gordon Murray Prods., Inc. v. Floyd, 217 Ga. 784, 125 S.E.2d 207 (1962).

Expression by means of motion pictures included within free speech and press guaranty of U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14. Carter v. Gautier, 305 F. Supp. 1098 (M.D. Ga. 1969).

Outdoor Advertising Control Act of 1971, O.C.G.A. § 32-6-70, does not violate right of freedom of expression by restricting outdoor advertising in areas adjacent to the rights-of-way of interstate and primary systems of highways in this state. Department of Transp. v. Shiflett, 251 Ga. 873, 310 S.E.2d 509 (1984).

O.C.G.A. §§ 50-16-14 and 50-16-16, allowing removal of persons who cause disruptions in state buildings, do not violate the first amendment guarantees of freedom of speech, the right to assemble peaceably, and petition the government for redress of their grievances. State v. Storey, 181 Ga. App. 161, 351 S.E.2d 502 (1986), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1017, 107 S. Ct. 1895, 95 L. Ed. 2d 501 (1987).

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)

1. In General (Cont'd)

Ordinance unconstitutional absent reasonable relationship between restraints imposed and public welfare. — Where there is no reasonable relationship between the restraints imposed on freedom of speech and the general welfare of the community, the ordinance is unconstitutional. Wolfe v. City of Albany, 104 Ga. App. 264, 121 S.E.2d 331 (1961).

Burning of American flag. — Former Code 1933, § 26-2803, which prohibited misuse of the national flag, was unconstitutional as applied to an individual who burned a flag during a public demonstration protesting the United States' involvement in Iranian affairs since there was no likelihood of imminent public unrest. Monroe v. State Court, 739 F.2d 568 (11th Cir. 1984).

Display of the Georgia state flag did not violate African-American citizen's constitutional rights to equal protection and freedom of expression. Coleman v. Miller, 117 F.3d 527 (11th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1011, 118 S. Ct. 1199, 140 L. Ed. 2d 328 (1998).

Withholding of promotion by state as sanction for free speech. — For state to withhold expected promotion or pay raise as a sanction for the exercise of the right to free speech is a restriction of that right in violation of U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14. Goolsby v. Regents of Univ. Sys., 141 Ga. App. 605, 234 S.E.2d 165 (1977).

Claim on behalf of "talking cat" not entertained. — The Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals will not hear a claim that a "talking cat's" right to free speech has been infringed by a business license ordinance since, although the talking cat arguably possesses a very unusual ability, a talking cat cannot be considered a "person" and is therefore not protected by the Bill of Rights, and even if the talking cat has such a right, there is no need for the cat's owners to assert the right jus tertii. A talking cat can clearly speak for on their own. Miles v. City Council, 710 F.2d 1542 (11th Cir. 1983).

Limiting hospital nurse's access to patients not unconstitutional. — Hospital which limited a nurse-midwife's access to certain patients had a primary interest in the safety and health of its patients which outweighed the nurse's right to speak freely on the issue of natural birth, and such limitation therefore did not offend the first amendment. Sweeney v. Athens Regional Medical Ctr., 705 F. Supp. 1556 (M.D. Ga. 1989).

Access to public places. — Streets, sidewalks, parks, and other similar public places are so historically associated with the exercise of first amendment rights that access to them for the purpose of exercising such rights cannot constitutionally be denied broadly and absolutely. Hudgens v. NLRB, 424 U.S. 507, 96 S. Ct. 1029, 47 L. Ed. 2d 196 (1976).

No total ban on parades in residential areas. — Cities may place reasonable restrictions on the right to parade in residential areas, but the activity may not be banned in toto. United Food & Com. Workers Union Local 422 v. City of Valdosta, 861 F. Supp. 1570 (M.D. Ga. 1994).

Notice of class action on defendant's property. — Notice of a class action against airlines could be published in in-flight magazines that were carried on defendants' airplanes and posted in defendants' ticket offices without offending the first amendment. In re Domestic Air Transp. Antitrust Litig., 141 F.R.D. 534 (N.D. Ga. 1992).

City buses as public forum. — First amendment rights are not surrendered when one rides on or looks at a city bus. Buses operated daily by the city for the transportation of the public — like the city streets, city sidewalks, city auditorium, city coliseum, and city parks — are appropriate places and facilities for the exercise of first amendment rights. Stoner v. Thompson, 377 F. Supp. 585 (M.D. Ga. 1974).

Demonstration on sidewalk opposite courthouse. — Civil rights demonstration on sidewalk opposite courthouse is "speech plus," and is entitled to a lesser degree of protection than pure speech. United States v. Southern Motor Carriers Rate Conference, Inc., 467 F. Supp. 471 (N.D. Ga. 1979), rev'd on other grounds, 471 U.S. 48, 105 S. Ct. 1721, 85 L. Ed. 2d 36 (1984).

Military base is ordinarily not a public forum for first amendment purposes. M.N.C. of Hinesville, Inc. v. United States Dep't of Defense, 791 F.2d 1466 (11th Cir. 1986).

Air Force regulation prohibiting certain bumper stickers. — Air Force regulation prohibiting bumper stickers which embarrass or disparage the Commander in Chief was viewpoint neutral, and was reasonable since the military has an interest in promoting order and discipline and only prohibited display of disparaging bumper stickers on base. Ethredge v. Hail, 795 F. Supp. 1152 (M.D. Ga. 1992), order vacated and appeal dismissed, 996 F.2d 1173 (11th Cir. 1993), aff'd, 56 F.3d 1324 (11th Cir. 1995).

Seizure of materials. — When materials are seized in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 1, the appropriate remedy is the return of the seized property, but not its suppression as evidence at trial. United States v. Bush, 582 F.2d 1016 (5th Cir. 1978).

Seizure properly anchored in probable cause can offend constitutional constraints when media of expression, such as movie films, are implicated. Presumptive free speech materials are qualitatively different from other kinds of alleged contraband. United States v. Bush, 582 F.2d 1016 (5th Cir. 1978).

Publication of information in court records. — States may not impose sanctions on publication of truthful information contained in official court records open to public inspection. Cox Broadcasting Corp. v. Cohn, 420 U.S. 469, 95 S. Ct. 1029, 43 L. Ed. 2d 328 (1975).

Publication of information in court records. — The press may not be exposed to liability for truthfully publishing information released to the public in official court records. Munoz v. American Lawyer Media, 236 Ga. App. 462, 512 S.E.2d 347 (1999).

State Bar Rules. — An argument that State Bar Rules 4-102 (Standard 4), 4-202, 4-203(a)(2), 4-221(d) and 4-225(d) were unconstitutional because they violated the due process and equal protection clauses of the fourteenth amendment and because they impinged upon the first amendment right of free speech and redress was meritless. Cohran v. State Bar, 790 F. Supp. 1568 (N.D. Ga. 1992).

Advisory decision on validity of statute attacked on first amendment ground not to be rendered. — Where a plaintiff contends that a local ordinance is unconstitutional by first amendment standards as denying the plaintiff's freedom of expression by preventing the plaintiff from performing a particular dance, and such dance may also be prohibited by a general statute, but no attack is made on the general statute, and the dance has not been performed, a decision as to the validity of the ordinance would be abstract or advisory only by its very nature, and it is proper to dismiss the plaintiff's complaint. Jenkins v. Thomas, 124 Ga. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 489 (1971).

Requirement of prior adversary hearing is not warranted to protect first amendment rights where, inter alia, a speedy trial is available in state court. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 454 F. Supp. 289 (N.D. Ga. 1978).

Standing. — Rules of standing have been expanded in the area of first amendment rights and special considerations are granted to litigants seeking to preserve rights of free expression. American Booksellers Ass'n v. McAuliffe, 533 F. Supp. 50 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

It is not necessary that a party first expose oneself to actual arrest or prosecution to be entitled to challenge a statute that the person claims deters the exercise of the person's constitutional rights. American Booksellers Ass'n v. McAuliffe, 533 F. Supp. 50 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Protection of Anti-SLAPP statute. — Anti-Strategic Lawsuits Against Public Participation statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1(b) and (c), provides protection for acts that can reasonably be construed as acts in furtherance of one's right of free speech or right to petition the government for redress of grievances in connection with an issue of public concern; such acts include any written or oral statement, writing, or petition made before or to a legislative, executive, or judicial proceeding, or any other official proceeding authorized by law, or such a statement or petition made in connection with an issue under consideration or review by such a governmental body, even including those that initiate a proceeding to address matters of public concern. Harkins v. Atlanta Humane Soc'y, 264 Ga. App. 356, 590 S.E.2d 737 (2003).

Right to fair trial versus rights of public to gain access to hearings in criminal cases. — See R.W. Page Corp. v. Lumpkin, 249 Ga. 576, 292 S.E.2d 815 (1982).

Punishment for contempt not proper means to expose errors in expression. — People are entitled to speak as they please on matters vital to them; errors in judgment, or unsubstantiated opinions may be exposed, but not through punishment for contempt for the expression. Under the system of government, counterargument and education are the weapons available to expose these matters, not abridgment of the rights of free speech and assembly. Wood v. Georgia, 370 U.S. 375, 82 S. Ct. 1364, 8 L. Ed. 2d 569 (1962).

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Contempt order based on true newspaper articles fatally defective. — Rule for contempt issued by superior court judge, based on a series of newspaper articles, is fatally defective where the publications complained of were true, they related to a matter in another court and in nowise referred to the court issuing the rule and where they could not have obstructed or impaired the administration of justice in the court. McGill v. State, 209 Ga. 500, 74 S.E.2d 78 (1953).

Injunction restricting activities of abortion protesters. — Injunction issued pursuant to a city ordinance declaring the actions of abortion protesters to be a public nuisance was not unconstitutional since the protesters were permitted to exercise their right of free speech by engaging in social protest, limited only by reasonable time, place, and manner restrictions. Hirsh v. City of Atlanta, 261 Ga. 22, 401 S.E.2d 530, cert. denied, 501 U.S. 1221, 111 S. Ct. 2836, 115 L. Ed. 2d 1004 (1991).

Motorcycle helmet law. — The motorcycle helmet law, O.C.G.A. § 40-6-315, does not require that the Georgia Board of Public Safety issue a list approving specific types of headgear and, therefore, the failure of the board to publish a list of approved headgear and eye-protective devices did not violate the plaintiff's rights under the first, fifth, and fourteenth amendments to the United States Constitution. Abate of Ga., Inc. v. Georgia, 264 F.3d 1315 (11th Cir. 2001), cert. denied, 536 U.S. 924, 122 S. Ct. 2592, 153 L. Ed. 2d 781 (2002).

2. Limitations

Freedom of speech and press not absolute. — It is a fundamental principle, long established, that the freedom of speech and of the press which is secured by the Constitution does not confer an absolute right to speak or publish, without responsibility, whatever one may choose, or an unrestricted and unbridled license that gives immunity for every possible use of language and prevents the punishment of those who abuse this freedom. Carr v. State, 176 Ga. 55, 166 S.E. 827 (1932), later appeal, 176 Ga. 747, 169 S.E. 201 (1933).

The right of free speech is not an unlimited right. It entitles an individual to advocate certain ideas regardless of their popularity, but it does not extend to the threatening of terror, inciting of riots, or placing another's life or property in danger. Masson v. Slaton, 320 F. Supp. 669 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

All speech is not ultimately protected under U.S. Const., amend. 1. State v. Davis, 246 Ga. 761, 272 S.E.2d 721 (1980).

State may punish those abusing freedom of speech and press. — That a state in the exercise of its police power may punish those who abuse the freedom of speech and press by utterances inimical to the public welfare, tending to corrupt public morals, incite to crime, or disturb the public peace, is not open to question. Carr v. State, 176 Ga. 55, 166 S.E. 827 (1932), later appeal, 176 Ga. 747, 169 S.E. 201 (1933).

Speech advocating overthrow of government by unlawful means prohibited. — A state may penalize utterances which openly advocate the overthrow of the representative and constitutional form of government of the United States and the several states, by violence or other unlawful means. Carr v. State, 176 Ga. 55, 166 S.E. 827 (1932), later appeal, 176 Ga. 747, 169 S.E. 201 (1933).

Freedom of speech and press does not protect disturbances to public peace or the attempt to subvert the government. It does not protect publications or teachings which tend to subvert or imperil the government or to impede or hinder it in the performance of its governmental duties. Carr v. State, 176 Ga. 55, 166 S.E. 827 (1932), later appeal, 176 Ga. 747, 169 S.E. 201 (1933).

Freedom of speech and press does not protect publications prompting the overthrow of government by force, the punishment of those who publish articles which tend to destroy organized society being essential to the security of freedom and the stability of the state. Carr v. State, 176 Ga. 55, 166 S.E. 827 (1932), later appeal, 176 Ga. 747, 169 S.E. 201 (1933).

Question in every case is whether words used are used in such circumstances and of such nature as to create a clear and present danger that they will bring about the substantive evils that Congress has a right to prevent. Speech which advocates a violation of the law is protected except where such advocacy is directed to inciting or producing imminent lawless action and is likely to incite or produce such action. State v. Davis, 246 Ga. 761, 272 S.E.2d 721 (1980).

“Fighting words” not protected speech. — “Fighting words” constitute one of those narrow speech areas not constitutionally protected. State v. Klinakis, 206 Ga. App. 318, 425 S.E.2d 665 (1992).

Whether words are “fighting” words to be decided by jury. — Whether certain words were “fighting” words, tending to provoke violence, was a question of fact to be decided by the jury, not a question of law to be decided by the court. Wilson v. Attaway, 757 F.2d 1227 (11th Cir. 1985).

Violent threats unprotected. — The communication of terroristic threats to another person to commit a crime of violence upon that person clearly falls outside of those communications and expressions which are protected by U.S. Const., amend. 1. Lanthrip v. State, 235 Ga. 10, 218 S.E.2d 771 (1975).

Certain utterances not within purview of first amendment. — Utterances which are not an essential part of any exposition of idea or which are not in any proper sense communication of information or opinion are not within the purview of U.S. Const., amend. 1. United States v. Irving, 509 F.2d 1325 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 931, 96 S. Ct. 281, 46 L. Ed. 2d 259 (1975).

Extortionate speech has no constitutional protection. United States v. Quinn, 514 F.2d 1250 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 424 U.S. 955, 96 S. Ct. 1430, 47 L. Ed. 2d 361 (1976).

Exceptions to free speech rights. — Recognized exceptions to constitutionally guaranteed speech include obscene material, fighting words, defamation, intolerable invasions of privacy, disruptions of the classroom, incitement to imminent lawless activity, and solicitation of illegal activity. High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 456 F. Supp. 1035 (N.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 621 F.2d 141 (5th Cir. 1980).

There are various defined categories of speech or communicative conduct which are not entitled to constitutional protection. These include the lewd and obscene, the profane, the libelous, and the insulting or “fighting” words — those which by their very utterance inflict injury or tend to incite an immediate breach of the peace. Walt Disney Prods., Inc. v. Shannon, 247 Ga. 402, 276 S.E.2d 580 (1981).

O.C.G.A. § 15-19-51(a)(7) did not limit defendant's right to free speech under U.S. Const., amend. 1 or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. 1, Para. V, as defendant had no right to engage in speech which was calculated to deceive or mislead people into thinking that the defendant was qualified to practice law. Marks v. State, 280 Ga. 70, 623 S.E.2d 504 (2005).

Prohibiting clear and present danger speech. — Utterance can be suppressed or penalized on ground that it tends to incite immediate breach of peace, if the words used are such in such circumstances and are of such a nature as to create a clear and present danger that they will bring about the substantive evils that Congress has a right to prevent. Walt Disney Prods., Inc. v. Shannon, 247 Ga. 402, 276 S.E.2d 580 (1981).

The utterance is not protected if it is directed to inciting or producing imminent lawless action and is likely to incite or produce such action. Walt Disney Prods., Inc. v. Shannon, 247 Ga. 402, 276 S.E.2d 580 (1981).

Justifiable limitations on speech when combined with regulated “nonspeech”. — When “speech” and “nonspeech” elements are combined in the same course of conduct, a sufficiently important governmental interest in regulating the nonspeech element can justify incidental limitations on first amendment freedoms. Southeastern Promotions, Ltd. v. City of Atlanta, 334 F. Supp. 634 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

No one would have the hardihood to suggest that freedom of speech sanctions are an incitement to riot. There might exist special, limited circumstances in which speech is so interlaced with burgeoning violence that it is not protected by the broad guarantee of U.S. Const., amend. 1. Sumbry v. Land, 127 Ga. App. 786, 195 S.E.2d 228 (1972), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1079, 94 S. Ct. 598, 38 L. Ed. 2d 486 (1973).

Unprotected types of speech. — There are certain well-defined and narrowly limited classes of speech, the prevention and punishment of which have never been thought to raise any constitutional problem. These include lewd and obscene, the profane, the libelous, and the insulting or "fighting" words — those which by their very utterance inflict injury or tend to incite an immediate breach of the peace. Atlanta Coop. News Project v. United States Postal Serv., 350 F. Supp. 234 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)2. Limitations (Cont'd)

Motion pictures not entitled to protection afforded press. — Motion pictures are not to be regarded as a part of the press of the country or organs of public opinion and as such entitled to the protection afforded the press. RD-DR Corp. v. Smith, 89 F. Supp. 596 (N.D. Ga. 1950), aff'd, 183 F.2d 562 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 340 U.S. 853, 1 S. Ct. 80, 95 L. Ed. 625 (1950).

Motion pictures not to be regarded as part of press. — The exhibition of moving pictures is a business, pure and simple, originated and conducted for profit, like other spectacles, not to be regarded, nor intended to be regarded as part of the press of the country, or as organs of public opinion. Carter v. Gautier, 305 F. Supp. 1098 (M.D. Ga. 1969).

Contemptuous statements not protected. — Statements made in the presence of the court or outside of the presence of the court are protected by the guarantee of freedom of speech of the U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14 and by the Georgia Constitution 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. V, while contemptuous statements are not so protected. A statement is contemptuous and therefore not constitutionally protected when it poses a present danger to the orderly administration of justice but neither an inherent nor a reasonable tendency to do so is enough to justify a restriction of free expression. Garland v. State, 253 Ga. 789, 325 S.E.2d 131 (1985).

Free speech limitations at trial. — Limitations on free speech assume different proportion when expression is directed toward trial as compared to grand jury investigation. Wood v. Georgia, 370 U.S. 375, 82 S. Ct. 1364, 8 L. Ed. 2d 569 (1962).

Publisher of newspaper has no special immunity from the application of general laws. A publisher has no special privilege to invade the rights and liberties of others. Curtis Publishing Co. v. Butts, 388 U.S. 130, 87 S. Ct. 1975, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1094 (1967).

Acts of nonstudents on campus enjoined as trespass and nuisance. — Acts of nonstudents on the grounds of a private university performed in observance of a vigil in memory of a well-known public figure were enjoined where such acts constituted trespass and nuisance. Griffin v. Trustees of Atlanta Univ., 225 Ga. 859, 171 S.E.2d 618 (1969).

Hair style may be distinguished from other forms of expression in that it is not a direct, primary right under U.S. Const., amend. 1. Even where the wearing of long hair is assumed to be symbolic expression, it falls within that type of expression which is manifested through conduct and is therefore subject to reasonable state regulation in furtherance of a legitimate state interest. Stevenson v. Wheeler County Bd. of Educ., 306 F. Supp. 97 (S.D. Ga. 1969), aff'd, 426 F.2d 1154 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 400 U.S. 957, 91 S. Ct. 355, 27 L. Ed. 2d 265 (1970).

Hair length is not an absolute first amendment right. Howell v. Wolf, 331 F. Supp. 1342 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Right to wear one's hair as one sees fit has not been found to be within the periphery of any of our specific constitutional rights. There is no constitutionally protected right — plainly expressed or within the penumbra, the shadow, of the U.S. Const., amends. 1, 8, 9, 10 or 14 — to wear one's hair in a public high school in the length and style that suits the wearer. Ashley v. City of Macon, 377 F. Supp. 540 (M.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 505 F.2d 868 (5th Cir. 1975).

People cannot claim to hold an unearned degree. — First amendment rights are not violated by the state's refusal to allow a person to hold oneself out to the public under a degree which the person has not earned. Oliver v. Morton, 361 F. Supp. 1262 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Prohibiting unlawful picketing. — State may prohibit picketing directed at achieving a union shop in violation of state law. United States v. Southern Motor Carriers Rate Conference, Inc., 467 F. Supp. 471 (N.D. Ga. 1979), rev'd on other grounds, 471 U.S. 48, 105 S. Ct. 1721, 85 L. Ed. 2d 36 (1984).

Draft card burning is conduct not protected by U.S. Const., amend. 1. United States v. Southern Motor Carriers Rate Con- ference, Inc., 467 F. Supp. 471 (N.D. Ga. 1979), rev'd on other grounds, 471 U.S. 48, 105 S. Ct. 1721, 85 L. Ed. 2d 36 (1984).

State subdivision can constitutionally restrict facial hair of its male police officers because of its strong interest in having law enforcement personnel present a uniform appearance to the public. Nalley v. Douglas County, 498 F. Supp. 1228 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Neither criminal nor civil law may be used to restrict free speech. — For purposes of U.S. Const., amend. 1, whether an utterance is suppressed under criminal law or penalized under tort law makes no difference. What a state may not constitutionally bring about by means of a criminal statute is likewise beyond the reach of its civil law of libel. Walt Disney Prods., Inc. v. Shannon, 247 Ga. 402, 276 S.E.2d 580 (1981).

Uttered invitation to child did not present clear and present danger of injury. — Under first amendment jurisprudence, the adult should not be subjected to liability solely on the ground that statements uttered by the adult constituted an invitation to a child to do something causing the child injury, unless what the adult invited the child to do presented a clear and present danger that injury would in fact result. Although what the defendants allegedly invited the child to do during the course of a television broadcast posed a foreseeable risk of injury, it did not pose a clear and present danger of injury. Walt Disney Prods., Inc. v. Shannon, 247 Ga. 402, 276 S.E.2d 580 (1981).

There is no absolute first amendment right to inspect judicial records. Instead, the media's access to judicial materials rests on a common-law right to inspect and copy judicial records. United States v. Eaves, 685 F. Supp. 1243 (N.D. Ga. 1988).

Ante litem notice not protected. — Plaintiff's ante litem notice under O.C.G.A. § 36-33-5 against the city did not constitute speech protected by U.S. Const., amend. 1. Holbrook v. City of Alpharetta, 112 F.3d 1522 (11th Cir. 1997).

3. Regulatory Powers

Ordinance prohibiting disorderly conduct. — City ordinances prohibiting disorderly conduct in the city have no connection whatever with infringement of the constitutional rights in U.S. Const., amend. 1. Bennett v. City of Dalton, 69 Ga. App. 438, 25 S.E.2d 726, appeal dismissed, 320 U.S. 712, 64 S. Ct. 197, 88 L. Ed. 418 (1943).

Ordinance prohibiting loud speakers from vehicles valid. — An ordinance forbidding the operation upon the public streets, alleys, or thoroughfares by any person, firm, or corporation of a loud speaker or public address system from any vehicle is not an infringement upon the rights of the defendant granted to the defendant by the provisions of the Constitution of the State of Georgia or of the United States. The thoroughfares of cities are maintained by the public and to say that anyone has a constitutional right to use, on these streets, a loud speaker or public address system from any vehicle seems to overlap and interfere with the constitutional rights of other people. It makes no difference whether the violator is using the loud speaker to broadcast what the violator terms recorded sermons or using the loudspeaker for vending goods or promoting some political candidate or for some other purpose. Brinkman v. City of Gainesville, 83 Ga. App. 508, 64 S.E.2d 344 (1951).

Ordinance requiring license for soliciting labor union members invalid. — Ordinance of City of Baxley shows on its face that it is repugnant to and violative of the first and fourteenth amendments to the Constitution of the United States in that it places a condition precedent upon, and otherwise unlawfully restricts, the defendant's freedom of speech as well as freedom of the press and freedom of lawful assembly by requiring, as conditions precedent to the exercise of those rights, the issuance of a license which the mayor and city council are authorized by the ordinance to grant or refuse in their discretion, and the payment of a license fee which is discriminatory and unreasonable in amount and constitutes a prohibitory flat tax upon the privilege of soliciting persons to join a labor union. Staub v. City of Baxley, 97 Ga. App. 221, 102 S.E.2d 643 (1958).

Licensing fees. — Governments may enact ordinances for legitimate purposes requiring those who would exercise their freedom of speech to obtain a license in advance; fees intended for the purpose of reimbursement of the costs of administering a licensing scheme that impacts businesses exercising their first amendment rights have been held by the U.S. Supreme Court to withstand constitutional muster. I.D.K., Inc. v. Ferdinand, 277 Ga. 548, 592 S.E.2d 673 (2004).

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)
3. Regulatory Powers (Cont'd)

Placement of portable signs. — The portion of a county ordinance that required portable signs to be set back from the building setback line did not further the county's substantial governmental interests in either traffic safety or aesthetics and was, accordingly, unconstitutional. Dills v. Cobb County, 593 F. Supp. 170 (N.D. Ga. 1984), aff'd, 755 F.2d 1473 (11th Cir. 1985).

Olympic Sign Ordinance. — The Olympic Sign Ordinance, which creates a five-member committee charged with recommending "Concentrated Sign Districts" within the City of Atlanta and empowers the committee to grant permits to those desiring to erect signs pursuant to that ordinance and which permits only those signs which in some way promote an Olympic-related event, is unconstitutional in that it violates the first and fourteenth amendments of the U.S. Constitution. Outdoor Sys. v. City of Atlanta, 885 F. Supp. 1572 (N.D. Ga. 1995).

1994 Sign Ordinance. — The 1994 Sign Ordinance, a comprehensive regulatory framework for the posting of all signs within the City of Atlanta, does not violate equal protection or free speech guarantees. Outdoor Sys. v. City of Atlanta, 885 F. Supp. 1572 (N.D. Ga. 1995).

County ordinance's ban of off-premise, commercial billboards was an unconstitutional restraint on commercial speech, in the absence of any evidence that county officials considered esthetics and traffic safety before adopting the ordinance. Adams Outdoor Adv. of Atlanta, Inc. v. Fulton County, 738 F. Supp. 1431 (N.D. Ga. 1990).

Ban of off-premises signs in historic district. — Ordinance prohibiting off-premises signs in the city's historic district and in various specific locations was viewpoint neutral and did not favor commercial over non-commercial speech. Messer v. City of Douglasville, 975 F.2d 1505 (11th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 508 U.S. 930, 113 S. Ct. 2395, 124 L. Ed. 2d 296 (1993).

The government's interest in the aesthetics of a designated historic district were sufficiently significant to override the first amendment rights of a property owner to off-premise noncommercial signs. Messer v. City of Douglasville, 975 F.2d 1505 (11th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 508 U.S. 930, 113 S. Ct. 2395, 124 L. Ed. 2d 296 (1993).

Exemptions from ordinance permitting process. — System of exemptions from the sign-permitting process did not violate the first amendment since the ordinance exempted from permitting requirements and permit fees and not from a general ban of all off-premise billboards; and since the exemptions did not favor commercial over non-commercial messages or express a preference between different noncommercial messages. Messer v. City of Douglasville, 975 F.2d 1505 (11th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 508 U.S. 930, 113 S. Ct. 2395, 124 L. Ed. 2d 296 (1993).

Ordinance limiting the maximum number of portable display signs that can be issued to a business to one temporary permit for every six months, the permit to last for a maximum of 16 days, was constitutional. Messer v. City of Douglasville, 975 F.2d 1505 (11th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 508 U.S. 930, 113 S. Ct. 2395, 124 L. Ed. 2d 296 (1993).

Discretion to vary parade fees. — The free speech guarantees of the first and fourteenth amendments are violated by an assembly and parade ordinance that permits a government administrator to vary the fee for assembling or parading to reflect the estimated cost of maintaining public order since the decision how much to charge for police protection or administrative time — or even whether to charge at all — is left to the whim of the administrator, without any articulated standards either in the ordinance or in the county's established practice, and because the fee will depend on the administrator's measure of the amount of hostility likely to be created by the speech based on its content. Forsyth County v. Nationalist Movement, 505 U.S. 123, 112 S. Ct. 2395, 120 L. Ed. 2d 101 (1992).

Neither the $1,000 cap on the fee charged, nor even some lower nominal cap, can save an unconstitutional assembly and parade ordinance because the level of the fee is irrelevant; a tax based on the content of the speech does not become more constitutional because it is a small tax. Forsyth County v. Nationalist Movement, 505 U.S. 123, 112 S. Ct. 2395, 120 L. Ed. 2d 101 (1992).

Municipal needs for protection of public overbalance inconvenience to paraders. —

The needs of the municipal authorities for notice of the time at which a parade, march, demonstration, assembly, or picketing is to take place in order to protect the general public, including those participating in such an activity, overbalances the inconvenience to plaintiffs of foreseeing the activity and applying for a permit by 4:00 P.M. on the day before the activity. Jackson v. Dobbs, 329 F. Supp. 287 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 442 F.2d 928 (5th Cir. 1971).

Municipal parade permit valid. — The requirement that a parade permit be secured in order to enable municipal authorities to limit the amount of interference with use of the sidewalks by other members of the public by regulating the time, place, and manner of the parade, is valid under the first amendment. Jackson v. Dobbs, 329 F. Supp. 287 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 442 F.2d 928 (5th Cir. 1971).

Ordinance banning parades on Saturday mornings was a reasonable time, place, and manner restriction on speech. Nationalist Movement v. City of Cumming, 92 F.3d 1135 (11th Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1058, 117 S. Ct. 688, 136 L. Ed. 2d 612 (1997).

Regulation of “nonspeech.” — There is a sufficiently important governmental interest in regulating “nonspeech” so as to justify incidental limitations on first amendment rights only if the governmental regulation is within the constitutional power of the government; if it furthers an important or substantial governmental interest; if the governmental interest is unrelated to the suppression of free expression; and if the incidental restriction on alleged first amendment freedoms is no greater than is essential to the furtherance of that interest. Southeastern Promotions, Ltd. v. City of Atlanta, 334 F. Supp. 634 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Municipality may not restrict access to auditorium. — Municipality may not empower its licensing officials to dispense or withhold permission to speak, assemble, picket, or parade, according to their own opinions regarding the potential effect of the activity in question on the “welfare,” “decency,” or “morals” of the community. Municipal officials do not, solely by reason of their authority to manage a municipal civic center and auditorium, have the unfettered right to censor and monitor the types of speech, and to prescribe the types of productions which may be performed in such a public auditorium. Southeastern Promotions, Ltd. v. City of Atlanta, 334 F. Supp. 634 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

City officials have an obligation to make a municipal auditorium available to all for the exercise of first amendment rights despite the fact that the potential users might be able to go elsewhere or that they hope to make money. Southeastern Promotions, Ltd. v. City of Atlanta, 334 F. Supp. 634 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Municipality may prevent monopolization of auditorium. — City may set up various procedural rules so that one person cannot monopolize a municipal auditorium or use it for a purpose for which it is not physically suited. Southeastern Promotions, Ltd. v. City of Atlanta, 334 F. Supp. 634 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Level of scrutiny. — In a prior restraint of speech setting, to determine what level of scrutiny applies to an ordinance, a court must decide whether the regulation is related to the suppression of expression; if the governmental purpose in enacting the regulation is unrelated to the suppression of expression, then the regulation need only satisfy the “less stringent” O’Brien standard for evaluating restrictions on symbolic speech. I.D.K., Inc. v. Ferdinand, 277 Ga. 548, 592 S.E.2d 673 (2004).

Statutes limiting speech must be narrowly drawn. — Constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech forbid states to punish use of words or language not within narrowly limited classes of speech. In other words, the statute must be carefully drawn or be authoritatively construed to punish only unprotected speech and not be susceptible of application to protected expression. Gooding v. Wilson, 405 U.S. 518, 92 S. Ct. 1103, 31 L. Ed. 2d 408 (1972).

Regulation of speech containing “fighting” words. — State has power constitutionally to punish “fighting” words under carefully drawn statutes not also susceptible of application to protected expression. Gooding v. Wilson, 405 U.S. 518, 92 S. Ct. 1103, 31 L. Ed. 2d 408 (1972).

U.S. Air Force base order barring bumper stickers. — An administrative order barring from a U.S. Air Force base “bumper stickers or other paraphernalia” that “embarrass or disparage" the President was viewpoint neutral and reasonable; accordingly, the order did not violate the first amendment. Ethredge v. Hail, 56 F.3d 1324 (11th Cir. 1995).

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)3. Regulatory Powers (Cont'd)

Federal regulation of emergency care clinics. — Federal government regulations governing freestanding emergency care clinics violated first amendment rights of plaintiff physicians, where the regulations were more extensive than necessary to serve the governmental interest of prohibiting misleading advertising and were impermissibly vague in providing that facilities which used such terms as "emergency," "crisis," "sudden," "acute," or a similar meaning term fell within the regulatory ambit. Primary Care Physicians Group v. Ledbetter, 634 F. Supp. 78 (N.D. Ga. 1986).

Federal regulation of solicitors on postal property. — A federal regulation prohibiting solicitation of contributions on postal property did not violate U.S. Const., amend. 1. United States v. Belsky, 799 F.2d 1485 (11th Cir. 1986).

Internal Revenue Service regulations. — Institute which certifies those who offer tax service to the public failed in its attempt to enjoin the Internal Revenue Service from enforcement of a directive prohibiting the use of the term "certified" by an individual who practices as an "enrolled agent" for the Internal Revenue Service; the institute failed to establish that the directive placed an unconstitutional burden on its first amendment rights in that it did not show any instance of threatened enforcement action by the Internal Revenue Service and did not show a concrete factual situation sufficient to establish a case in controversy. Institute of Certified Practitioners, Inc. v. Bentsen, 874 F. Supp. 1370 (N.D. Ga. 1994).

Statute outlawing economic exploitation of racial bias valid although inhibiting of speech. — A statute which makes unlawful economic exploitation of racial bias and panic-selling is one regulating conduct, and any inhibiting effect it may have upon speech is justified by the government's interest in protecting its citizens from discriminatory housing practices and is not violative of the first amendment. United States v. Bob

Lawrence Realty, Inc., 474 F.2d 115 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 826, 94 S. Ct. 131, 38 L. Ed. 2d 59 (1973).

Application of statute regarding refusal to disperse. — The application of O.C.G.A. § 16-10-30 (refusal to disperse) to members of the Revolutionary Communist Party involved in an angry public confrontation with residents of an apartment complex, in the absence of any violent acts or of efforts of the police to respond directly to any illegal conduct without focusing enforcement efforts on those engaged in speech, was unconstitutional. Sabel v. Stynchcombe, 746 F.2d 728 (11th Cir. 1984).

Enabling public official to govern which expressions of view will be heard unconstitutional. — Allowing a public official, through the exercise of a broad discretion, to determine which expression of views will be heard and which will be silenced permits the official to act as a censor. Inherent in any such censoring system is the danger that some individual will be denied equal protection of the laws in violation of the U.S. Const., amend. 14. Therefore, it is clearly unconstitutional to enable a public official to determine which expressions of view will be permitted and which will not or to engage in invidious discrimination among persons or groups by use of a statute providing a system of broad discretionary licensing power. Stoner v. Thompson, 377 F. Supp. 585 (M.D. Ga. 1974).

Regulatory statutes justified by valid state interests. — The freedom of expression guarantee under the Constitution has been consistently recognized as being narrower than an unlimited license to talk; and regulatory statutes not intended to control the content of speech but incidentally limiting its unfettered exercise are not regarded as violating the constitutional guarantee when justified by valid governmental interests. Aycock v. Police Comm., 133 Ga. App. 883, 212 S.E.2d 456 (1975); Hodnett v. City of Atlanta, 145 Ga. App. 285, 243 S.E.2d 605 (1978).

Content of expression not valid basis for regulation. — While a municipality may constitutionally impose reasonable time, place, and manner regulations on the use of its streets and sidewalks for first amendment purposes, what a municipality may not do under the first and fourteenth amendments is to discriminate in the regulation of expression on the basis of the content of that expression. Hudgens v. NLRB, 424 U.S. 507, 96 S. Ct. 1029, 47 L. Ed. 2d 196 (1976).

Licensing of bookstores and movie theaters. — Licensing of bookstores and movie theaters is not a per se violation of U.S. Const., amend. 1. A city may enact an ordinance, for legitimate purposes, requiring those who would exercise their freedom of speech to obtain a license in advance. Airport Bookstore, Inc. v. Jackson, 242 Ga. 214, 248 S.E.2d 623 (1978), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 952, 99 S. Ct. 2182, 60 L. Ed. 2d 1057 (1979).

Adult films properly regulated. — A zoning ordinance, regulating the location of adult motion picture theaters and treating them differently from other motion picture theaters, does not violate the first or fourteenth amendments because even though a city may not suppress adult films, it may place them in a different classification from other films and regulate them. Airport Bookstore, Inc. v. Jackson, 242 Ga. 214, 248 S.E.2d 623 (1978), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 952, 99 S. Ct. 2182, 60 L. Ed. 2d 1057 (1979).

Reasonable time, place, and manner regulations. — Reasonable time, place, and manner regulations concerning speech may be necessary to further significant governmental interests and are permitted. A city ordinance prohibiting the display of "For Sale" signs in an effort to promote racial integration and prevent "white flight" violates a property owners' first amendment rights and is unconstitutional. Daugherty v. City of E. Point, 447 F. Supp. 290 (N.D. Ga. 1978).

Restricting printed material. — If printed material is not protected by the first amendment, the state has nearly free rein to regulate and control its publication and distribution. If, however, even a portion of the material enjoys constitutional protections, the state as a rule may only limit its publication under the most compelling circumstances, and with the least restrictive interference. High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 456 F. Supp. 1035 (N.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 621 F.2d 141 (5th Cir. 1980).

Ordinance prohibiting the distribution of printed materials to homes violated the freedom of speech and press under the United States and Georgia Constitutions because it was not narrowly tailored to meet the city's interest in preventing litter and failed to provide for meaningful alternatives of communication. Statesboro Publ. Co. v. City of Sylvania, 271 Ga. 92, 516 S.E.2d 926 (1999).

Blanket restriction as to minors' access to printed material struck down. — Where the state imposed a blanket restriction on printed material, not merely a regulation within the confines of a school during school hours, the restriction as to minors' access to the material must be struck down as it would be if it infringed the freedom of expression of adults as well. High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 456 F. Supp. 1035 (N.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 621 F.2d 141 (5th Cir. 1980).

Restricting distribution of literature in public park. — Ordinance prohibiting distribution of literature anywhere in public park except at one of two specified booths, limiting number of leafleteers to four at each booth, requiring acquisition of a permit seven days in advance, and extensive identifying information in application for permit went beyond the narrow regulation allowed by the Constitution. Stone Mt. Mem. Ass'n v. Zaubert, 262 Ga. 661, 424 S.E.2d 279 (1993).

O.C.G.A. § 34-9-31 of the Workers' Compensation Truth in Advertising Act of 1995, requiring advertisers of workers' compensation services to include a notice regarding criminal penalties for filing fraudulent claims, violated U.S. Const., amend. 1. Tillman v. Miller, 133 F.3d 1402 (11th Cir. 1998).

Protesting on premises of federal building. — Injunction restricting a protester's activities on a portico of and inside a federal building was valid, only insofar as it did not prohibit the protestor from engaging in any expressive conduct at all inside the building or on the portico, including such activity as wearing a political button, or talking with someone about the day's news events. United States v. Gilbert, 920 F.2d 878 (11th Cir. 1991).

Injunction preventing a protester from using an unenclosed plaza of a federal building as the protester's residence was valid, only insofar as it did not prohibit the protester from sleeping in the unenclosed plaza, if the protester did so as part of a protest. United States v. Gilbert, 920 F.2d 878 (11th Cir. 1991).

A prior injunction against defendant placing certain restrictions on the defendant's activities on federal property did not forever guarantee the defendant immunity from other reasonable restrictions on first amendment activity that the government placed on all persons seeking to use the property. United States v. Gilbert, 945 F. Supp. 1571 (N.D. Ga. 1996), aff'd, 130 F.3d 1458 (11th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1088, 118 S. Ct. 1547, 140 L. Ed. 2d 695 (1998).

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)3. Regulatory Powers (Cont'd)

4. Prior Restraint

Discretionary requirement of permit for enjoyment of basic freedoms invalid as prior restraint. — An ordinance which makes the peaceful enjoyment of freedoms which the Constitution guarantees contingent upon the uncontrolled will of an official — as by requiring a permit or license which may be granted or withheld in the discretion of such official — is an unconstitutional censorship or prior restraint upon the enjoyment of those freedoms. Staub v. City of Baxley, 355 U.S. 313, 78 S. Ct. 277, 2 L. Ed. 2d 302 (1958).

Mass Gatherings Act. — Because the Mass Gatherings Act, O.C.G.A. T. 31, Ch. 27 fails to provide a time limit within which the Department of Human Resources (DHR) must act upon an application for a permit, it delegates overly broad discretion to the DHR and, therefore, constitutes an unconstitutional prior restraint on the exercise of first amendment rights. Bo Fancy Prods., Inc. v. Rabun County Bd. of Comm'rs, 267 Ga. 341, 478 S.E.2d 373 (1996).

Ordinance requiring approval of films by censor not invalid. — A charter and ordinance which forbids the showing of any picture without its having been approved by a censor does not on its face offend the United States Constitution. K. Gordon Murray Prods., Inc. v. Floyd, 217 Ga. 784, 125 S.E.2d 207 (1962).

Prior restraints presumed invalid. — While prior restraints are not per se indefensible, they bear a heavy presumption of invalidity. United States v. Book Bin, 306 F. Supp. 1023 (N.D. Ga. 1969), aff'd sub nom. Blount v. Rizzi, 400 U.S. 410, 91 S. Ct. 423, 27 L. Ed. 2d 498 (1971).

Any imposition of prior restraint upon expression bears a heavy presumption of constitutional invalidity. Southeastern Promotions, Ltd. v. City of Atlanta, 334 F. Supp. 634 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Prior restraint upon expression bears a heavy presumption against its constitutional validity, but even where this presumption might otherwise be overcome the restraint must be the product of careful procedural provisions designed to assure the fullest consideration of the matter at hand which the circumstances permit. Anderson v. Dean, 354 F. Supp. 639 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

There is a strong presumption against the constitutional validity of a system of prior restraint. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 610 F.2d 1353 (5th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 447 U.S. 931, 100 S. Ct. 3031, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1131 (1980).

Prerequisite showing for imposition of prior restraint. — No government may impose a prior restraint unless it has shown, at the very least, that the particular speech it is attempting to suppress is overwhelmingly likely to fall outside the protection of the first amendment. International Soc'y for Krishna Consciousness v. Eaves, 601 F.2d 809 (5th Cir. 1979).

There is a heavy burden on the defendants to justify their actions where they constitute a prior restraint. Reineke v. Cobb County Sch. Dist., 484 F. Supp. 1252 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Prior restraint requires showing of "clear and present danger". — Public officials who attempt prior restraint on speech are able to justify it only by showing an overwhelming contrary state interest, such as a clear and present danger of great violence and severe injury. Southeastern Promotions, Ltd. v. City of Atlanta, 334 F. Supp. 634 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Possibility of criminal violations does not justify prior restraints. — Mere raising of possibility of criminal violations does not justify imposition of prior restraint upon expression. Southeastern Promotions, Ltd. v. City of Atlanta, 334 F. Supp. 634 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Prohibiting mailing of abortion procurement information. — Statute prohibiting mailing of printed matter containing information concerning procuring of abortions is unconstitutional because such matter is protected speech under the first amendment and is entitled to be transmitted without prior restraint. Atlanta Coop. News Project v.

United States Postal Serv., 350 F. Supp. 234 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

Restraints on publishing. — A publisher cannot be restrained by a prior order from publishing what the publisher desires to publish, but this in no sense exonerates such publisher from liability for what the publisher has published. 106 Forsyth Corp. v. Bishop, 362 F. Supp. 1389 (M.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 482 F.2d 280 (5th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 422 U.S. 1044, 95 S. Ct. 2660, 45 L. Ed. 2d 696 (1975).

Restraint on mailing letters. — Right to mail letters is first amendment right and prior restraint on that right, which bears heavy presumption of invalidity, must be carefully scrutinized. Anderson v. Dean, 354 F. Supp. 639 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Injunction against publication of any information about person is prior restraint. — The power of a court of the United States to enjoin publication of information about a person, without regard to truth, falsity, or defamatory character of that information is a matter of concern. Such an injunction, enforceable through the contempt power, constitutes a prior restraint by the United States against the publication of facts which the community has a right to know and which any party has the right to publish. A court is without power to make such an order. Anderson v. Dean, 354 F. Supp. 639 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Heavy restraints on adult cinemas invalid. — Local ordinance requiring numerous, extensive, and imprecise licensing standards and a high license fee from theaters showing "adult", but not obscene, films imposed invalid restraints on rights of U.S. Const., amend. 1. Coleman v. Bradford, 238 Ga. 505, 233 S.E.2d 764 (1977).

Limitation of communication between litigants not impermissible prior restraint. — Court orders limiting communications regarding ongoing litigation between a class and class opponents did not constitute unconstitutional prior restraint. Kleiner v. First Nat'l Bank, 751 F.2d 1193 (11th Cir. 1985).

Balancing of private and public policy interests by government. — Fundamental purpose of U.S. Const., amend. 1 is to foreclose governmental control or manipulation of sentiments uttered to the public; therefore, before presumptively protected material is involuntarily removed from the market place by governmental activity which arguably is not directed toward that end, competing private and public policy interests must be carefully balanced in light of all the circumstances. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 436 F. Supp. 1241 (N.D. Ga. 1977), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 610 F.2d 1353 (5th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 447 U.S. 931, 100 S. Ct. 3031, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1131 (1980).

Judicial interference required where state intends to remove protected speech from public eye. — Before state officials may undertake a series of warrantless arrests which generate reasonably foreseeable effects in terms of removing presumptively protected speech from the public eye, judicial intervention of some dimension is constitutionally required. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 436 F. Supp. 1241 (N.D. Ga. 1977), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 610 F.2d 1353 (5th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 447 U.S. 931, 100 S. Ct. 3031, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1131 (1980).

Courts must look through form to substance in determining whether system of informal censorship has been formulated; if a system of prior restraint is found, it comes before a federal district court bearing a heavy presumption against its constitutional validity. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 436 F. Supp. 1241 (N.D. Ga. 1977), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 610 F.2d 1353 (5th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 447 U.S. 931, 100 S. Ct. 3031, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1131 (1980).

5. Broadcasting

Right to broadcast depends on availability of allocable frequencies. — Although broadcasting is clearly a medium affected by first amendment interest, differences in characteristics of news media justify differences in the first amendment standards applied to them. Where there are substantially more individuals who want to broadcast than there are frequencies to allocate there is no unbridgeable right of U.S. Const., amend. 1 to broadcast comparable to the right of every individual to speak, write, or publish. United States v. WYNN Radio, Inc., 464 F. Supp. 101 (N.D. Ga. 1978), rev'd on other grounds, 614 F.2d 495 (5th Cir. 1980).

Natural monopoly argument inapplicable to cable television. — Cable television is entitled to the same first amendment protection as newspapers. The natural monopoly argument does not apply to cable television operators; granting an exclusive franchise does not serve an important or substantial governmental interest. Cox Cable Communications, Inc. v. United States, 774 F. Supp. 633 (M.D. Ga. 1991), rev'd on other grounds, 992 F.2d 1178 (11th Cir. 1993).

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)
5. Broadcasting (Cont'd)

Personal attack rule promulgated by the Federal Communications Commission does not constitute an unlawful restraint upon the broadcast licensee's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1 of freedom of speech and of the press. United States v. WIYN Radio, Inc., 464 F. Supp. 101 (N.D. Ga. 1978), rev'd on other grounds, 614 F.2d 495 (5th Cir. 1980).

Statements not related to journalistic endeavor. — Where statements which defendant was charged with making and with encouraging others to make on the defendant's radio show were quite clearly unrelated to any legitimate form of journalistic endeavor, the defendant was not protected on ground of "journalistic privilege" in the defendant's refusal to divulge the identity of his news sources for the allegedly defamatory statements. Georgia Communications Corp. v. Horne, 164 Ga. App. 227, 294 S.E.2d 725 (1982).

Broadcaster liability for newsworthy report. — Broadcaster may be liable even for newsworthy report if it contains a defamatory statement and the broadcaster failed to employ the procedures a reasonable broadcaster under the circumstances would have employed to assure the accuracy of the statement before broadcasting the report. Diamond v. American Family Corp., 186 Ga. App. 681, 368 S.E.2d 350, cert. denied, 186 Ga. App. 917, 368 S.E.2d 350 (1988).

Broadcaster prohibited from removing defamatory statements from candidates' speeches. — The fact that a broadcaster may be constitutionally prohibited by statute from removing defamatory statements contained in speeches broadcast by legally qualified candidates for public office does not demonstrate any right under U.S. Const., amend. 1 of a candidate to access. Belluso v.

Turner Communications Corp., 633 F.2d 393 (5th Cir. 1980).

No evidence FCC approved station refusal of plaintiff's commercial. — The fact that the Federal Communications Commission did not order the station to air plaintiff's message at the time an exemption from § 315(a) of the Federal Communications Act of 1934, 47 U.S.C. § 151 et seq., was requested is no evidence that the commission would have or did approve of the station's decision to refuse the commercial. Belluso v. Turner Communications Corp., 633 F.2d 393 (5th Cir. 1980).

Determination of presence of governmental action. — Since broadcasters are not instrumentalities or agents of the government, but operate as private parties under government regulation, determination of whether there has been governmental action in any particular case turns on whether the government in fact was in some way involved in bringing about the alleged violation, either by requiring or urging the broadcaster to commit the challenged action. Belluso v. Turner Communications Corp., 633 F.2d 393 (5th Cir. 1980).

Broadcaster's acts were private and not governmental under first amendment. — Since broadcasters exercise wide discretion over the content and format of their programming, where a broadcast licensee acts in a manner inconsistent with the requirements of the Federal Communications Act, 47 U.S.C. § 151 et seq., and where those acts are in no way sanctioned by a governmental body such as the Federal Communications Commission, they are private and not governmental acts for purposes of first amendment analysis. Belluso v. Turner Communications Corp., 633 F.2d 393 (5th Cir. 1980).

Existence of regulations does not imply governmental entity. — Existence of regulations does not automatically transform regulated entity into government instrumentality for purposes of first amendment analysis. Belluso v. Turner Communications Corp., 633 F.2d 393 (5th Cir. 1980).

Public television station's rules and regulations requiring that producers be respectful of others at the production facility were reasonable and the station's action in barring a violator from the facility was reasonable under the circumstances and did not violate the producer's first amendment rights. Jersawitz v. People TV, 71 F. Supp. 2d 1330 (N.D. Ga. 1999).

Broadcaster's actions not imputable to government. — Once it is determined that a broadcaster acts as a private person subject to government regulations, a broadcaster's actions cannot be imputed to the government unless they are in some way approved or sanctioned by the government. Belluso v. Turner Communications Corp., 633 F.2d 393 (5th Cir. 1980).

FCC's silence not construable as governmental action. — Where plaintiff failed to seek compliance with the Federal Communications Act, 47 U.S.C. § 151 et seq., before the Federal Communications Commission, that body's silence cannot be turned into governmental action for first amendment purposes. Belluso v. Turner Communications Corp., 633 F.2d 393 (5th Cir. 1980).

Injunctive relief. — As a general rule, a plaintiff is entitled to a permanent injunction when copyright liability has been established and there is a threat of continuing infringement. However, the broadcast media present an unusual order of first amendment values due to the inherent difficulty in allocating a scarce number of broadcast frequencies among applicants. Under these circumstances, caution in fashioning a remedy is indicated and broad injunctive relief will not be granted to a broadcaster unless entitlement to and need for such relief is clear and convincing. Pacific & S. Co. v. Duncan, 572 F. Supp. 1186 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 744 F.2d 1490 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1004, 105 S. Ct. 1867, 85 L. Ed. 2d 161 (1985).

A federal court, in fashioning a permanent injunction against a "TV news clip" service, which violated a television station's copyright by copying and selling that station's newscasts, was not free to exempt portions of broadcasts on a subject/format basis, i.e., to exempt film footage of public events. Accordingly, the news service was permanently enjoined from copying and selling copies of the television station's newscasts, in whole or in part. Pacific & S. Co. v. Duncan, 618 F. Supp. 469 (N.D. Ga. 1985), aff'd, 792 F.2d 1013 (11th Cir. 1987).

Off-the-air video-taping of live television news broadcasts by television news monitoring service, followed by the marketing and sale of news tapes to interested members of the public, infringes the broadcaster's copyright under federal law. The first amendment does not prohibit interference with such activities. Pacific & S. Co. v. Duncan, 572 F. Supp. 1186 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 744 F.2d 1490 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1004, 105 S. Ct. 1867, 85 L. Ed. 2d 161 (1985).

U.S. Const., amend. 1 did not conflict with a television station's effort to enforce its copyright against a business which videotaped its news broadcasts and sold the tapes to the subjects of the news reports. Pacific & S. Co. v. Duncan, 744 F.2d 1490 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1004, 105 S. Ct. 1867, 85 L. Ed. 2d 161 (1985).

Right to copy cable network's newscasts. — Any injunction that would prevent the copying of a cable television network's newscasts "in any part" would be inconsistent with the federal Copyright Act, particularly its fair use provisions, and both the copyright clause and the first amendment to the Constitution. CNN, Inc. v. Video Monitoring Serv. of Am., Inc., 940 F.2d 1471 (11th Cir. 1991), appeal dismissed, 959 F.2d 188 (11th Cir. 1992).

Excluding candidate from political debate not unconstitutional. — Georgia Public Telecommunications Commission's decision to air a debate between Democrat and Republican candidates for Governor, while excluding a Libertarian candidate, was not viewpoint restrictive and did not violate the first amendment. Chandler v. Georgia Pub. Telecommunications Comm'n, 917 F.2d 486 (11th Cir. 1990), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 816, 112 S. Ct. 71, 116 L. Ed. 2d 45 (1991).

Press access to criminal trial proceedings. — The press has no first amendment right of access to communications between counsel and the court which take place at the bench or in chambers, particularly when those communications involve evidence which the court determines to be inadmissible and which, if disclosed, could deprive the defendant of the fair trial by an impartial jury that the Constitution guarantees. United States v. Moody, 746 F. Supp. 1090 (M.D. Ga. 1990).

6. Employer — Employee Relations

First amendment protects the right of public employees to associate, speak, and petition freely, as well as the right of associations to engage in advocacy on behalf of their members. The government may not retaliate against individuals or associations for their exercise of first amendment rights by imposing sanctions for the expression of particular views it opposes. Georgia Ass'n of Educators v. Gwinnett County Sch. Dist., 856 F.2d 142 (11th Cir. 1988).

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)6. Employer — Employee Relations (Cont'd)

Speech involving public employee's personal interests not protected. — Speech involving matters of public concern is protected by U.S. Const., amend. 1, whereas speech involving matters relating to a public employee's personal interest is not. Ballard v. Blount, 581 F. Supp. 160 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 734 F.2d 1480 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1086, 105 S. Ct. 590, 83 L. Ed. 2d 700 (1984).

Threshold inquiry surrounding a first amendment claim as to a "reprimand" in public employment is whether plaintiff's speech and speech-related conduct involved matters of "public concern," rather than matters relating to plaintiff's personal interest. If plaintiff's speech cannot be characterized as constituting speech on a matter of public concern, it is unnecessary for the court to scrutinize the reasons for the alleged reprimand. Cook v. Ashmore, 579 F. Supp. 78 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Factors. — A state employee's claim that the employee was demoted on the basis of the exercise of constitutionally protected speech failed where: (1) the employee's conduct was closely connected with, and actually classified as, insubordination; (2) the employee's speech substantially interfered with the working operation of the employee's supervisors, and to a lesser extent disrupted subordinates' working environment; and (3) the demotion would have occurred in spite of the exercise of the speech. Howkins v. Caldwell, 587 F. Supp. 98 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 749 F.2d 731 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1117, 105 S. Ct. 2361, 86 L. Ed. 2d 261 (1985).

Test for determining occurrence of retaliation for protected speech. — In determining whether an employee has suffered retaliation for protected speech the court must employ a four-part test: First, the court must determine whether the employee's speech may be fairly characterized as constituting speech on a matter of public concern; second, the court must weigh the employee's first amendment interest against the interest of the state, as an employer; third, should the employee prevail on the balancing test, the fact-finder must determine whether the employee's speech played a substantial part in the government's decision to demote or discharge the employee; and finally, if the employee shows that the speech was a substantial motivating factor in the employment decision, the state must prove by a preponderance of the evidence that it would have reached the same decision even in the absence of the protected conduct. Morgan v. Ford, 6 F.3d 750 (11th Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 512 U.S. 1221, 114 S. Ct. 2708, 129 L. Ed. 2d 836 (1994).

Balancing test completed before jury decision on facts. — The Pickering balancing test, and the remainder of the qualified immunity inquiry, must be done before a case is sent to a jury for its determination of whether a plaintiff was actually fired for the plaintiff's speech. To do otherwise deprives defendants of the benefit of their qualified immunity defense. The entitlement is an immunity from suit rather than a mere defense to liability, and like an absolute immunity, it is effectively lost if a case is erroneously permitted to go to trial. Vista Community Servs. v. Dean, 107 F.3d 840 (11th Cir. 1997).

Where a causal link between the employee's speech and the adverse employment decision is lacking, a claim of retaliatory discharge must fail and it is unnecessary to consider other elements of the test for retaliation. Mize v. Jefferson City Bd. of Educ., 93 F.3d 739 (11th Cir. 1996).

Employee's private and informal complaints which focused primarily on how the employee's colleagues behaved toward the employee and how that conduct affected the employee's work did not rise to the level of public concern for purposes of the employee's first amendment retaliation claim. Watkins v. Bowden, 105 F.3d 1344 (11th Cir. 1997).

Public employee's statements must relate to matters of public concern. — To be protected by the first amendment, a public employee's statements must relate to a matter of public concern; that is, to a matter of political, social, or other concern to the community. Suber v. Bulloch County Bd. of Educ., 722 F. Supp. 736 (S.D. Ga. 1989).

Absent extraordinary circumstances, an employee's speech is beyond the protection of the first amendment when the employee speaks not as a citizen upon matters of public concern, but instead as an employee upon matters only of personal interest. Pearson v. Macon-Bibb County Hosp. Auth., 952 F.2d 1274 (11th Cir. 1992).

Municipal housing authority employee's complaints challenging the employee's termination from the employee's job could properly be characterized as constituting speech on "a matter of public concern" protected by the first amendment. Therefore, the lower court's granting of summary judgment in favor of the employer was inappropriate. Peterson v. Atlanta Hous. Auth., 998 F.2d 904 (11th Cir. 1993).

Where a corrections officer's comments during a private conversation with an inmate did not involve facts, but instead expressed the officer's personal opinion about another officer's job performance, the officer did not speak on a matter of public concern, and the officer's actions, having the potential for compromising the safety and security of the institution, justified the officer's discharge. Department of Cors. v. Derry, 235 Ga. App. 622, 510 S.E.2d 832 (1998).

Alleged incidents of speech and association by plaintiff hospital employees were not afforded first amendment protection where the matter was best described as nothing more than private workplace grievances that took place at a public hospital. Nero v. Hospital Auth., 86 F. Supp. 2d 1214 (S.D. Ga. 1999).

Statement of assistant county clerk to the clerk's employer, in the employer's capacity as a county commissioner, that the county could not lawfully refuse to pay overtime wages did not relate to a matter of public concern. Chesser v. Sparks, 248 F.3d 1117 (11th Cir. 2001).

Unsuccessful attempts to prevent protected speech. — The speech retaliation cases do not dictate the conclusion that an unsuccessful attempt to prevent protected speech violates the first amendment. Suissa v. Fulton County, 74 F.3d 266 (11th Cir. 1996), overruled in part by Hope v. Pelzer, 536 U.S. 730, 122 S. Ct. 2508, 153 L. Ed. 2d 666 (2002), overruled on other grounds, Overruled in part, Hope v. Pelzer, 536 U.S. 730, 122 S. Ct. 2508, 153 L. Ed. 2d 666 (2002).

Sexual harassment complaint not protected speech. — Employee's speech, which was driven by the employee's own entirely rational self-interest in improving the conditions of employment towards an environment free of sexual harassment, concerned a private not public matter for which demotion or discharge were not constitutionally redressable. Morgan v. Ford, 6 F.3d 750 (11th Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 512 U.S. 1221, 114 S. Ct. 2708, 129 L. Ed. 2d 836 (1994).

Personal disagreement not a matter of public concern. — Statements involving matters of personal disagreement between a school teacher and the teacher's school administration were not related to matters of public concern, and were, therefore, not protected under the first amendment. Suber v. Bulloch County Bd. of Educ., 722 F. Supp. 736 (S.D. Ga. 1989).

More protection granted whistle-blowers. — An employee's first amendment interest is entitled to more weight where the employee is acting as a whistle-blower exposing government corruption. Abernathy v. City of Cartersville, 642 F. Supp. 529 (N.D. Ga. 1986).

Sheriff who terminated a deputy's employment for cooperating with a law enforcement investigation into corruption at the sheriff's department violated the deputy's first amendment rights and the sheriff was not entitled to qualified immunity. Cooper v. Smith, 89 F.3d 761 (11th Cir. 1996).

Non-renewal of state teacher's contract non-retaliatory. — Non-renewal of state educational agency's employment contract with personal finance teacher was held not to be a retaliatory measure for the teacher's testimony in another discriminatory hearing where defendant's actions were justified ultimately by the declining enrollment in the course. Durrani v. Valdosta Tech. Inst., 810 F. Supp. 301 (M.D. Ga. 1992), aff'd, 3 F.3d 443 (11th Cir. 1993).

Defendants' picketing customers of their employer entitled to protection. — In a case where questions arising under the federal Constitution are properly invoked, the state Supreme Court is bound to follow the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States as respects such questions. Accordingly, the court held, under those decisions, that the superior court did not err in refusing to enjoin the defendants from picketing customers of their employer, since to have done so would have denied them their right of free speech. Mason & Dixon Lines v. Odom, 193 Ga. 471, 18 S.E.2d 841 (1942).

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)6. Employer — Employee Relations (Cont'd)

Violators of order prohibiting strike violence not entitled to protection. — Where an order of court forbidding the use of threats, violence, and intimidation for the purpose of preventing others from engaging in their employment during a labor strike is violated, the violator can find no protection under the constitutional guaranty of free speech. Lassiter v. Swift & Co., 204 Ga. 561, 50 S.E.2d 359 (1948).

Picketing for purpose of aiding unlawful strike not protected. — The judicial theory that peaceful picketing is a form of free speech, which is protected by the federal and state Constitutions, cannot be stretched to shield malevolent picketing for the purpose of injuring the employer and aiding an unlawful strike. Ellis v. Parks, 212 Ga. 540, 93 S.E.2d 708 (1956); NAACP v. Overstreet, 221 Ga. 16, 142 S.E.2d 816 (1965), cert. dismissed, 384 U.S. 118, 86 S. Ct. 1306, 16 L. Ed. 2d 409 (1966).

Employee's seeking to enjoin enforcement of closed shop contract stated cause of action. — Where the United States Supreme Court has not held that an employee can by closed shop employment contracts be required as an alternative to losing the employee's job to join a union which will use contributions the employee makes to it to promote ideological and political issues and candidates the employee opposes, therefore, the state Supreme Court held that the petition of these employees seeking to enjoin the enforcement of the employment contract and decree it void because of such uses of their contributions alleged a cause of action and it was error to dismiss the cause of action. Looper v. Georgia, S. & Fla. Ry., 213 Ga. 279, 99 S.E.2d 101 (1957).

Peaceful picketing with object of eliminating racial discrimination in department stores open to general public is a right embraced in free speech under the first amendment to the Constitution, and made applicable to the states by U.S. Const., amend. 14. Kelly v. Page, 335 F.2d 114 (5th Cir. 1964).

Picketing for purpose of hurting plaintiff's business not protected. — Where the sole purpose of the picketing of plaintiff's place of business was to injure and damage the plaintiff's business, as punishment for the alleged beating of a Negro boy who worked for the plaintiff, the picketing was unlawful and not protected under the free speech provisions of the federal and state Constitutions. NAACP v. Overstreet, 221 Ga. 16, 142 S.E.2d 816 (1965), cert. dismissed, 384 U.S. 118, 86 S. Ct. 1306, 16 L. Ed. 2d 409 (1966).

Balancing rights of public employee and rights of state as employer. — Vital considerations to be weighed in balancing a public employee's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1 and the rights of the state as an employer are whether the statements were directed toward a person with whom the speaker would normally be in daily contact, and whether such speech raised questions concerning either maintenance of discipline by immediate superiors or harmony among co-workers. Cotten v. Board of Regents of Univ. Sys., 395 F. Supp. 388 (S.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 515 F.2d 1098 (5th Cir. 1975).

In determining whether a public employee's speech is constitutionally protected, the court must balance the interests of the employee, as a citizen, in commenting upon matters of public concern and the interest of the state, as an employer, in promoting the efficiency of the public services it performs through its employees. Courts v. Economic Opportunity Auth. For Savannah—Chatham County Area, Inc., 451 F. Supp. 587 (S.D. Ga. 1978).

Balancing test is to be applied in determining whether public employer may inhibit its employee's rights of free speech. In striking this balance between interests of a governmental employee as a citizen and interests of the government in promoting efficiency of the services it performs through its employees, there are factual matters appropriate for determination by a jury. Schneider v. City of Atlanta, 628 F.2d 915 (5th Cir. 1980).

In determining whether a government employee's speech is constitutionally protected, the interests of the employee, as a citizen, in commenting upon matters of public concern must be balanced against the interest of the state, as an employer, in promoting the efficiency of the public services it performs through its employees. Press v. Board of Regents, 489 F. Supp. 150 (M.D. Ga. 1980).

Confidentiality and harmony relevant in determining balance of interests. — In weighing the interests of the state versus that of citizen employee, the importance of confidentiality and harmony is relevant. Williams v. Board of Regents, 629 F.2d 993 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 452 U.S. 926, 101 S. Ct. 3063, 69 L. Ed. 2d 428 (1981).

Rule prohibiting police officer from criticizing superior. — Police officer is not denied freedom of speech by rule which forbids the officer from publicly criticizing official actions of a superior officer because finding such a rule unconstitutional would enable a police officer to engage in the rankest form of insubordination, which would lead to the complete disruption and destruction of the relationship between the superior and subordinate with the concomitant impairment of an effective municipal police department. Aycock v. Police Comm., 133 Ga. App. 883, 212 S.E.2d 456 (1975).

Government employee prohibited from criticizing superiors. — Government employee may be required to forfeit the employee's right to publicly and truthfully criticize the employee's superiors if the employee occupies a high ranking position which requires continued loyalty to them and if such criticism actually undermines their working relationship. Courts v. Economic Opportunity Auth. For Savannah—Chatham County Area, Inc., 451 F. Supp. 587 (S.D. Ga. 1978).

Retaliatory dismissal of federal employee for criticism of superiors not violation of right. — Where federal employee alleges that the employee's dismissal was due to a conspiracy of superiors who acted in retaliation to the employee's criticism, the employee may not claim a violation of the employee's right to free speech. Metz v. McKinley, 583 F. Supp. 683 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd, 747 F.2d 709 (11th Cir. 1984).

Police officer's claim of theft by high police officials was within the area of "public concern" in which public employees may exercise their right of free speech as plaintiff alleged that the plaintiff was terminated from employment as a result of the plaintiff's testimony before a grand jury regarding improper actions by superior officers. Abernathy v. City of Cartersville, 642 F. Supp. 529 (N.D. Ga. 1986).

Dispute between police captain and police chief. — Although a police captain could not have been lawfully demoted or terminated for expressing the captain's displeasure with the police chief under the proper circumstances, the captain's speech was not protected when it disrupted the efficient functioning of the police department. Bryson v. City of Waycross, 888 F.2d 1562 (11th Cir. 1989).

Obscene comments concerning supervisors not protected. — A firefighter's obscene comments regarding superiors made in front of the firefighter's co-workers, in violation of an administrative rule stating that "An employee shall be civil, orderly, and courteous to ... supervisors, and shall not use coarse, insensitive, abusive, violent or profane language," was not constitutionally protected. Also, the rule itself, as limited to on-duty conduct and speech, was not unconstitutionally overbroad. Marshall v. City of Atlanta, 614 F. Supp. 581 (N.D. Ga. 1984), aff'd, 770 F.2d 174 (11th Cir. 1985).

Use of racial epithets not protected speech. — A public employee's use of racial epithets in reference to coworkers was not protected speech about matters of public concern and, thus, a first amendment analysis would not be used to examine the propriety of the employee's termination. Wright v. Glynn County Bd. of Comm'rs, 932 F. Supp. 1476 (S.D. Ga. 1996).

Police officer's speech was protected. — A police officer's disparaging remarks about the police chief were protected by the first amendment where the remarks were made while the officer was off-duty, out of uniform, out of the department's jurisdiction, and speaking to another off-duty officer that the officer considered a friend and where the police department made no showing of actual harm or a reasonable likelihood of harm to its efficiency, discipline, or harmony. Waters v. Chaffin, 684 F.2d 833 (11th Cir. 1982).

An employee's freedom of speech is protected under the first amendment when the interest of an employee in commenting on matters of public concern outweighs the interests of the employer in performing public services efficiently. Because of the case-by-case nature of the balancing test, qualified immunity will always protect an employer unless the employee's speech would definitely and necessarily pass the balancing test. Therefore, a police officer who supported the mayor's opponent was entitled to first amendment protection. Clark v. City of Zebulon, 156 F.R.D. 684 (N.D. Ga. 1993).

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)6. Employer — Employee Relations (Cont'd)

Police officers removal of flag patches from uniforms constituted protected speech. — Police officers were improperly dismissed for failing to obey a city resolution requiring a flag patch on police uniforms after they removed the patches in protest of police practices as the officers were exercising constitutionally protected rights. Leonard v. City of Columbus, 705 F.2d 1299 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 468 U.S. 1204, 104 S. Ct. 3571, 82 L. Ed. 2d 870 (1984).

Refusal to discuss internal investigation. — Undercover investigator who refused to discuss with supervisor an on-going investigation into alleged illegal actions of the supervisor did not have the investigator's free speech rights violated when the sheriff's office transferred and subsequently dismissed investigator. Although the investigator's speech was a matter of public concern, the investigator's first amendment interests did not obviously outweigh the interest of the sheriff's department in providing efficient service, and the investigator failed to establish that the investigator would not have been discharged but for the speech at issue. Smith v. Upson County, 859 F. Supp. 1504 (M.D. Ga. 1994), aff'd, 56 F.3d 1392 (11th Cir. 1995).

Public employees who strike not constitutionally protected from being fired. — Public employees, like all citizens, enjoy the right and privilege of freedom of speech as guaranteed by U.S. Const., amend. 1 which includes the freedom to associate for the advancement of beliefs and ideas. As such, public employees cannot be prohibited from participating in the activities of labor unions. Likewise, they cannot be penalized for advocating the right of public employees to strike or for joining unions which so contend. While they may so associate and advocate and not be retaliated against for doing so, they cannot go further and by striking compel their public employer to recognize or bargain with a union. When they do go further and by striking seek to force their public employer to recognize or bargain with a union they have gone beyond the outer limits of their constitutional protections of free expression and association, and they are not constitutionally insulated from being fired or otherwise penalized for refraining and continuing to refrain from working. Johnson v. City of Albany, 413 F. Supp. 782 (M.D. Ga. 1976).

Delegation of power by city to Director of Bureau of Corrections. — It is question of fact whether city delegated to Director of Bureau of Corrections the final or ultimate authority to make personnel decisions in the Bureau of Corrections with respect to work assignments, transfers, days off, discipline, hiring and firing of employees, and restrictions concerning employees' rights to engage in certain free speech activity. Schneider v. City of Atlanta, 628 F.2d 915 (5th Cir. 1980).

City liable for official conduct of city official. — In a case by a former Bureau of Corrections employee claiming that the employee was constructively discharged for exercise of the employee's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1, the Director of Correction's official conduct must be considered that of one whose edicts or acts may fairly be said to represent official policy for which the city may be held responsible where such conduct involves areas in which the director is the final authority or repository of power. Schneider v. City of Atlanta, 628 F.2d 915 (5th Cir. 1980).

Burdens of proof. — Government employee has the burden of proving that the employee's speech was constitutionally protected and that its exercise was a substantial factor in the employee's discharge. Courts v. Economic Opportunity Auth. For Savannah—Chatham County Area, Inc., 451 F. Supp. 587 (S.D. Ga. 1978).

Where former correctional officer attempted to organize "sick out" among officers in protest of alleged improper treatment of prisoners and unsatisfactory working conditions and brought suit claiming constructive discharge for exercise of right of freedom of speech under U.S. Const., amend. 1, for the government to prevail it must show that the employee's conduct substantially interfered with the discharge of duties and responsibilities inherent in governmental employment, while for plaintiff to prevail, the plaintiff must demonstrate that the asserted retaliation by the governmental employer was motivated specifically by what has been determined to be protected speech. Schneider v. City of Atlanta, 628 F.2d 915 (5th Cir. 1980).

Plaintiff bears burden of proving speech or conduct was reason for improper dismissal. — In an action claiming improper dismissal on the basis of an exercise of first amendment rights, the plaintiff bears the initial burden of proving that the plaintiff's speech or conduct was a substantial or motivating factor in the decision not to hire the plaintiff and that the speech or conduct was constitutionally protected. Leonard v. City of Columbus, 705 F.2d 1299 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 468 U.S. 1204, 104 S. Ct. 3571, 82 L. Ed. 2d 870 (1984).

Burden of city to show that firefighter not discharged for exercising free speech rights. — Where a firefighter demonstrated that the firefighter engaged in conduct protected by the first amendment and that this conduct was a substantial or motivating factor in a defendant city's decision to abolish the firefighter's position and to demote the firefighter, the burden shifted to the city to prove that it would have reached the same decisions as to the abolition and demotion even in the absence of the firefighter's protected conduct. Williams v. City of Valdosta, 689 F.2d 964 (11th Cir. 1982).

Question of law whether plaintiff's attempt to organize "sick out" was protected speech. — It was a question of law whether plaintiff's attempt to organize a "sick out" among the plaintiff's fellow employees was protected speech under U.S. Const., amend. 1 and the trial court erred in submitting this issue to the jury. Determining whether plaintiff's attempt to organize a "sick out" constituted protected speech is but a legal inference drawn from the basic facts in the case and is reviewable as any other legal ruling or conclusion. Schneider v. City of Atlanta, 628 F.2d 915 (5th Cir. 1980).

Question of fact whether plaintiff was discharged because of protected speech. — If plaintiff's attempt to organize a "sick out" among the plaintiff's fellow employees is found to be protected speech under the first amendment, it is then a question of fact whether the plaintiff was constructively discharged because of it. Schneider v. City of Atlanta, 628 F.2d 915 (5th Cir. 1980).

Bona fide factual dispute, precluding summary judgment, existed as to whether a county tax appraiser was terminated in retaliation for the appraiser's public speeches supporting a system of appraising personalty known as "trending." Lovell v. Floyd County, 710 F. Supp. 1364 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

Plaintiff's discharge question of law. — Whether plaintiff was constructively discharged for reasons that impermissibly abridged the plaintiff's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1 was ultimately a question of law for the trial court. Schneider v. City of Atlanta, 628 F.2d 915 (5th Cir. 1980).

Public's right to know official malfeasance and police officer's duty to make it known outweighed other interests. — In a case involving discharge of appellee, a police officer, for leaking information about falsification of records by one official for the protection of another official, although the working relationship of the parties was damaged, this exigency paled before the need of the public to know of the malfeasance involved, and the right of the appellee to make it known both for the appellee's own protection and as the appellee's duty as servant to the people. Williams v. Board of Regents, 629 F.2d 993 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 452 U.S. 926, 101 S. Ct. 3063, 69 L. Ed. 2d 428 (1981).

Nature of communication relevant to balancing interests of public employee and state. — Although protection under the first amendment is not dependent upon the "social worth" of ideas, the nature of the communication is relevant to the balancing of the interests of the employee as a citizen against the interest of the governmental unit. Williams v. Board of Regents, 629 F.2d 993 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 452 U.S. 926, 101 S. Ct. 3063, 69 L. Ed. 2d 428 (1981).

Analysis regarding discharge from employment for communication the same regardless of confidentiality. — The balancing analysis under U.S. Const., amend. 1 with regard to a discharge from employment for communication is the same regardless of the existence of a confidentiality policy. Williams v. Board of Regents, 629 F.2d 993 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 452 U.S. 926, 101 S. Ct. 3063, 69 L. Ed. 2d 428 (1981).

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)6. Employer — Employee Relations (Cont'd)

Interest of public accorded greatest weight. — Analysis under U.S. Const., amend. 1 requires that the quality and nature of the speech be balanced with the exigencies of the work place but with the far greater weight attached to the interest of the public. Williams v. Board of Regents, 629 F.2d 993 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 452 U.S. 926, 101 S. Ct. 3063, 69 L. Ed. 2d 428 (1981).

Freedom of speech of public employee talking privately with employer. — U.S. Const., amend. 1 forbids abridgment of freedom of speech. Neither the amendment itself nor the United States Supreme Court decisions indicate that this freedom is lost to the public employee who arranges to communicate privately with an employer rather than to spread the employee's views before the public. Press v. Board of Regents, 489 F. Supp. 150 (M.D. Ga. 1980).

Employee's arranging meeting between co-employee and attorney not protected. — The conduct for which a union employee was disciplined — arranging for a meeting between an injured co-employee and an attorney for the purpose of filing a suit against the employer and personally taking the co-employee to meet with the attorney — was not protected by U.S. Const., amend. 1. Woodrum v. Southern Ry., 750 F.2d 876 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 821, 106 S. Ct. 71, 88 L. Ed. 2d 58 (1985).

City firefighter's conduct was protected. — A city firefighter who helped form a local firefighters union, spoke out on many issues affecting firefighters, and filed an affidavit in support of a challenge of the city's failure to validate promotion exams as required by the city personnel management policy engaged in conduct protected by the first amendment. Williams v. City of Valdosta, 689 F.2d 964 (11th Cir. 1982).

Valid governmental interest in prohibiting officials from coercing employees to contribute to their campaigns. — The government, as employer, has a legitimate interest in prohibiting public officials from using their authority to coerce their inferior employees into contributing to their campaigns. McCallum v. Hinson, 489 F. Supp. 627 (M.D. Ga. 1980).

Sheriff's authority as to appointment of deputies not limited by first amendment considerations. — Deputies who claimed that they were not rehired because of their failure to support a new sheriff when the sheriff was a candidate were not protected by the first amendment since their term of office ended with the term of the former sheriff and the newly elected sheriff had the right not to retain the deputies. Brett v. Jefferson County, 925 F. Supp. 786 (S.D. Ga. 1996), aff'd in part and vacated in part, 123 F.3d 1429 (11th Cir. 1997).

Court clerk's termination of a deputy clerk, who had advised the clerk that the deputy clerk planned to run against the clerk for the position of clerk in the upcoming election, did not violate the deputy clerk's free speech rights as guaranteed by the first amendment. Zellner v. Ham, 735 F. Supp. 1052 (M.D. Ga. 1990).

Dismissal of employee who wrote critical editorials in an employees' newsletter violated the employee's free speech rights, where there was no evidence that the employee's speech impeded the employee's ability to do work, disrupted the employee's working relationships, or affected the morale of fellow employees. Williams v. Roberts, 904 F.2d 634 (11th Cir. 1990).

7. Libel and Slander

Standard for recovery in libel by public figures. — Public officials are permitted to recover in libel only when they prove that the publication involved was deliberately falsified, or published recklessly despite the publisher's awareness of probable falsity. Investigatory failures alone are held insufficient to satisfy this standard. Curtis Publishing Co. v. Butts, 388 U.S. 130, 87 S. Ct. 1975, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1094 (1967).

The first amendment mandates that a public figure plaintiff prove actual malice by clear and convincing evidence. Barber v. Perdue, 194 Ga. App. 287, 390 S.E.2d 234

(1989), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 967, 111 S. Ct. 430, 112 L. Ed. 2d 414 (1990).

To survive a defendant's motion for summary judgment in an action for libel and slander, a plaintiff who is a public figure must produce evidence that the speaker knew the charge was false or at least had serious doubts concerning its truth. Smith v. Turner, 764 F. Supp. 632 (N.D. Ga. 1991).

Limitation on state's power to award libel damages to public officials. — U.S. Const., amend. 1 limits the state's power to award damages in a libel action brought by a public official against critics of the official's official conduct. Bon Air Hotel, Inc. v. Time, Inc., 426 F.2d 858 (5th Cir. 1970).

Protection under the first amendment is conditioned on a lack of actual malice, i.e., knowledge on the part of the person claiming first amendment protection that a statement is false, or reckless disregard of whether or not it is false. Bon Air Hotel, Inc. v. Time, Inc., 426 F.2d 858 (5th Cir. 1970).

Proof of actual malice. — Actual malice is not presumed, but is a matter of proof by the plaintiff. Williams v. Trust Co., 140 Ga. App. 49, 230 S.E.2d 45 (1976).

The constitutional standard demands that proof of actual malice be made with convincing clarity. Williams v. Trust Co., 140 Ga. App. 49, 230 S.E.2d 45 (1976).

No longer any need to prove actual malice. — Statements made by the press about a private individual which concern a matter of public interest are still granted a conditional privilege to the extent that such statements are not subject to "strict liability" which might otherwise be imposed at common law. However, there is no longer a constitutional requirement that the individual must prove actual malice in order to recover, and the Georgia Supreme Court adopted the standard of the majority of states, i.e., ordinary care. Diamond v. American Family Corp., 186 Ga. App. 681, 368 S.E.2d 350, cert. denied, 186 Ga. App. 917, 368 S.E.2d 350 (1988).

Publications concerning matters of public interest are protected by the first amendment absent proof of actual malice. Bon Air Hotel, Inc. v. Time, Inc., 426 F.2d 858 (5th Cir. 1970).

Misstatement of fact in discussing public figures. — Guarantees under U.S. Const., amend. 1 are applicable to misstatements of fact in discussing public figures. Bon Air Hotel, Inc. v. Time, Inc., 426 F.2d 858 (5th Cir. 1970).

Scope of freedom of discussion. — Freedom of discussion must embrace all issues about which information is needed or appropriate to enable members of society to cope with the exigencies of their period. Bon Air Hotel, Inc. v. Time, Inc., 426 F.2d 858 (5th Cir. 1970).

Innocently published false reports of matters of public interest entitled to protection. — The constitutional protections for speech and press preclude the application of statutes designed to redress false reports of matters of public interest in the absence of proof that the defendant published the report with knowledge of its falsity or in reckless disregard of the truth. Bon Air Hotel, Inc. v. Time, Inc., 426 F.2d 858 (5th Cir. 1970).

Criminal defamation statute, O.C.G.A. § 16-11-40, requiring a communication which "tends to provoke a breach of the peace" is vague and overbroad under U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14. Williamson v. State, 249 Ga. 851, 295 S.E.2d 305 (1982).

Magazine article of legitimate public interest entitled to protection. — An article in a Time, Inc., publication, focusing on Augusta, the Masters' Golf Tournament, and the public accommodations available for the many thousands of spectators, was of a legitimate public interest, and entitled to protection. Bon Air Hotel, Inc. v. Time, Inc., 426 F.2d 858 (5th Cir. 1970).

Summary judgment for defendant absent pretrial proof of actual malice. — In an action for libel where the publisher is protected by U.S. Const., amend. 1, unless the trial court finds, on the basis of pretrial affidavits, depositions, or other documentary evidence, that the plaintiff can prove actual malice, i.e., actual knowledge of the statement's falsity or reckless disregard of the truth, it should grant summary judgment for the defendant. Summary judgment for publishers is proper where the record is devoid of genuine issues of fact as to whether the alleged defamatory statement was published with actual knowledge of its falsity or with a reckless disregard of whether it was true or false. Bon Air Hotel, Inc. v. Time, Inc., 426 F.2d 858 (5th Cir. 1970).

Summary judgment not allowed where actual malice inferable. — A publisher's motion for summary judgment may not be allowed where facts were presented from which a jury could find that a statement was made with actual malice. Bon Air Hotel, Inc. v. Time, Inc., 426 F.2d 858 (5th Cir. 1970).

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)7. Libel and Slander (Cont'd)

Proper measure for determination of actual malice. — In a libel suit, reckless conduct on the part of a publisher is not measured by whether a reasonably prudent man would have published, or would have investigated before publishing. There must be sufficient evidence to permit the conclusion that the defendant in fact entertained serious doubts as to the truth of the defendant's publication. Publishing with such doubts shows reckless disregard for truth or falsity and demonstrates actual malice. Jackson v. Atlantic Monthly Co., 324 F. Supp. 1302 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

It is not sufficient to measure reckless disregard by what a reasonably prudent man would have done under similar circumstances nor whether a reasonably prudent man would have conducted further investigation. Rather, the evidence must show in a clear and convincing manner that defendant in fact entertained serious doubts as to the truth of the defendant's statements. Miller v. Woods, 180 Ga. App. 486, 349 S.E.2d 505 (1986).

Slander per se. — Since the appellee did not include in an amended complaint a plea for special damages under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9(g), the defamation count of the amended complaint was limited to a claim alleging slander per se; employment of the Milkovich factors determined only that the alleged opinion was actionable as slander, but the Milkovich factors had no bearing on whether the words used constituted slander per se; statements which could have been interpreted as having the purpose of injuring the appellee's business by stating or implying that the appellee was going out of the real estate development business in which the appellee was still engaged and leaving the area were not recognizable as injurious on their face, and the appellant was entitled to summary judgment on the appellee's slander per se claim. Bellemead, LLC v. Stoker, 280 Ga. 635, 631 S.E.2d 693 (2006).

Public figure must demonstrate actual malice. — A public figure cannot recover for libel unless the public figure demonstrates actual malice or the publishing of a knowing falsehood with reckless disregard of the truth. Jackson v. Atlantic Monthly Co., 324 F. Supp. 1302 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Negligence is proper standard for defamation involving private individual. — Classroom discussion regarding America's involvement in Iraq was not an action intended to thrust the professor into the forefront of controversy in any public forum, and the trial court erred in finding that the professor was a limited-purpose public figure and requiring a showing of actual malice on the part of a reporter, newspapers, and others in the professor's defamation claims; rather, the professor was a private person to whom a negligence standard applied and, as there was no claim by defendants that they were not negligent, the trial court erred in granting summary judgment to them. Sewell v. Trib Publ'ns, Inc., 276 Ga. App. 250, 622 S.E.2d 919 (2005).

Facts concerning plaintiff in libel suit allowing court to infer that the plaintiff is a "public figure". See Jackson v. Atlantic Monthly Co., 324 F. Supp. 1302 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Proof of actual malice required regarding statement made about one's official conduct. — The constitutional protection of freedom of the press requires that a public official not be allowed to collect damages for a defamatory falsehood relating to the official's official conduct unless the official can prove that the statement was made with "actual malice," that is, with knowledge that it was false or with reckless disregard of whether it was false or not. Credit Bureau of Dalton, Inc. v. CBS News, 332 F. Supp. 1291 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Publications regarding "public figures" protected. — The limited protection of U.S. Const., amend. 1 reaches publications regarding all "public figures," not just those who are public officials. Credit Bureau of Dalton, Inc. v. CBS News, 332 F. Supp. 1291 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Burdens of proof in libel or slander actions. — For public officers and public figures to recover for damage to their reputations for libelous falsehoods, they must prove either knowing or reckless disregard of the truth. All other plaintiffs must prove at least negligent falsehood, but if the publication about them was in an area of legitimate public interest, then they too must prove deliberate or reckless error. In all actions for libel or slander, actual damages must be proved, and awards of punitive damages will be strictly limited. Credit Bureau of Dalton, Inc. v. CBS News, 332 F. Supp. 1291 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Clear and convincing standard required of plaintiff. — In a libel suit for an allegedly defamatory falsehood, U.S. Const., amend. 1 requires that the plaintiff not be permitted to recover damages except upon a clear and convincing showing that the falsehood was published with knowledge that it was false or with reckless disregard of whether it was false or not. Credit Bureau of Dalton, Inc. v. CBS News, 332 F. Supp. 1291 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Publications concerning matters of public interest are protected by U.S. Const., amend. 1, absent proof of actual malice. Actual malice may be inferred when the investigation for a story which is not “hot news” was grossly inadequate under the circumstances. Credit Bureau of Dalton, Inc. v. CBS News, 332 F. Supp. 1291 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Forcing defendant to trial in itself a curtailment of press freedom. — Forcing a defendant to go to trial when the defendant has acted with the first amendment’s protection can in itself be a curtailment of freedom of the press, even if the defendant should subsequently prevail on the merits. Credit Bureau of Dalton, Inc. v. CBS News, 332 F. Supp. 1291 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Invalidity of prior restraint on suspected libel. — Just as a prior restraint may not be imposed upon material thought to be obscene without adequate safeguards, so, too, a prior restraint may not be imposed upon a suspected libel without adequate safeguards. Anderson v. Dean, 354 F. Supp. 639 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Injunction against libel not unconstitutional. — Libel, like obscenity, is not protected by U.S. Const., amend. 1. Thus, an injunction directed against a libel is not unconstitutional. Anderson v. Dean, 354 F. Supp. 639 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

One may attain status of public figure by position alone, or by commanding a substantial amount of public interest. In some instances an individual may achieve such pervasive fame or notoriety that the individual becomes a public figure for all purposes and in all contexts. More commonly, an individual voluntarily injects oneself or is drawn into a particular public controversy and thereby becomes a public figure for a limited range of issues. Williams v. Trust Co., 140 Ga. App. 49, 230 S.E.2d 45 (1976).

“Public figure” defined. — “Public figures” are those persons who, though not public officials, are involved in issues in which the public has a justified and important interest and include artists, athletes, business people, dilettantes, anyone who is famous or infamous because of who the person is or what the person has done. Williams v. Trust Co., 140 Ga. App. 49, 230 S.E.2d 45 (1976); Rosanova v. Playboy Enters., Inc., 411 F. Supp. 440 (S.D. Ga. 1976), aff’d, 580 F.2d 859 (5th Cir. 1978).

Police chief is “public official”. — Since a chief of police is a public official, the police commissioner’s memorandum recommending the chief’s reduction to patrolman must have contained false allegations which were uttered with actual malice in order for the allegations therein to be libelous. Miller v. Woods, 180 Ga. App. 486, 349 S.E.2d 505 (1986).

Police officer is properly classified as a “public official” for purposes of libel and slander suits regarding comments on the officer’s official activities. Pierce v. Pacific & S. Co., 166 Ga. App. 113, 303 S.E.2d 316 (1983).

Sports figure involved in controversial on-field incident as a “public figure”. — A sports figure who, years earlier, played for a college football team and who was personally involved in a controversial incident during one particular game, was considered a public figure, whose actions on the field sports-writers could criticize within the protective “breathing space” required by U.S. Const., amend. 1. Holt v. Cox Enters., 590 F. Supp. 408 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Civil remedy allowed only if speaker knew or suspected statement was false. — A public figure might be allowed a civil remedy for a statement about the public figure only if the speaker knew the speaker’s statement was false, or entertained serious doubts as to whether it was true or false. The defamatory statement against a public figure may be false but it is still not actionable unless it was uttered with knowledge of its falsity or in reckless disregard for the truth. Williams v. Trust Co., 140 Ga. App. 49, 230 S.E.2d 45 (1976).

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)7. Libel and Slander (Cont'd)

Elements of proof of constitutional malice. — Knowledge of the falsity of the statement, a reckless disregard of whether it was false or true, or a serious doubt as to its truth, is imperative to proof of malice in the constitutional sense as to statements within the immunity of U.S. Const., amend. 1. Williams v. Trust Co., 140 Ga. App. 49, 230 S.E.2d 45 (1976).

Absent pretrial evidence of actual malice, summary judgment for defendant. — Unless the court finds, on the basis of pretrial affidavits, depositions, or other documentary evidence, that the plaintiff public figure can prove actual malice, it should grant summary judgment for the defendant. Williams v. Trust Co., 140 Ga. App. 49, 230 S.E.2d 45 (1976).

Inapposite inquiries into question of actual malice. — The speaker's motives, though malicious in the statutory or common-law sense; what a reasonable man in the same circumstances may have said; and the lack of or inadequacy of prior investigation; all are inapplicable to the question of actual malice in the constitutional sense as to defamation of a public figure. Williams v. Trust Co., 140 Ga. App. 49, 230 S.E.2d 45 (1976).

Actual malice is a constitutional issue to be decided initially by the trial judge vis-a-vis motions for summary judgment and directed verdict. Williams v. Trust Co., 140 Ga. App. 49, 230 S.E.2d 45 (1976).

Whether a matter is of public or general concern is a question of law for the court. Rosanova v. Playboy Enters., Inc., 411 F. Supp. 440 (S.D. Ga. 1976), aff'd, 580 F.2d 859 (5th Cir. 1978).

Whether plaintiff a public figure for court. — Although the issue of whether a plaintiff in a defamation action is a public figure poses a mixed question of law and fact, it is nevertheless one for the court, not the jury, to determine. Williams v. Trust Co., 140 Ga. App. 49, 230 S.E.2d 45 (1976).

Use of summary judgment. — Summary judgment procedures have been determined to be particularly appropriate in defamation actions where the first amendment is applicable. Williams v. Trust Co., 140 Ga. App. 49, 230 S.E.2d 45 (1976).

Because of the importance of free speech, summary judgment is the rule, and not the exception, in defamation cases. Rosanova v. Playboy Enters., Inc., 411 F. Supp. 440 (S.D. Ga. 1976), aff'd, 580 F.2d 859 (5th Cir. 1978).

In libel cases, where no substantial danger to reputation is apparent, summary judgment is appropriate, since the press should be more carefully guarded against exposure to liability for defamation than where clearly defamatory content warns it of liability. Southard v. Forbes, Inc., 588 F.2d 140 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 832, 100 S. Ct. 62, 62 L. Ed. 2d 42 (1979).

Malice requires awareness of falsity or reckless disregard of falsity. — Constitutional malice does not involve motives of the speaker or publisher, though they may be wrong, but rather it is the publisher's awareness of actual or probable falsity, or the publisher's reckless disregard for their falsity. Williams v. Trust Co., 140 Ga. App. 49, 230 S.E.2d 45 (1976).

Constitutional malice distinguished from common-law. — Malice in the constitutional sense is distinguished from common-law sense of ill will, hatred, or charges calculated to injure. Williams v. Trust Co., 140 Ga. App. 49, 230 S.E.2d 45 (1976).

Actual malice in the sense of libeling a public official does not necessarily extend to ill will, hatred, or actions calculated to injure, for this may run afoul of the freedom of speech protected by the first amendment. Miller v. Woods, 180 Ga. App. 486, 349 S.E.2d 505 (1986).

Evidence sufficient to prove actual malice. — To prove actual malice there must be sufficient evidence to permit the conclusion that the defendant in fact entertained serious doubts as to the truth of the defendant's publication. Williams v. Trust Co., 140 Ga. App. 49, 230 S.E.2d 45 (1976).

Given that defendants, a newspaper, its editor, and a columnist, so doubted the truthfulness of their articles (alleging that a deputy sheriff beat an arrestee to death with a flashlight) that they refused to print contradictory versions of the events, actual malice could be inferred; as a result, the trial court properly denied their motions for a directed verdict and awarded compensatory and punitive damages to a deputy sheriff in the deputy's libel action. Lake Park Post, Inc. v. Farmer, 264 Ga. App. 299, 590 S.E.2d 254 (2003), cert. denied, 543 U.S. 875, 125 S. Ct. 104, 160 L. Ed. 2d 125 (2004).

Absent prima facie showing of malice, burden falls on plaintiff. — If a prima facie showing is made that there did not exist actual malice in the constitutional sense, the burden is cast upon the plaintiff public figure to come forward with proof that the statements were made with knowledge that they were false or with reckless disregard of whether they were false or not. If the plaintiff fails in this duty of rebuttal, summary judgment is proper. Williams v. Trust Co., 140 Ga. App. 49, 230 S.E.2d 45 (1976).

Right to vindicate reputation and good name. — The first amendment guarantees to an individual the right to vindicate the individual's reputation and good name in the civil courts. Rosanova v. Playboy Enters., Inc., 411 F. Supp. 440 (S.D. Ga. 1976), aff'd, 580 F.2d 859 (5th Cir. 1978).

Defamed public officials and public figures can recover only upon a showing of malice, express or implied. — Private individuals cannot recover unless the defamation is the result of fault or negligence on the part of the publisher. Recovery is restricted to actual or special damages. Rosanova v. Playboy Enters., Inc., 411 F. Supp. 440 (S.D. Ga. 1976), aff'd, 580 F.2d 859 (5th Cir. 1978).

Convincing clarity is the constitutional standard to proof actual malice. Rosanova v. Playboy Enters., Inc., 411 F. Supp. 440 (S.D. Ga. 1976), aff'd, 580 F.2d 859 (5th Cir. 1978).

Recovery of presumed and punitive damages. — In an action for libel or slander where actual malice is shown, presumed and punitive damages are recoverable if the applicable state law permits such damages, and hence special damages need not be shown. Rosanova v. Playboy Enters., Inc., 411 F. Supp. 440 (S.D. Ga. 1976), aff'd, 580 F.2d 859 (5th Cir. 1978).

Reckless disregard of truth equated with subjective awareness of probable falsity. — United States Supreme Court has equated reckless disregard of the truth with subjective awareness of probable falsity; thus, in a libel or slander action there must be sufficient evidence to permit the conclusion that the defendant in fact entertained serious doubts as to the truth of the defendant's publication. Rosanova v. Playboy Enters., Inc., 411 F. Supp. 440 (S.D. Ga. 1976), aff'd, 580 F.2d 859 (5th Cir. 1978).

Failure to investigate. — In an action by a high school football coach against the superintendent of schools and a television station news reporter, a television news report concerning allegations of the coach's prior involvement in illegal gambling did not constitute "defamatory," slander, or false light, or invasion of privacy, even if the reporter failed to investigate adequately. Brewer v. Rogers, 211 Ga. App. 343, 439 S.E.2d 77 (1993).

Proof of defamation relating to official conduct requires showing of actual malice. — Damages cannot be awarded to a public official for defamatory falsehood relating to official conduct in the absence of proof of actual malice or reckless disregard of whether the statement was true or false. Even where the statement is false, the plaintiff must meet this standard. Rosanova v. Playboy Enters., Inc., 411 F. Supp. 440 (S.D. Ga. 1976), aff'd, 580 F.2d 859 (5th Cir. 1978).

Issue of whether plaintiff public official or figure for court. — In an action for libel or slander it is for the trial judge in the first instance to determine whether the proof shows plaintiff to be a public official. Similarly, while the issue of whether a plaintiff in a defamation action is a public figure poses a mixed question of law and fact, it is nevertheless one for the court, not the jury, to determine. Rosanova v. Playboy Enters., Inc., 411 F. Supp. 440 (S.D. Ga. 1976), aff'd, 580 F.2d 859 (5th Cir. 1978).

Governmental entity barred from bringing libel action. — A governmental entity is absolutely barred from prosecuting a cause of action for libel regardless of whether the libel was against the governmental entity in its governmental or its proprietary function. Cox Enters., Inc. v. Carroll City/County Hosp. Auth., 247 Ga. 39, 273 S.E.2d 841 (1981).

Government official may sue for libel. — An individual, albeit a government official, libeled for action taken in the official's official capacity may sue for libel. Cox Enters.,

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)7. Libel and Slander (Cont'd)

Inc. v. Carroll City/County Hosp. Auth., 247 Ga. 39, 273 S.E.2d 841 (1981).

Hospital authority cannot sue for libel. Cox Enters., Inc. v. Carroll City/County Hosp. Auth., 247 Ga. 39, 273 S.E.2d 841 (1981).

8. Obscenity

Freedom of expression not extended to obscenity. — All citizens of the United States are guaranteed freedom of expression. This freedom does not extend to obscenity because it is utterly without redeeming social importance. Carter v. Gautier, 305 F. Supp. 1098 (M.D. Ga. 1969).

Obscenity is not entitled to protection under U.S. Const., amend. 1. Southeastern Promotions, Ltd. v. City of Atlanta, 334 F. Supp. 634 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

It is firmly established that obscenity is not protected by the free speech clause of the first amendment and may be regulated by the state. Slaton v. Paris Adult Theatre I, 231 Ga. 312, 201 S.E.2d 456 (1973), cert. denied, 418 U.S. 939, 94 S. Ct. 3227, 41 L. Ed. 2d 1173 (1974).

Free expression is rooted deeply in our way of life and cannot be suppressed through statutes which compromise the exercise of this freedom. This does not mean that one is free to express obscenity. Injunctive procedures are available to stop obscene expressions. Sanders v. State, 231 Ga. 608, 203 S.E.2d 153 (1974).

Obscenity is not protected by the free speech clause of U.S. Const., amend. 1 and may be regulated by the state. S.S.W. Corp. v. Slaton, 231 Ga. 734, 204 S.E.2d 155 (1974).

Private possession of obscene material is protected. — U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14 prohibit making mere private possession of obscene material a crime. Stanley v. Georgia, 394 U.S. 557, 89 S. Ct. 1243, 22 L. Ed. 2d 542 (1969).

Obscenity is not within the protected pale of U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14. However, the private possession of obscene materials is protected. Gable v. Jenkins, 309 F. Supp. 998 (N.D. Ga. 1969), aff'd, 397 U.S. 592, 90 S. Ct. 1351, 25 L. Ed. 2d 595 (1970).

State and federal governments may not constitutionally prohibit mere possession of admittedly obscene material in the privacy of one's own home. United States v. Thevis, 320 F. Supp. 713 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

Commerce in obscene material is unprotected by any constitutional doctrine of privacy. — The states have a legitimate interest in regulating commerce in obscene material and in regulating exhibition of obscene material in places of public accommodation, including so-called "adult" theaters from which minors are excluded. Paris Adult Theatre I v. Slaton, 413 U.S. 49, 93 S. Ct. 2628, 37 L. Ed. 2d 446 (1973), cert. denied, 418 U.S. 939, 94 S. Ct. 3227, 41 L. Ed. 2d 1173 (1974).

The sale and delivery of obscene material to willing adults is not protected under U.S. Const., amend. 1. Slaton v. Paris Adult Theatre I, 228 Ga. 343, 185 S.E.2d 768 (1971), vacated on other grounds, 413 U.S. 49, 93 S. Ct. 2628, 37 L. Ed. 2d 446, on remand, 231 Ga. 312, 201 S.E.2d 456 (1973), cert. denied, 418 U.S. 939, 94 S. Ct. 3227, 41 L. Ed. 2d 1173 (1974).

Obscene films. — No reason exists why the sale and delivery of films should be immune to state control any more than the sale and delivery of multiple copies of an obscene book, pamphlet, or magazine. Slaton v. Paris Adult Theatre I, 228 Ga. 343, 185 S.E.2d 768 (1971), vacated on other grounds, 413 U.S. 49, 93 S. Ct. 2628, 37 L. Ed. 2d 446, on remand, 231 Ga. 312, 201 S.E.2d 456 (1973), cert. denied, 418 U.S. 939, 94 S. Ct. 3227, 41 L. Ed. 2d 1173 (1974).

Obscenity as lacking redeeming social importance. — Implicit in the history of the first amendment is rejection of obscenity as utterly without redeeming social importance. Evans Theatre Corp. v. Slaton, 227 Ga. 377, 180 S.E.2d 712, cert. denied, 404 U.S. 950, 92 S. Ct. 281, 30 L. Ed. 2d 267 (1971).

The Constitution offers no protection to pornography without redeeming literary or artistic qualities. Sokolic v. Ryan, 304 F. Supp. 213 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

Even obscene literature entitled to procedural safeguards. — Obscenity is not protected by U.S. Const., amend. 1; but this does not mean that literature which is in fact obscene is not entitled to the same procedural safeguards that are thrown around nonobscene materials. Sokolic v. Ryan, 304 F. Supp. 213 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

Portrayal of sex not in itself sufficient reason to deny procedural safeguards. — Portrayal of sex, e.g., in art, literature, and scientific works, is not in itself sufficient reason to deny material the constitutional protection of freedom of speech and press. Southeastern Promotions, Ltd. v. City of Atlanta, 334 F. Supp. 634 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Public policy permits state regulation or prohibition of obscene materials. — The states have the power to make a morally neutral judgment that public exhibition of obscene material, or commerce in such material, has a tendency to injure the community as a whole, to endanger the public safety, or to jeopardize the state's right to maintain a decent society. Paris Adult Theatre I v. Slaton, 413 U.S. 49, 93 S. Ct. 2628, 37 L. Ed. 2d 446 (1973), cert. denied, 418 U.S. 939, 94 S. Ct. 3227, 41 L. Ed. 2d 1173 (1974).

Obscene material not protected. — Devices “designed or marketed as useful primarily for the stimulation of human genital organs,” are prohibited from distribution under O.C.G.A. § 16-12-80, and are not protected expressions under either U.S. Const., amend. 1 or the free speech clause of the Georgia Constitution. Morrison v. State, 272 Ga. 129, 526 S.E.2d 336 (2000).

Regulation of obscenity must ensure against infringement of protected expression. — What is obscene and what is not obscene is sometimes separated by a line which is finely drawn. Accordingly, U.S. Const., amend. 14 requires that regulation by the states of obscenity conform to procedures that will ensure against the curtailment of constitutionally protected expression, which is often separated from obscenity only by a dim and uncertain line. Carter v. Gautier, 305 F. Supp. 1098 (M.D. Ga. 1969).

While freedom of expression does not extend to obscenity, state regulation of obscenity must conform to procedures that will ensure against the curtailment of constitutionally protected expression, which is often separated from obscenity only by a dim and uncertain line. Central Agency, Inc. v. Brown, 306 F. Supp. 502 (N.D. Ga. 1969).

Obscenity cannot be defined by local community standard. — Definition of obscenity simply cannot be so reduced to a standard applied by a particular local community. Feldschneider v. State, 127 Ga. App. 745, 195 S.E.2d 184 (1972).

“Community” defined. — The term “community” means, not the minute local community, but society at large, that is, the public, or people in general. Feldschneider v. State, 127 Ga. App. 745, 195 S.E.2d 184 (1972).

Children are not to be included as part of the “community” as that term relates to obscene materials. — A jury conscientiously striving to define the relevant community of persons, the “average person,” by whose standards obscenity is to be judged would reach a much lower “average” when children are part of the equation than if they restricted their consideration to the effect of allegedly obscene materials on adults. United States v. Bush, 582 F.2d 1016 (5th Cir. 1978).

Obscenity as defined by society at large. — The concept of obscenity is the meaning applied by society at large which may vary “from time to time,” but “not from county to county, or town to town.” Feldschneider v. State, 127 Ga. App. 745, 195 S.E.2d 184 (1972).

Foul words do not, standing alone, constitute obscene expression. Southeastern Promotions, Ltd. v. City of Atlanta, 334 F. Supp. 634 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Lewd and obscene utterances are not an essential part of any exposition of ideas, and are of such slight social value as a step to truth that any benefit that may be derived from them is clearly outweighed by the social interest in order and morality. Paris Adult Theatre I v. Slaton, 413 U.S. 49, 93 S. Ct. 2628, 37 L. Ed. 2d 446 (1973).

Test for obscenity. — The test for obscenity is whether or not to the average person, applying contemporary community standards, the dominant theme of the material taken as a whole appeals to the prurient interest. Feldschneider v. State, 127 Ga. App. 745, 195 S.E.2d 184 (1972); Good v. State, 127 Ga. App. 775, 195 S.E.2d 264 (1972).

The United States Supreme Court has set down three basic guidelines for determining whether material could be judged obscene and therefore regulated by the state: (a) whether the average person, applying contemporary community standards would find that the work, taken as a whole, appeals to the prurient interest; (b) whether the work depicts or describes, in a patently offensive way, sexual conduct specifically defined by the applicable state law; and (c) whether the work, taken as a whole, lacks serious literary, artistic, political, or scientific value. Ameri- can Booksellers Ass'n v. McAuliffe, 533 F. Supp. 50 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)8. Obscenity (Cont'd)

A particular issue of a self-styled "magazine for men" fell within O.C.G.A. § 16-12-80 (distributing obscene material) in that: (1) It contained a large number of photographs of women in various degrees of nudity, depicting sexual conduct and lewd exhibition in a patently offensive way; (2) the magazine's overwhelming effect, obviously planned, was to create sexual excitement and stimulation, predominantly appealing, as a whole, to the prurient interest, even though there were items that concerned topics other than sex; and (3) the magazine, taken as a whole, had no serious literary, artistic, political, or scientific value, although there may have been some slight literary, artistic, and political value to a small number of items. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. Webb, 594 F. Supp. 1186 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Every element of three-prong obscenity test must be met. — When examining a publication to determine whether it is obscene, the three-prong test is conjunctive so every element of the test must be met before a publication may be adjudicated obscene. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 610 F.2d 1353 (5th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 447 U.S. 931, 100 S. Ct. 3031, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1131 (1980).

Reasons for judicial finding of material as obscene. — Courts may find material obscene where the dominant theme of the material taken as a whole appeals to a prurient interest in sex, where the material is patently offensive because it affronts contemporary community standards relating to the description or representation of sexual matter, and where the material is utterly without redeeming social value. Southeastern Promotions, Ltd. v. City of Atlanta, 334 F. Supp. 634 (N.D. Ga. 1971); Feldschneider v. State, 127 Ga. App. 745, 195 S.E.2d 184 (1972); Gornto v. McDougall, 336 F. Supp. 1372 (S.D. Ga. 1972), appeal dismissed, 482 F.2d 361 (5th Cir. 1973).

Obscene material as appealing to prurient interest. — Obscene material is material which deals with sex in a manner appealing to the prurient interest, i.e., material having a tendency to excite lustful thoughts. Whisenhunt v. State, 156 Ga. App. 583, 275 S.E.2d 82 (1980).

Book or magazine must be judged as a whole to determine obscenity. — An arguably obscene book or magazine is going to be published or banned as a discrete unit, and must be judged as a "whole" to determine whether it is obscene. A magazine is a "whole" within the meaning of Miller v. California, 413 U.S. 15, 93 S. Ct. 2607, 37 L. Ed. 2d 419 (1973), and it must be judged as such. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 454 F. Supp. 289 (N.D. Ga. 1978).

In determining whether a work is obscene, the basic guidelines for the trier of facts are whether the average person, applying contemporary community standards would find that the work, taken as a whole, appeals to the prurient interest, whether the work depicts or describes, in a patently offensive way, sexual conduct specifically defined by the applicable state law, and whether the work, taken as a whole, lacks serious literary, artistic, political, or scientific value. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 454 F. Supp. 289 (N.D. Ga. 1978); Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 610 F.2d 1353 (5th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 447 U.S. 931, 100 S. Ct. 3031, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1131 (1980).

In considering whether an allegedly obscene work, taken as a whole, lacks serious literary, artistic, political, or scientific value, each magazine must be treated as a separate work that is to be taken as a whole. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 610 F.2d 1353 (5th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 447 U.S. 931, 100 S. Ct. 3031, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1131 (1980).

Warrant seeking videotapes. — Trial court properly suppressed videotapes that were seized from defendant's home during the execution of a search warrant, as the description in the warrant that the items sought were videotapes that were instruments used in the crimes of molesting and sexually exploiting children did not meet the particularity requirements of U.S. Const., amend. 4 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII, especially in light of the fact that the videotapes involved activity protected by U.S. Const., amend. 1, where there was no evidence of any videotape activity involving the victim, and the warrant did not elaborate on what types of videotapes were to be seized, leaving that determination solely to the discretion of the officers, which amounted to an impermissible general warrant; circumstances may make an exact search warrant description of instrumentalities a virtual impossibility and, in those circumstances, the searching officer can only be expected to describe the generic class of items sought, but a warrant authorizing the seizure of "videotapes" with nothing more does not pass constitutional muster. State v. Kramer, 260 Ga. App. 546, 580 S.E.2d 314 (2003).

Simulated sexual activity as obscene. — Fact that sexual activity depicted by a film is simulated does not prevent it from being obscene. Slaton v. Paris Adult Theatre I, 228 Ga. 343, 185 S.E.2d 768 (1971), vacated on other grounds, 413 U.S. 49, 93 S. Ct. 2628, 37 L. Ed. 2d 446, on remand, 231 Ga. 312, 201 S.E.2d 456 (1973), cert. denied, 418 U.S. 939, 94 S. Ct. 3227, 41 L. Ed. 2d 1173 (1974).

Former Code 1933, § 26-2101 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-12-80), was not violative of U.S. Const., amends. 1, 4, 5, 9, and 14 on the ground that the constitutional right to mere possession of obscene material necessarily implies the right to purchase such material and, hence, the right of others to distribute it. Gornton v. State, 227 Ga. 46, 178 S.E.2d 894 (1970).

Former Code 1933, § 26-2101 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-12-80) is constitutionally sound against attacks alleging amendment violations. Brown v. State, 156 Ga. App. 201, 274 S.E.2d 572 (1980).

Former Code 1933, § 26-2610 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-11-39) was not unconstitutional as a violation of U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14. Grantham v. State, 151 Ga. App. 707, 261 S.E.2d 445, aff'd, 244 Ga. 775, 262 S.E.2d 777 (1979).

Statute prohibiting sale or display to minors deemed harmful. — O.C.G.A. §§ 16-12-102—16-12-104, which make it a criminal offense to sell to minors or to display in a place accessible to minors any material deemed "harmful to minors", produced only a slight burden on adults' access to protected material and fully comported with the first amendment. American Booksellers v. Webb, 919 F.2d 1493 (11th Cir. 1990), cert. denied, 500 U.S. 941, 111 S. Ct. 2237, 114 L. Ed. 2d 479 (1991).

Statute prohibiting admission of persons between ages of 18 and 21 to sexually explicit performances. — O.C.G.A. § 16-12-103(b)(2), prohibiting the admission of persons between 18 and 21 years of age to premises where sexually explicit performances are exhibited, is unconstitutional as an infringement on free speech rights without proof of a compelling state interest justifying the application of such restriction. State v. Cafe Erotica, Inc., 269 Ga. 486, 500 S.E.2d 574 (1998).

Attack on constructive knowledge statute as violative of constitutional requirements for scienter not meritorious. — Constitutional attack upon former Code 1933, § 26-2101 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-12-80) that the constructive knowledge as found therein is a violation of the constitutional requirements as to scienter was not meritorious. Showcase Cinemas, Inc. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 225, 274 S.E.2d 578 (1980), cert. dismissed, 451 U.S. 934, 101 S. Ct. 2037, 68 L. Ed. 2d 343 (1981).

Statute prohibiting certain nude and sexual conduct on premises where alcoholic beverages are sold or dispensed for consumption on the premises infringes upon protected speech and must fall as an improper exercise of the state's police power. Harris v. Entertainment Sys., 259 Ga. 701, 386 S.E.2d 140 (1989).

Although a state may have a certain amount of its police power restored to it under the twenty-first amendment that would otherwise be limited under the first amendment, the expression involved in an establishment offering sexually-oriented communication where alcohol is served is still within the purview of the first amendment, and is still protected by Georgia's free expression guarantees. Because Georgia has no constitutional equivalent to the twenty-first amendment, the state's police power, though possibly not limited under the U.S. Constitution, is limited by Georgia's Constitution. Harris v. Entertainment Sys., 259 Ga. 701, 386 S.E.2d 140 (1989).

Authority to regulate alcoholic beverages where nudity is exhibited. — The provisions of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VII, giving the state authority to regulate alcoholic beverages and to delegate authority to counties and municipalities to regulate the exhibition of nudity in connection with the sale or consumption of alcoholic beverages, did not violate the U.S. Const., amend. 1. Goldrush II v. City of Marietta, 267 Ga. 683, 482 S.E.2d 347 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 818, 118 S. Ct. 70, 139 L. Ed. 2d 31 (1997).

County ordinance prohibiting nudity in drinking establishments. — Construing an exception in a county ordinance prohibiting nude dancing on premises selling alcohol as requiring that a business be found to be "mainstream" before the exception applied, constituted an improper prior restraint on protected speech. S.J.T., Inc. v. Richmond County, 215 Ga. App. 73, 449 S.E.2d 868 (1994).

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)8. Obscenity (Cont'd)

County ordinance regulating adult entertainment establishments. — Where there was no evidence that, before passing an ordinance to regulate adult entertainment establishments, the county commission considered and relied upon adverse secondary effects of sexually explicit businesses, the ordinance could not pass constitutional muster. Chambers v. Peach County, 266 Ga. 318, 467 S.E.2d 519 (1996).

City ordinance regulating adult entertainment establishments. — It is error to dismiss, for failure to state a claim, constitutional challenges to a city ordinance prohibiting private modeling sessions or other sexual displays in one-on-one sessions and close mingling between customers and employees of adult entertainment establishments. Quetgles v. City of Columbus, 264 Ga. 708, 450 S.E.2d 677 (1994), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1083, 115 S. Ct. 1794, 131 L. Ed. 2d 722 (1995).

"Total nude dancing" municipal ordinance unconstitutional. — Municipal ordinance prohibiting total nude dancing and placing restrictions on partial nude dancing was an unconstitutional infringement on protected expression as overly broad and void for vagueness. Pel Assoc., Inc. v. Joseph, 262 Ga. 904, 427 S.E.2d 264 (1993).

City ordinance prohibiting nudity in drinking establishments. — Municipal ordinance's distinction between mainstream and non-mainstream performances was not constitutionally impermissible; the twenty-first amendment outweighs any first amendment interest in nude dancing. Top Shelf, Inc. v. Mayor & Aldermen, 840 F. Supp. 903 (S.D. Ga. 1993).

Constitutionality of a city ordinance prohibiting nudity in establishments serving alcoholic beverages was established where it was shown to further an important government interest by the city's proof of reliance on specific studies showing a correlation between adult establishments and crime, and proof that the motivating factor for passage of the ordinance was crime prevention. World Famous Dudley's Food & Spirits, Inc. v. City of College Park, 265 Ga. 618, 458 S.E.2d 823 (1995).

A city ordinance adopted pursuant to the authority of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VII, and providing that a liquor license would not be issued for locations where adult entertainment licenses were required did not violate constitutional free speech guarantees. Goldrush II v. City of Marietta, 267 Ga. 683, 482 S.E.2d 347 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 818, 118 S. Ct. 70, 139 L. Ed. 2d 31 (1997).

Restrictive adult entertainment ordinance constitutional. — County ordinance restricting adult entertainment establishments of-fering nude dancing and alcohol was sufficiently narrow in its descriptions of prohibited attire and conduct to pass constitutional challenges for "overbreadth". S.J.T., Inc. v. Richmond County, 263 Ga. 267, 430 S.E.2d 726 (1993).

Interlocutory restraint of obscene material constitutional. — Interlocutory judicial restraint of obscene material, with adequate provision being made that claims can proceed to final judgment at the earliest practicable date, is not violative of first amendment rights. S.S.W. Corp. v. Slaton, 231 Ga. 734, 204 S.E.2d 155 (1974).

Arrest and seizure of obscene materials without constitutionally sufficient warrant is unreasonable and the evidence is not admissible. Wood v. State, 144 Ga. App. 236, 240 S.E.2d 743 (1977), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 899, 99 S. Ct. 265, 58 L. Ed. 2d 247 (1978).

Proper limitation of injunction order against obscene film. — Where, after viewing a film, a superior court judge finds probable cause that the film is obscene and enjoins the defendant from exhibiting or showing the film in public within the jurisdiction of the court, the injunction feature of the order should be limited so as to provide that it shall continue only "until further order of the court." Walter v. Slaton, 227 Ga. 676, 182 S.E.2d 464, cert. denied, 404 U.S. 1003, 92 S. Ct. 560, 30 L. Ed. 2d 557 (1971).

Public officials may impose a prior restraint upon obscene motion pictures. Southeastern Promotions, Ltd. v. City of Atlanta, 334 F. Supp. 634 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Unconstitutional system of prior restraint. — Unconstitutional system of prior restraint with respect to certain men's magazines was engaged in by local law enforcement authorities where such authorities did not obtain a warrant from a neutral and detached magistrate based upon a threshold determination of obscenity before making a series of arrests of dealers and distributors on charges that their dealings in such magazines violated obscenity laws. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 436 F. Supp. 1241 (N.D. Ga. 1977), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 610 F.2d 1353 (5th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 447 U.S. 931, 100 S. Ct. 3031, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1131 (1980).

Officer's activities constituted informal system of prior restraint. — Where officer's activities constituted a calculated scheme of warrantless arrests and harassing visits to retailers of publications, the substance of the procedures resulted in a "constructive seizure" of the magazines from the shelves of the retail establishments and created an informal system of prior restraint in violation of U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 610 F.2d 1353 (5th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 447 U.S. 931, 100 S. Ct. 3031, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1131 (1980).

Reasons for requirement of prior adversary judicial hearing. — The requirement that there be a prior adversary judicial hearing on the question of obscenity before a seizure does not mean that courts, either federal or state, desire to protect obscenity. It does mean that the Supreme Court of the United States has decided that lest the nonobscene and the constitutionally protected be suppressed it is better that some judicial officer first after hearing competent evidence judicially determine that the challenged matter is obscene before its seizure. Nor is it any reflection upon law enforcement officers to suggest that a judicial officer trained in the process of weighing evidence and making decisions is better equipped than they to pass upon the important and sometimes difficult question of obscenity. This is so because the separation of legitimate from illegitimate speech calls for sensitive tools. Carter v. Gautier, 305 F. Supp.

1098 (M.D. Ga. 1969).

Judicial determination of obscenity necessary prior to seizure. — There must be some judicial determination of obscenity before a seizure or "constructive seizure" may occur. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 610 F.2d 1353 (5th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 447 U.S. 931, 100 S. Ct. 3031, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1131 (1980).

Any seizure of allegedly obscene film should be preceded by state court finding of obscenity in an adversary judicial hearing. A prior adversary judicial hearing designed to focus searchingly on the question of obscenity must be held before the state may seize any motion picture film. Central Agency, Inc. v. Brown, 306 F. Supp. 502 (N.D. Ga. 1969).

Seizure and confiscation of materials in advance of adversary hearing on issue of obscenity is now prohibited by U.S. Const., amend. 1. Sokolic v. Ryan, 304 F. Supp. 213 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

Criminal prosecution or threat thereof prior to adversary determination of obscenity constitutes an unconstitutional burden upon the freedom of expression. Sokolic v. Ryan, 304 F. Supp. 213 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

Any criminal prosecution prior to an adversary hearing without plaintiff having the subsequent opportunity to refrain from selling materials determined to be obscene is violative of the plaintiff's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1. Sokolic v. Ryan, 304 F. Supp. 213 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

Police officers may not indiscriminately seize as contraband items they consider obscene publications without adequate safeguards to assure constitutional protection to possible nonobscene material. The owner of the property must be afforded an adversary hearing as to obscenity before the warrant issues to seize the obscene material. State v. Smalley, 138 Ga. App. 747, 227 S.E.2d 488 (1976); Lee v. City of Rome, 866 F. Supp. 545 (N.D. Ga. 1994).

No prior restraint where warrantless arrest without seizure made. — There is no prior restraint of the freedom of expression by any unlawful state-initiated or state-enforced restraint where a warrantless arrest is made but no obscene materials are seized. Wood v. State, 144 Ga. App. 236, 240 S.E.2d 743 (1977), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 899, 99 S. Ct. 265, 58 L. Ed. 2d 247 (1978).

Defendant must have notice as to material sought to be seized. — The government-instituted proceeding must place the defendant exhibitor or seller on notice as to what film or publication the defendant has exhibited, sold, or held for sale that the government seeks to seize or suppress. Sanders v. State, 231 Ga. 608, 203 S.E.2d 153 (1974).

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)

8. Obscenity (Cont'd)

Seizure of film illegal absent prior hearing. — It is illegal for officers to seize a movie film unless and until there has been held a prior adversary judicial hearing upon the question of obscenity. Carter v. Gautier, 305 F. Supp. 1098 (M.D. Ga. 1969).

Presumptively protected material must be afforded greater procedural safeguards before seizure. — Retailer or distributor of presumptively protected material must be afforded greater procedural safeguards before seizure or "constructive seizure" may take place. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 610 F.2d 1353 (5th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 447 U.S. 931, 100 S. Ct. 3031, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1131 (1980).

When dealing in area of presumptively protected material, greater procedural safeguards must be afforded before occurrence of "constructive seizure"; this usually involves the requirement of a judicial determination of some type by a neutral, detached magistrate either before or immediately after the seizure of allegedly obscene material. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 610 F.2d 1353 (5th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 447 U.S. 931, 100 S. Ct. 3031, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1131 (1980).

Neutral magistrate must find probable cause before warrant may issue. — The Constitution at a minimum apparently requires the imposition of a neutral, detached magistrate in the procedure to make an independent judicial determination of probable cause prior to issuing an arrest warrant or some other warrant authorizing the seizure of allegedly obscene material to be used as evidence. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 610 F.2d 1353 (5th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 447 U.S. 931, 100 S. Ct. 3031, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1131 (1980).

Merely conclusory warrant prima facie insufficient. — A warrant was clearly insufficient on its face to show probable cause if it merely stated the bold conclusion of the affiant district attorney that the defendant exhibited two named films which were obscene material. Good v. State, 127 Ga. App. 775, 195 S.E.2d 264 (1972).

Admission in evidence of motion picture seized under insufficient warrant erroneous. — Admission in evidence of allegedly obscene motion picture films seized under the authority of a warrant issued by a justice of the peace on a police officer's affidavit giving the films' titles, and stating that the officer had determined from personal observation of the films and of the theater's billboard that they were obscene, was erroneous as the issuance of the warrant without the justice of the peace's inquiry into the factual basis for the officer's conclusions fell short of constitutional requirements demanding necessary sensitivity to freedom of expression. Good v. State, 127 Ga. App. 775, 195 S.E.2d 264 (1972).

The proceeding must provide for a prompt and final judicial determination of the obscenity of the film or material. — Temporary restraints to preserve the status quo in this regard are authorized after an adversary hearing and when followed by a prompt final determination of obscenity. Sanders v. State, 231 Ga. 608, 203 S.E.2d 153 (1974).

Necessity for prompt judicial review in obscenity cases. — There is a necessity for early and definitive judicial review in matters involving rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1, particularly in obscenity cases. United States v. One Carton Containing Quantity of Paperback Books, 324 F. Supp. 957 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

A judge may act as a finder of fact in civil proceedings involving obscenity. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 454 F. Supp. 289 (N.D. Ga. 1978).

Burden of proof of obscenity on government. — In each case, the government must institute judicial proceedings whereby the material or film is seized or suppressed, and it must further bear the burden of proof of the obscenity of the material or film. Sanders v. State, 231 Ga. 608, 203 S.E.2d 153 (1974).

Charge to jury proper and not burden-shifting. — In obscenity case, it was not error to charge that "every person of sound mind and discretion is presumed to intend the natural and probable consequences of their act, but that presumption may be rebutted." Such charge is not burden-shifting and does not contravene Sandstrom v. Montana, 442 U.S. 510, 99 S. Ct. 2450, 61 L. Ed. 2d 39 (1979), where the jury is also instructed such presumption may be rebutted. Whisenhunt v. State, 156 Ga. App. 583, 275 S.E.2d 82 (1980).

Charge by court as to constructive knowledge of obscene material proper. — In trial of case involving distribution of obscene material, charge by court on constructive knowledge as contained in former Code 1933, § 26-2101 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-12-80) was not subject to complaint that it shifts burden of proof and relieved the state of proving every essential element of the crime in violation of U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14, where the front cover of the magazine would put anyone on notice as to its contents. Spry v. State, 156 Ga. App. 74, 274 S.E.2d 2 (1980).

Court did not err in charging jury on constructive knowledge of obscene nature of contents of magazines which defendants possessed. Whisenhunt v. State, 156 Ga. App. 583, 275 S.E.2d 82 (1980).

Jury may consider setting in which publication presented to public. — To assist the jury in determining the issue of obscenity, the jury may consider the setting in which the publication was presented to the public, and view the publications against a background of commercial exploitation of erotica solely for the sake of their prurient appeal. Whisenhunt v. State, 156 Ga. App. 583, 275 S.E.2d 82 (1980).

Jury may consider creation, promotion, and dissemination of materials. — To aid jury in its determination of whether materials are obscene, methods of their creation, promotion, or dissemination are relevant. Whisenhunt v. State, 156 Ga. App. 583, 275 S.E.2d 82 (1980).

Finding of obscenity based on pandering. — The jury could find the material obscene if they found the material was pandered, that is, the distribution was a “commercial exploitation of erotica solely for the sake of their prurient appeal.” This phrase has come to be known as the “Ginzburg pandering instruction.” Whisenhunt v. State, 156 Ga. App. 583, 275 S.E.2d 82 (1980).

Sufficient evidence for triggering “Ginzburg pandering instruction.” — The government need not offer extensive evidence of the methods of production, editorial goals, if any, or methods of operation in order for the evidence to be sufficient to trigger the “Ginzburg pandering instruction.” Whisenhunt v. State, 156 Ga. App. 583, 275 S.E.2d 82 (1980).

No harmful error where “acceptance” used for “tolerance” in charge to jury. — Absent a clear indication from either the Georgia Supreme Court or the United States Supreme Court that the term “acceptance,” when charged to a jury in the context of instructions concerning the difficult legal concept of “community standards,” impermissibly expands the parameters of the standards announced in Miller v. California, 413 U.S. 15, 93 S. Ct. 2607, 37 L. Ed. 2d 419 (1973) beyond the scope contemplated in the decisions of the United States Supreme Court, there is no harmful error predicated solely upon the use of the word “acceptance” in lieu of the word “tolerance” in obscenity prosecutions. Brown v. State, 156 Ga. App. 201, 274 S.E.2d 572 (1980).

Jury should see film before judging it obscene. — It is inconceivable how a jury could apply an obscenity test to a film without having seen it, i.e., make a sophisticated value judgment on the libidinous effect of a visual experience, without having had the experience. Good v. State, 127 Ga. App. 775, 195 S.E.2d 264 (1972).

Appellate courts must review independently the constitutional fact of obscenity. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 610 F.2d 1353 (5th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 447 U.S. 931, 100 S. Ct. 3031, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1131 (1980).

Refrainment of federal court from interfering in state case by requiring release of unlawfully seized evidence. — Where allegedly obscene films and projectors are seized as evidence of a violation of former Code 1933, § 26-2101 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-12-80) and the case is pending in the state courts, the federal courts will not interfere with the pending case by requiring release of the contraband as an unconstitutional seizure. G & E Bus. Servs., Inc. v. McAuliffe, 480 F. Supp. 239 (N.D. Ga. 1979).

Municipality bound to issue business licenses and then suppress sale of obscene materials. — After applicants complied with all the requirements necessary for obtaining business licenses to sell materials that are protected by U.S. Const., amend. 1, a municipality must issue the licenses applied for and thereafter suppress the sale of pornographic materials through proper proceedings that will not damage the doctrine of prior restraint. Mayor of Savannah v. TWA, Inc., 233 Ga. 885, 214 S.E.2d 370 (1975).

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)8. Obscenity (Cont'd)

Obscene language directed at police officer. — Language such as calling a police officer a “[goddamn] liar” and telling the officer to “[fuck off]” is not protected by the first amendment. Evans v. State, 188 Ga. App. 347, 373 S.E.2d 52 (1988).

Publications obscene as matter of law and fact. — Where publications depict acts of natural and aberrational sexual conduct, including the participants’ genitals, solely for their own lewd and lascivious purpose and there is no discernible meaning other than pornographic, these magazines are obscene as a matter of law and fact. The magazines are not protected expression under U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14. Whisenhunt v. State, 156 Ga. App. 583, 275 S.E.2d 82 (1980).

Defendant’s films statutorily obscene and not protected by first amendment. — Where defendant’s films amounted to nothing more than a public portrayal of hard core sexual conduct, for its own sake, and for the ensuing commercial gain, the films were not protected by U.S. Const., amend. 1 and were obscene within the definition of former Code 1933, § 26-2101(b) (see O.C.G.A. § 16-12-80). Clayton v. State, 149 Ga. App. 374, 254 S.E.2d 495 (1979).

Motel owner’s interest in providing obscene films to guests at the motel in the privacy of their own rooms was not protected by the first amendment, notwithstanding the possibility that the people receiving the objects of the owner’s commerce might be shielded from state regulation in their use of the obscene materials. Majmundar v. Veline, 256 Ga. 8, 342 S.E.2d 682 (1986).

Videotape viewing not protected in child molestation prosecution. — In a prosecution for child molestation based on defendant’s forcing a minor to watch sexually explicit videotapes with the defendant, the defendant’s claimed first amendment right to possess and view the tapes was not a defense. Stroeining v. State, 226 Ga. App. 410, 486 S.E.2d 670 (1997).

Statute regulating profane words on bumper stickers unconstitutionally restricts freedom of expression as guaranteed by the first and fourteenth amendments of the United States Constitution and by the Georgia Constitution. Cunningham v. State, 260 Ga. 827, 400 S.E.2d 916 (1991).

9. Political Activities

First amendment freedoms extend to political activities such as running for elective office; and state election practices must therefore serve legitimate state interest narrowly and fairly to avoid obstructing and diluting these fundamental liberties. Duncan v. Poythress, 657 F.2d 691 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. dismissed, 459 U.S. 1012, 103 S. Ct. 368, 74 L. Ed. 2d 504 (1982).

A political speech would be subject to first amendment protections. Clarkson v. IRS, 678 F.2d 1368 (11th Cir. 1982), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1031, 107 S. Ct. 1961, 95 L. Ed. 2d 533 (1987).

Restricting political speech. — Restrictions upon political speech should not lightly be imposed, and the public should generally be able to speak on public issues free from fear of resulting criminal or civil penalties. Hobbs v. Thompson, 448 F.2d 456 (5th Cir. 1971).

Ordinance restricting political activities of public employees subject to overbreadth doctrine. — An ordinance restricting political activity, despite the fact that it applies to public employees, must be tested by traditional overbreadth principles. Hobbs v. Thompson, 448 F.2d 456 (5th Cir. 1971).

Public employee to be treated as member of public where activities unrelated to duties. — Where the political activities of a public employee are unrelated to the performance of the employee’s duties, the employee is to be treated, for purposes of adjudicating the employees rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1, as a member of the general public. Hobbs v. Thompson, 448 F.2d 456 (5th Cir. 1971).

City ordinance restricting political activities of firemen overbroad and vague. — A city ordinance proscribing city firemen from “contributing any money to any candidate, soliciting votes, or prominently identifying themselves in a political race with or against any candidate for office” is an overbroad and unconstitutionally vague restriction upon the firemen’s rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1, despite its application to public employees. Hobbs v. Thompson, 448 F.2d 456 (5th Cir. 1971).

Standing to challenge election ballot access. — In a suit filed by a number of political organizations and individuals seeking access to the general election ballot, the plaintiffs demonstrated “some actual or threatened injuries” and, thus, had standing, although they were unable to comply with the election law provisions restricting ballot access. There was, however, an insufficient factual record to carry out a constitutional analysis. Specifically, the state failed to introduce evidence to justify both the interests it asserted and the burdens it imposed on those seeking ballot access. Bergland v. Harris, 767 F.2d 1551 (11th Cir. 1985).

Right to appear on ballot. — The right to appear on a general election ballot is constitutionally favored, but less than fundamental. Duke v. Cleland, 783 F. Supp. 600 (N.D. Ga. 1992), aff’d, 954 F.2d 1526 (11th Cir. 1992).

Role of Secretary of State. — The Georgia Secretary of State’s preparation of the ballot for Georgia without making substantive determinations (which are left to the parties) is not state action. Duke v. Cleland, 783 F. Supp. 600 (N.D. Ga. 1992), aff’d, 954 F.2d 1526 (11th Cir. 1992).

Presidential candidate selection committee. — State statute creating the presidential candidate selection committee, by identifying three logically representative members of each party to serve on the committee, and by providing a check against arbitrariness by allowing only one member of the party on the committee to override the unanimous decision of the committee, is narrowly tailored to advance the interests of the state in conducting orderly and efficient elections and allowing the parties to choose their candidates, and is not in violation of the first and fourteenth amendments. Duke v. Cleland, 884 F. Supp. 511 (N.D. Ga. 1995), aff’d, 87 F.3d 1226 (11th Cir. 1996).

State may disenfranchise voters convicted of felony. — State may constitutionally disenfranchise otherwise qualified voters because they have been convicted of a felony since the state has a compelling interest in protecting the integrity of its electoral process. Kronlund v. Honstein, 327 F. Supp. 71 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Submitting package bond issue to voters. — In requesting the county board of commissioners to submit a package bond issue to the voters instead of three separate bond issues, the county board of education did not time and structure the school bond referendum with the intent of diluting minority voting strength and manipulating the minority vote in violation of U.S. Const., amends. 1, 13, 14, and 15. Lucas v. Townsend, 783 F. Supp. 605 (M.D. Ga.), aff’d, 967 F.2d 549 (11th Cir. 1992).

Exemption of political lobbying of government officials from antitrust laws. — Where the evidence was insufficient to support application of the coconspirator exception to the Noerr-Rennington doctrine, immunizing genuine political lobbying of government officials from antitrust laws, defendant chiropractic board of examiner’s appearances and other communications to the state chiropractic licensing boards qualified as protected petitioning activity and could not serve as the basis for antitrust liability. Sherman College v. American Chiropractic Ass’n, 654 F. Supp. 716 (N.D. Ga. 1986), aff’d, 813 F.2d 349 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 854, 108 S. Ct. 160, 98 L. Ed. 2d 114 (1987).

Determination of state’s delegation to national party convention. — A political party’s choice among the various ways of determining the makeup of a state’s delegation to the party’s national convention is protected by the Constitution. Stuckey v. Richardson, 188 Ga. App. 147, 372 S.E.2d 458, cert. denied, 188 Ga. App. 912, 372 S.E.2d 458 (1988).

Dispute concerning the internal affairs of the Georgia Republican Party was a nonjusticiable controversy which had to be resolved by the 1988 National Republican Convention rather than by the Georgia courts. Stuckey v. Richardson, 188 Ga. App. 147, 372 S.E.2d 458, cert. denied, 188 Ga. App. 912, 372 S.E.2d 458 (1988).

Campaign and opinion polling near polling place. — O.C.G.A. § 21-2-414(a), which restricts election campaign activities and public opinion polling within 250 feet (changed to 50 feet by the 1989 amendment) of a polling place, infringes upon the first amendment’s protection of political speech; however, a 25-foot limit on campaign and polling activities withstands constitutional scrutiny, and enforcement beyond that limit would be permanently enjoined. NBC v. Cleland, 697 F. Supp. 1204 (N.D. Ga. 1988).

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)
9. Political Activities (Cont'd)

Activities deemed "contributions to political campaign" protected from legislative chilling. — Activities in the exercise of first amendment freedoms may not be harshly channeled and controlled simply by being deemed "contributions to a political campaign," for these activities are constitutionally protected from significant legislative chilling. Fortson v. Weeks, 232 Ga. 474, 208 S.E.2d 68 (1974).

Soliciting signatures for a petition, particularly one designed to petition the government for municipal annexation or incorporation, is constitutionally protected speech and conduct. Committee for Sandy Springs, Ga., Inc. v. Cleland, 708 F. Supp. 1289 (N.D. Ga. 1988).

Limitations on expenditures for campaign constitutionally infirm. — Limitations on campaign expenditures, on independent expenditures by individuals and groups, and on expenditures by a candidate from the candidate's personal funds are constitutionally infirm. State Ethics Comm'n v. McDowell, 238 Ga. 141, 231 S.E.2d 734 (1977).

Statute regulating political contributions constitutional. — The state has a legitimate interest in preserving the integrity of the democratic process by forbidding a regulated entity from contributing to the holder of the office which oversees the regulation of the entity, or a candidate for that office; thus, O.C.G.A. § 21-5-30.1(b), which is narrowly tailored to meet this interest, is constitutional. Gwinn v. State Ethics Comm'n, 262 Ga. 855, 426 S.E.2d 890 (1993).

Distributing leaflets on state-owned property. — Because defendant had a right under the first amendment to engage in expressive activity (distributing leaflets encouraging older workers to unite in order to gain political power to oppose age discrimination) at the time and place involved here (in the parking lot of a department of labor facility), the defendant could not be convicted of criminal trespass because the state would not be able to prove that the defendant was present "without authority." This holding, however, must not be misunderstood to constitute a declaration that all property owned by the State of Georgia is now totally open to all expressive activity by all persons, or even that all state-owned parking lots are available for that purpose. Langton v. State, 261 Ga. 878, 413 S.E.2d 708 (1992).

Statute making vote buying a felony not void for vagueness or overbreadth. — Former Code 1933, § 34-1933 (see O.C.G.A. § 21-2-570), providing that any person who buys or sells, or offers to buy or sell, or knowingly participates in the buying or selling of votes, at any primary or election, shall be guilty of a felony, was not void for vagueness or overbreadth. King v. State, 244 Ga. 536, 261 S.E.2d 333 (1979).

Bribery statute is not an impermissible restraint upon free speech under U.S. Const., amend. 1; the bribery statute, which places no limitation upon amounts of contributions or expenditures, restricts the purposes for which any benefit, reward or consideration may be offered or given to, or solicited or accepted by, a public officer. State v. Agan, 259 Ga. 541, 384 S.E.2d 863 (1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1057, 110 S. Ct. 1526, 108 L. Ed. 2d 765 (1990).

County regulations requiring investigator for solicitor general to vacate post upon election as mayor unconstitutional. — Provisions of county personnel regulations which required the chief investigator for the solicitor general of the county: (1) to take a leave without pay from the investigator's employment with the county in order to file as a candidate or conduct an election campaign; and (2) to forfeit the investigator's employment with the county in order to serve as nonpartisan mayor of a town in another county, violated the investigator's first amendment rights and, therefore, were unconstitutional as applied to the investigator. Segars v. Fulton County, 644 F. Supp. 682 (N.D. Ga. 1986).

Termination of plaintiff's position as a parole review officer of the board of pardons and paroles after the plaintiff's election to county and state political party committees did not violate the plaintiff's constitutional rights of due process and equal protection or the plaintiff's constitutionally protected rights of political speech and association. MacKenzie v. Snow, 675 F. Supp. 1333 (N.D. Ga. 1987).

10. Prisoners

State may not curtail prisoner's rights absent compelling interest. — If there is no question of security or discipline involved, and no other conflicting and compelling state interest, the state may not curtail a prisoner's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1. Neal v. Georgia, 469 F.2d 446 (5th Cir. 1972).

Balancing of competing interests. — As to rights of prisoners under U.S. Const., amend. 1, the Supreme Court has apparently discarded the use of such rigid standards as "rational nexus" and "compelling state interest," and has substituted in their place a more flexible balancing of the competing interests in each case. Hamilton v. Saxbe, 428 F. Supp. 1101 (N.D. Ga. 1976), aff'd, 551 F.2d 1056 (5th Cir. 1977).

Prisoner retains only those rights consistent with the prisoner's status. — A federal prisoner is not stripped of the prisoner's constitutional rights when the prisoner enters the prison gate; but a prisoner only retains those rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1 that are not inconsistent with the prisoner's status as a prisoner or with legitimate penological objectives of the corrections system. Hamilton v. Saxbe, 428 F. Supp. 1101 (N.D. Ga. 1976), aff'd, 551 F.2d 1056 (5th Cir. 1977).

Prisoners maintain limited first amendment rights. — Although incarcerated, a prisoner was not barred from asserting claims of first amendment violations when prison officials refused to deliver a magazine to the inmate. However, where the magazine contained inflammatory material which could have lead to disorder and violence within the prison, the prison officials did not violate the inmate's constitutional rights by denying delivery of a single magazine to ensure the safety of officials and inmates. Olson v. Loy, 951 F. Supp. 225 (S.D. Ga. 1996).

Balancing of interests where prison regulations challenged. — Where prison regulations affecting rights under the first amendment of inmates are challenged, the courts will examine the interests sought to be protected by the challenged regulations and determine whether these objectives are, in fact, furthered by the regulations in a means which does not unduly interfere with constitutional rights. Hamilton v. Saxbe, 428 F.

Supp. 1101 (N.D. Ga. 1976), aff'd, 551 F.2d 1056 (5th Cir. 1977).

Correspondence and visitation rights of prisoners protected in some degree by the first amendment. Hamilton v. Saxbe, 428 F. Supp. 1101 (N.D. Ga. 1976), aff'd, 551 F.2d 1056 (5th Cir. 1977).

Regulations affecting either correspondence or visitation rights of prisoners must be tailored to achieve substantial governmental interests. However, governmental interests need not be as compelling when the form of expression regulated is just one of a series of alternative forms of communication, and the means used to achieve governmental interests need not be as tailored when interests under the first amendment are less substantial, but where the institutional concern for security and rehabilitation becomes more pressing. Hamilton v. Saxbe, 428 F. Supp. 1101 (N.D. Ga. 1976), aff'd, 551 F.2d 1056 (5th Cir. 1977).

Prisoners have no absolute correspondence or visitation rights with respect to friends, pen pals, fiancées, and even women who have borne the children of prisoners. When an inmate seeks to have his girl friend or paramour visit him, prison officials are entitled to look more closely at the relationship than if the visitor were a wife and make an independent judgment as to the appropriateness of the visit. This, however, does not give prison officials free rein to grant and deny visitation privileges at will. Hamilton v. Saxbe, 428 F. Supp. 1101 (N.D. Ga. 1976), aff'd, 551 F.2d 1056 (5th Cir. 1977).

Inmates' right to visitation. — Inmates do not have an absolute right to visitation, such privileges being subject to the prison authorities' discretion provided that the visitation policies meet legitimate penological objectives; concerns that former prison employees visiting inmates may pose a threat to security because of their knowledge of security procedures constitutes a legitimate penological objective. Caraballo-Sandoval v. Honsted, 35 F.3d 521 (11th Cir. 1994).

Censorship of prisoner mail is allowed if: (1) the regulation or practice in question furthers an important or substantial governmental interest unrelated to the suppression of expression; and (2) the limitation of rights is no greater than generally necessary to protect one or more legitimate governmental interests. Legitimate governmental interests include the security and order of penal institutions and the rehabilitation of inmates. Blue v. Hogan, 553 F.2d 960 (5th Cir. 1977); Hardwick v. Ault, 447 F. Supp. 116 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)

10. Prisoners (Cont'd)

Parameters of censorship of prisoner's reading material. — Censorship of prisoner's reading material is allowed only when the government shows that the censorship furthers an important or substantial governmental interest unrelated to the suppression of expression and that the censorship is no greater a limitation on the prisoner's rights than generally necessary to protect one or more legitimate governmental interests. Hardwick v. Ault, 447 F. Supp. 116 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Censorship of letters requires minimum procedural safeguards. — The decision to censor or withhold delivery of a particular letter must be accompanied by minimum procedural safeguards, since the interest of prisoners and their correspondents in uncensored communications by letter, grounded as it is in U.S. Const., amend. 1, is plainly a "liberty" interest within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Hardwick v. Ault, 447 F. Supp. 116 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Constitutionally sufficient reasons for withholding letters. — Unless a letter contains a threat to prison order and security or is in direct violation of law, there is usually no constitutionally sufficient reason to stop it. Hardwick v. Ault, 447 F. Supp. 116 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Inspection and perusal of outgoing letters. — Outgoing letters from prisoners may be inspected and, when deemed necessary, read to determine whether they contain escape plots, violations of law, or threats to the institution. Letters containing simply profane or obscene language, however, are not the proper subject of direct censorship through either halting the letter or suspending the mailing privilege. Hardwick v. Ault, 447 F. Supp. 116 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Bodily privacy. — A prisoner retains a constitutional right to bodily privacy and the district court improperly dismissed a class action for injunctive relief based on alleged violations of this right involving the supervision of male personal hygiene by female correctional officers. Fortner v. Thomas, 983 F.2d 1024 (11th Cir. 1993).

Newsmen have no constitutional right of access to prisons or their inmates beyond that afforded the general public. Jersawitz v. Hanberry, 783 F.2d 1532 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 883, 107 S. Ct. 272, 93 L. Ed. 2d 249 (1986).

Retaliatory searches unconstitutional. — Search, confiscation, or destruction of an inmate's material in retaliation for the inmate's filing lawsuits and administrative grievances violates both the inmate's right of access to the courts and the inmate's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1. Wright v. Newsome, 795 F.2d 964 (11th Cir. 1986).

Retaliation for exercise of right prohibited. — The first amendment prohibits state officials from retaliating against prisoners for exercising the right of free speech. Thomas v. Evans, 880 F.2d 1235 (11th Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 901, 111 S. Ct. 261, 112 L. Ed. 2d 218 (1990).

To state a first amendment claim for retaliation, a prisoner need not allege violation of a separate and distinct constitutional right. The gist of a retaliation claim is that a prisoner is penalized for exercising the right of free speech. The penalty need not rise to the level of a separate constitutional violation. Thomas v. Evans, 880 F.2d 1235 (11th Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 901, 111 S. Ct. 261, 112 L. Ed. 2d 218 (1990).

Destruction of inmate's pleadings and legal materials constitutes denial of access to courts. — An allegation that prison officials seized a prisoner's pleadings and law book and destroyed other legal papers clearly states a claim of denial of access to the courts. Wright v. Newsome, 795 F.2d 964 (11th Cir. 1986).

Access to courts may not be denied. — The first amendment prohibits state officials from denying a prisoner's legal right of access to the courts. Thomas v. Evans, 880 F.2d 1235 (11th Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 901, 111 S. Ct. 261, 112 L. Ed. 2d 218 (1990).

The Constitution forbids courts to abridge inmates' rights to have meaningful access to and communications with the courts, and a blanket declaration that all filings would be "null and void by operation of law" was impermissible. Hooper v. Harris, 236 Ga.

App. 651, 512 S.E.2d 312 (1999).

Prison inmate's right of access to courts.

— It is state's option to choose method by which to implement prison inmate's right of access to courts; a law library is only one alternative which fills this responsibility. Bell v. Hopper, 511 F. Supp. 452 (S.D. Ga. 1981).

Standing. — An inmate does not have standing to assert the first amendment rights of prison guards relative to a prison policy prohibiting its employees from communicating directly with the parole board on behalf of prisoners. Harris v. Evans, 20 F.3d 1118 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1045, 115 S. Ct. 641, 130 L. Ed. 2d 546 (1994).

11. Schools and Universities

First amendment does not prevent a board of education from limiting the use of school facilities solely to educational purposes. If, however, the schools choose to open their doors to expression by outside groups and individuals, they must do so under principles that are consistent with U.S. Const., amend. 1. Searcey v. Crim, 642 F. Supp. 313 (N.D. Ga. 1986), modified, 815 F.2d 1389 (11th Cir. 1987). See Searcey v. Harris, 888 F.2d 1314 (11th Cir. 1989).

Peace activists entitled to same access as military recruiters. — Denying "peace activists" an opportunity equal to the one afforded military recruiters to place their literature on school bulletin boards and in the offices of school guidance counselors and to participate in school "Career Days" and "Youth Motivation Days" violated their rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1. Searcey v. Crim, 642 F. Supp. 313 (N.D. Ga. 1986), modified, 815 F.2d 1389 (11th Cir. 1987). See Searcey v. Harris, 888 F.2d 1314 (11th Cir. 1989).

Oath requiring professors to refrain from certain teachings unconstitutional. — Language of an oath "to refrain from directly or indirectly subscribing to or teaching any theory of government or economics or social relations which is inconsistent with the fundamental principles of patriotism and high ideals of Americanism" provides no ascertainable standard of conduct. It is vague and uncertain in that there is no definition of fundamental principles of patriotism or high ideals of Americanism and one would necessarily teach at one's peril in the areas of government, economics, or social relations. This language is, thus, unconstitutional and void under U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14. It constitutes a denial of due process under U.S. Const., amend. 14 in light of the penal provision, and a prohibited inhibition on the first amendment's right to freedom of speech, which right is protected from state invasion by U.S. Const., amend. 14. Georgia Conference of Am. Ass'n of Univ. Professors v. Board of Regents of Univ. Sys., 246 F. Supp. 553 (N.D. Ga. 1965).

Teacher's right under the first amendment. — The first amendment gives a teacher the right to speak the teacher's mind; but it does not give the teacher the right to disrupt a school, or to choose its principals, or to sabotage its programs. Glover v. Daniel, 318 F. Supp. 1070 (N.D. Ga. 1969), aff'd, 434 F.2d 617 (5th Cir. 1970).

Balancing of teacher's and state's interests. — While teachers unquestionably enjoy the right under U.S. Const., amend. 1 to comment upon matters of public concern and to offer constructive criticism of school policy under the umbrella of academic freedom, the interests of the teacher, as a citizen, in commenting upon matters of public concern and the interest of the state, as an employer, in promoting the efficiency of the public services it performs through its employees must be balanced. Cotten v. Board of Regents of Univ. Sys., 395 F. Supp. 388 (S.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 515 F.2d 1098 (5th Cir. 1975).

Rights of discharged or nonrenewed teacher asserting constitutionally "protected" right. — A discharged or nonrenewed teacher asserting a constitutionally "protected" right was entitled to a de novo hearing in federal court regardless of whether that teacher resorted to an administrative hearing or whether such hearing purported to decide the issue, and the teacher should have been allowed to present evidence in the court that other teachers had engaged in similar "improper" conduct, such as that which allegedly justifiably caused the teacher's discharge, known to school personnel and the board, and those teachers were not disciplined, raising an inference that the teacher in question was disciplined for reasons other than "improper" conduct. Holley v. Seminole County Sch. Dist., 755 F.2d 1492 (11th Cir. 1985).

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)
11. Schools and Universities (Cont'd)

Necessity of punitive damages determination. — Where plaintiff-professor contended that the professor was deprived of employment and employment benefits because of the exercise of the professor's freedom of speech rights, in addition to finding a violation of the professor's free speech rights, the jury also had to determine whether the conduct of one or more of the defendants was so egregious as to warrant the award of punitive damages in some amount. Kemp v. Ervin, 651 F. Supp. 495 (N.D. Ga. 1986).

Minors possess first amendment rights. High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 456 F. Supp. 1035 (N.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 621 F.2d 141 (5th Cir. 1980).

Regulation of student's protected expression. — Student's protected expression may only be reasonably regulated in carefully restricted circumstances at school in order to avoid any material disruption of the classroom, any substantial disorder of school work, and any invasion of the rights of others. High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 456 F. Supp. 1035 (N.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 621 F.2d 141 (5th Cir. 1980).

Under U.S. Const., amend. 1: (1) expression by high school students can be prohibited altogether if it materially and substantially interferes with school activities, or with the rights of other students or teachers, or if the school administration can demonstrate reasonable cause to believe that the expression would engender such material and substantial interference; (2) expression by high school students cannot be prohibited solely because other students, teachers, administrators, or parents may disagree with its content; (3) efforts at expression by high school students may be subjected to prior screening under clear and reasonable regulations; and (4) expression by high school students may be limited in manner, place, or time by means of reasonable and equally applied regulations. Reineke v. Cobb County Sch. Dist., 484 F. Supp. 1252 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Requiring a student's public apology. — Demand that a student make an apology to a teacher and class for "off-color" remarks the student made in the classroom did not violate the student's first amendment rights. Kicklighter v. Evans County Sch. Dist., 968 F.

Supp. 712 (S.D. Ga. 1997), aff'd, 140 F.3d 1043 (11th Cir. 1998).

Comment on matters of public concern by faculty on questionnaire is protected speech.

— Where a questionnaire solicits the views of faculty on a broad range of issues, such as the degree of mutual confidence existing between administration and faculty, the extent to which good teaching and good research are rewarded, the extent to which faculty opinions are listened to and respected, the effectiveness of the administration in dealing with grievances, the accuracy and completeness of information used to evaluate teachers, and other matters that are of public importance and concern, comment upon them is protected speech. Lindsey v. Board of Regents, 607 F.2d 672 (5th Cir. 1979).

Teachers' comments on allocation of school funds protected speech. — The question whether a school system requires additional funds is a matter of legitimate public concern on which the judgment of the school administration, including the school board, cannot, in a society that leaves such questions to popular vote, be taken as conclusive. On such a question, free and open debate is vital to informed decision making by the electorate; teachers are, as a class, the members of a community most likely to have informed and definite opinions as to how funds allotted to the operation of the schools should be spent; accordingly, it is essential that they be able to speak out freely on such questions without fear of retaliatory dismissal. Lindsey v. Board of Regents, 607 F.2d 672 (5th Cir. 1979).

A confidentiality policy would constitute a defense to a complaint under U.S. Const., amend. 1 only if it: (1) factually existed; (2) was consistent with other state statutes and regulations; (3) was not vague; (4) did not proscribe protected speech overbroadly; (5) was communicated to the appellant, and (6) was not void as a matter of public policy in its instant application. Williams v. Board of Regents, 629 F.2d 993 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 452 U.S. 926, 101 S. Ct. 3063, 69 L. Ed. 2d 428 (1981).

Restraining of student publication prior to disruption. — School administrators need not await occurrence of actual disruption before exercising reasonable restraint over a student publication, but mere undifferenti-ated fear or apprehension of disturbance is not enough to overcome the right to freedom of expression. Reineke v. Cobb County Sch. Dist., 484 F. Supp. 1252 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Forms of censorship based on power of purse cannot be imposed on student publication. — Censorship of constitutionally protected expression of student publication at state-supported institutions cannot be imposed by suspending the editors, suppressing circulation, requiring imprimatur of controversial articles, excising repugnant material, withdrawing financial support, or asserting any other form of censorial oversight based on the institution's power of the purse. Reineke v. Cobb County Sch. Dist., 484 F. Supp. 1252 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

School officials must show interference with school activities by prohibited expression. — The primary issue is whether school officials can demonstrate reasonable cause to believe that the prohibited expression would have engendered material and substantial interference with school activities or with the rights of others. Reineke v. Cobb County Sch. Dist., 484 F. Supp. 1252 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Required showing to justify prohibition of expression of unpopular opinion. — In order for the state in the person of school officials to justify prohibition of a particular expression of opinion, it must be able to show that its action was caused by something more than a mere desire to avoid the discomfort and unpleasantness that always accompany an unpopular viewpoint. Wood v. Davison, 351 F. Supp. 543 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

Evidence relevant in assessing professor's termination. — Where plaintiff-professor contended that the professor had been deprived of employment and employment benefits because the professor exercised the professor's freedom of speech rights by speaking out against preferential treatment given university athletes, principles of relevancy did not preclude the professor from proving the truth of the assertions that revenue-producing athletes (scholarship athletes) and other influential students received preferential academic treatment at the university. Other purposes for which this evidence would have been relevant included proof of motive and state of mind of the defendants for the purpose of determining the level and nature of their misconduct, evidence critical to assessment of the credibility of both defendants, and evidence that the stated reasons for the job action were pretextual. Kemp v. Ervin, 651 F. Supp. 495 (N.D. Ga. 1986).

"Career Day" restrictions held to violate first amendment. — School board regulations barring "Career Day" participants from criticizing the opportunities provided by other participants, through providing students with valid and informative disadvantages of that career, violated the first amendment right to freedom of speech. Searcey v. Crim, 681 F. Supp. 821 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd as modified sub nom. Searcey v. Harris, 888 F.2d 1314 (11th Cir. 1989).

12. Commercial Speech

"Commercial speech" construed. — "Commercial speech" is speech which does nothing more than propose commercial transaction. State interest cannot negate the protections afforded speech, even commercial in content, by U.S. Const., amend. 1. Daugherty v. City of E. Point, 447 F. Supp. 290 (N.D. Ga. 1978).

Federal regulation of commercial speech. — Federal government may in some circumstances prohibit purely commercial speech made in connection with conduct which Congress can permissibly regulate or prohibit. While speech made in a political or informational context deserves the highest degree of protection from governmental restraint, government may regulate speech made incidental to a purely commercial activity. United States v. Bob Lawrence Realty, Inc., 474 F.2d 115 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 826, 94 S. Ct. 131, 38 L. Ed. 2d 49 (1973).

No protection afforded commercial advertising. — While freedom of communicating information and disseminating opinion enjoys the fullest protection of the first amendment, the Constitution imposes no such restraint on government as respects purely commercial advertising. United States v. Bob Lawrence Realty, Inc., 474 F.2d 115 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 826, 94 S. Ct. 131, 38 L. Ed. 2d 59 (1973).

Commercial speech is unprotected by the first amendment. Hood v. Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., 486 F.2d 25 (5th Cir. 1973), cert. de- nied, 415 U.S. 985, 94 S. Ct. 1580, 39 L. Ed. 2d 882 (1974).

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)12. Commercial Speech (Cont'd)

Protection of commercial speech. — First amendment protects commercial speech only if that speech concerns lawful activity and is not misleading. A restriction on otherwise protected commercial speech is valid only if it seeks to implement a substantial governmental interest, directly advances that interest, and reaches no farther than necessary to accomplish the given objective. H & H Operations, Inc. v. City of Peachtree City, 248 Ga. 500, 283 S.E.2d 867 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 961, 102 S. Ct. 2037, 72 L. Ed. 2d 484 (1982).

There is no substantial governmental interest in permitting commercial signs yet prohibiting posting of prices. Numbers (prices) are not esthetically inferior to letters of the alphabet forming words (name of the business and products available). H & H Operations, Inc. v. City of Peachtree City, 248 Ga. 500, 283 S.E.2d 867 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 961, 102 S. Ct. 2037, 72 L. Ed. 2d 484 (1982).

Court enforcement of agreement limiting speech rights. — Where two disputing parties in positions of equal bargaining power agree, through a settlement stipulation, to restrict, in a limited degree, their first amendment rights on commercial speech, the court enforcement of that agreement is not governmental action for first amendment purposes. United Egg Producers v. Standard Brands, Inc., 44 F.3d 940 (11th Cir. 1995).

Commercial solicitation. — O.C.G.A. § 33-24-53, by criminalizing requests for public records for commercial solicitation purposes, implicates U.S. Const., amend. 1. Statewide Detective Agency v. Miller, 115 F.3d 904 (11th Cir. 1997).

Constitutionality of O.C.G.A. § 16-8-60(b). — Trial court did not err in finding that O.C.G.A. § 16-8-60(b) was not unconstitutionally vague nor overbroad and was not preempted by federal law, as: (1) the statute aimed to protect the public and entertainment industry from piracy and bootlegging, a legitimate governmental interest unrelated to free speech concerns; (2) it did not impinge upon pure speech, but, at most, regulated a combination of commercial conduct and speech; (3) its deterrent effect on legitimate expression was minimal; and (4) it plainly prohibited the sale, or possession for the purposes of sale, of an article that did not prominently display the name and address of the individual (or entity) who transferred the sounds to the article. Briggs v. State, 281 Ga. 329, 638 S.E.2d 292 (2006).

Commercial exploitation of film is private, not public, interest. — Although expression by means of motion pictures is included within the free expression or free press guarantee of the first and fourteenth amendments, the right of commercial exploitation of a film does not represent a great public interest, but amounts to a private right. 106 Forsyth Corp. v. Bishop, 362 F. Supp. 1389 (M.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 482 F.2d 280 (5th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 422 U.S. 1044, 95 S. Ct. 2660, 45 L. Ed. 2d 696 (1975).

Business license tax. — Where the purpose of a business license tax was for the purpose of revenue raising and not for the control of solicitation, it was not in violation of freedom of speech and association. Miles v. City Council, 551 F. Supp. 349 (S.D. Ga. 1982), aff'd, 710 F.2d 1542 (11th Cir. 1983).

City sign ordinance that prohibited the display of noncommercial messages at locations where commercial messages were permitted was unconstitutional. Union City Bd. of Zoning Appeals v. Justice Outdoor Displays, Inc., 266 Ga. 393, 467 S.E.2d 875 (1996).

Ordinance that restricted signs in residential zoning districts to on-premise signs and certain temporary or special signs, allowing temporary political signs, but not providing for permanent signs expressing the political, religious, or other noncommercial views of residents, was unconstitutional. Union City Bd. of Zoning Appeals v. Justice Outdoor Displays, Inc., 266 Ga. 393, 467 S.E.2d 875 (1996).

City ordinance which prohibits billboards, defined as offsite advertising signs, does not impermissibly restrict commercial speech. Southlake Prop. Assoc. v. City of Morrow, 112 F.3d 1114 (11th Cir. 1997).

Misleading or false advertising subject to restraint. — While commercial speech is entitled to some protection, deceptive or misleading advertising disserves the aims of the first amendment. Misleading advertising is subject to restraint, and false advertising may be prohibited entirely. Energy Four, Inc. v. Dornier Medical Sys., 765 F. Supp. 724 (N.D. Ga. 1991).

Advertising restrictions. — City bus company's written advertising policy that restricted access to its advertising space to those ads which do not support or oppose any position in regard to a matter of public controversy was void for vagueness and overbreadth. National Abortion Fed'n v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 112 F. Supp. 2d 1320 (N.D. Ga. 2000).

Commercial use of law enforcement records. — Former O.C.G.A. § 35-1-9, prohibiting the inspection of law enforcement records for the purpose of using information contained in the records for commercial solicitation, violated first amendment commercial speech rights. Speer v. Miller, 864 F. Supp. 1294 (N.D. Ga. 1994).

Alcohol advertisements. — Trial court erred in upholding a city's decision to suspend a liquor license for 30 days for violations of the Jasper, Ga., Alcoholic Beverages Ordinance, which banned alcohol advertisements, because the ordinance was a blanket prohibition on commercial speech that violated the first amendment as the city did not show that the ordinance advanced the substantial governmental interest of temperance and that the ordinance was no more restrictive than necessary. Folsom v. City of Jasper, 279 Ga. 260, 612 S.E.2d 287 (2005).

Jasper, Ga., Alcoholic Beverages Ordinance, which authorized the city council to suspend or revoke an alcohol license if the council determined to its own satisfaction that the licensee was guilty of any violation of federal or state law, was facially overbroad as it did not limit the types of violations that would justify revocation of a license to those violations related to the regulatory purpose of the license; however, the ordinance was not overbroad as applied to a cafe owner as the alleged violation of the ordinance was the battery of a patron by a cafe employee and the risk of unruly patrons, and an overzealous response to that unruliness by employees was one of the reasons for the regulation of the sale and consumption of alcohol. Folsom v. City of Jasper, 279 Ga. 260, 612 S.E.2d 287 (2005).

Sale of alcohol in erotic dance establishments. — City ordinance prohibiting the sale of alcohol at an erotic dance establishment was constitutional. The adult entertainment establishment ordinance was narrowly drawn to promote the city's interest in combating the secondary effects of adult entertainment establishments. Gravely v. Bacon, 263 Ga. 203, 429 S.E.2d 663 (1993).

A legislative restriction on adult entertainment must satisfy a tripartite test in order to comport with the free speech guarantees of the federal and state constitutions. The constitutionality of a law regulating adult entertainment will be upheld only (1) if it furthers an important government interest; (2) if that government interest is unrelated to the suppression of speech; and (3) if the incidental restriction of speech is no greater than is essential to the furtherance of that government interest. Discotheque, Inc. v. City Council, 264 Ga. 623, 449 S.E.2d 608 (1994).

Where the stated purpose of a municipal ordinance regulating adult entertainment on premises licensed to sell alcoholic beverages was to reduce criminal activity and deterioration of neighborhoods as pernicious secondary effects of adult entertainment establishments, the city failed to show there was no genuine issue of material fact as to these issues. Discotheque, Inc. v. City Council, 264 Ga. 623, 449 S.E.2d 608 (1994).

County ordinance prohibiting nude dancing at establishments that serve alcohol did not violate first amendment rights of operators of the establishments. Wise Enters. v. Unified Gov't of Athens-Clarke County, 217 F.3d 1360 (11th Cir. 2000).

Restricting off-site advertising of erotic dance establishments. — A statute proscribing any form of off-site advertising for commercial establishments featuring nude dancing impedes the free flow of information and far exceeds the state's legitimate interest in preventing hazards to the traveling public, and thus, impermissibly infringes the right of free speech. State v. Cafe Erotica, Inc., 270 Ga. 97, 507 S.E.2d 732 (1998).

13. Electronic Communication

Internet users had standing to bring an action for declaratory and injunctive relief challenging the constitutionality of O.C.G.A. § 16-9-93.1, prohibiting internet transmissions which falsely identify the sender or use trade names or logos without legal authority because a credible threat of prosecution existed. American Civil Liberties Union v. Miller, 977 F. Supp. 1228 (N.D. Ga. 1997).

Freedom of Speech and Press (Cont'd)
13. Electronic Communication (Cont'd)

Internet users challenging the constitutionality of O.C.G.A. § 16-9-93.1, prohibiting internet transmissions which falsely identify the sender or use trade names or logos without legal authority, were entitled to a preliminary injunction because they were likely to show that the section imposed content-based restrictions not narrowly tailored to achieve a compelling state interest, it was vague and overbroad, there was a substantial threat of irreparable injury, and the balance of hardships weighed heavily in plaintiffs' favor. American Civil Liberties Union v. Miller, 977 F. Supp. 1228 (N.D. Ga. 1997).

14. Criminal Matters

Burden on government to protect defendant from unfair news coverage. — Although the right of a free press embodied in the first amendment is guaranteed, the individual's right to a fair trial guaranteed by the fifth amendment's due process clause and in the other individual provisions of the bill of rights is absolute, and where prejudicial news coverage is present, the burden is on the government to protect the rights of the defendant. While government has no authority to restrain the reporting of the press, nor to dictate what it does or does not report, a person accused of crime has the right to expect that the government of the accused and its judicial officers to protect the accused from massive and prejudicial publicity surrounding the case. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd on other grounds, 519 F.2d 184 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1976).

Access to criminal proceedings. — Where a third party seeks access to material disclosed during discovery and covered by a protective order, the constitutional right of access requires a showing of good cause, and not a showing of a compelling interest, by the party seeking protection. Chicago Tribune Co. v. Bridgestone/Firestone, Inc., 263 F.3d 1304 (11th Cir. 2001).

No public access to search warrants. — No first amendment right of public access to search warrants, and affidavits filed in support of the warrants, exists. This is so even after the search warrants have been executed, to the extent that secrecy of the warrant materials is necessary to preserve the grand jury's processes inviolate. In re Macon Tel. Publishing Co., 900 F. Supp. 489 (M.D. Ga. 1995).

Search warrant affidavits. — There is no first amendment right of access to search warrant affidavits. In re Four Search Warrants, 945 F. Supp. 1563 (N.D. Ga. 1996).

Restraining order prohibiting publication of certain information on criminal suspect impermissible. — A restraining order which prohibited a newspaper from publishing any information on an alleged suspect in a murder case which was obtained through discovery without the newspaper first following a procedure of notifying the court of its intent to disclose any information and obtaining the permission of the court to disclose in the event an objection was filed constituted an unwarranted restraint upon the newspaper's liberty of speech and of the press. Georgia Gazette Publishing Co. v. Ramsey, 248 Ga. 528, 284 S.E.2d 386 (1981).

Disclosure of identity of sexual assault victim. — By passing the rape shield statute, O.C.G.A. § 24-2-3, the legislature has stated as a matter of public policy that, where the crime involved is rape, sexual assault or attempted sexual assault, the legitimate public interest in the identity of the victim does not outweigh the victim's privacy interest. Macon Tel. Publishing Co. v. Tatum, 208 Ga. App. 111, 430 S.E.2d 18 (1993).

Rape victim confidentiality statute. — The victim of a sexual assault could not recover damages from a newspaper for invasion of privacy since, when she shot and killed the perpetrator of the assault, she became the object of legitimate public interest and the newspaper had the right under the United States and Georgia Constitutions to accurately report facts regarding the incident, including her name. Macon Tel. Publishing Co. v. Tatum, 263 Ga. 677, 436 S.E.2d 655 (1993).

Georgia "Anti-Mask Act", O.C.G.A. § 16-11-38, which proscribes intimidating or threatening mask-wearing behavior, does not violate the constitutional rights of freedom of speech, freedom of association, and equal protection of the law. State v. Miller, 260 Ga. 669, 398 S.E.2d 547 (1990).

Criminal prosecution to penalize exercise of first amendment rights. — While the institution of criminal prosecution to penalize the exercise of first amendment rights is actionable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, plaintiffs must demonstrate some evidence of retaliatory motive or bad faith in order to succeed in such an action. Howell v. Roberts, 656 F. Supp. 1150 (N.D. Ga. 1987).

Bribery statute constitutional. — Bribery statute (O.C.G.A. § 16-10-2) does not violate the first amendment on its face since it includes corrupt intent as an element. Therefore, the section was not unconstitutional as applied to defendant's offer of campaign contributions to influence the decision of county commissioners' regarding the defendant's zoning variance request. Agan v. Vaughn, 119 F.3d 1538 (11th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1023, 118 S. Ct. 1305, 140 L. Ed. 2d 470 (1998).

Traffic regulations must be observed despite exercising of rights. — Mere fact that defendant is exercising the defendant's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1 does not shield the defendant from observance of normal traffic regulations, such as under former Code 1933, § 68A-507(b) (see O.C.G.A. § 40-6-98). Zeiger v. State, 140 Ga. App. 610, 231 S.E.2d 494 (1976).

Loitering ordinances. — Local ordinance providing that "No person shall remain or loiter upon any premises to which the public has access, including but not limited to such places as business and shopping area parking lots, where the person's presence upon such premises is unrelated to the normal activity, use or business for which such premises are made available to the public" violates U.S. Const., amend. 1 and U.S. Const., amend. 14. Bullock v. City of Dallas, 248 Ga. 164, 281 S.E.2d 613 (1981).

Freedom of Association

Protection against disclosure of associational relationship. — Undeniably, U.S. Const., amend. 1 in some circumstances protects an individual from being compelled to disclose the individual's associational relationships; however, the protections of U.S. Const., amend. 1, unlike a proper claim of the privilege against self-incrimination under U.S. Const., amend. 5, do not afford a witness the right to resist inquiry in all circumstances. Braden v. United States, 272 F.2d 653 (5th Cir. 1959), aff'd, 365 U.S. 431, 81 S. Ct. 584, 5 L. Ed. 2d 653 (1961).

Barring of governmental interrogation. — When first amendment rights are asserted to bar governmental interrogation, resolution of the issue always involves balancing by the courts of the competing private and public interests at stake in the particular circumstances shown. Braden v. United States, 272 F.2d 653 (5th Cir. 1959), aff'd, 365 U.S. 431, 81 S. Ct. 584, 5 L. Ed. 2d 653 (1961).

Primary limitation on freedom to assemble. — The freedom to assemble, a right zealously guarded by the courts, and properly so, finds its primary limitation in the words of the first amendment "to peacefully assemble." Durham v. State, 219 Ga. 830, 136 S.E.2d 322 (1964).

Nature of freedom of association. — The freedom of association which the Supreme Court has recognized as protected by the first amendment is a right to freedom of expression through associational affiliations. Eberhart v. Massell, 311 F. Supp. 654 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

Right of association is derivative of first amendment free speech rights. — The fact that revealing names of members of a grand jury may diminish their desire to associate with the organization has no constitutional significance unless protected free speech interests are implicated. Thus, on a motion to quash a grand jury subpoena duces tecum, the motion will be quashed where the potential impact on free speech rights is only speculative. In re Roberts, 650 F. Supp. 159 (N.D. Ga. 1987), aff'd, 842 F.2d 1229 (11th Cir. 1988).

Elements of right of association. — The elements of which the right of free association is composed include as an obvious minimum the right to organize and join any association for the advancement of beliefs and ideas, regardless of the nature of such beliefs and ideas, or whether they pertain to religious, political, economic, social, civil, cultural, or other matters. The right of association also includes the right to adhere to an organization without public identification, and the right not to be compelled to join any organization, but the full enjoyment of these rights is limited to organizations for lawful purposes which are carrying on their activities in a lawful manner. Further, the right of association, like the right of expression in general may not be used as a mere excuse for criminal conduct. Eberhart v. Massell, 311 F. Supp. 654 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

Freedom of Association (Cont'd)

Right of association is protected by the first amendment. Melton v. City of Atlanta, 324 F. Supp. 315 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

In addition to protection of "pure" and "symbolic" speech, the first amendment protects the rights of assembly and association. Wood v. Davison, 351 F. Supp. 543 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

U.S. Const., amend. 1 has the effect of creating a constitutional right of free association. Doherty v. Wilson, 356 F. Supp. 35 (M.D. Ga. 1973).

Only natural persons can maintain an action for interference with the right of association. Stone Mt. Game Ranch, Inc. v. Hunt, 570 F. Supp. 238 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 746 F.2d 761 (11th Cir. 1984).

Exclusion from primary ballot. — The Republican Party enjoys a constitutionally protected right of freedom of association, which encompasses its decision to exclude a candidate for the Republican nomination for President of the United States as a candidate on the Republican Primary ballot because the candidate's political beliefs are inconsistent with those of the Republican Party. Duke v. Cleland, 954 F.2d 1526 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1086, 112 S. Ct. 1152, 117 L. Ed. 2d 279 (1992).

First amendment to United States Constitution protects right to union organization and activity. Hodges v. Tomberlin, 510 F. Supp. 1287 (S.D. Ga. 1981).

Denial of use of campus facilities. — Primary impediment to free association flowing from nonrecognition of student organization is denial of use of campus facilities for meetings and other appropriate purposes. Wood v. Davison, 351 F. Supp. 543 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

The three circumstances under which university facilities may be denied to registered campus organization are: refusal to abide by reasonable regulations; a demonstrated danger of violence or disruption at the meeting; and that the meeting itself would violate either state or federal law. Wood v. Davison, 351 F. Supp. 543 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

Invoking of any justification for denial of university facilities to campus organization amounts to prior restraint on first amendment freedoms and places a heavy burden on the university to justify denial. Wood v. Davison, 351 F. Supp. 543 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

Denial of university recognition. — Denial of university recognition affected the first amendment rights of members of a student organization and recognition could be denied by a university only under narrowly limited circumstances. Wood v. Davison, 351 F. Supp. 543 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

Required showing to justify denial of recognition to campus homosexual organization. — Officials of a state-supported university may not deny use of university facilities to a campus homosexual organization without demonstrating the organization's refusal to abide by reasonable regulations, a clear and present danger of violence or disruption, or that holding the meeting itself would violate state or federal law. Wood v. Davison, 351 F. Supp. 543 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

Freedom to associate for advancement of beliefs and ideas. — Freedom to engage in association for the advancement of beliefs and ideas is an inseparable aspect of the liberty assured by the due process clause of the first amendment which embraces freedom of speech. Stoner v. Fortson, 379 F. Supp. 704 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

Compelled disclosure of association as restraint on freedom to associate. — Where a group is engaged in advocacy of particular beliefs, whether they be political, economic, religious, or cultural, compelled disclosure of affiliation with such a group constitutes a restraint on one's freedom of association. Stoner v. Fortson, 379 F. Supp. 704 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

There is no absolute right on part of individuals to bar disclosure which infringes on right of association. — Against any impediment to the first amendment right which a particular statute creates, there must be considered the importance and value to the public of the goal which the statute accomplishes. Stoner v. Fortson, 379 F. Supp. 704 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

Restrictions on right of association of government employees in furtherance of significant interest. — The restrictions on the exercise of rights of political expression and association of government employees must be in furtherance of a significant governmental interest. Galer v. Board of Regents of Univ. Sys., 239 Ga. 268, 236 S.E.2d 617 (1977).

The Attorney General, that is, the State of Georgia's interest, as an employer in promoting the efficiency of the Attorney General's office's important public service outweighs plaintiff's personal associational interests in a lesbian marriage. Shahar v. Bowers, 114 F.3d 1097 (11th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1049, 118 S. Ct. 693, 139 L. Ed. 2d 638 (1998).

Government employees subject to greater restrictions on associational right than private citizens. — It is clear that government employees may be subject to restrictions on the exercise of their rights of political association and expression beyond that permissible if applied to private citizens. Galer v. Board of Regents of Univ. Sys., 239 Ga. 268, 236 S.E.2d 617 (1977).

Retaliation against public employee for exercise of right. — As is the case with free speech, the fact that a public employee is retaliated against for exercising constitutionally protected associational rights does not automatically render the retaliatory action unconstitutional. Hatcher v. Board of Pub. Educ. & Orphanage, 809 F.2d 1546 (11th Cir. 1987).

Demotion of a county correctional officer under a regulation prohibiting correctional officers from associating, corresponding, or doing business with active probationers unless they first receive special permission did not violate the officer's right of free association. Ross v. Clayton County, 173 F.3d 1305 (11th Cir. 1999).

School principal's actions constituting protected activity. — Where a former school principal alleged: (1) that the principal was denied a comparable position because the principal associated with parents and others who protested a school board's plan to close several schools; and (2) that the principal was denied a comparable position because the principal brought the principal's minister and a school board member to a meeting with the assistant superintendent concerning the principal's job assignment, the principal sufficiently alleged constitutionally protected associational activity. Hatcher v. Board of Pub. Educ. & Orphanage, 809 F.2d 1546 (11th Cir. 1987).

Fact that an under-30 candidate may not run for Lieutenant Governor does not deny right of association to those voters who might wish to "associate" with such a candidate by voting for that candidate. Traylor v. Democratic Party, 241 Ga. 429, 246 S.E.2d 192 (1978).

Former Code 1933, § 91-134 (see O.C.G.A. § 50-16-11) was not facially overbroad nor so vague as to violate freedoms of assembly or speech. State v. Boone, 243 Ga. 416, 254 S.E.2d 367, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 898, 100 S. Ct. 206, 62 L. Ed. 2d 133 (1979).

Former Code 1933, §§ 91-134 (see O.C.G.A. § 50-16-11) and 91-9908 (see O.C.G.A. § 50-16-16) were not overbroad as sweeping within their prohibitions what may not be punished under U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14. State v. Boone, 243 Ga. 416, 254 S.E.2d 367, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 898, 100 S. Ct. 206, 62 L. Ed. 2d 133 (1979).

O.C.G.A. §§ 50-16-14 and 50-16-16, allowing removal of persons who cause disruptions in state buildings, did not violate first amendment guarantees of freedom of speech and the right to assemble peaceably and petition the government for redress of their grievances. State v. Storey, 181 Ga. App. 161, 351 S.E.2d 502 (1986), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1017, 107 S. Ct. 1895, 95 L. Ed. 2d 501 (1987).

Requirement that one judge of a court of limited jurisdiction be available on a 24-hour basis to issue warrants does not infringe on the right to assemble as guaranteed in the state and federal Constitutions. McCrav v. Cobb County, 251 Ga. 24, 302 S.E.2d 563 (1983).

Protection of right to discuss pros and cons of unions as part of free assembly. — The right to discuss, and inform people concerning, the advantages and disadvantages of unions and joining them is protected not only as part of free speech, but also as part of free assembly. McCallum v. Hinson, 489 F. Supp. 627 (M.D. Ga. 1980).

Unclear whether state must do business with contractor despite disapproval of associations. — Although there are limits placed on what adverse action a state may take against an employee who maintains associations thought undesirable by the state, it is not at all clear that the state may not refuse to do business with an independent contractor solely because it disapproves of the contractor's associations. Stone Mt. Game Ranch, Inc. v. Hunt, 570 F. Supp. 238 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 746 F.2d 761 (11th Cir. 1984).

Freedom of Association (Cont'd)

Termination of plaintiff's position as a parole review officer of the board of pardons and paroles after the plaintiff's election to county and state political party committees did not violate the plaintiff's constitutional rights of due process and equal protection or the plaintiff's constitutionally protected rights of political speech and association. MacKenzie v. Snow, 675 F. Supp. 1333 (N.D. Ga. 1987).

Required company affiliations for taxicab drivers. — A city ordinance that required all taxi drivers to be affiliated with a taxicab company and that required all taxicab companies formed after the ordinance's effective date to own or lease at least 25 vehicles did not violate the drivers' rights of association. Airport Taxi Cab Advisory Comm. v. City of Atlanta, 584 F. Supp. 961 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Subpoena of brokerage records relating to association members upheld. — Neither the first amendment nor the fourth amendment required a federal district court to quash a subpoena to obtain a brokerage firm's records relating to members of an association, where the subpoena had been issued in connection with an investigation of possible criminal violations of the tax laws and the association's financial system may have been used to evade requirements for reporting taxable income. In re Grand Jury Proceeding, 842 F.2d 1229 (11th Cir. 1988).

Georgia "Anti-Mask Act", O.C.G.A. § 16-11-38, which proscribes intimidating or threatening mask-wearing behavior, does not violate the constitutional rights of freedom of speech, freedom of association, and equal protection of the law. State v. Miller, 260 Ga. 669, 398 S.E.2d 547 (1990).

Terminated state employees had no protected rights of association. — Plaintiffs, whose jobs were terminated when their department was eliminated, neither alleged in their complaint nor presented any evidence to establish the existence at any time of an association which was entitled to special constitutional protection. Consequently, defendants did not violate any "clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known" with respect to plaintiffs and each was thus entitled to qualified immunity. Cummings v. DeKalb County, 24 F.3d 1349 (11th Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1111, 115 S. Ct. 901, 130 L. Ed. 2d 785 (1995).

State flag. — African-American citizen's argument that the state flag, incorporating the stars and bars of the Confederate flag, compelled the citizen to be the courier of an ideological message that the citizen found morally objectionable failed because the flag on its face did not promulgate a sufficiently clear message of discrimination and because the record contained no evidence that the citizen was forced to acknowledge the flag in any way. Coleman v. Miller, 885 F. Supp. 1561 (N.D. Ga. 1995), aff'd, 117 F.3d 527 (11th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1011, 118 S. Ct. 1199, 140 L. Ed. 2d 328 (1998); Coleman v. Miller, 912 F. Supp. 522 (N.D. Ga. 1996), aff'd, 117 F.3d 527 (11th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1011, 118 S. Ct. 1199, 140 L. Ed. 2d 328 (1998).

Redress of Grievances

Amendment extends to petitions for redress of grievances. — The first amendment, which protects controversial as well as conventional dialogue, extends to petitions for redress of grievances as well as to advocacy and debate. United States v. Northside Realty Assocs., 474 F.2d 1164 (5th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 424 U.S. 977, 96 S. Ct. 1483, 47 L. Ed. 2d 747 (1976).

No governmental duty of action created by right of petition to redress grievances. — Plaintiff's freely exercised first amendment right to petition various federal agencies for redress of grievances does not create in the government a corresponding duty to act. Gordon v. Heimann, 514 F. Supp. 659 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Congressional power to require disclosures of lobbying activities not prohibited by right of redress of grievances. — Congress is not prohibited by the first amendment guaranty of the right to petition the government for redress of grievances from exercising measures of self-protection in requiring disclosures of lobbying activities; and since legislation in the area may be enacted, investigation by legislative agencies is authorized. Wilkinson v. United States, 272 F.2d 783 (5th Cir. 1959), aff'd, 365 U.S. 399, 81 S. Ct. 567, 5 L. Ed. 2d 633 (1961).

Use of agent or attorney to gain access to public official. — In order to petition the government for redress of grievances, one may employ an agent or attorney to use their influence to gain access to a public official. Moreover, once having obtained an audience, the attorney may fairly present to the official the merits of the client's case and urge the official's support for that position. Troutman v. Southern Ry., 441 F.2d 586 (5th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 871, 92 S. Ct. 81, 30 L. Ed. 2d 115 (1971).

Right of farmer to preejectment hearing absent state statute so providing. — Plaintiff, as a Georgia farmer, has a property interest in the farmer's business, i.e., selling merchandise at a public market, and could not be deprived of that interest without a due process preejectment hearing even in the absence of a state statute providing for such a hearing. Wilder v. Irvin, 423 F. Supp. 639 (N.D. Ga. 1976).

Collaborative effort to obtain grant for medical study not immune from antitrust litigation. — The decision by the National Eye Institute to financially underwrite a medical research study hardly constitutes the type of governmental decision making and policymaking that the Noerr-Pennington doctrine was designed to protect; it is thus unlikely that collaborative efforts to obtain federal grant money and to act pursuant to the protocol outlined in such a study is covered by Noerr-Pennington immunity from antitrust liability, which is rooted in the first amendment protection of the right to petition the government. Vest v. Waring, 565 F. Supp. 674 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

FREE EXERCISE OF RELIGION

FREEDOM OF SPEECH AND PRESS

FREEDOM OF ASSEMBLY

FREEDOM OF ASSOCIATION

General Consideration

Validity of regulatory levy of license tax on newspapers absent statute. — While there is no statute dealing specifically with the question of prohibition against the levying of a license tax on newspapers by a municipality, if such a levy is determined to be regulatory in nature it would be in contravention to U.S. Const., amend. 1 and U.S. Const., amend. 14 and would therefore be null and void. 1950-51 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 115.

Constitutional guarantee of free press prohibits municipality from levying regulatory license tax on newspapers where such a levy subjects the newspaper to operational and expressional control by the municipality. 1950-51 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 115.

Statutes regulating amendment freedoms should be narrowly construed. — Statutes which possibly infringe on amendment rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1 and U.S. Const., amend. 14, should be narrowly construed, and construed as explicit, not vague, so as to avoid the question of the statute's constitutionality whenever possible. 1977 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 77-15.

Requirement that student undergo physical before athletic participation not infringement on parental rights. — State Board of Education policy or standard requiring physical examination of student prior to participation in interscholastic athletic activities does not infringe upon parental rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1. 1977 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 77-78.

Free Exercise of Religion

Freedom of religion protected against state encroachment. — Freedom of religion constitutes one of those fundamental principles of liberty and justice embraced within the concept of substantive due process and hence guaranteed against state encroachment by U.S. Const., amend. 14. 1960-61 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 349.

Use of prison labor to clear church grounds. — Use of prison labor gratuitously to clear and maintain church grounds and cemeteries violates constitutional limitations on separation of church and state. 1960-61 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 349.

Free Exercise of Religion (Cont'd)

Use of state funds by Department of Offender Rehabilitation for prison chaplains. — State Board of Corrections (now Department of Offender Rehabilitation) can expend state funds for employment of chaplains and construction and maintenance of chapels in the various prison branches and can legally permit religious organizations to conduct services in such chapels. 1960-61 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 361.

State may hire staff of prison chaplains whose duties are nonsectarian without violating establishment clause of U.S. Const., amend. 1. If the hiring of prison chaplains did infringe upon the establishment clause of U.S. Const., amend. 1, it would be sustained on constitutional grounds as necessary to secure the prisoner's right of worship as guaranteed under the free exercise clause of U.S. Const., amend. 1. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74-3.

Position of religious therapy program director constitutional if duties nonsectarian. — State Merit System's creation of the position of religious therapy program director in the Department of Offender Rehabilitation is not in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 1 so long as his duties are nonsectarian. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74-3.

Employment of religious therapy program director. — Employment of religious therapy program director for state prisons does not violate the establishment clause of U.S. Const., amend. 1. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74-3.

Georgia Residential Finance Authority may lend general reserve funds to religiously-motivated housing sponsor which charges in-kind interest, provided the funds are not encumbered or derived from the public treasury, the authority's own purpose is secular and nondiscriminatory, the program in fact is financially sound and secular, and it can be monitored without entanglement. 1988 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 88-15.

Christmas displays at capitol rotunda. — Georgia Building Authority's presentation of a nativity scene as a part of a planned Christmas program in the capitol rotunda would be in violation of both the Georgia and United States Constitutions. Additionally, the unattended display of a Menorah in front of the capitol would be in violation of the establishment clause of the United States Constitution. However, a Menorah candle-lighting ceremony conducted by private citizens in front of the capitol would not violate the Constitution of the United States or the Georgia Constitution. 1990 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 90-38.

University's recognition of a student organization that requires its voting members to profess its religious beliefs would not violate U.S. Const., amend. 1. 1997 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 97-32.

University student internship at sectarian facility. — There is no legal impediment to a university system institution's allowing a student to satisfy an internship at a sectarian facility which limits employment to persons of its particular religious faith or persuasion. 2001 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 2001-01.

Teaching about Bible in public schools. — Public school courses that include references to the Bible may survive first amendment scrutiny only if their content is determined to be secular and they are taught in a secular, objective manner. 1999 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 99-16.

Law regulating used motor vehicle dealers. — The failure of the Used Motor Vehicle Dealers' and Used Motor Vehicle Parts Dealers' Registration Act (§ 43-47-1 et seq.) to include an exemption for religious organizations does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 1. 1999 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 99-8.

Statutory provisions deemed constitutional. — The "respect for the creator" portion of the character education program authorized by O.C.G.A. § 20-2-145 and the provision of O.C.G.A. § 50-3-4.1 allowing display of the motto "In God We Trust" in public do not violate the separation of church and state provisions of either the state or federal constitution. 2000 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 2000-9.

Freedom of Speech and Press

Media access to prisons and inmates. — Media possess no constitutional or statutory rights of access to prisons or inmates above those possessed by general public, i.e., media access to prisons and inmates is in the discretion of the warden. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-151.

As to censoring state prison inmate's newspaper, see 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-70.

As to introduction of obscene publications into state prison, see 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-70.

Political contributions by public utilities. — Statute prohibiting contributions to a political campaign by a person acting on behalf of a public utility corporation regulated by the Public Service Commission does not unconstitutionally infringe guarantees of freedom of speech and association. 1982 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 82-56.

Student-run newspaper. — Where there is governmental oversight or involvement, a student-run newspaper at a state educational institution is subject to free speech requirements of the first amendment. 1996 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 96-7.

A condition-of-entry rule of the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games prohibiting spectators from carrying flags "other than those of participating countries" was questionable under the Constitution. 1996 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U96-13.

Freedom of Assembly

As to use of bullhorns and camping overnight by demonstrators on state prison grounds, see 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-70.

Freedom of Association

State loyalty oath. — The portion of the Georgia loyalty oath which requires one to swear to support the Constitutions of Georgia and the United States is constitutional and valid, but the portion of the Georgia loyalty oath which requires one to disavow membership in the Communist Party is violative of the first and fourteenth amendments of the United States Constitution and should not be administered. 1985 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 85-19.

University's refusal to recognize a student organization that requires its voting members to profess its religious beliefs would violate the first amendment rights of expressive association. 1997 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 97-32.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. Proof of Facts. — Interference With Right to Free Exercise of Religion, 63 POF3d 195.

Am. Jur. Trials. — Controlling Trial Publicity, 1 Am. Jur. Trials 303.

Homeowners' Association Defense: Free Speech, 93 Am. Jur. Trials 293.

ALR. — Validity of legislation directed against social or industrial propaganda deemed to be of a dangerous tendency, 1 ALR 336; 20 ALR 1535; 73 ALR 1494.

Right of association to expel or discipline member for exercising a right, or performing duty, as a citizen, 14 ALR 1446.

What amounts to vagrancy, 14 ALR 1482.

Contract to pay for services or reimburse expenditures as within constitutional inhibition of aid to sectarian institutions, 22 ALR 1319; 55 ALR 320.

Validity and construction of statute or ordinance relating to distribution of advertising matter, 22 ALR 1484; 114 ALR 1446.

Constitutionality, construction, and effect of censorship laws, 64 ALR 505.

Validity of statute or ordinance against picketing, 108 ALR 1119; 122 ALR 1043; 125 ALR 963; 130 ALR 1303.

Constitutionality of statute regulating or imposing tax or license fee upon newspapers or magazines, 110 ALR 327.

Power of Legislature or school authorities to prescribe and enforce oath of allegiance, "salute to flag," or other ritual of a patriotic character, 110 ALR 383; 120 ALR 655; 127 ALR 1502; 141 ALR 1030; 147 ALR 698.

Validity of statutory or municipal regulation of soliciting of alms or contributions for charitable, religious, or individual purposes, 128 ALR 1361; 130 ALR 1504.

Injunction against picketing per se, where past picketing has been accompanied by violence or other improper conduct, 132 ALR 1218.

Use of streets or parks for religious purposes, 133 ALR 1402.

Right of privacy, 138 ALR 22; 57 ALR3d 16.

Validity, construction, and application of statute or ordinance prohibiting solicitation of passers-by in street in front of place of business, 139 ALR 1197.

Constitutional guaranty of freedom of religion as applied to license taxes or regulations, 141 ALR 538; 146 ALR 109; 152 ALR 322.

Sectarianism in schools, 141 ALR 1144.

Unfair labor practice, within National Labor Relations Act or similar state statute, predicated upon expressions of opinion or statements by employer concerning labor unions, 146 ALR 1024.

Freedom of speech and press as limitation on power to punish for contempt, 159 ALR 1379.

Governmental control of actions or speech of public officers or employees in respect of matters outside the actual performance of their duties, 163 ALR 1358.

Constitutionality of statute respecting employer's control of or interference with political affiliations or activities of employees, 166 ALR 707.

Validity, construction, and application of statute or ordinance regarding solicitation of persons to join an organization or society or to pay membership fees or dues, 167 ALR 697.

Right of school authorities to release pupils during school hours for purpose of attending religious education classes, 2 ALR2d 1371.

Religious beliefs of parents as defense to prosecution for failure to comply with compulsory education law, 3 ALR2d 1401.

Public regulation and prohibition of sound amplifiers or loud-speaker broadcasts in streets and other public places, 10 ALR2d 627.

Picketing of place of business by persons not employed therein, 11 ALR2d 1274.

Suspension or expulsion from church or religious society and the remedies therefor, 20 ALR2d 421.

Bible distribution or reading in public schools, 45 ALR2d 742.

Wearing of religious garb by public-school teachers, 60 ALR2d 300.

Zoning regulations as affecting churches, 74 ALR2d 377; 62 ALR3d 197.

Public payment of tuition, scholarship, or the like, as respects sectarian school, 81 ALR2d 1309.

Prayers in public schools, 86 ALR2d 1304.

Defamatory nature of statements reflecting on plaintiff's religious beliefs, standing, or activities, 87 ALR2d 453.

Validity and construction of statute or ordinance requiring or prohibiting posting or other publication of price of commodity or services, 89 ALR2d 901; 80 ALR3d 740.

Furnishing free textbooks to sectarian school or student therein, 93 ALR2d 986.

Nonlabor picketing or boycott, 93 ALR2d 1284.

Modern concept of obscenity, 5 ALR3d 1158.

Validity of procedures designed to protect the public against obscenity, 5 ALR3d 1214; 93 ALR3d 297.

Scope and extent and remedy or sanctions for infringement, of accused's right to communicate with his attorney, 5 ALR3d 1360.

Power of courts or other public agencies, in the absence of statutory authority, to order compulsory medical care for adult, 9 ALR3d 1391.

Legality of peaceful labor picketing on private property, 10 ALR3d 846.

Maintenance of lawyer reference system by organization having no legal interest in proceedings, 11 ALR3d 1206.

Provision of religious facilities for prisoners, 12 ALR3d 1276.

Invasion of privacy by publication dealing with one other than plaintiff, 18 ALR3d 873.

Right of publisher of newspaper or magazine, in absence of contractual obligation, to refuse publication of advertisement, 18 ALR3d 1286.

Validity and effect of gift for charitable purposes which excludes otherwise qualified beneficiaries because of their race or religion, 25 ALR3d 736.

Participation of student in demonstration on or near campus as warranting imposition of criminal liability for breach of peace, disorderly conduct, trespass, unlawful assembly, or similar offense, 32 ALR3d 551.

Participation of student in demonstration on or near campus as warranting expulsion or suspension from school or college, 32 ALR3d 864.

Free exercise of religion as defense to prosecution for narcotic or psychedelic drug offense, 35 ALR3d 939.

Validity and construction of statutes or ordinances regulating telephone answering services, 35 ALR3d 1430.

Erection, maintenance, or display of religious structures or symbols on public property as violation of religious freedom, 36 ALR3d 1256.

Student organization registration statement, filed with public school or state university or college, as open to inspection by public, 37 ALR3d 1311.

Validity of blasphemy statutes or ordinances, 41 ALR3d 519.

Validity of statute or ordinance forbidding pharmacist to advertise prices of drugs or medicines, 44 ALR3d 1301.

Censorship of convicted prisoners' "legal" mail, 47 ALR3d 1150.

Censorship of convicted prisoners' "non-legal" mail, 47 ALR3d 1192.

Religion as factor in adoption proceedings, 48 ALR3d 383.

Validity, construction, and application of statute prohibiting loitering for the purpose of using or possessing dangerous drugs, 48 ALR3d 1271.

Operation of nude-model photographic studio as offense, 48 ALR3d 1313.

Right of accused to have press or other media representatives excluded from criminal trial, 49 ALR3d 1007.

Libel and slander: charges of slumlordism or the like as actionable, 49 ALR3d 1074.

Topless or bottomless dancing or similar conduct as offense, 49 ALR3d 1084.

Validity and construction of statute or ordinance forbidding unauthorized persons to enter upon or remain in school building or premises, 50 ALR3d 340.

Exhibition of obscene motion pictures as nuisance, 50 ALR3d 969.

Determination of property rights between local church and parent church body: modern view, 52 ALR3d 324.

Right to discipline pupil for conduct away from school grounds or not immediately connected with school activities, 53 ALR3d 1124.

Invasion of privacy by radio or television, 56 ALR3d 386.

Waiver or loss of right of privacy, 57 ALR3d 16.

Consumer picketing to protest products, prices, or services, 62 ALR3d 227.

Application of state law to sex discrimination in employment advertising, 66 ALR3d 1237.

Criminal offenses under statutes and ordinances regulating charitable solicitations, 76 ALR3d 924.

Validity of regulation of college or university denying or restricting right of student to receive visitors in dormitory, 78 ALR3d 1109.

Power of corporation to make political contribution or expenditure under state law, 79 ALR3d 491.

Validity and construction of state or local regulation prohibiting off-premises advertising structures, 81 ALR3d 486.

Validity and construction of state or local regulation prohibiting the erection or maintenance of advertising structures within a specified distance of street or highway, 81 ALR3d 564.

Validity of sex education programs in public schools, 82 ALR3d 579.

Unemployment compensation: eligibility as affected by claimant's refusal to comply with requirements as to dress, grooming, or hygiene, 88 ALR3d 150.

Wills: condition that devisee or legatee shall renounce, embrace, or adhere to specified religious faith, 89 ALR3d 984.

Validity, under establishment of religion clause of federal or state constitution, of provision making day of religious observance a legal holiday, 90 ALR3d 752.

State regulation of the giving or making of political contributions or expenditures by private individuals, 94 ALR3d 944.

Constitutionality of state legislation imposing criminal penalties for personal possession or use of marijuana, 96 ALR3d 225.

Privilege of newsgatherer against disclosure of confidential sources or information, 99 ALR3d 37.

Identification of jobseeker by race, religion, national origin, sex, or age, in "Situation Wanted" employment advertising as violation of state civil rights laws, 99 ALR3d 154.

Defamation: publication of "Letter to Editor" in newspaper as actionable, 99 ALR3d 573.

Validity of "war zone" ordinances restricting location of sex-oriented businesses, 1 ALR4th 1297.

Validity and construction of state statute or ordinance prohibiting picketing, parading, demonstrating, or appearing in public while masked or disguised, 2 ALR4th 1241.

Validity and construction of statute or ordinance prohibiting use of "obscene" language in public, 2 ALR4th 1331.

Validity of ordinances restricting location of "adult entertainment" or sex-oriented business, 10 ALR4th 524; 10 ALR5th 538.

Religion as factor in child custody and visitation cases, 22 ALR4th 971.

Validity, under federal and state establishment of religion provisions, of prohibition of sale of intoxicating liquors on specific religious holidays, 27 ALR4th 1155.

Discharge from employment on ground of political views or conduct as affecting right to unemployment compensation, 29 ALR4th 287.

Oral communications insulting to particular state judge, made to third party out of judge's physical presence, as criminal contempt, 30 ALR4th 155.

Advertising as ground for disciplining attorney, 30 ALR4th 742.

Judicial review of termination of pastor's employment by local church or temple, 31 ALR4th 851.

Validity of state judicial or bar association rule forbidding use of law firm name unless it contains exclusively names of persons who are or were members of that state's bar, as it applies to out-of-state law firm, 33 ALR4th 404.

Libel and slander: privileged nature of statements or utterances by members of governing body of public institution of higher learning in course of official proceedings, 33 ALR4th 632.

Validity of local or state denial of public school courses or activities to private or parochial school students, 43 ALR4th 776.

Validity and construction of terroristic threat statutes, 45 ALR4th 949.

Judicial power to order discontinuance of life-sustaining treatment, 48 ALR4th 67.

Validity, construction, and effect of state statutes restricting political activities of public officers or employees, 51 ALR4th 702.

Validity and construction of state court's order precluding publicity or comment about pending civil case by counsel, parties, or witnesses, 56 ALR4th 1214.

Tax on hotel-motel room occupancy, 58 ALR4th 274.

Validity and construction of prison regulation of inmates' possession of personal property, 66 ALR4th 800.

Invasion of privacy by a clergyman, church, or religious group, 67 ALR4th 1086.

Intrusion by news-gathering entity as invasion of right of privacy, 69 ALR4th 1059.

Search and seizure of telephone company records pertaining to subscriber as violation of subscriber's constitutional rights, 76 ALR4th 536.

Bank's liability, under state law, for disclosing financial information concerning depositor or customer, 81 ALR4th 377.

Validity of state or local government regulation requiring private school to report attendance and similar information to government—post-Yoder cases, 8 ALR5th 875.

Obscenity prosecution: statutory exemption based on dissemination to persons or entities having scientific, educational, or similar justification for possession of such materials, 13 ALR5th 567.

Validity and construction of statutes prohibiting harassment of hunters, fishermen, or trappers, 17 ALR5th 837.

Who is "public figure" for purposes of defamation action, 19 ALR5th 1.

Power of court or other public agency to order medical treatment over parental religious objections for child whose life is not immediately endangered, 21 ALR5th 248.

Musical sound recording as punishable obscenity, 30 ALR5th 718.

Liability for discharge of employee from private employment on ground of political views or conduct, 38 ALR5th 39.

Propriety of exclusion of press or other media representatives from civil trial, 39 ALR5th 103.

Propriety of publishing identity of sexual assault victim, 40 ALR5th 787.

Validity, construction, and application of state statutes or ordinances regulating sexual performance by child, 42 ALR5th 291.

Free exercise of religion as applied to individual's objection to obtaining or disclosing social security number, 93 ALR5th 1.

Validity of state statutes and administrative regulations regulating internet communications under commerce clause and First Amendment of federal constitution, 98 ALR5th 167.

First Amendment protection afforded to commercial and home video games, 106 ALR5th 337.

First amendment challenges to display of religious symbols on public property, 107 ALR5th 1.

First Amendment protection afforded to comic books, comic strips, and cartoons, 118 ALR5th 213.

Landlord's refusal to rent to unmarried couple as protected by landlord's religious beliefs, 10 ALR6th 513.

Free exercise of religion clause of federal constitution as applied to individual's objection to obtaining or disclosing Social Security number, 87 ALR Fed. 908.

Validity of union procedures for fixing and reviewing agency fees of nonunion employees under public employees representation contract — post-Hudson cases, 92 ALR Fed. 894.

Validity and effect of restraints on postverdict communication between news media and jurors in federal case, 93 ALR Fed. 415.

Free exercise of religion clause of first amendment as defense to tort liability, 93 ALR Fed. 754.

Artist's speech and due process rights in artistic production which has been sold to another, 93 ALR Fed. 912.

First amendment guaranty of freedom of speech or press as defense to liability stemming from speech allegedly causing bodily injury, 94 ALR Fed. 26.

Giving of invocation with religious content at public-school-sponsored events to which public is invited or admitted as violation of establishment clause of first amendment, 98 ALR Fed. 206.

Validity, construction, and application of § 504 of Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act (29 USCS § 504), precluding certain convicted persons from serving in union office for specified period, 98 ALR Fed. 481.

Excessiveness or adequacy of awards of compensatory damages in civil actions for deprivation of rights under 42 USCS § 1983 — modern cases, 99 ALR Fed. 501.

Validity, construction, and application of 18 USCS § 2251, penalizing sexual exploitation of children, 99 ALR Fed. 643.

Immunity of federal tax agent from suit based upon agent's effort to enforce or collect tax, 99 ALR Fed. 700.

Constitutionality of teaching or suppressing teaching of Biblical creationism or Darwinian evolution theory in public schools, 102 ALR Fed. 537.

Constitutionality of teaching or otherwise promoting secular humanism in public schools, 103 ALR Fed. 538.

First amendment protection for publicly employed firefighters subjected to discharge, transfer, or discipline because of speech, 106 ALR Fed. 396.

First amendment protection for public hospital or health employees subjected to discharge, transfer, or discipline because of speech, 107 ALR Fed. 21.

First amendment protection for judges or government attorneys subjected to discharge, transfer, or discipline because of speech, 108 ALR Fed. 117.

First amendment protection for law enforcement employees subjected to discharge, transfer, or discipline because of speech, 109 ALR Fed. 9.

Constitutionality of regulation or policy governing prayer, meditation, or "moment of silence" in public schools, 110 ALR Fed. 211.

Bible distribution or use in public schools — modern cases, 111 ALR Fed. 121.

Right of access to federal district court guilty plea proceeding or records pertaining to entry or acceptance of guilty plea in criminal prosecution, 118 ALR Fed. 621.

Construction and application of 18 USCS § 922(e), prohibiting delivery of firearms to common carrier, 125 ALR Fed. 613.

Propriety and Scope of Protective Order Against Disclosure of Material Already Entered into Evidence in Federal Court Trial, 138 ALR Fed. 153.

What constitutes "hybrid rights" claim under Employment Div., Dep't of Human Resources v. Smith, 494 U.S. 872, 110 S. Ct. 1595, 108 L. Ed. 2d 876, 163 ALR Fed. 493.

Protection of commercial speech under first amendment — Supreme Court Cases, 164 ALR Fed. 1.

[AMENDMENT II]

[Right to Keep and Bear Arms]

A well regulated Militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear Arms, shall not be infringed.

Cross references. — Right to bear arms, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. VIII.

Law reviews. — For article on the judicial development of the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 and the selective incorporation of the Bill of Rights, see 22 Mercer L. Rev. 533 (1971). For article discussing the basis of this amendment, see 13 Ga. L. Rev. 1447 (1979). For article, "The Past and Future of the Individual's Right to Bear Arms," see 31 Ga. L. Rev. 1 (1996).

For comment discussing limits on the military's jurisdiction and the constitutional rights of servicemen in light of O'Callahan v. Parker, 395 U.S. 258, 89 S. Ct. 1683, 23 L. Ed. 2d 291 (1969), see 21 Mercer L. Rev. 311 (1969). For comment on Burger v. State, 118 Ga. App. 328, 163 S.E.2d 333 (1968), see 5 Ga. St. B.J. 384 (1969).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Amendment applies to federal, not state, legislative efforts. — Second amendment's right to keep and bear arms imposes a limitation on only federal, not state, legislative efforts. Brewer v. State of Ga., 281 Ga. 283, 637 S.E.2d 677 (2006).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Constitutionality of statutes restricting right of aliens to bear arms, 34 ALR 63.

Validity of state statutes restricting the right of aliens to bear arms, 28 ALR4th 1096.

Validity of state statute proscribing possession or carrying of knife, 47 ALR4th 651.

Validity, construction, and application of state or local law prohibiting manufacture, possession, or transfer of "assault weapon," 29 ALR5th 664.

Validity, construction, and application of provisions of National Firearms Act (26 USCS § 5845(f)) and Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act (18 USCS § 921(A)(4)) defining "destructive device," 126 ALR Fed. 597.

[AMENDMENT III]

[Quartering of Soldiers]

No Soldier shall, in time of peace be quartered in any house, without the consent of the Owner, nor in time of war, but in a manner to be prescribed by law.

Law reviews. — For article on the judicial development of the due process clause of U.S. Const., Amend. 14 and the selective incorporation of the Bill of Rights, see 22 Mercer L. Rev. 533 (1971). For article, "Sexual Privacy — Recent U.S. Supreme Court Decisions," see 13 Ga. St. B.J. 93 (1976). For article, "Georgia and the Development of Constitutional Principles: An Essay in Honor of the Bicentennial," see 24 Ga. St. B.J. 6 (1987).

For note discussing the constitutional origins of the substantive right to family autonomy, see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 719 (1969).

For comment discussing limits on the military's jurisdiction and the constitutional rights of servicemen in light of O'Callahan v. Parker, 395 U.S. 258, 89 S. Ct. 1683, 23 L. Ed. 2d 291 (1969), see 21 Mercer L. Rev. 311 (1969).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

U.S. Const., amend. 3 is a facet of right to privacy. — U.S. Const., amend. 3, in its prohibition against the quartering of soldiers in any house in time of peace without the consent of the owner, is a facet of the right to privacy. Smith v. Price, 446 F. Supp. 828 (M.D. Ga. 1977), rev'd on other grounds, 616 F.2d 1371 (5th Cir. 1980).

Cited in Handsford v. United States, 410 F.2d 733 (5th Cir. 1969).

[AMENDMENT IV]

[Security from Unwarrantable Search and Seizure]

The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no Warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by Oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

Cross references. — Security from unreasonable search and seizure, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII and § 1-2-6. Emergency situation; application for an investigative warrant, § 16-11-64.3. Searches and seizures generally, Ch. 5, T. 17.

Editor's notes. — The Supreme Court has declared that the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14, protects the personal right of privacy from state, as well as federal, action. See Mapp v. Ohio, 367 U.S. 643, 81 S. Ct. 1684, 61 L. Ed. 2d 1081 (1961).

Law reviews. — For article criticizing operation of U.S. Const., Amend. 1, in relation to right of privacy, see 10 Ga. B.J. 53 (1947). For article, "Civil Liberties and Statutory Construction," see 8 J. of Pub. L. 66 (1959). For article, "Changing Constitutional Concepts in Criminal Law and Procedure," see 1 Ga. St. B.J. 421 (1965). For article, "The Supreme Court, the Individual and the Criminal Process," see 1 Ga. L. Rev. 386 (1967). For article, "Federalism in Current Perspective," see 1 Ga. L. Rev. 586 (1967). For article, "Warrantless Searches and Seizures," see 5 Ga. L. Rev. 269 (1971). For article on the judicial development of the fourteenth amendment's due process clause and the selective incorporation of the Bill of Rights, see 22 Mercer L. Rev. 533 (1971). For article, "Privacy in the Corporate State: A Constitutional Value of Dwindling Significance," see 22 J. of Pub. L. 3 (1973). For article discussing federal Fair Credit Reporting Act, and the effect credit reporting has upon the constitutional right to privacy, see 22 J. of Pub. L. 67 (1973). For article advocating personal privacy as determinative test for standing in suppression of illegally seized evidence, see 23 Emory L.J. 111 (1974). For article discussing the problem of handling hearsay information in determining probable cause for issuance of a search warrant, see 25 Mercer L. Rev. 741 (1974). For article, "The Supreme Court and Civil Liberties: 1974-1975," see 24 Emory L.J. 937 (1975). For article advocating a sliding scale approach to deal with governmental investigative techniques intruding on privacy interests under the fourth amendment, see 11 Ga. L. Rev. 75 (1976). For article discussing past and present trends in the admissibility of illegally obtained evidence in Georgia criminal trials and advocating a state exclusionary rule, see 11 Ga. L. Rev. 105 (1976). For article discussing meaning and applicability of the automobile exception to the warrant requirement of the fourth amendment, see 27 Mercer L. Rev. 987 (1976). For article, "Federal Antibias Legislation and Academic Freedom: Some Problems with Enforcement Procedures," see 27 Emory L.J. 609 (1978). For article surveying cases dealing with criminal law and criminal procedure from June 1, 1977 through May 1978, see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 27 (1978). For article surveying judicial developments in Georgia criminal law, see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 59 (1979). For article, "Stop and Frisk," see 17 Ga. St. B.J. 6 (1980). For article, "Constitutional Criminal Litigation," see 32 Mercer L. Rev. 993 (1981). For article discussing eleventh circuit court cases in the year 1981 dealing with constitutional criminal procedure, see 33 Mercer L. Rev. 1083 (1982). For article, "Resolving the Dilemma of the Exclusionary Rule: An Application of Restitutive Principles of Justice," see 32

Emory L.J. 937 (1983). For article surveying 1982 Eleventh Circuit cases involving constitutional criminal procedure, see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 1241 (1983). For article discussing the application of the fourth amendment to searches and seizures at sea, see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 1537 (1983). For annual survey of criminal law and procedure, see 35 Mercer L. Rev. 103 (1983). For article surveying 1983 Eleventh Circuit cases involving constitutional criminal procedure, see 35 Mercer L. Rev. 1139 (1984). For annual survey on constitutional law, see 36 Mercer L. Rev. 137 (1984). For article, "The Bail Reform Act of 1984," see 34 Emory L.J. 685 (1985). For article, "An Alternative Approach to the Good Faith Controversy," see 37 Mercer L. Rev. 957 (1986). For article, "Court Ordered Surgery to Retrieve Evidence in Georgia in Light of the Supreme Court Decision in Winston v. Lee," see 37 Mercer L. Rev. 1005 (1986). For survey of 1985 Eleventh Circuit cases on constitutional criminal procedure, see 37 Mercer L. Rev. 1275 (1986). For article, "Employer and Consultant Reporting Under the LMRDA," see 20 Ga. L. Rev. 533 (1986). For article, "Congress and the Fourth Amendment," see 21 Ga. L. Rev. 107 (1986). For article, "After ABSCAM: An Examination of Congressional Proposals to Limit Targeting Discretion in Federal Undercover Investigations," see 36 Emory L.J. 75 (1987). For annual survey of criminal law, see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 129 (1986). For survey of 1986 Eleventh Circuit cases on constitutional criminal procedure, see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 1141 (1987). For survey of 1987 Eleventh Circuit cases on constitutional criminal procedure, see 39 Mercer L. Rev. 1187 (1988). For survey of Eleventh Circuit cases on evidence, see 39 Mercer L. Rev. 1259 (1988). For article, "Interception of Communications in Exigent Circumstances: The Fourth Amendment, Federal Legislation, and the United States Department of Justice," see 22 Ga. L. Rev. 1 (1987). For article, "Exclusion of Evidence in Federal Prosecutions on the Basis of State Law," see 22 Ga. L. Rev. 667 (1988). For article, "Student Privacy in the Wake of T.L.O.: An Appeal for an Individualized Suspicion Requirement for Valid Searches and Seizures in the Schools," see 22 Ga. L. Rev. 897 (1988). For article, "Juvenileness: A Single-Edged Constitutional Sword," see 22 Ga. L. Rev. 949 (1988).

For article, "More Myths of Parity: State Court Forums and Constitutional Actions for the Right to Shelter," see 38 Emory L.J. 615 (1989). For article, "Metaphor and Paradox," see 23 Ga. L. Rev. 1053 (1989). For article, "A Report from the Front in the War on Drugs," see 7 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 1 (1990). For article surveying developments in Georgia constitutional law during 1989, see 41 Mercer L. Rev. 1261 (1990). For article surveying developments in Georgia constitutional law during 1989, see 41 Mercer L. Rev. 1277 (1990). For annual survey on criminal law and procedure, see 42 Mercer L. Rev. 141 (1990). For annual eleventh circuit survey of constitutional law—civil, see 42 Mercer L. Rev. 1313 (1991). For annual eleventh circuit survey of constitutional criminal procedure, see 42 Mercer L. Rev. 1349 (1991). For annual eleventh circuit survey of constitutional law — civil, see 43 Mercer L. Rev. 1075 (1992). For annual eleventh circuit survey of constitutional criminal law, see 43 Mercer L. Rev. 1113 (1992). For annual survey of criminal law and procedure, see 43 Mercer L. Rev. 175 (1991). For article, "Individual Rights and the Powers of Government," see 27 Ga. L. Rev. 343 (1993). For article, "Trumping Rights," see 27 Ga. L. Rev. 435 (1993). For article, "Further Reflections on Rights and Interests: A Reply," see 27 Ga. L. Rev. 489 (1993). For article, "Making the Case for a Constitutional Right to Minimum Entitlements," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 525 (1993). For article, "Resources and Rights: Towards a New Prototype of Criminal Representation," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 599 (1993). For article, "Constitutional Civil Law," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 1107 (1993). For article, "Constitutional Criminal Law," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 1143 (1993). For article, "Annual Eleventh Circuit Survey January 1, 1993 — December 31, 1993: Constitutional Civil Law," see 45 Mercer L. Rev. 1217 (1994). For article, "Annual Eleventh Circuit Survey January 1, 1993 — December 31, 1993: Constitutional Criminal Law," see 45 Mercer L. Rev. 1243 (1994). For article on police perjury about searches and seizures, see 43 Emory L.J. 1311 (1994). For article, "1994 Eleventh Circuit Survey: Constitutional Criminal Procedure," see 46 Mercer L. Rev. 1297 (1995). For article, "1994 Eleventh Circuit Survey: Constitutional Civil Law," see 46 Mercer L. Rev. 1275 (1995). For survey of 1995 Eleventh Circuit cases on constitutional civil law, see 47 Mercer L. Rev. 745 (1996). For survey of 1995 Eleventh Circuit cases on constitutional criminal procedure, see 47 Mercer L. Rev. 765 (1996). For survey of 1995 Eleventh Circuit cases on evidence, see 47 Mercer L. Rev. 837 (1996). For article, "Slaves No More!: The Implications of the Informed Citizen Ideal for Discovery Before Fourth Amendment Suppression Hearings," see 15 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 709 (1999). For article, "Fit to Be Tied? Fourth Amendment Analysis of the Hog-Tie Restraint Procedure," see 33 Ga. L. Rev. 281 (1998). For article surveying 1997 and 1998 Eleventh Circuit cases on constitutional criminal procedure, see 50 Mercer L. Rev. 921 (1999). For article, "Chipping Away at the Boundaries of Privacy: Intel's Pentium III Processor Serial Number and the Erosion of Fourth Amendment Privacy Expectations," see 17 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 331 (2000). For article surveying 1999 Eleventh Circuit cases involving constitutional criminal procedure, see 51 Mercer L. Rev. 1089 (2000). For article on constitutional criminal procedure, see 52 Mercer L. Rev. 1305 (2001). For article on criminal law, see 53 Mercer L. Rev. 209 (2001). For article, "Statutory Civil Rights," see 53 Mercer L. Rev. 1499 (2002). For article, "Expanding the Scope of Suspicionless Drug Testing in Public Schools," see 54 Mercer L. Rev. 1293 (2003). For article, "Constitutional Criminal Procedure," see 54 Mercer L. Rev. 1403 (2003). For survey article on criminal law and procedure for the period from June 1, 2002 through May 31, 2003, see 55 Mercer L. Rev. 117 (2003). For Eleventh Circuit survey article on constitutional criminal procedure decisions in 2003, see 55 Mercer L. Rev. 1149 (2004). For article, "Data Matching, Data Mining, and Due Process," see 40 Ga. L. Rev. 1 (2005). For article, "Nothing New Under the Sun? A Technologically Rational Doctrine of Fourth Amendment Search," see 56 Mercer L. Rev. 507 (2005). For annual survey of criminal law, see 57 Mercer L. Rev. 113 (2005). For article, "Police Pursuits: A Comprehensive Look at the Broad Spectrum of Police Pursuit Liability and Law," see 57 Mercer L. Rev. 511 (2006). For annual survey of criminal law, see 58 Mercer L. Rev. 83 (2006).

For note discussing retroactive application of constitutional prohibition against unreasonable search and seizures, in light of Mapp v. Ohio, see 25 Ga. B.J. 238 (1962). For note discussing habeas corpus as a means of exerting control by the central government in protecting the constitutional rights of criminal defendants and the ramifications for federalism, see 16 Mercer L. Rev. 281 (1964). For note discussing retroactivity of constitutional rules of criminal procedure in light of Linkletter v. Walker, 381 U.S. 618, 85 S. Ct. 1731, 14 L. Ed. 2d 601 (1965), see 16 J. of Pub. L. 193 (1967). For note, "Constitutional Rights of a Taxpayer in a Criminal Tax Investigation," see 16 J. of Pub. L. 403 (1967). For note tracing judicial attempts at enumerating areas protected by the fourth amendment and advocating more uniformity, see 18 Mercer L. Rev. 447 (1967). For note, "College Searches and Seizures: Privacy and Due Process Problems on Campus," see 3 Ga. L. Rev. 426 (1969). For note discussing operation of Implied Consent Law (former § 68-1625.1, now repealed) and constitutional issues raised by the concept, see 20 Mercer L. Rev. 489 (1969). For note discussing the constitutional origins of the substantive right to family autonomy, see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 719 (1969). For note, "Third Party Consent to Search and Seizure: A Reexamination," see 20 J. of Pub. L. 313 (1971). For note, "The Constitutionality of the Use of Search Warrant to Obtain Tax Records," see 6 Ga. L. Rev. 399 (1972). For note, "Limitation Upon Trial Court Discretion in Imposing Conditions of Probation," see 8 Ga. L. Rev. 466 (1974). For note on fourth amendment search and seizure in the context of air piracy, see 25 Mercer L. Rev. 355 (1974). For note on use of voice exemplars in grand jury investigations, see 25 Mercer L. Rev. 365 (1974). For note discussing relaxation of judicial restrictions on search incident to lawful arrest, see 24 Emory L.J. 151 (1975). For note, "Application of the Fourth Amendment and the Exclusionary Rule to the Grand Jury," see 24 Emory L.J. 471 (1975). For note discussing modern trend of judicial authorization of covert police break-ins, see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 707 (1979). For note, "Constitutionally Implied Causes of Action: A Policy of Protection, Expansion, or Restriction?," see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 1023 (1979). For note discussing application of procedural due process requirements to hearings by administrative tribunals, see 32 Mercer L. Rev. 359 (1980). For note on United States v. Williams, 622 F.2d 830 (5th Cir. 1980), see 32 Mercer L. Rev. 1329 (1981). For note discussing property rights as measure of fourth amendment protections, see 33 Mercer L. Rev. 1263 (1982). For note, "United States v. Leon: The Long-Awaited Good-Faith Exception Has Finally Arrived," see 36 Mercer L. Rev. 757 (1985). For note, "Oliver v. United States: Will Exceptions of Privacy Shield Criminal Acts No More?," see 36 Mercer L. Rev. 1401 (1985). For note, "Circling the Wagons: Informational Privacy and Family Testimonial Privileges," see 20 Ga. L. Rev. 173 (1985). For note, "Davis v. State: Too Young to Consent?" see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 1367 (1993). For note, "Arizona v. Evans: Carving Out Another Good-Faith Exception to the Exclusionary Rule," see 47 Mercer L. Rev. 1135 (1996). For note, "Gary v. State: The Georgia Supreme Court Dodges a Confrontation With the Good Faith Exception," see 32 Ga. L. Rev. 927 (1998). For note, "Wyoming v. Houghton: Passengers' Belongings Subject to Searches Under the 'Automobile Exception' to the Fourth Amendment's Warrant Requirement," see 51 Mercer L. Rev. 999 (2000). For note, "Board of Education of Independent School District No. 92 of Pottawatomie County v. Earls: Supreme Court Approves Mandatory, Suspicionless Drug Testing Policy in Public High School," see 54 Mercer L. Rev. 1215 (2003). For note, "Beyond the Four Corners: Objective Good Faith Analysis or Subjective Erosion of Fourth Amendment Protections?" see 54 Mercer L. Rev. 1719 (2003). For note, "Form Over Substance? Qualified Immunity in Groh v. Ramirez," see 56 Mercer L. Rev. 1457 (2005). For note, "To Serve and Protect: Thornton v. United States and the Newly Anemic Fourth Amendment," see 56 Mercer L. Rev. 1471 (2005). For note, "Snoop Dogs: An Analysis of Narcotics Canine Sniffs of Storage Units under the Fourth Amendment," 40 Ga. L. Rev. 1209 (2006). For note, "Padgett v. Donald: Why Not So Special," see 57 Mercer L. Rev. 673 (2006).

For comment concerning indirect use of illegally seized evidence, in light of Nardone v. United States, 308 U.S. 338, 60 S. Ct. 266, 84 L. Ed. 307 (1939), see 2 Ga. B.J. 70

(1940). For comment criticizing McIntyre v. State, 190 Ga. 872, 11 S.E.2d 5 (1940), permitting admission of illegally seized evidence, see 3 Ga. B.J. 53 (1941). For comment on Harris v. United States, 331 U.S. 145, 67 S. Ct. 1098, 91 L. Ed. 399 (1947), upholding constitutionality of evidence seized during search incident to arrest, see 10 Ga. B.J. 120 (1947). For comment on Johnson v. United States, 333 U.S. 10, 68 S. Ct. 367, 92 L. Ed. 436 (1948), holding when the right of privacy must yield to right of search is a matter for judicial officer, not policeman, see 10 Ga. B.J. 498 (1948). For comment on McDonald v. United States, 166 F.2d 957 (D.C. Cir. 1948), holding act of looking through transom without search warrant and observing that which is not hidden is not a search, see 11 Ga. B.J. 241 (1948). For comment on United States v. Nesmith, 121 F. Supp. 758 (D.D.C. 1954), regarding admissibility of chemical tests of body fluids where U.S. Const., Amendments. 4, 5 and 14, objections are made, see 4 J. Pub. L. 202 (1955). For comment discussing reasonableness in search and seizure of narcotics from accused's body, in light of Blackford v. United States, 247 F.2d 745 (9th Cir. 1957), see 9 Mercer L. Rev. 220 (1957). For comment on Breithaupt v. Abram, 352 U.S. 432, 77 S. Ct. 408, 1 L. Ed. 2d 448 (1957), holding that the fourteenth amendment does not extend the protection of this amendment and U.S. Const., Amend. V, to criminal prosecutions in state cases, see 20 Ga. B.J. 126 (1957). For comment on Blackford v. United States, 247 F.2d 245 (9th Cir. 1957), cert. denied, 356 U.S. 914, 78 S. Ct. 672, 2 L. Ed. 2d 586 (1958), holding that evidence gained in bodily search of defendant who was attempting to cross the United States border was not obtained through unreasonable search and seizure and did not violate constitutional protections, see 21 Ga. B.J. 269 (1958). For comment on Elkins v. United States, 361 U.S. 810, 80 S. Ct. 1437, 4 L. Ed. 2d 58 (1960), regarding the extension of the exclusionary rule in federal criminal cases to evidence illegally obtained by state officer, see 12 Mercer L. Rev. 274 (1960). For comment on Frank v. Maryland, 359 U.S. 360, 79 S. Ct. 804, 3 L. Ed. 2d 877 (1959), holding housing inspection without warrant to be reasonable search, see 22 Ga. B.J. 410 (1960). For comment discussing reasonableness of warrantless search of automobile, in light of Patenotte v. United States, 266 F.2d 647 (5th Cir. 1959), see 22 Ga. B.J. 549 (1960). For comment on Chapman v. United States, 365 U.S. 610, 81 S. Ct. 776, 5 L. Ed. 2d 828 (1961), see 12 Mercer L. Rev. 422 (1961). For comment on Mapp v. Ohio, 365 U.S. 514, 81 S. Ct. 1684, 5 L. Ed. 2d 714 (1961), and the incorporation of the fourth amendment's prohibition of unreasonable searches and seizures into the fourteenth amendment, see 13 Mercer L. Rev. 275 (1961). For comment on Elkins v. United States, 364 U.S. 206, 80 S. Ct. 1437, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1669 (1960), holding evidence illegally obtained by state officers is inadmissible in federal as well as state courts, see 23 Ga. B.J. 383 (1961). For comment discussing admissibility of evidence obtained by search and seizure under administrative warrant, in light of Abel v. United States, 362 U.S. 217, 80 S. Ct. 683, 4 L. Ed. 2d 668 (1960), see 23 Ga. B.J. 400 (1961). For comment discussing exclusionary rule in state courts, in light of Mapp v. Ohio, 367 U.S. 643, 81 S. Ct. 1684, 6 L. Ed. 2d 1081 (1961), see 24 Ga. B.J. 129 (1961). For comment discussing standing to object to unlawful search and seizure, in light of Jones v. United States, 362 U.S. 257, 80 S. Ct. 725, 4 L. Ed. 2d 697 (1960), see 24 Ga. B.J. 131 (1961). For comment on Silverman v. United States, 365 U.S. 505, 81 S. Ct. 679, 5 L. Ed. 2d 734 (1961), holding police use of "spike mike" violated prohibition against unlawful search and seizure, see 24 Ga. B.J. 135 (1961). For comment discussing application of exclusionary rule to state, in light of Mapp v. Ohio, 367 U.S. 643, 81 S. Ct. 1684, 6 L. Ed. 2d 1081 (1961), see 24 Ga. B.J. 445 (1962). For comment on Harris v. United States, 321 F.2d 739 (6th Cir. 1963), holding invalid search incident to arrest where primary purpose is to search for evidence and not make a valid arrest, see 26 Ga. B.J. 446 (1964). For comment on Johnson v. State, 111 Ga. App. 298, 141 S.E.2d 574 (1965), see 17 Mercer L. Rev. 479 (1966). For comment on extension of exclusionary rule to civil cases in light of Williams v. Williams, 8 Ohio Misc. 156, 221 N.E.2d 622 (1966), see 18 Mercer L. Rev. 501 (1967). For comment discussing Moore v. Student Affairs Comm., 284 F. Supp. 725 (M.D. Ala. 1968), as to propriety of warrantless search of student's dormitory room pursuant to school regulation, see 3 Ga. L. Rev. 223 (1968). For comment on Camara v. Municipal Court, 387 U.S. 523, 87 S. Ct. 1727, 18 L. Ed. 2d 930 (1967), applying this amendment's guarantees to unreasonable searches by administrative agencies, see 19 Mercer L. Rev. 259 (1968). For comment on Katz v. United States, 389 U.S. 347, 88 S. Ct. 507, 19 L. Ed. 2d 576 (1967), finding absence of physical trespass not determinative of fact of illegal search and seizure, see 19 Mercer L. Rev. 442 (1968). For comment on Tolbert v. State, 224 Ga. 291, 161 S.E.2d 279 (1968), see 5 Ga. St. B.J. 256 (1968). For comment discussing probable cause for search warrant in obscenity case, in light of Lee Art Theatre, Inc. v. Virginia, 392 U.S. 638, 88 S. Ct. 2103, 20 L. Ed. 2d 1313 (1968) (per curiam), see 18 J. of Pub. L. 205 (1969). For comment discussing limits on the military's jurisdiction and the constitutional rights of servicemen in light of O'Callahan v. Parker, 395 U.S. 258, 89 S. Ct. 1683, 23 L. Ed. 2d 291 (1969), see 21 Mercer L. Rev. 311 (1969). For comment discussing subsequent justification of electronic surveillance, in light of Cox v. United States, 449 F.2d 679 (10th Cir. 1971), see 23 Mercer L. Rev. 989 (1972). For comment on Creamer v. State, 229 Ga. 511, 192 S.E.2d 350 (1972), see 24 Mercer L. Rev. 687 (1973). For comment on United States v. Robinson, 414 U.S. 218, 94 S. Ct. 467, 38 L. Ed. 2d 427 (1973), discussing search incident to arrest, see 25 Mercer L. Rev. 943 (1974). For comment on Couch v. United States, 409 U.S. 322, 93 S. Ct. 611, 34 L. Ed. 2d 548 (1973), holding compelled production of taxpayers' records in possession of accountant not violative of taxpayer's right against self-incrimination, see 10 Ga. St. B.J. 648 (1974). For comment on Brown v. Illinois, 422 U.S. 590, 95 S. Ct. 2254, 45 L. Ed. 2d 416 (1975), as to effect of Miranda warnings on admissibility of a confession made after an unconstitutional arrest, see 25 Emory L.J. 227 (1976). For comment on Connally v. State, 237 Ga. 203, 227 S.E.2d 352, see 11 Ga. L. Rev. 200 (1976). For comment on Andresen v. Maryland, 427 U.S. 463, 96 S. Ct. 2737, 49 L. Ed. 2d 627 (1976), as to nonapplicability of privilege against self-incrimination to seizure with search warrant of incriminatory personal business records, see 28 Mercer L. Rev. 581 (1977). For comment discussing satisfaction of the probable cause requirement for issuance of a search warrant by a reasonable inference in light of Murphy v. State, 238 Ga. 725, 234 S.E.2d 911 (1977), see 29 Mercer L. Rev. 347 (1977). For comment discussing doctrine of substituted judgment and constitutional underpinnings of a qualified right to refuse medical treatment asserted for an incompetent, in light of Superintendent of Belchertown State School v. Saikewicz, 370 N.E.2d 417 (Mass. 1977), see 27 Emory L.J. 425 (1978). For comment on United States v. Ceccolini, 435 U.S. 268, 98 S. Ct. 1054, 55 L. Ed. 2d 268 (1978), see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 1087 (1979). For comment on United States v. Finazzo, 583 F.2d 837 (6th Cir. 1978), regarding authority of federal judges to authorize break-ins to plant electronic surveillance devices, see 13 Ga. L. Rev. 647 (1979). For comment on Gaioni v. Folmar, 460 F. Supp. 10 (M.D. Ala. 1978), see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 1093 (1979). For comment, "Bivens and the Creation of a Cause of Action for Money Damages Arising Directly From the Due Process Clauses," see 29 Emory L.J. 231 (1980). For comment on Dunaway v. New York, 442 U.S. 200, 99 S. Ct. 563, 60 L. Ed. 2d 824 (1979), regarding custodial questioning on less than probable cause for a full-fledged arrest, see 29 Emory L.J. 273 (1980). For comment on Burkart Randall Div. of Textron, Inc. v. Marshall, 625 F.2d 1313 (7th Cir. 1980), discussing administrative inspections and OSHA, see 15 Ga. L. Rev. 233 (1980). For comment, "Private Search and Prior Restraint of Obscene Materials: The Interaction of Two Doctrines," see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 1029 (1980). For comment on United States v. Williams, 622 F.2d 830 (5th Cir. 1980), see 15 Ga. L. Rev. 487 (1981). For comment discussing the forcible medication of involuntarily committed mental patients with antipsychotic drugs in light of Rogers v. Okin, 634 F.2d 650 (1st Cir. 1980), see 15 Ga. L. Rev. 739 (1981). For comment, "Free Press, Privacy, and Privilege: Protection of Researcher-Subject Communications," see 17 Ga. L. Rev. 1009 (1983). For comment discussing the unconstitutional use of deadly force against nonviolent fleeing felons, see 18 Ga. L. Rev. 137 (1983). For comment, "Use and Abuse of Urinalysis Testing in the Workplace: A Proposal for Federal Legislation Limiting Drug Screening," see 35 Emory L.J. 1011 (1986). For comment, "Shoemaker v. Handel and Urinalysis Drug Testing: Looking for an American Standard," see 21 Ga. L. Rev. 467 (1986). For comment, "Fourth Amendment Protections in the Elementary and Secondary School Settings," see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 1417 (1987). For comment, "The Constitutional Implications of Mandatory Testing for Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome — AIDS," see 37 Emory L.J. 217 (1988). For comment, "Trial by Certainty: Implications of Genetic 'DNA Fingerprints'," see 39 Emory L.J. 309 (1990). For comment, "Michigan Department of State Police v. Sitz: Sober Reflections on How the Supreme Court Has Blurred the Law of Suspicionless Seizures," see 25 Ga. L. Rev. 199 (1990). For comment on warrantless search of defendant's home, see 41 Emory L.J. 321 (1992). For comment, "Ramseur v. Beyer: The Third Circuit Upholds Race-Based Treatment of Prospective Grand Jurors," see 27 Ga. L. Rev. 621 (1993). For comment on United States v. Ford, 34 F.3d 992 (1994), relating to use of thermal surveillance on private property, see 29 Ga. L. Rev. 819 (1995). For comment, "Making the 'Law of the Land' the Law on the Street: How Police Academies Teach Evolving Fourth Amendment Law," see 49 Emory L.J. 295 (2000). For comment, "The Government's Right to Read: Maintaining State Access to Digital Data in the Age of Impenetrable Encryption," see 49 Emory L.J. 711 (2000). For comment, "The Fourth Amendment Rights of Trespassers: Searching for the Legitimacy of the Government-Notification Doctrine," see 50 Emory L.J. 1357 (2001).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

EXPECTATION OF PRIVACY

PLACES AND THINGS TO WHICH RIGHT EXTENDS

PRISONS

PROBABLE CAUSE

- 1. IN GENERAL
- 2. AFFIDAVITS
- 3. INFORMANTS
- 4. HEARSAY
- 5. PROBABLE CAUSE FOUND
- 6. PROBABLE CAUSE NOT FOUND
- REASONABLENESS
- SEARCHES
 - 1. IN GENERAL
 - 2. WARRANTLESS SEARCHES
 - 3. VEHICLES
- SEIZURES
- ARRESTS
 - 1. IN GENERAL
 - 2. WARRANTLESS ARREST
- WARRANTS
 - 1. IN GENERAL
 - 2. WHO MAY ISSUE
 - 3. PARTICULARITY OF DESCRIPTION
- INVESTIGATIVE STOPS
 - 1. IN GENERAL
 - 2. VEHICLE STOPS
- SEARCH AND SEIZURE INCIDENT TO LAWFUL ARREST
- INVENTORY SEARCHES
- CONSENT SEARCHES
 - 1. IN GENERAL
 - 2. WHO MAY CONSENT
 - 3. VOLUNTARINESS
- PLAIN VIEW
- CUSTODIAL SEARCHES
- FINGERPRINTS, BLOOD, URINE AND OTHER MEDICAL TESTS
- EXIGENT CIRCUMSTANCES
- ADMINISTRATIVE INSPECTIONS
- BORDER SEARCHES
- AIRPORTS
- DRUG COURIERS
- WIRETAPS
- ELECTRONIC SURVEILLANCE
- CONFESSIONS
- STATE ACTION
- STANDING
- ADMISSIBILITY OF EVIDENCE; EXCLUSIONARY RULE
 - 1. IN GENERAL
 - 2. ILLUSTRATIVE CASES
- REMEDIES FOR VIOLATION OF RIGHTS

General Consideration

Purpose. — Origin and history of U.S. Const., amend. 4 clearly shows that it was intended only as a restraint upon activities of sovereign authority, and that a contrary ruling would have no deterrent effect since private persons would be unaware of the rule. Moye v. Hopper, 234 Ga. 230, 214 S.E.2d 920 (1975).

A fundamental purpose of U.S. Const., amend. 4 is to safeguard individuals from unreasonable government invasion of legitimate privacy interests. United States v. Gaultney, 581 F.2d 1137 (5th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 446 U.S. 907, 100 S. Ct. 1833, 64 L. Ed. 2d 259 (1980).

The essential purpose of proscriptions in U.S. Const., amend. 4 is to impose standard of "reasonableness" upon the exercise of discretion by government officials, including law-enforcement agents, in order to safeguard the privacy and security of individuals against arbitrary invasion. Bowers v. State, 151 Ga. App. 46, 258 S.E.2d 623 (1979), aff'd, 245 Ga. 367, 265 S.E.2d 57 (1980).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Hostility to seizures based on mere suspicion was prime motivation for adoption of U.S. Const., amend. 4, and common rumor or report, suspicion, or even "strong reason to suspect" is not adequate to support a warrant for arrest. Bowers v. State, 151 Ga. App. 46, 258 S.E.2d 623 (1979), aff'd, 245 Ga. 367, 265 S.E.2d 57 (1980).

U.S. Const., amend. 4 was intended partly to protect against the abuses of the general warrants that had occurred in England and of the writs of assistance used in the colonies. Steagald v. United States, 451 U.S. 204, 101 S. Ct. 1642, 68 L. Ed. 2d 38 (1981).

Primary object is protection of privacy. — Rather than property rights, primary object of U.S. Const., amend. 4 is protection of privacy. United States v. Roach, 590 F.2d 181 (5th Cir. 1979).

Nature of rights under fourth amendment. — The rights guaranteed by U.S. Const., amend. 4 are regarded as of the very essence of constitutional liberty. United States v. Hall, 587 F.2d 177 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 961, 99 S. Ct. 2405, 60 L. Ed. 2d 1065 (1979).

Intrusions by governmental investigations into zone of privacy. — No interest legitimately protected by the fourth amendment is implicated by governmental investigative activities unless there is an intrusion into a zone of privacy, into the security a person relies upon when the person places the person or the person's property within a constitutionally protected area. United States v. Miller, 425 U.S. 435, 96 S. Ct. 1619, 48 L. Ed. 2d 71 (1976) (decided prior to passage of Right to Financial Privacy Act, 12 U.S.C. § 3401 et seq.).

Applicable to seizures of persons and property. — The simple language of U.S. Const., amend. 4 applies equally to seizures of persons and property. Lackey v. State, 246 Ga. 331, 271 S.E.2d 478 (1980).

U.S. Const., amend. 4 protects persons, not just places. State v. Cochran, 135 Ga.

App. 47, 217 S.E.2d 181 (1975).

Property rights. — Property rights are neither the beginning nor the end of the fourth amendment inquiry. Other factors enter into the calculus, no single integrant being determinative. The additional circumstances to be considered include whether the property owners enjoyed the right to exclude others from the property, or whether they had a possessory interest in the articles seized, and what precautions were taken to assure their privacy. State v. Jackson, 201 Ga. App. 810, 412 S.E.2d 593 (1991).

Although property concepts are no longer controlling in application of fourth amendment rights, they should be considered in conjunction with the totality of all the circumstances surrounding claimed violations of fourth amendment rights. Bunn v. State, 153 Ga. App. 270, 265 S.E.2d 88 (1980).

Invocation of fourth amendment rights not to be used as evidence. — A defendant's refusal of permission to search is analogous to the assertion of the privilege against self-incrimination, and as it is forbidden to "parade" a witness in front of a jury for the sole purpose of having the witness invoke the fifth amendment, an individual should be able to invoke fourth amendment rights without having the refusal used against the defendant at trial. Mackey v. State, 234 Ga. App. 554, 507 S.E.2d 482 (1998).

Common sense application. — U.S. Const., amend. 4 is not to be applied to searches and seizures in a hypertechnical manner but with a common sense approach. United States v. Edwards, 441 F.2d 749 (5th Cir. 1971).

Negligent or innocent mistakes do not violate the fourth amendment. Maughon v. Bibb County, 160 F.3d 658 (11th Cir. 1998).

Fundamental inquiry is whether search or seizure is reasonable under circumstances, remembering that U.S. Const., amend. 4 protects people, not places. United States v. Gaultney, 581 F.2d 1137 (5th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 446 U.S. 907, 100 S. Ct. 1833, 64 L. Ed. 2d 259 (1980).

Only unreasonable searches and seizures prohibited. — Only unreasonable searches and seizures come within the interdiction of U.S. Const., amend. 4, and what is reasonable depends on the facts and circumstances of each case. Bartlett v. United States, 232 F.2d 135 (5th Cir. 1956).

It is only unreasonable searches and seizures which come within the constitutional interdict. The test of reasonableness cannot be stated in rigid and absolute terms. Each case is to be decided on its own facts and circumstances. Cash v. State, 222 Ga. 55, 148 S.E.2d 420 (1966); United States v. Nooks, 446 F.2d 1283 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 945, 92 S. Ct. 299, 30 L. Ed. 2d 261 (1971).

The Constitution prohibits only searches which are unreasonable, and reasonableness is to be decided on its own facts and circumstances. Gugliotta v. State, 117 Ga. App. 212, 160 S.E.2d 266 (1968).

It is only unreasonable searches and seizures which come within the constitutional interdict. Watts v. Cannon, 224 Ga. 797, 164 S.E.2d 780 (1968).

U.S. Const., amend. 4 protects privacy only to extent that it prohibits unreasonable searches and seizures of “persons, houses, papers, and effects.” No general right is created by the amendment so as to hold unconstitutional everything which affects privacy. Patterson v. State, 133 Ga. App. 742, 212 S.E.2d 858 (1975).

Protections of U.S. Const., amend. 4 apply only to unreasonable searches and seizures of governmental agents. Gasaway v. State, 137 Ga. App. 653, 224 S.E.2d 772, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 865, 97 S. Ct. 172, 50 L. Ed. 2d 144 (1976).

Balancing implied consent with constitutional rights. — Stated purpose of O.C.G.A. § 40-5-55 to protect the citizens of this state from individuals driving under the influence because these drivers constitute “a direct and immediate threat to the welfare and safety of the general public” must be balanced against the intrusion created by chemical testing on the individual’s fourth amendment rights where the individual has been involved in a traffic accident involving serious injuries or fatalities and the investigating officer has probable cause to believe that the individual was driving under the influence if the driver/defendant is seriously injured in an automobile accident, given the presence of probable cause, the requirement that a person submit to a chemical test is inherently reasonable in the balance, and the fourth amendment’s “probable cause yardstick” measures up to be constitutionally sound. Hough v. State, 279 Ga. 711, 620 S.E.2d 380 (2005).

Something less than full scale arrest and search will trigger fourth amendment scrutiny. On the other hand, it equally is clear that certain encounters between law enforcement officers and citizens, even for investigative purposes, are not encompassed by U.S. Const., amend. 4. United States v. Elmore, 595 F.2d 1036 (5th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 910, 100 S. Ct. 2998, 64 L. Ed. 2d 861 (1980).

Privacy yields to protection from crime. — Privacy argument has yielded to proposition that public has right to expect state to protect its citizens from flow of illicit drugs and to enforce criminal law so long as there is no more than a minimal intrusion in right of privacy enjoyed by the individual. Dunivant v. State, 155 Ga. App. 884, 273 S.E.2d 621 (1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 998, 101 S. Ct. 1703, 68 L. Ed. 2d 199 (1981).

Balance of privacy interests and interest in deterring crime. — The governmental interest in deterring criminal conduct may properly be balanced against an individual’s privacy interests in cases under U.S. Const., amend. 4. Reasonableness in the sense of U.S. Const., amend. 4 always depends upon a balance which must be struck between, on the one hand, the level of official intrusion into an individual privacy and, on the other hand, the public interest to be served by such an intrusion. United States v. Michael, 645 F.2d 252 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 950, 102 S. Ct. 489, 70 L. Ed. 2d 257 (1981).

Fourth amendment right of the victim of a crime to be secure against unreasonable search must prevail over the right of the accused to obtain evidence for the accused’s defense. To require the victim of a crime to undergo surgery against the victim’s will to remove a bullet lodged an inch from the victim’s spine, even if medical testimony could be produced that the operation would not be dangerous to the victim’s health, is an unreasonable search and seizure, and violates the victim’s rights under U.S. Const., amend. 4. State v. Haynie, 240 Ga. 866, 242 S.E.2d 713 (1978).

Assurance that a person’s fifth amendment right against compelled self-incrimination was not violated does not necessarily overcome a failure to protect the person’s right under the fourth amendment against unreasonable search and seizure.

General Consideration (Cont'd)

State v. Guillory, 236 Ga. App. 230, 511 S.E.2d 591 (1999).

An unlawful arrest or seizure does not bar a criminal prosecution. Neither does suppression of evidence. State v. Brown, 198 Ga. App. 239, 401 S.E.2d 295 (1990), cert. denied, 198 Ga. App. 898, 401 S.E.2d 295 (1991).

Three tiers of police-citizen encounters. — The three tiers of police-citizen encounters are: (1) communication between police and citizens involving no coercion or detention and therefore without the compass of the fourth amendment; (2) brief seizures that must be supported by reasonable suspicion; and (3) full-scale arrests that must be supported by probable cause. Gonzalez v. State, 235 Ga. App. 253, 509 S.E.2d 144 (1998).

First level police-citizen encounters. — Because there was no evidence of threats, coercion, or restraint, a police officer's actions of approaching defendant's parked car outside a convenience store, asking for proof of car ownership, and asking about defendant's knowledge of the men who were with defendant, fell within the realm of a first-level police-citizen encounter which carried no fourth amendment protection and did not require any articulable suspicion of criminal activity in order to allow the officer to ask defendant for permission to search defendant's car; therefore, the trial court erred in suppressing cocaine that was found in the car during the search which followed on the ground that the officer lacked articulable suspicion that illegal drugs were in the car. State v. Cates, 258 Ga. App. 673, 574 S.E.2d 868 (2002).

Questioning outside the scope of a valid traffic stop. — A law enforcement officer's continued questioning of a vehicle's driver and passengers outside the scope of a valid traffic stop passes muster under the fourth amendment either when the officer has a reasonable articulable suspicion of other illegal activity or when the valid traffic stop has de-escalated into a consensual encounter. Daniel v. State, 277 Ga. 840, 597 S.E.2d 116 (2004).

Searches conducted outside judicial process without prior approval by judge or magistrate are per se unreasonable under U.S. Const., amend. 4 — subject only to a few specifically established and well-delineated exceptions. United States v. Bright, 471 F.2d 723 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 412 U.S. 921, 93 S. Ct. 2742, 37 L. Ed. 2d 148 (1973).

Private searches. — Where shipping company employees discovered crates containing contraband and notified law enforcement authorities, the subsequent search of the crates by law enforcement officers did not exceed the scope of the private search in violation of the fourth amendment. Hyatt v. State, 210 Ga. App. 425, 436 S.E.2d 540 (1993).

Search by private individuals. — Upon a de novo review of the trial court's application of the law to the facts, became a warrantless search of defendant's gym locker was conducted by private citizens, and not by law enforcement, said acts did not implicate the fourth amendment; hence, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion to suppress the evidence seized as a result of said search. Hobbs v. State, 272 Ga. App. 148, 611 S.E.2d 775 (2005).

Searches by shipping company employees. — Shipping company employees did not act as instruments or agents of the government in their searches of a parcel, although they had received training by government law enforcement officers on when to contact government agents after contraband was discovered. United States v. Simpson, 904 F.2d 607 (11th Cir. 1990).

Federal court precedents. — The Court of Appeals is not bound by the rulings of the Federal Court of Appeals for its circuit concerning when a search and seizure violates the fourth amendment. State v. McCloud, 187 Ga. App. 580, 370 S.E.2d 831 (1988).

Inadvertence does not make proper an otherwise violative act. — An act may have been "inadvertent" in the sense that it was normal or habitual or even that it was the result of ordinary curiosity, but none of these motives would render proper an act otherwise a violation of constitutional requirements. Williams v. State, 157 Ga. App. 476, 277 S.E.2d 923, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 823, 102 S. Ct. 109, 70 L. Ed. 2d 95 (1981).

Where formal arrest followed quickly on heels of challenged search of defendant's person, it is not particularly important that the search preceded the arrest, rather than vice versa. Collier v. State, 177 Ga. App. 217, 338 S.E.2d 724 (1985).

Custodial questioning after arrest following lawful discovery of stolen goods constitutional. — If an arrest following discovery of stolen goods in a lawful search of a stolen car is based upon probable cause, custodial questioning after the accused is given Miranda warnings does not offend the fourth amendment protection against custodial interrogation following arrest on less than probable cause. Sanborn v. State, 251 Ga. 169, 304 S.E.2d 377 (1983).

Police surveillant's deceptive telephone call to defendant, telling the defendant "you've got to get the stuff out of there," did not require suppression of marijuana which police seized from the defendant's automobile after watching the defendant take the marijuana from the defendant's house and place it in the vehicle. Saylor v. State, 185 Ga. App. 634, 365 S.E.2d 493 (1988).

Effect of deception by governmental agents on amendment's protection. — Although U.S. Const., amend. 4 protects reasonable expectations of privacy, and although the use of deception by a government agent to gain access to a protected area may certainly result in an unlawful invasion of that privacy, the Constitution does not protect persons who engage in criminal transactions from the risk that those with whom they choose to do business may be government agents or informants. Shuman v. State, 155 Ga. App. 300, 271 S.E.2d 18 (1980).

Transactions of unlawful business with government agents. — If the home is converted into a commercial center to which outsiders are invited for purposes of transacting unlawful business, that business is entitled to no greater sanctity than if it were carried on in a store, a garage, a car, or on the street. A government agent, in the same manner as a private person, may accept an invitation to do business and may enter upon the premises for the very purposes contemplated by the occupant. Shuman v. State, 155 Ga. App. 300, 271 S.E.2d 18 (1980).

Business records turned over to government agents in disguise not protected. — Plaintiffs' fourth amendment right to be free from unreasonable searches and seizures was not violated when in November 1980 plaintiffs engaged a broker to arrange the sale of either of two restaurants owned by plaintiffs; the broker arranged a meeting with two persons who represented themselves as agents of a prospective purchaser; in reliance on their representations, plaintiffs made available to the persons the business records of one of plaintiffs' restaurants with the express understanding that such information was confidential; these persons were, in fact, special agents of the Criminal Investigation Division of IRS; in June 1981, based on information garnered from plaintiffs' records, the IRS obtained a search warrant from a United States magistrate, searched the premises of plaintiffs' restaurant, and seized certain business records; and in November 1982 the IRS informed plaintiffs they were under investigation for possible violations of the federal tax laws. Hiller v. Murphy, 600 F. Supp. 14 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Offensive statements by a law enforcement officer, whether they are unsupported, outright accusations of criminal activity or suggestions that an innocent person would be willing to relinquish constitutional rights, are not irrelevant to a police-citizen encounter analysis. United States v. Setzer, 654 F.2d 354 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1041, 103 S. Ct. 457, 74 L. Ed. 2d 609 (1982).

No fourth amendment violation merely because informant obtained information by trespassing. — Defendant's fourth amendment rights were not violated because the informant obtained defendant's information by trespassing on defendant's property. Mosley v. State, 180 Ga. App. 30, 348 S.E.2d 555 (1986).

Protection against subpoena too sweeping in its terms. — U.S. Const., amend. 4 provides protection against grand jury subpoena duces tecum too sweeping in its terms to be regarded as reasonable. Morris v. State, 246 Ga. 510, 272 S.E.2d 254 (1980).

Grand jury subpoena. — U.S. Const., amend. 4 does not require any preliminary showing for issuance of grand jury subpoena, either to compel testimony or to compel production of voice or handwriting exemplars. United States v. McLean, 565 F.2d 318 (5th Cir. 1977).

Subpoena duces tecum issued to obtain records is subject to no more stringent fourth amendment requirements than is the ordinary subpoena. United States v. Miller, 425 U.S. 435, 96 S. Ct. 1619, 48 L. Ed. 2d 71 (1976) (decided prior to passage of Right to Financial Privacy Act, 12 U.S.C. § 3401 et seq.).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Issuance of subpoena to third party to obtain records of that party does not violate the rights of a defendant, even if a criminal prosecution is contemplated at the time the subpoena is issued. United States v. Miller, 425 U.S. 435, 96 S. Ct. 1619, 48 L. Ed. 2d 71 (1976) (decided prior to passage of Right to Financial Privacy Act, 12 U.S.C. § 3401 et seq.).

Administrative searches are governmental action and fall within protection of U.S. Const., amend. 4. Braddock v. State, 127 Ga. App. 513, 194 S.E.2d 317 (1972).

Fourth amendment claims should not be used to prevent investigative institutions from determining whether there is cause to believe that violations of the law have occurred. Kelley v. Godbout, 379 F. Supp. 532 (N.D. Ga. 1974); FTC v. Page, 378 F. Supp. 1052 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

There was no constitutional offense in a state revenue agent and local law enforcement officers coordinating and consolidating their efforts to enforce O.C.G.A. § 3-2-31 which authorizes such cooperation to conduct an administrative search for violations of the Georgia Alcoholic Beverage Code in conjunction with executing arrest warrants for previously observed violations of these laws. Crosby v. Paulk, 187 F.3d 1339 (11th Cir. 1999).

Civil procedure for recovery of debts. — U.S. Const., amend. 4 has no reference to civil procedure for the recovery of debts. Jernigan v. Economy Exterminating Co., 327 F. Supp. 24 (N.D. Ga. 1971), appeal dismissed, 407 U.S. 934, 92 S. Ct. 2474, 32 L. Ed. 2d 818 (1972).

Miranda warnings in no way inform a person of that person's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 4, including that person's right to be released from unlawful custody following an arrest without a warrant or without probable cause. In order for the causal chain, between the illegal arrest and the statements made subsequent thereto, to be broken, requires not merely that the statement meet the standard of U.S. Const., amend. 5 of voluntariness but that it be sufficiently an act of free will to purge the primary taint. Consideration of a statement's admissibility must be made in light of the distinct policies and interests of U.S. Const., amend. 4. Hill v. State, 140 Ga. App. 121, 230 S.E.2d 336 (1976).

Fourth amendment rights are generally inapplicable to an action by a foreign sovereign in its own territory in enforcing its own laws, even though American officials are present and cooperate in some degree. Before U.S. Const., amend. 4 applies, the participation of federal agents must be so substantial as to convert the search into a joint venture. United States v. Rosenthal, 793 F.2d 1214 (11th Cir. 1986), cert. denied, 480 U.S. 919, 107 S. Ct. 1377, 94 L. Ed. 2d 692 (1987).

Evidence obtained by foreign police officers from searches carried out in their countries is generally admissible in American courts regardless of whether the search complied with U.S. Const., amend. 4. United States v. Rosenthal, 793 F.2d 1214 (11th Cir. 1986), cert. denied, 480 U.S. 919, 107 S. Ct. 1377, 94 L. Ed. 2d 692 (1987).

Evidence obtained by foreign police officers from searches conducted in their countries may be excluded if the conduct of the foreign officers shocks the conscience of the American court. United States v. Rosenthal, 793 F.2d 1214 (11th Cir. 1986), cert. denied, 480 U.S. 919, 107 S. Ct. 1377, 94 L. Ed. 2d 692 (1987).

Invocation of one's constitutional rights gives rise to no inference that criminal activity is afoot. United States v. Setzer, 654 F.2d 354 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1041, 103 S. Ct. 457, 74 L. Ed. 2d 609 (1982).

Initial stages of contact between police officer and citizen are not to be isolated from scrutiny of U.S. Const., amend. 4. United States v. Gazaway, 297 F. Supp. 67 (N.D. Ga. 1969).

Although the defendant was merely approached while voluntarily stopped in a parking lot and, only after defendant started behaving in a furtive or bizarre manner, did another officer draw a gun and issue a command, the trial court's denial of a motion to suppress was supported by the evidence and was not clearly erroneous. Molaro v. State, 236 Ga. App. 35, 510 S.E.2d 886 (1999).

Decision whether U.S. Const., amend. 4 is implicated by particular police-citizen contact is legal conclusion to be based on the facts appearing on the record. United States

v. Berd, 634 F.2d 979 (5th Cir. 1981).

Unless the delay is unreasonable, the police may wait and delay search and seizure in hope of increasing the quantum of evidence which they can present to the magistrate to obtain a warrant. Hall v. State, 176 Ga. App. 428, 336 S.E.2d 291 (1985).

Pretrial detainees. — Whether a pretrial detainee may press a claim of excessive force under the fourth amendment remains open. It is clear, however, that the due process clause protects a pretrial detainee from the use of excessive force that amounts to punishment. Wright v. Whiddon, 951 F.2d 297 (11th Cir. 1992).

If the search of a pretrial detainee's cell is instigated or conducted by the prosecution solely for the purpose of uncovering incriminating evidence which could be used against the detainee at trial, rather than out of concern for any legitimate prison objectives, the detainee retains a limited but legitimate expectation of privacy that the detainee would be protected in such circumstances from an unreasonable search. State v. Henderson, 271 Ga. 264, 517 S.E.2d 61 (1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1083, 120 S. Ct. 807, 145 L. Ed. 2d 680 (2000).

Rights may not be waived as condition of probation. — Defendant's contention that the trial court erred in imposing a waiver of defendant's fourth amendment rights was correct in that a waiver of defendant's fourth amendment rights should not have been imposed absent a negotiated plea or waiver of such right. However, any error that might have taken place at sentencing was harmless as no warrantless search had taken place in assertion of defendant's fourth amendment waiver. Furthermore, the court will not presume that any search that might take place in the future under the authority of a probation officer will be unreasonable. Millsap v. State, 261 Ga. App. 427, 582 S.E.2d 568 (2003).

Waiver of fourth amendment rights constitutional. — Investigators and the officers did not violate a defendant's rights when investigating information that the defendant was still involved in drug activity; because the defendant, while free on bond for drug offenses, waived the rights U.S. Const., amend. 4 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII as a bond condition, the waiver was constitutional under U.S. Const., amend. 8 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII. Rocco v. State, 267 Ga. App. 900, 601 S.E.2d 189 (2004).

Defendant waived fourth amendment rights through plea bargaining process, because the defendant agreed to a special condition of probation in the sentence which provided that the defendant would "waive all Fourth Amendment rights and submit to random searches" Allen v. State, 258 Ga. 424, 369 S.E.2d 909 (1988).

Probationers. — Right to be free from unreasonable searches and seizures extends to all persons, including probationers. A defendant's status as a probationer, however, is a factor to be considered in determining whether a search and seizure by a probation officer is unreasonable. Hunter v. State, 139 Ga. App. 676, 229 S.E.2d 505 (1976).

Right to be free from unreasonable searches and seizures extends to all persons, including probationers. A defendant's status as a probationer, however, is a factor to be considered in determining whether a search and seizure by a probation officer is unreasonable. Austin v. State, 148 Ga. App. 784, 252 S.E.2d 696 (1979).

Right to be free from unreasonable searches and seizures extends to all persons, including probationers. Adams v. State, 153 Ga. App. 41, 264 S.E.2d 532 (1980); Owens v. Kelley, 681 F.2d 1362 (11th Cir. 1982).

Search by probation officer. — The search by a probation officer is reasonable if, under all the circumstances, it is actuated by the legitimate operation of the probation supervision process and the probation officer acts reasonably in performing those duties. Hunter v. State, 139 Ga. App. 676, 229 S.E.2d 505 (1976); Austin v. State, 148 Ga. App. 784, 252 S.E.2d 696 (1979).

Revocation of probation based on illegally seized evidence. — A defendant's probation may not be revoked on the basis of illegally seized evidence. Furthermore, a probation revocation hearing, however, is not a criminal trial, and the same rules of procedure do not apply. Austin v. State, 148 Ga. App. 784, 252 S.E.2d 696 (1979).

Probation condition permitting warrantless searches. — A probationer's fourth amendment right to be free from unreasonable searches and seizures is not violated by a condition of probation that permits warrantless searches of the probationer's person and property by probation supervisors and law enforcement officers. Owens v. Kelley, 681 F.2d 1362 (11th Cir. 1982).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Probation condition allowing law enforcement officers to make warrantless searches without "reasonable cause" is not violative of fourth amendment. Owens v. Kelley, 681 F.2d 1362 (11th Cir. 1982).

For probation conditions to be free of intrusion on constitutionally protected freedoms, the conditions must be "reasonably related" to the purposes of the Federal Probation Act (18 U.S.C. § 3651). Consideration of three factors is required to determine whether a reasonable relationship exists: (1) the purposes sought to be served by probation; (2) the extent to which constitutional rights enjoyed by law-abiding citizens should be accorded to probationers; and (3) the legitimate needs of law enforcement. Owens v. Kelley, 681 F.2d 1362 (11th Cir. 1982).

Any search conducted pursuant to the search condition of probation must be carried out in a reasonable manner and only in furtherance of the purposes of probation. Owens v. Kelley, 681 F.2d 1362 (11th Cir. 1982).

While a probationer's consent to search may relax the fourth amendment standard for a search of the probationer, probationer does not waive all fourth amendment rights by agreeing to submit to a search at the request of a probation or law enforcement officer. Thus, a probationer did not relinquish fourth amendment rights by consenting to the conditions of probationer's probation. Anderson v. State, 209 Ga. App. 676, 434 S.E.2d 122 (1993).

The waiver of defendant's fourth amendment rights as a condition of probation was not valid because defendant did not give it as part of the plea bargain agreement, and defendant was not given the option to consider whether prison was an acceptable alternative in light of this condition of probation. Fox v. State, 272 Ga. 163, 527 S.E.2d 847 (2000).

Whether defendant agreed to waive fourth amendment rights as a condition of probation was a factor properly considered by the trial court in its decision to impose probation or imprisonment. Because the record shows defendant conferred with counsel and consented to the waiver, it was a valid condition of the probation. Shannon v. State, 258 Ga. App. 689, 574 S.E.2d 889 (2002).

Officers' reliance on a search authorization appearing in defendant's spouse's probation order was justified, where the search of the marital residence was actuated by the legitimate operation of the probation supervision process rather than by some other, more nefarious motive. Luke v. State, 178 Ga. App. 614, 344 S.E.2d 452 (1986).

Prisoners. — The ruling in Hudson v. Palmer, 468 U.S. 517, 104 S. Ct. 3194, 82 L. Ed. 2d 393 (1984), making U.S. Const., amend. 4 inapplicable to searches of convicted prisoners' cells, reflects the proper interpretation of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII. State v. Henderson, 271 Ga. 264, 517 S.E.2d 61 (1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1083, 120 S. Ct. 807, 145 L. Ed. 2d 680 (2000).

Warrantless search of a county jail inmate's rectal cavity, from which a balloon containing marijuana was removed, violated the inmate's fourth amendment right to be free from unreasonable searches and seizures, where the state failed to establish any legitimate penological necessity for the degree of the intrusion employed in conducting the search. McCullough v. State, 177 Ga. App. 741, 341 S.E.2d 241 (1986).

Right to wear one's hair as one sees fit, has not been found to be within the periphery of any of the specific constitutional rights. Ashley v. City of Macon, 377 F. Supp. 540 (M.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 505 F.2d 868 (5th Cir. 1975).

Searches of students directed to end of providing students a safe and secure environment are reasonable under U.S. Const., amend. 4 on considerably less than probable cause. State v. Young, 234 Ga. 488, 216 S.E.2d 586 (1975).

Recovering stolen property by victim of theft. — A trial court is fully authorized to conclude, even assuming that a defendant's spouse's invitation is not extended freely and voluntarily, that a victim of theft is motivated by the victim's own personal interest in recovering the victim's property when the victim enters the house and identifies property as the victim's, since the victim is not acting on behalf of law enforcement authorities and, consequently, no violation of U.S. Const., amend. 4 results. Carroll v. State, 147 Ga. App. 332, 248 S.E.2d 702 (1978).

Person's presence at suspect place. — A citizen does not, by mere presence at a suspect place, lose the constitutional right from unreasonable search of one's person and property to which one otherwise would be entitled. Collins v. State, 187 Ga. App. 430, 370 S.E.2d 648 (1988).

Attempts to locate missing persons by means of knocking on outer doors. — When police respond to requests to locate missing persons by entering private property only to the extent of knocking on outer doors, U.S. Const., amend. 4 has not been violated. Gilreath v. State, 247 Ga. 814, 279 S.E.2d 650 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 984, 102 S. Ct. 2258, 72 L. Ed. 2d 862 (1982).

Stopping vessel in open waters. — Law enforcement officers, having developed reasonable suspicion of illegal activity, could then identify themselves by whatever means were appropriate under the circumstances, such as stopping a vessel in open waters. United States v. Albano, 722 F.2d 690 (11th Cir. 1984).

No federal question in action by dismissed federal employee. — Where plaintiff, a dismissed federal employee, asserted various fourth, fifth, and sixth amendment claims against the plaintiff's superiors under the Bivens theory (see Bivens v. Six Unknown Narcotics Agents, 403 U.S. 388, 91 S. Ct. 1999, 29 L. Ed. 2d 619 (1971)), court found no federal question because Congress had established elaborate remedial scheme for dismissed federal employees. Metz v. McKinley, 583 F. Supp. 683 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd, 747 F.2d 709 (11th Cir. 1984).

It is often necessary for the police to approach a person with a drawn weapon in a suspiciously dangerous situation in order to protect the physical well-being of both police officers and the public. Franklin v. State, 143 Ga. App. 3, 237 S.E.2d 425 (1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 950, 98 S. Ct. 1575, 55 L. Ed. 2d 799 (1978).

Appropriate enforcement of IRS summons. — The enforcement of a summons by the IRS, requiring a taxpayer to testify and to produce certain designated records, did not violate U.S. Const., amend. 4, as the government made a preliminary showing that the summons was issued for a legitimate purpose, that the information sought was relevant to that purpose and not already in the commissioner's possession and that the appropriate administrative steps were followed. United States v. Reis, 765 F.2d 1094 (11th Cir. 1985).

View through garage window by police officer of defendant's activities did not violate defendant's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 4. United States v. Crane, 445 F.2d 509 (5th Cir. 1971).

Information revealed to third party. — U.S. Const., amend. 4 does not prohibit the obtaining of information revealed to a third party and conveyed by the third party to government authorities, even if the information is revealed on the assumption that it will be used only for a limited purpose and the confidence placed in the third party will not be betrayed. United States v. Miller, 425 U.S. 435, 96 S. Ct. 1619, 48 L. Ed. 2d 71 (1976) (decided prior to passage of Right to Financial Privacy Act, 12 U.S.C. § 3401 et seq.).

Distributing photo of student with sexual organ exposed not constitutional deprivation. — The conduct of school officials in participating in the distribution of a photograph of a student in which the student's sexual organ was accidentally exposed, and their refusal to halt distribution of the photograph, while deplorable, reprehensible, and insensitive, was not a constitutional deprivation. Carroll v. Parks, 755 F.2d 1455 (11th Cir. 1985).

Effect of failure to give defendant inventory of seized articles. — The failure to give a defendant an inventory of the articles obtained by a search and seizure does not void the search and seizure. Merrill v. State, 130 Ga. App. 745, 204 S.E.2d 632 (1974).

There is no constitutional right to bond pending appeal, but once a state undertakes to establish a system for prisoners to be released on bail pending appeal, it must not violate equal protection or due process guarantees. Browning v. State, 254 Ga. 478, 330 S.E.2d 879 (1985).

Cited in Thompson v. United States, 44 F.2d 165 (5th Cir. 1930); Schroder v. United States, 53 F.2d 6 (5th Cir. 1931); City of Newnan v. Atlanta Laundries, Inc., 174 Ga. 99, 162 S.E. 497 (1932); Thompson v. State, 174 Ga. 804, 164 S.E. 202 (1932); Turner v. State, 176 Ga. 823, 169 S.E. 21 (1933); Parks v. United States, 76 F.2d 709 (5th Cir. 1935);

General Consideration (Cont'd)

- McIntyre v. State, 190 Ga. 872, 11 S.E.2d 5 (1940); Turner v. Camp, 123 F.2d 840 (5th Cir. 1941); Davis v. United States, 138 F.2d 406 (5th Cir. 1943); United States v. One 1936 Model Ford Coach Auto., 58 F. Supp. 802 (M.D. Ga. 1944); Cannon v. United States, 166 F.2d 85 (5th Cir. 1948); United States v. Lynch, 94 F. Supp. 1011 (N.D. Ga. 1950); Walker v. Whittle, 83 Ga. App. 445, 64 S.E.2d 87 (1951); Notis v. State, 84 Ga. App. 199, 65 S.E.2d 622 (1951); Sideh v. State, 91 Ga. App. 387, 85 S.E.2d 610 (1955); United States v. 342.81 Acres of Land, 134 F. Supp. 430 (N.D. Ga. 1955); Carter v. United States, 231 F.2d 232 (5th Cir. 1956); Gregory v. United States, 237 F.2d 727 (5th Cir. 1956); Deloach v. Rogers, 268 F.2d 928 (5th Cir. 1959); Carnes v. United States, 295 F.2d 598 (5th Cir. 1961); Pistor v. State, 219 Ga. 161, 132 S.E.2d 183 (1963); Pugh v. State, 219 Ga. 166, 132 S.E.2d 203 (1963); Green v. State, 110 Ga. App. 346, 138 S.E.2d 589 (1964); Chester v. Ross, 231 F. Supp. 23 (N.D. Ga. 1964); Paige v. Potts, 354 F.2d 212 (5th Cir. 1965); Roach v. State, 221 Ga. 783, 147 S.E.2d 299 (1966); Ellenburg v. State, 113 Ga. App. 585, 149 S.E.2d 173 (1966); Nicholson v. United States, 355 F.2d 80 (5th Cir. 1966); Carmichael v. Allen, 267 F. Supp. 985 (N.D. Ga. 1966); Gilmore v. State, 117 Ga. App. 67, 159 S.E.2d 474 (1967); Hurst v. United States, 370 F.2d 161 (5th Cir. 1967); Weaver v. United States, 374 F.2d 878 (5th Cir. 1967); Harris v. United States, 389 F.2d 727 (5th Cir. 1968); Handsford v. United States, 390 F.2d 373 (5th Cir. 1968); Whippler v. Dutton, 391 F.2d 425 (5th Cir. 1968); Peters v. Rutledge, 397 F.2d 731 (5th Cir. 1968); Carroway v. Stynchcombe, 225 Ga. 586, 170 S.E.2d 396 (1969); Henderson v. United States, 405 F.2d 874 (5th Cir. 1968); Handsford v. United States, 410 F.2d 733 (5th Cir. 1969); Cagle v. Scroggins, 410 F.2d 741 (5th Cir. 1969); Cato v. Georgia, 302 F. Supp. 1143 (N.D. Ga. 1969); Cook v. Smith, 427 F.2d 1172 (5th Cir. 1970); Huftstetler v. Davies, 309 F. Supp. 1372 (N.D. Ga. 1970); Dudley v. State, 228 Ga. 551, 186 S.E.2d 875 (1972); Fryer v. Stynchcombe, 228 Ga. 576, 186 S.E.2d 885 (1972); United States v. Dyson, 469 F.2d 735 (5th Cir. 1972); Jones v. Bales, 58 F.R.D. 453 (N.D. Ga. 1972); Underhill v. State, 129 Ga. App. 65, 198 S.E.2d 703 (1973); Currington v. State, 129 Ga. App. 161, 199 S.E.2d 268 (1973); Allison v. State, 129 Ga. App. 364, 199 S.E.2d 587 (1973); Strong v. State, 231 Ga. 514, 202 S.E.2d 428 (1973); Moore v. State, 130 Ga. App. 184, 202 S.E.2d 555 (1973); Jones v. Georgia, 475 F.2d 1141 (5th Cir. 1973); United States v. Best, 363 F. Supp. 11 (S.D. Ga. 1973); Wynn v. Caldwell, 231 Ga. 763, 204 S.E.2d 143 (1974); Bradley v. State, 131 Ga. App. 271, 205 S.E.2d 463 (1974); Granese v. State, 232 Ga. 193, 206 S.E.2d 26 (1974); Walter v. State, 131 Ga. App. 667, 206 S.E.2d 662 (1974); Lowe v. Hopper, 501 F.2d 952 (5th Cir. 1974); Jones v. Ault, 67 F.R.D. 124 (S.D. Ga. 1974); Phillips v. State, 233 Ga. 800, 213 S.E.2d 664 (1975); Cross v. State, 233 Ga. 960, 214 S.E.2d 374 (1975); Johnson v. Wright, 509 F.2d 828 (5th Cir. 1975); United States v. Ransom, 515 F.2d 885 (5th Cir. 1975); Calley v. Callaway, 519 F.2d 184 (5th Cir. 1975); Ward v. State, 137 Ga. App. 462, 224 S.E.2d 96 (1976); LaRue v. State, 137 Ga. App. 762, 224 S.E.2d 837 (1976); Lawson v. State, 236 Ga. 770, 225 S.E.2d 258 (1976); Garrett v. Department of Pub. Safety, 237 Ga. 413, 228 S.E.2d 812 (1976); United States v. Boyd, 530 F.2d 1269 (5th Cir. 1976); United States v. Bagley, 537 F.2d 162 (5th Cir. 1976); Nelson v. Rosenthal, 539 F.2d 1034 (5th Cir. 1976); State v. Robinson, 142 Ga. App. 705, 237 S.E.2d 1 (1977); Williams v. State, 143 Ga. App. 210, 237 S.E.2d 693 (1977); Birge v. State, 143 Ga. App. 632, 239 S.E.2d 395 (1977); Seabolt v. Hopper, 240 Ga. 171, 240 S.E.2d 57 (1977); United States v. Puckett, 551 F.2d 59 (5th Cir. 1977); Highland v. State, 144 Ga. App. 594, 241 S.E.2d 477 (1978); State v. Andrews, 240 Ga. 531, 242 S.E.2d 153 (1978); Simpson v. State, 144 Ga. App. 657, 242 S.E.2d 265 (1978); Underwood v. State, 144 Ga. App. 684, 242 S.E.2d 339 (1978); State v. Bass, 144 Ga. App. 834, 243 S.E.2d 87 (1978); Lester v. State, 145 Ga. App. 847, 244 S.E.2d 880 (1978); State v. Trippe, 146 Ga. App. 210, 246 S.E.2d 122 (1978); State v. McNutt, 146 Ga. App. 369, 246 S.E.2d 402 (1978); McCarty v. State, 146 Ga. App. 389, 246 S.E.2d 416 (1978); Key v. State, 146 Ga. App. 536, 246 S.E.2d 723 (1978); Contreras v. State, 242 Ga. 369, 249 S.E.2d 56 (1978); Morrow v. State, 147 Ga. App. 395, 249 S.E.2d 110 (1978); Souder v. State, 147 Ga. App. 431, 249 S.E.2d 146 (1978); Stephenson Enters., Inc. v. Marshall, 578 F.2d 1021 (5th Cir. 1978); High Oil Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 456 F. Supp. 1035 (N.D. Ga. 1978); United States v. Axtman, 589 F.2d 196 (5th Cir. 1979); Doe v. Busbee, 471 F. Supp. 1326 (N.D. Ga. 1979); Playmate Cinema, Inc. v. State, 154 Ga. App. 871, 269 S.E.2d 883 (1980); Davis v. State, 155 Ga. App. 146, 270 S.E.2d 343 (1980); Speight v. Whiddon, 516 F. Supp. 905 (M.D. Ga. 1980); Harris v. State, 157 Ga. App. 367, 278 S.E.2d 52 (1981); Gaylor v. State, 247 Ga. 759, 279 S.E.2d 207 (1981); Wood v. State, 159 Ga. App. 221, 283 S.E.2d 79 (1981); Thompson v. State, 248 Ga. 343, 285 S.E.2d 685 (1981); Littles v. DeFrancis, 517 F. Supp. 1137 (M.D. Ga. 1981); Zant v. Prevatte, 248 Ga. 832, 286 S.E.2d 715 (1982); Bradshaw v. State, 163 Ga. App. 819, 296 S.E.2d 119 (1982); Armstrong v. Mayor of Savannah, 250 Ga. 121, 296 S.E.2d 690 (1982); Ellis v. State, 164 Ga. App. 366, 296 S.E.2d 726 (1982); Staton v. State, 164 Ga. App. 464, 297 S.E.2d 375 (1982); LoGiudice v. State, 164 Ga. App. 709, 297 S.E.2d 499 (1982); Rasnake v. State, 164 Ga. App. 765, 298 S.E.2d 42 (1982); Green v. State, 250 Ga. 610, 299 S.E.2d 544 (1983); State v. Chumley, 164 Ga. App. 828, 299 S.E.2d 564 (1982); Baranan v. Fulton County, 250 Ga. 531, 299 S.E.2d 722 (1983); Lang v. State, 168 Ga. App. 693, 300 S.E.2d 220 (1983); Karlovich v. State, 165 Ga. App. 761, 302 S.E.2d 396 (1983); Matthews v. State, 167 Ga. App. 28, 305 S.E.2d 846 (1983); Palmer v. State, 167 Ga. App. 705, 307 S.E.2d 275 (1983); Chester v. State, 168 Ga. App. 618, 309 S.E.2d 897 (1983); Williams v. State, 251 Ga. 749, 312 S.E.2d 40 (1983); United States v. Fazio, 706 F.2d 1115 (11th Cir. 1983); Corn v. Zant, 708 F.2d 549 (11th Cir. 1983); Moore v. Zant, 722 F.2d 640 (11th Cir. 1983); Stone Mt. Game Ranch, Inc. v. Hunt, 570 F. Supp. 238 (N.D. Ga. 1983); Scott v. State, 253 Ga. 147, 317 S.E.2d 830 (1984); State v. Turntime, 170 Ga. App. 740, 318 S.E.2d 157 (1984); United States v. Snowden, 735 F.2d 1310 (11th Cir. 1984); Gilmere v. City of Atlanta, 737 F.2d 894 (11th Cir. 1984); United States v. Haley, 743 F.2d 862 (11th Cir. 1984); United States v. Carpenter, 611 F. Supp. 768 (N.D. Ga. 1985); Goodman v. State, 255 Ga. 226, 336 S.E.2d 757 (1985); Nixon v. State, 256 Ga. 261, 347 S.E.2d 592 (1986); Bell v. State, 179 Ga. App. 790, 347 S.E.2d 725 (1986); Shaw v. State, 179 Ga. App. 807, 348 S.E.2d 132 (1986);

Hunt v. State, 180 Ga. App. 103, 348 S.E.2d 467 (1986); Alewine v. State, 180 Ga. App. 679, 350 S.E.2d 46 (1986); Watson v. State, 181 Ga. App. 512, 352 S.E.2d 828 (1987); United States v. One 1984 Chevrolet Truck, 682 F. Supp. 1221 (N.D. Ga. 1988); Herren v. Bowyer, 850 F.2d 1543 (11th Cir. 1988); Clark v. State, 189 Ga. App. 124, 375 S.E.2d 783 (1988); Exposito v. State, 191 Ga. App. 761, 382 S.E.2d 412 (1989); Newsome v. State, 189 Ga. App. 329, 386 S.E.2d 887 (1989); Greenwood v. State, 203 Ga. App. 901, 418 S.E.2d 160 (1992); Lowe v. Aldridge, 958 F.2d 1565 (11th Cir. 1992); Hancock v. Hobbs, 967 F.2d 462 (11th Cir. 1992); Felts v. State, 207 Ga. App. 31, 427 S.E.2d 25 (1993); Campbell v. State, 207 Ga. App. 366, 428 S.E.2d 111 (1993); Smith v. Deering, 880 F. Supp. 816 (S.D. Ga. 1994); Strickland v. Linahan, 72 F.3d 1531 (11th Cir. 1996); Miller v. State, 221 Ga. App. 494, 471 S.E.2d 565 (1996); Taylor v. State, 230 Ga. App. 749, 498 S.E.2d 113 (1998); Buchnowski v. State, 233 Ga. App. 766, 505 S.E.2d 263 (1998); Willis v. State, 234 Ga. App. 135, 505 S.E.2d 570 (1998); In re B.C.G., 235 Ga. App. 1, 508 S.E.2d 239 (1998); Edgell v. State, 253 Ga. App. 775, 560 S.E.2d 532 (2002); Binkley v. State, 255 Ga. App. 313, 566 S.E.2d 31 (2002); State v. Simmons, 255 Ga. App. 336, 565 S.E.2d 549 (2002); State v. Rocco, 255 Ga. App. 565, 566 S.E.2d 365 (2002).

Expectation of Privacy

Privacy standard for testing fourth amendment violations contains a two-fold requirement: first, that a person has exhibited an actual subjective expectation of privacy; and second, that the expectation be one that society is prepared to recognize as reasonable. United States v. Michael, 622 F.2d 744 (5th Cir. 1980), rev'd on other grounds, 645 F.2d 252, (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 950, 102 S. Ct. 489, 70 L. Ed. 2d 257 (1981).

A fourth amendment violation occurs only if a defendant manifests a subjective expectation of privacy in a class of property protected by U.S. Const., amend. 4 that society accepts as objectively reasonable. Perry v. State, 204 Ga. App. 643, 419 S.E.2d 922 (1992).

Reasonable expectation of privacy protected. — U.S. Const., amend. 4 protects individuals from violations of their legiti-mate or reasonable expectations of privacy. United States v. Michael, 645 F.2d 252 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 950, 102 S. Ct. 489, 70 L. Ed. 2d 257 (1981).

Expectation of Privacy (Cont'd)

Fourth amendment protection is primarily directed to one's own home, person, papers, and effects, and to one's own reasonable expectation of privacy. Dunbar v. State, 163 Ga. App. 243, 292 S.E.2d 897 (1982).

Protected expectations of privacy must be reasonable. Giddens v. State, 156 Ga. App. 258, 274 S.E.2d 595 (1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 1026, 101 S. Ct. 1733, 68 L. Ed. 2d 220 (1981).

Legitimate expectation of privacy must exist. — An illegal search violates rights under U.S. Const., amend. 4 only of those persons who have a legitimate expectation of privacy in the invaded place. Steagald v. United States, 451 U.S. 204, 101 S. Ct. 1642, 68 L. Ed. 2d 38 (1981).

As defendant claimed no ownership interest in a backpack that was seized from the defendant's friend's apartment and which contained materials for a methamphetamine manufacturing lab, the defendant had no reasonable expectation of privacy and could not assert that denial of suppression of the contents thereof was error. Lough v. State, 276 Ga. App. 495, 623 S.E.2d 688 (2005).

Standing. — If the owner of an automobile relinquishes actual possession to a third party, the owner thereby abandons any expectation of privacy in the automobile, and owner therefore lacks standing to contest the legality of the search and seizure of the vehicle. Gresham v. State, 204 Ga. App. 540, 420 S.E.2d 71 (1992).

Persons aggrieved by a purportedly illegal search solely through the introduction of evidence seized from a third person's premises or property lack standing to assert a fourth amendment violation. Duque v. State, 228 Ga. App. 391, 491 S.E.2d 841 (1997).

Because the defendant did not have any ownership interest, possessory interest or expectation of privacy in a passenger's purse, the trial court erred in granting the defendant's motion to suppress evidence found in the purse as to charges pending against the defendant. State v. Harris, 236 Ga. App. 525, 513 S.E.2d 1 (1999).

Defendant, as a mere passenger who did not assert an interest in either the driver's car or the property found in it, lacked standing to object to a search of the car. State v. Saia, 249 Ga. App. 69, 547 S.E.2d 407 (2001).

Property law analysis replaced by privacy analysis. — Analysis of search and seizure cases in terms of property law has now been replaced by reasonable expectation of privacy analysis. United States v. Michael, 645 F.2d 252 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 950, 102 S. Ct. 489, 70 L. Ed. 2d 257 (1981).

Capacity to claim protection of U.S. Const., amend. 4 depends not upon property right in the invaded place but upon whether the person who claims the protection of the fourth amendment has a legitimate expectation of privacy in the invaded place. Cuevas v. State, 151 Ga. App. 605, 260 S.E.2d 737 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 943, 100 S. Ct. 1338, 63 L. Ed. 2d 776 (1980); Bunn v. State, 153 Ga. App. 270, 265 S.E.2d 88 (1980).

What a person knowingly exposes to public is not subject of fourth amendment protection. United States v. Miller, 425 U.S. 435, 96 S. Ct. 1619, 48 L. Ed. 2d 71 (1976) (decided prior to passage of Right to Financial Privacy Act, 12 U.S.C. § 3401 et seq.); United States v. Gaultney, 581 F.2d 1137 (5th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 446 U.S. 907, 100 S. Ct. 1833, 64 L. Ed. 2d 259 (1980).

Loss of government's right to challenge expectation of privacy. — The government, through its assertions, concessions, and acquiescence, may lose its right to challenge the petitioner's assertion that the petitioner possessed a legitimate expectation of privacy in a searched home. Steagald v. United States, 451 U.S. 204, 101 S. Ct. 1642, 68 L. Ed. 2d 38 (1981).

Wrongdoer's expectation of privacy regarding confidence. — U.S. Const., amend. 4 affords no protection to a wrongdoer's misplaced belief that person to whom the wrongdoer voluntarily confides the wrongdoing will not reveal it. Goodwin v. State, 154 Ga. App. 46, 267 S.E.2d 488 (1980).

Conversations with accomplice. — Whether the conversation be face-to-face, or via telephone, expectations of privacy of defendant's accomplice are the same. The accomplice has no right under U.S. Const., amend. 4 to silence detectives or to exclude recordings of conversations the accomplice had with them and which they could relate in their testimony. Thornton v. State, 139 Ga. App. 483, 228 S.E.2d 919 (1976).

However strongly defendant may trust apparent colleague, the defendant's expectations in this respect are not protected by U.S. Const., amend. 4 when it turns out that the colleague is a government agent regularly communicating with the authorities. For constitutional purposes, no different result is required if the agent, instead of immediately reporting and transcribing the conversations with defendant, either: (1) simultaneously records them with electronic equipment which the agent is carrying on the agent's person; or (2) carries radio equipment which simultaneously transmits the conversations either to recording equipment located elsewhere or to other agents monitoring the transmitting frequency. Thornton v. State, 139 Ga. App. 483, 228 S.E.2d 919 (1976).

Defendant conducting illegal activity in sister's apartment. — Defendant's sibling, who was lessee of an apartment, could consent to a search of the entire apartment, including the bedroom where the defendant's brother was staying, and defendant had no legitimate or reasonable expectation of privacy in conducting criminal business in the sibling's home. Ford v. State, 214 Ga. App. 284, 447 S.E.2d 334 (1994).

Privacy expectation as not extending to another's abode. — Although the defendant claimed that the defendant lived with the defendant's friend in the apartment searched, where illegal drugs were found, the records of the apartment complex showed that only the friend's family lived in the apartment searched and that the defendant lived in a different apartment and, therefore, the defendant had no proprietary interest nor expectation of privacy in the apartment and no standing to object to the search. Moss v. State, 171 Ga. App. 571, 320 S.E.2d 553 (1984).

Defendant lacked standing to challenge warrantless search of victim's condo where defendant's father testified that defendant lived with defendant's parents, which controverted defendant's assertion that defendant was more than a mere overnight guest at victim's condo. White v. State, 263 Ga. 94, 428 S.E.2d 789 (1993).

Privacy expectation does not extend to clothing worn by another. — Defendant did not have standing to claim a violation of the defendant's own constitutional rights in connection with the recovery of drugs in the course of a pat-down of another person and the search of defendant's jacket which was being worn by that person. Robinson v. State, 226 Ga. App. 406, 486 S.E.2d 667 (1997).

Apartment tenant who requested repair service for a plumbing leak had no reasonable expectation of privacy in the tenant's apartment to the extent it was invaded by an off-duty police officer who responded in the officer's capacity as a maintenance supervisor after being advised by another officer that there were suspected illicit activities going on at the apartment. State v. Almand, 196 Ga. App. 40, 395 S.E.2d 609 (1990).

Motel room. — Defendant who was not present in a motel room when police officers entered it and had neither a proprietary nor a possessory interest in the room could not claim a reasonable expectation of privacy in the contents of the room, with the result that the defendant had no standing to assert a fourth amendment violation. Rutherford v. State, 191 Ga. App. 505, 382 S.E.2d 205 (1989).

Lack of right of ownership or possession. — Defendant had no reasonable expectation of privacy in the premises searched, and did not assert any valid right of ownership or possession in the property seized, where the defendant did not reside on the premises, apparently was not present when the materials were seized, and did not claim any right of ownership or possession of the evidence. Boatright v. State, 192 Ga. App. 112, 385 S.E.2d 298 (1989).

Search of rubble of burned building. — Defendant, who was charged with arson after the defendant's home and office were totally consumed by a fire, had no reasonable objective expectation of privacy in the structure, and the seizure of items exhumed from openly visible ashes and rubble did not violate the defendant's fourth amendment rights. Pervis v. State, 181 Ga. App. 613, 353 S.E.2d 200 (1987).

Expectation of privacy in open field. — Defendant could not claim a legitimate expectation of privacy that the defendant's conduct in the open field would be free from observation from the easement area, as those persons granted the easement were likely to be found within that area. Perry v. State, 204 Ga. App. 643, 419 S.E.2d 922 (1992); Manley v. State, 217 Ga. App. 556, 458 S.E.2d 179 (1995).

Expectation of Privacy (Cont'd)

Open field. — Defendant had no expectation of privacy to an area behind the defendant's house where marijuana plants grew because the area was separated by trails leading away from the defendant's mowed lawn, the plants were not growing inside any structure nor were they protected from view, and many of the plants were protected by mesh wire; the warrantless seizure of the plants did not violate the fourth amendment. Smithson v. State, 280 Ga. App. 421, 634 S.E.2d 184 (2006).

Visual surveillance from airplane. — The mere fact that the person observed has an expectation of privacy is not the whole story; rather, the expectation must be reasonable. Thus, defendant has no reasonable expectation of privacy to be free from a visual surveillance from an airplane flying at lawful height over the premises where defendant is. Williams v. State, 157 Ga. App. 476, 277 S.E.2d 923, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 823, 102 S. Ct. 109, 70 L. Ed. 2d 95 (1981).

Expectation of privacy in automobile. — Expectation of privacy analysis is especially appropriate in cases which involve an individual's rights with respect to an automobile; insofar as U.S. Const., amend. 4's protection extends to a motor vehicle, it is the right to privacy that is the touchstone of the inquiry. United States v. Michael, 645 F.2d 252 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 950, 102 S. Ct. 489, 70 L. Ed. 2d 257 (1981).

Diminished expectation of privacy surrounds an automobile. United States v. Gaultney, 581 F.2d 1137 (5th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 446 U.S. 907, 100 S. Ct. 1833, 64 L. Ed. 2d 259 (1980).

Search and seizure cases involving vehicles have recognized that an individual's expectation of privacy in that individual's automobile is less than in other property. United States v. Michael, 645 F.2d 252 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 950, 102 S. Ct. 489, 70 L. Ed. 2d 257 (1981).

Expectation of privacy in police car. — The search of a police car did not offend defendant's right to be protected against unlawful search and seizure as defendant had no reasonable expectation of privacy in the back seat of a police car. Mullinax v. State, 227 Ga. App. 670, 490 S.E.2d 201 (1997).

Expectation of privacy in premises of truck. — A court would be authorized to find that the driver of a truck did not have a reasonable expectation of privacy in the premises of the truck, since the owner of the truck was riding in the truck, which contrasts with the expectation of privacy in a room maintained in another's house, where the expectation would be prima facie. Braddock v. State, 127 Ga. App. 513, 194 S.E.2d 317 (1972).

Items in automobile. — Although the expectation of privacy with respect to one's automobile is significantly less than that relating to one's home or office, an individual enjoys an expectation of privacy with respect to items secreted within the interior of the automobile. United States v. Edwards, 577 F.2d 883 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 968, 99 S. Ct. 458, 58 L. Ed. 2d 427 (1978).

Where codefendant denied any interest in the property seized from the vehicle, but testified that clothing and bedding belonging to the codefendant were contained in the van, codefendant was more than a mere passenger in the vehicle. The codefendant's position was instead analogous to that of a lessee of a rented vehicle, with the result that codefendant could legitimately claim a reasonable expectation of privacy with respect to it. State v. Diaz, 191 Ga. App. 830, 383 S.E.2d 195 (1989).

Search of automobile for contraband. — If police officers have probable cause to believe there is contraband inside an automobile that has been stopped on the road, they may conduct a warrantless search of the vehicle, even after it has been impounded and is in police custody. Gonzalez v. State, 195 Ga. App. 249, 392 S.E.2d 893 (1990).

Because a defendant was pulled over for playing the car radio too loudly in violation of city noise ordinances and the officer noted that the windshield was cracked, and because the officer confirmed by radio that the defendant's license had been suspended, there was probable cause for arrest; because of the lawful arrest and the necessity to impound the defendant's vehicle due to its unsafe condition, the officer was authorized to search the passenger compartment. Thus, the trial court properly refused to suppress evidence of contraband on the basis that it stemmed from a pretextual stop unsupported by articulable suspicion or probable cause. Freeman v. State, 195 Ga. App. 357, 393 S.E.2d 496 (1990).

Expectation of privacy in automobile or property seized. — Passengers in an automobile, who assert neither a possessory interest in the automobile searched nor an interest in the property seized, do not have a legitimate expectation of privacy in the areas of the car to be searched, and, accordingly, do not have fourth amendment rights infringed by the search and seizure. Meyer v. State, 150 Ga. App. 613, 258 S.E.2d 217 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 952, 100 S. Ct. 1602, 63 L. Ed. 2d 788 (1980).

Mere assertion of ownership in items seized does not alone lead to the conclusion that a legitimate expectation of privacy exists if defendant claims no proprietary or possessory interest in the car in which they were found and all the evidence indicates that defendant was a mere passenger in the car, and as such, had no legitimate expectation of privacy therein. Keishian v. State, 202 Ga. App. 718, 415 S.E.2d 324 (1992).

Search of spare tire cavity. — The incongruity of a worn, oddly sized spare tire from a different manufacturer than the other tires of a late model sedan provided a state trooper with probable cause to support a search of the tire cavity, even though the defendant's consent to a search did not include permission to slash the spare tire to investigate its contents. United States v. Strickland, 902 F.2d 937 (11th Cir. 1990).

Mere possessor-driver of stolen automobile in operation on public highway has no legitimate expectation of privacy in a vehicle identification number observable through the windshield. United States v. Pitts, 588 F.2d 102 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 948, 99 S. Ct. 2171, 60 L. Ed. 2d 1051 (1979).

An unauthorized driver of a rental vehicle did not have a reasonable expectation of privacy after the driver was placed under arrest and acquiesced in the impoundment of the vehicle. Hall v. State, 223 Ga. App. 211, 477 S.E.2d 364 (1996).

Where appellants abandoned item before item was seized, the appellant's forfeited any expectation of privacy in it. United States v.

Berd, 634 F.2d 979 (5th Cir. 1981).

Possession of drugs not protected. — The right of privacy does not embrace the right to possess dangerous drugs. Blincoe v. State, 231 Ga. 886, 204 S.E.2d 597 (1974).

Expectation of privacy as not extending to drugs in codefendant's immediate possession. — The defendant, though acting jointly with another to conceal cocaine on that other person, did not share with that other person a legitimate expectation of privacy, because the defendant could not have asserted control over that other person and could not have excluded access to the other person, and, hence, did not have the requisite standing to contest the legality of the search and seizure of the contraband. United States v. Brown, 743 F.2d 1505 (11th Cir. 1984).

Contents of luggage. — An individual has a reasonable expectation of privacy as to the contents of the individual's luggage and that these contents will not be exposed absent consent or a legally acquired search warrant. Pullano v. State, 169 Ga. App. 377, 312 S.E.2d 857 (1983).

Abandoned luggage. — Deplaned airline passenger abandoned any rights passenger may have had in bag prior to its search, where passenger disclaimed the bag, refused to pick it up after officers requested that passenger select passenger's bag, and stood silent while co-defendant claimed ownership of the bag and while it was searched. Orman v. State, 207 Ga. App. 671, 428 S.E.2d 813 (1993).

Closed refrigerator. — A police officer's opening the door of an operating, closed refrigerator in a storage unit, after having been called to investigate vandalism and possible burglary, did not rise to the level of emergency involving immediate threats to life or limb, and the warrantless search of the refrigerator was not justified. State v. Gallup, 236 Ga. App. 321, 512 S.E.2d 66 (1999).

Bank records. — There is no legitimate expectation of privacy concerning the information kept in bank records. United States v. Miller, 425 U.S. 435, 96 S. Ct. 1619, 48 L. Ed. 2d 71 (1976) (decided prior to passage of Right to Financial Privacy Act, 12 U.S.C. § 3401 et seq.).

Reporting requirements of the federal Bank Secrecy Act, which requires certain financial institutions to file currency transaction reports, were not unconstitutional as applied to defendants charged with a money laundering scheme, as an individual who engages in a currency transaction with a bank has no reasonable expectation of privacy which is protected by U.S. Const., amend. 4. United States v. Sanchez Vazquez, 585 F. Supp. 990 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Expectation of Privacy (Cont'd)

Stillborn fetus. — Defendant's quasi-property interest in the defendant's stillborn fetus did not support a privacy claim sufficient to implicate the search and seizure provisions under U.S. Const., amend. 4, and defendant enjoyed no reasonable expectations of privacy to suppress evidence of traces of cocaine discovered in the fetus pursuant to Georgia's Death Investigation Act. Jackson v. State, 208 Ga. App. 391, 430 S.E.2d 781 (1993).

Invasion of privacy prior to executing warrant. — Police officer unreasonably invaded defendants' privacy by looking through their window before knocking on their door when executing an arrest warrant for a third party where: (1) there was insufficient evidence that the third party lived with defendants; (2) even if the police were authorized to enter defendants' home, looking through the window was unreasonable as the officer did not reach the window by traveling the route any visitor would travel to reach the front door; and (3) the officer did not have articulable facts which would warrant a reasonably prudent officer to believe that the third party was a danger. A police officer must have a reasonable belief that forewarning would jeopardize the officers before actions, such as peering through a window, would be justified. State v. Schwartz, 261 Ga. App. 742, 583 S.E.2d 573 (2003).

Places and Things to Which Right Extends

Primarily protects citizen, home, and effects. — U.S. Const., amend. 4 is primarily directed to protection of the citizen in one's home, one's person, and one's papers or effects which may be in the home or on one's person. Anderson v. State, 133 Ga. App. 45, 209 S.E.2d 665 (1974).

Protection not extended to places not specified or included. — Fourth amendment protection simply does not extend to places which amendment does not specify or include. Anderson v. State, 133 Ga. App. 45, 209 S.E.2d 665 (1974).

Privacy interests regarding the home. — Individual's privacy interests are nowhere more clearly defined or rigorously protected by the courts than in the home — the core of fourth amendment rights. Wanger v. Bonner, 621 F.2d 675 (5th Cir. 1980).

Ascertainment of whether structure is dwelling. — It is not the physical character of a structure that determines whether it is a "dwelling"; rather, it is the actual habitation of a structure that makes it a "dwelling." Olson v. State, 166 Ga. App. 104, 303 S.E.2d 309 (1983), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1209, 104 S. Ct. 2397, 81 L. Ed. 2d 354 (1984).

Dwelling place, whether flimsy or firm, permanent or transient, is its inhabitant's unquestionable zone of privacy under U.S. Const., amend. 4, for in one's dwelling a citizen unquestionably is entitled to a reasonable expectation of privacy. Kelley v. State, 146 Ga. App. 179, 245 S.E.2d 872 (1978).

Police may investigate complaint on private property. — Police officers do not need probable cause to proceed onto private property merely to investigate a complaint. State v. Lyons, 167 Ga. App. 747, 307 S.E.2d 285 (1983); Guess v. State, 197 Ga. App. 40, 397 S.E.2d 453 (1990).

Approach to outside of dwelling. — U.S. Const., amend. 4 extends beyond the pragmatic entry into a private dwelling by a law enforcement officer in search of the fruits or instrumentalities of crime. But it does not extend so far as to prevent the police from making any contact with the citizenry — and to hold that the police may not, upon request, although exigent circumstances do not appear, approach the outer doors of a dwelling absent a warrant or consent of an owner or occupant would work that result. Gilreath v. State, 247 Ga. 814, 279 S.E.2d 650 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 984, 102 S. Ct. 2258, 72 L. Ed. 2d 862 (1982).

Officer on way to front door not in violation. — Officer who witnessed the defendant in possession of marijuana, followed the defendant into the defendant's kitchen, arrested the defendant and, seeing cocaine in plain view, proceeded to search the rest of the house, was not in violation of defendant's fourth amendment rights, regardless of whether the initial observation took place in the street, in defendant's yard or on the steps to the defendant's porch. Jenkins v. State, 223 Ga. App. 486, 477 S.E.2d 910 (1996).

Although police officers had probable cause to investigate a crime, the fourth amendment prohibited them from entering defendant's home or its curtilage without a warrant absent consent or a showing of exigent circumstances; consequently, the trial court erred by denying defendant's motion to suppress evidence of a 10-foot high marijuana plant plainly growing in defendant's backyard. Kirsche v. State, 271 Ga. App. 729, 611 S.E.2d 64 (2005).

Curtilage. — It is well settled that fourth amendment protection extends to the curtilage of a dwelling house, and a roofed structure within 50 or 60 feet of the back door is well within the protected area, provided it is used for purposes related to the family household and domestic economy. McGee v. State, 133 Ga. App. 184, 210 S.E.2d 355 (1974).

The curtilage is the area to which the intimate activity associated with the sanctity of a man's home and the privacies of life extend, and therefore has been considered part of the home for fourth amendment purposes. Payton v. State, 177 Ga. App. 104, 338 S.E.2d 462 (1985); Thomas v. State, 203 Ga. App. 529, 417 S.E.2d 353, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 908, 417 S.E.2d 353 (1992).

Yard of a private residence is curtilage within the protection of U.S. Const., amend. 4. Bloodworth v. State, 233 Ga. 589, 212 S.E.2d 774 (1975).

Curtilage includes the yards and grounds of a particular address, its gardens, barns, buildings, etc. Payton v. State, 177 Ga. App. 104, 338 S.E.2d 462 (1985).

Helicopter hovering over noncurtilage area. — Even if a low-flying helicopter would have been in a place which violated an expectation of privacy that society is prepared to honor if an officer in the helicopter was observing activities in the home, it was not violating the resident's fourth amendment rights when it hovered over the non-curtilage area. Thomas v. State, 203 Ga. App. 529, 417 S.E.2d 353, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 908, 417 S.E.2d 353 (1992).

Non-enclosed garden. — Where defendants deliberately chose to grow marijuana in a non-enclosed area (i.e., outside any kind of structure) and thus open to plain view to those having an opportunity to approach or pass by the field (or garden) and the facts reasonably supported the trial court's conclusion that the deputies were present on the premises looking for a defendant and not conducting a search for marijuana, defendants waived any reasonable expectation of privacy and forsook any protection otherwise afforded by the fourth amendment and could not invoke any such protection simply by claiming the "garden" was a part of the curtilage. Gravley v. State, 181 Ga. App. 400, 352 S.E.2d 589 (1986).

Open fields. — The security of person and home from unreasonable search and seizure does not extend to open fields. Kennemore v. State, 222 Ga. 252, 149 S.E.2d 471 (1966).

Searches and seizures of uninhabited lands or open fields do not fall within the function of U.S. Const., amend. 4, and this also applies to property which is considered abandoned. State v. Roberts, 133 Ga. App. 206, 210 S.E.2d 387 (1974).

Since the special protection accorded by U.S. Const., amend. 4 to the people in their "persons, houses, papers, and effects" is not extended to open fields, evidence obtained from an aerial search of an open field is not inadmissible as the product of an illegal search. Reece v. State, 152 Ga. App. 760, 264 S.E.2d 258 (1979).

Party has no protection under U.S. Const., amend. 4 against seizure of contraband in open fields of another. Thompson v. State, 154 Ga. App. 704, 269 S.E.2d 474 (1980).

If a field is located beyond all of the buildings on a person's property and thus is beyond the curtilage of the home, the owner does not have a reasonable expectation of privacy in the field and a warrantless search of the field and seizure of any drugs grown thereon does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 4. United States v. Berrong, 712 F.2d 1370 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1209, 104 S. Ct. 2397, 81 L. Ed. 2d 354 (1984).

The constitutional protection does not extend to open fields, orchards, or other lands not an immediate part of the dwelling site, and a warrant is not a necessary prerequisite to a search of such an area. Thus, there cannot be an illegal extension of a search warrant beyond the curtilage, for beyond the curtilage a search warrant is not needed. Ray v. State, 181 Ga. App. 42, 351 S.E.2d 490 (1986).

Places and Things to Which RightExtends (Cont'd)

Open fields do not provide the setting for those intimate activities that the amendment is intended to shelter from government interference or surveillance, and there is no societal interest in protecting the privacy of those activities, such as the cultivation of crops, that occur in open fields. Thomas v. State, 203 Ga. App. 529, 417 S.E.2d 353, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 908, 417 S.E.2d 353 (1992).

Surveillance of defendant's house by officer stationed on defendant's property in a woods over 200 yards from the house was not illegal intrusion into curtilage of defendant's residence. Mattingly v. State, 205 Ga. App. 777, 423 S.E.2d 709 (1992).

It is not generally true that fences or "No Trespassing" signs effectively bar the public from viewing open fields in rural areas. For these reasons, the asserted expectation of privacy in open fields is not an expectation that society recognizes as reasonable. Likewise, ineffective as a bar of the public from viewing or hearing in open fields are gates which cannot be closed and trafficable dirt roadways. Perry v. State, 204 Ga. App. 643, 419 S.E.2d 922 (1992); Manley v. State, 217 Ga. App. 556, 458 S.E.2d 179 (1995).

Special protection against unlawful search and seizure in one's home, pursuant to U.S. Const., amend. 4 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII, extended to the curtilage of defendant's home but not into the open fields; accordingly, since police officers were in an unoccupied, undeveloped densely wooded/swamp area on defendant's property, it was part of the open fields, the officers had a right to be there, and evidence observed thereon was not subject to suppression for constitutional violations. Furthermore, there was no reasonable privacy right that was infringed by government intrusion in an open field, the fact that defendant owned the property was not determinative, nor was it instructive that being on that property would have constituted a trespass at common law. State v. Clark, 263 Ga. App. 480, 588 S.E.2d 254 (2003).

Open beach, like an open field, has no protection against a search or seizure under U.S. Const., amend. 4. Anderson v. State, 133 Ga. App. 45, 209 S.E.2d 665 (1974).

Arrest alone does not give rise to right to search vehicle parked on premises. Williams v. State, 157 Ga. App. 476, 277 S.E.2d 923, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 823, 102 S. Ct. 109, 70 L. Ed. 2d 95 (1981).

Warrantless search of vehicle on premises lawfully searched. — In order to authorize a search of a vehicle parked within the curtilage of the premises which are to be searched pursuant to a warrant, there must be some evidence to connect the vehicle with the premises. Albert v. State, 155 Ga. App. 99, 270 S.E.2d 220 (1980).

Automobile in plain view. — Defendant's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 4 were not violated and the trial court properly refused to suppress evidence relating to defendant's car in a hit and run case where a police officer, after tracing the license plate of the suspect vehicle to defendant, gained probable cause to search defendant's car based on the officer's observations of defendant's car gained from the vantage point of a public sidewalk before the officer ever entered the curtilage of defendant's home to inspect the car more carefully; such observations included damage to the side of the car which was consistent with the accident, and the type, color, and license plate number of the car, all of which matched the description and plate number of the hit and run vehicle as described by witnesses. Additionally, the officer had probable cause to seize the car as an instrumentality of the crime since the officer had no way of determining who might have access to the vehicle to remove and destroy evidence. Jackson v. State, 258 Ga. App. 806, 575 S.E.2d 713 (2002), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1006, 124 S. Ct. 536, 157 L. Ed. 2d 413 (2003).

Warrant, consent, or exigent circumstances required to enter fire-damaged premises. — Because reasonable privacy expectations may remain in fire-damaged premises, official entries into those premises require a warrant, consent, or exigent circumstances. Davis v. State, 178 Ga. App. 760, 344 S.E.2d 730 (1986).

Commercial premises. — The protection of constitutional rights under U.S. Const., amend. 4 includes commercial premises. State v. Cochran, 135 Ga. App. 47, 217 S.E.2d 181 (1975).

There is nothing inherent in “papers” which immunizes them from searches otherwise proper under U.S. Const., amend. 4. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

Telephone toll and billing records are not owned or possessed by defendant, but are business records belonging to the telephone company. Kesler v. State, 249 Ga. 462, 291 S.E.2d 497 (1982).

Although defendants had general standing to attack the illegality of a wiretap on their telephone, they lacked the standing to assert that the illegality was due to the fact that their telephone toll records were illegally obtained, because telephone toll and billing records are not owned or possessed by the telephone customer but are business records belonging to the telephone company. Van Nice v. State, 180 Ga. App. 112, 348 S.E.2d 515 (1986), cert. denied, 480 U.S. 931, 107 S. Ct. 1568, 94 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1987).

Subpoena of brokerage records upheld. — Neither the first amendment nor the fourth amendment required a federal district court to quash a subpoena to obtain a brokerage firm’s records relating to members of an association, where the subpoena had been issued in connection with an investigation of possible criminal violations of the tax laws and the association’s financial system may have been used to evade requirements for reporting taxable income. In re Grand Jury Proceeding, 842 F.2d 1229 (11th Cir. 1988).

Luggage. — While one has a right under U.S. Const., amend. 4 to expect privacy of the contents of one’s luggage, this right does not extend to the bags’ exterior or to control of who actually handles them once they have been released to the custody of an airline. Yocham v. State, 165 Ga. App. 650, 302 S.E.2d 390 (1983).

Abandoned property. — The personal right to fourth amendment protection of property against search and seizure is lost when that property is abandoned. United States v. Edwards, 441 F.2d 749 (5th Cir. 1971).

Constitutional protection under U.S. Const., amend. 4 and U.S. Const., amend. 14, does not apply to property that has been abandoned. The issue of abandonment vel non of the property is a factual issue to be resolved by the trier of fact. Vines v. State, 142 Ga. App. 616, 237 S.E.2d 17 (1977).

The constitutional protection of the fourth and fourteenth amendments does not apply to property that has been abandoned. Ramsey v. State, 183 Ga. App. 48, 357 S.E.2d 869, cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 906, 357 S.E.2d 869 (1987); Cooper v. State, 186 Ga. App. 154, 366 S.E.2d 815 (1988); Guess v. State, 197 Ga. App. 40, 397 S.E.2d 453 (1990).

A defendant has no fourth amendment rights with respect to discarded or abandoned property. Evans v. State, 192 Ga. App. 832, 386 S.E.2d 712 (1989).

State trooper was entitled to treat the contents of a trash can located near a vehicle trooper was about to search as abandoned property. Lirousa v. State, 200 Ga. App. 475, 408 S.E.2d 436 (1991).

Because defendant was lawfully detained, claim could not be made that defendant was coerced into abandoning a bag of cocaine and, accordingly, the trial court did not err in denying defendant’s motion to suppress the evidence. Edwards v. State, 239 Ga. App. 44, 518 S.E.2d 426 (1999).

If contraband is discarded during flight or before a suspect is seized, it is admissible as evidence, even if there is an issue as to whether the officers possessed reasonable suspicion of criminal activity. Watson v. State, 247 Ga. App. 498, 544 S.E.2d 469 (2001).

Determination of abandonment. — The question of abandonment for fourth amendment purposes does not turn on strict property concepts but on whether the accused has relinquished an interest in the property to the extent that the accused no longer has a reasonable expectation of privacy in the premises at the time of the search. Bloodworth v. State, 233 Ga. 589, 212 S.E.2d 774 (1975).

The issue of abandonment of property is a factual issue to be resolved by the trier of fact, the trial court, and the court’s finding on a motion to suppress will not be disturbed if there is evidence to support the court’s determination of abandonment. Holley v. State, 157 Ga. App. 863, 278 S.E.2d 738 (1981).

Abandoned house and its surrounding property were not part of the curtilage of defendant’s residence. Olson v. State, 166 Ga. App. 104, 303 S.E.2d 309 (1983), cert.

Places and Things to Which Right Extends (Cont'd)

denied, 467 U.S. 1209, 104 S. Ct. 2397, 81 L. Ed. 2d 354 (1984).

Abandonment of vehicle. — If an abandoned car is a necessary part of a criminal investigation, its search is lawful even though no search warrant was obtained. Crocker v. State, 114 Ga. App. 43, 150 S.E.2d 294 (1966).

The following facts supported the trial court's finding that the defendant abandoned the defendant's car prior to its seizure and no longer retained a legitimate expectation of privacy in it: (1) the vehicle was found over 100 yards from the nearest home on land not belonging to the defendant; (2) it was down a deserted field road; (3) the tag and battery had been removed; and (4) the vehicle was covered with freshly cut bushes and debris. Williams v. State, 171 Ga. App. 546, 320 S.E.2d 389 (1984).

Abandoned luggage properly turned over to police. — Because the defendant, in making no provision for the luggage, had in effect abandoned it in an individual's automobile with no undertaking from the individual to keep it, the individual was at best a reluctant bailee, and thus defendant's argument that the individual had no authority to dispose of the luggage, by turning it over to the police, was clearly erroneous. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

Items thrown from car. — Because law officers observed defendant throw a paper napkin containing a quantity of cocaine from a car, defendant affirmatively abandoned it by throwing it from the vehicle as the officers approached, thereby placing it within plain view on the public highway. Since neither abandoned property nor items in plain view of law enforcement officers, who are where they have a right to be, can be the subject of a motion to suppress when the abandonment of the evidence and the simultaneous placing of it in plain view occurs during the course of a legal stop, the trial court erred in granting defendant's motion to suppress. State v. Howell, 180 Ga. App. 449, 349 S.E.2d 476 (1986).

Garbage. — The fourth amendment does not prohibit the warrantless search and seizure of garbage left for collection at the curb outside the home. Perkins v. State, 197 Ga. App. 577, 398 S.E.2d 702 (1990).

Trial court properly denied defendant's motion to suppress evidence, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-5-30, because there was no violation of defendant's fourth amendment rights by the seizure of garbage bags from the garbage cans near defendant's residence, as they were a distance away from the house, there was no enclosure, and the sanitation workers had access to them; defendant was not found to have a subjective expectation of privacy that society would have accepted as objectively reasonable, as the cans were not found to be within the curtilage area of the home and their seizure was proper. Scott v. State, 270 Ga. App. 292, 606 S.E.2d 312 (2004).

Abandoned motel room. — Having abandoned motel room, defendant no longer had any expectation of privacy, and could not complain of entry and search of room. Buttrum v. State, 249 Ga. 652, 293 S.E.2d 334 (1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1156, 103 S. Ct. 801, 74 L. Ed. 2d 1004 (1983); 479 U.S. 902, 107 S. Ct. 300, 93 L. Ed. 2d 275 (1986).

Because a motel manager opened the door to a room across the hall from the room in which the crimes were committed and saw no luggage or other signs of occupancy, after which the police entered the room and gathered evidence, finding that the manager had authority to open the room because it was abandoned and that defendant no longer had any expectation of privacy with respect to the room was not clearly erroneous. Stovall v. State, 216 Ga. App. 138, 453 S.E.2d 110 (1995).

Appropriation of abandoned property. — There is nothing unlawful in the government's appropriation of abandoned property, which does not constitute a search or seizure in the legal sense, such as when the accused drops a certain article at the approach of a police officer. Green v. State, 127 Ga. App. 713, 194 S.E.2d 678 (1972).

There is nothing unlawful in the appropriation by governmental agents of abandoned contraband property, which act in and of itself is not a search or seizure in a legal sense. Holley v. State, 157 Ga. App. 863, 278 S.E.2d 738 (1981).

O.C.G.A. § 52-7-25, allowing suspicionless stops of boats to check for required safety equipment and vehicle registration, promoted the state's important interest in maintaining safe conditions for boaters on Georgia's lakes and rivers, and the procedure used was minimally intrusive, so that the statute did not violate U.S. Const., amend. 4. Peruzzi v. State, 275 Ga. 333, 567 S.E.2d 15 (2002).

Prisons

Prisoner letters. — For security and maintenance purposes, jail officials must have access to the cells and personal effects of all prisoners (including pretrial detainees). Letters found as a result of these searches are not within the scope of protection of the fourth amendment and are therefore admissible. Thomas v. State, 263 Ga. 85, 428 S.E.2d 564 (1993).

Letters written by codefendants to one another while in jail pending trial and left by them under the jail barber's chair were not protected. Thomas v. State, 263 Ga. 85, 428 S.E.2d 564 (1993).

Deliberate indifference to prisoner's health care needs. — Sheriff's knowledge of prisoner's need for medical care and the sheriff's intentional refusal to provide that care constituted "deliberate indifference," and the sheriff lost entitlement to qualified immunity to suit under § 1983 for violating the prisoner's fifth, eighth and fourteenth amendment rights. Harris v. Coweta County, 21 F.3d 388 (11th Cir. 1994).

Probable Cause

1. In General

Probable cause for arrest required. — The United States Constitution does not guarantee that only the guilty will be arrested, but a warrantless and malicious arrest based on no probable cause violates liberty. Scott v. Donovan, 539 F. Supp. 255 (N.D. Ga. 1982).

Probable cause required for warrantless arrest. — Although a search without a warrant is, within limits, permissible if incident to a lawful arrest, if an arrest without a warrant is to support an incidental search, it must be made with probable cause. United States v. Brookins, 423 F.2d 463 (5th Cir. 1970), different result reached on rehearing, 434 F.2d 41 (5th Cir. 1970), cert. denied, 401 U.S. 912, 91 S. Ct. 880, 27 L. Ed. 2d 811 (1971).

If an arrest warrant has not been issued, a law enforcement officer may not arrest a person unless the officer has probable cause to believe the person has committed or is committing a crime. Daye v. City of Albany, 496 F. Supp. 1227 (M.D. Ga. 1980).

Where an arrest is effected without a warrant, the fourth amendment requires a judicial determination of probable cause following arrest as a prerequisite to an extended restraint of liberty (other than the condition that one appear for trial). City of Marietta v. Kelly, 175 Ga. App. 416, 334 S.E.2d 6 (1985).

Detention for custodial interrogation must be supported by probable cause. United States v. Hill, 626 F.2d 429 (5th Cir. 1980).

Requirement that searches be based on probable cause. — The requirement under U.S. Const., amend. 4 that searches be based on probable cause applies only to searches of constitutionally protected areas. Thompson v. State, 154 Ga. App. 704, 269 S.E.2d 474 (1980).

Probable cause for arrest does not necessarily constitute probable cause to search defendant's residence. United States v. Morris, 491 F. Supp. 222 (S.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd, 647 F.2d 568 (5th Cir. 1981).

Probable cause is a minimum requirement for a reasonable search permitted by the Constitution. As a general rule, the judgment of a magistrate on the probable cause issue and the issuance of a warrant are also required before a search is made. State v. Bradley, 138 Ga. App. 800, 227 S.E.2d 776 (1976).

It is the purpose behind the search that is controlling as to which standard — probable cause or reasonable suspicion — will be applied. Lowe v. City of Macon, 720 F. Supp. 994 (M.D. Ga. 1989), aff'd, 925 F.2d 1475 (11th Cir. 1991).

Test of "probable cause" required by U.S. Const., amend. 4 can take into account nature of search that is being sought. West Point-Pepperell, Inc. v. Marshall, 496 F. Supp. 1178 (N.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd on other grounds, 689 F.2d 950 (11th Cir. 1982).

Evidence to be considered as a whole. — The evidence presented to establish probable cause for a search warrant must be considered as a whole. Clarrington v. State, 178 Ga. App. 663, 344 S.E.2d 485 (1986).

Probable Cause (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Determination of sufficiency of probable cause. — Determination of whether there was sufficient showing of probable cause to justify issuance of search warrant depends on resolution of two questions: first, whether or not the facts as stated in the affidavit constitute a sufficient showing of probable cause, and second, whether in the light of all of the sworn evidence placed before the magistrate, the magistrate was justified in ordering the issuance of the warrant. Campbell v. State, 226 Ga. 883, 178 S.E.2d 257 (1970), cert. denied, 401 U.S. 1002, 91 S. Ct. 1246, 28 L. Ed. 2d 535 (1971).

In a case where defendants were convicted of trafficking in cocaine, the trial court did not err in finding that there was probable cause to arrest the two defendants because after co-defendant met the two defendants in a nearby apartment complex, the co-defendant returned with the package of cocaine to sell to the undercover agent, and the second defendant parked a truck facing the area of the anticipated exchange, apparently so that the second defendant and the first defendant could watch the drug deal; therefore, the trial court did not err by denying the first defendant's motion to suppress. Lopez v. State, 267 Ga. App. 532, 601 S.E.2d 116 (2004).

In dealing with probable cause, as the very name implies, the court deals with probabilities. These are not technical; they are factual and practical considerations of everyday life on which reasonable and prudent persons, not legal technicians, act. Sanders v. State, 235 Ga. 425, 219 S.E.2d 768 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 976, 96 S. Ct. 2177, 48 L. Ed. 2d 800 (1976); Duffy v. State, 156 Ga. App. 847, 275 S.E.2d 658 (1980); McConnell v. State, 156 Ga. App. 612, 275 S.E.2d 697 (1980).

Standard of probabilities. — The inquiry reduces to a standard of probabilities, that is, whether the magistrate can reasonably conclude that the items described in the warrant are probably at the residence. United States v. Morris, 491 F. Supp. 222 (S.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd, 647 F.2d 568 (5th Cir. 1981).

Burden of proof is upon state to show what facts constituting probable cause existed and were presented to the magistrate before the warrant was issued. Bell v. State, 128 Ga. App. 426, 196 S.E.2d 894 (1973).

Marginal cases of probable cause determined by preference accorded warrants. — Although in a particular case it may not be easy to determine when an affidavit demonstrates the existence of probable cause, the resolution of doubtful or marginal cases in this area should be largely determined by the preference to be accorded to warrants. State v. Babb, 134 Ga. App. 302, 214 S.E.2d 397 (1975); Devier v. State, 247 Ga. 635, 277 S.E.2d 729 (1981).

In reaching judgment on probable cause for search warrant, judge must use common-sense approach because the judge is dealing with a probability and not a certainty that a crime has been committed. Ward v. State, 234 Ga. 882, 218 S.E.2d 591 (1975).

Determination of probable cause does not rest upon a technical framework; instead, it depends on the factual and practical considerations of everyday life on which reasonable and prudent persons, not legal technicians, act. Daye v. City of Albany, 496 F. Supp. 1227 (M.D. Ga. 1980).

If the underlying circumstances are detailed, if the reason for crediting the source of the information is given, and if a magistrate has found probable cause, the courts should not invalidate the warrant by interpreting the affidavit in a hypertechnical, rather than a common-sense, manner. Devier v. State, 247 Ga. 635, 277 S.E.2d 729 (1981).

Probable cause determination for issuance of warrant must be made by neutral and detached magistrate instead of the officer engaged in the often competitive enterprise of ferreting out crime. Mitchell v. State, 136 Ga. App. 2, 220 S.E.2d 34 (1975).

In determining whether to issue search warrant, the task of the issuing magistrate is simply to make a practical, common-sense decision whether, given all the circumstances set forth in the affidavit before the magistrate, including the "veracity" and "basis of knowledge" of persons supplying hearsay information, there is a fair probability that contraband or evidence of a crime will be found in a particular place. Futch v. State, 178 Ga. App. 115, 342 S.E.2d 493 (1986); Lowe v. State, 203 Ga. App. 277, 416

S.E.2d 750, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 906, 416 S.E.2d 750 (1992).

Magistrate determination's as a reasonable person. — The fourth amendment requirement that probable cause be shown for a warrant to issue means, in essence, that the magistrate must be presented with information as to facts or circumstances sufficient to give the magistrate, as a reasonable person, grounds to believe that a crime is being or has been committed. Rothfuss v. State, 160 Ga. 863, 288 S.E.2d 579 (1982).

Magistrate must have information sufficient to form independent judgment. — Judicial officer issuing warrant must be supplied with sufficient information to support independent judgment that probable cause exists for issuance of warrant. Morgan v. Kiff, 230 Ga. 277, 196 S.E.2d 445 (1973), overruled on other grounds, Jacobs v. Hopper, 238 Ga. 461, 233 S.E.2d 169 (1977).

The trial court in reviewing the probable cause determination made by the issuing magistrate must be convinced by the state that the magistrate had enough information to make an independent judgment that probable cause existed to search the defendant's premises. Keith v. State, 238 Ga. 157, 231 S.E.2d 727 (1977).

Rule under U.S. Const., amend. 4 that warrant be issued by neutral and detached magistrate requires magistrate's severance and disengagement from activities of law enforcement. Although the magistrate may be engaged only in part-time law enforcement activities, this association with law enforcement is an appropriate setting for a per se rule of disqualification. Baggett v. State, 132 Ga. App. 266, 208 S.E.2d 23 (1974).

Fourth amendment does not contemplate executive officers of government as neutral and disinterested magistrates. The fourth amendment contemplates a prior judicial judgment, not the risk that executive discretion may be reasonably exercised. This judicial role accords with the basic constitutional doctrine that individual freedom will best be preserved through a separation of powers and division of functions among the different branches and levels of government. Vaughn v. State, 160 Ga. App. 283, 287 S.E.2d 277 (1981).

Issuance of search warrant by justice of peace having pecuniary interest in issuing warrant effects a violation of the protections afforded by U.S. Const., amend. 4 and U.S. Const., amend. 14. Connally v. Georgia, 429 U.S. 245, 97 S. Ct. 546, 50 L. Ed. 2d 444 (1977).

Justice of peace who also holds position as deputy sheriff is "per se" disqualified as a neutral and detached magistrate. Vaughn v. State, 160 Ga. App. 283, 287 S.E.2d 277 (1981).

Validity of search warrant issued by mayor involved in investigation. — Because the mayor was personally involved, along with the chief of police, in investigating the case against the defendant, and in fact encouraged the chief to catch the defendant, it cannot be maintained that the mayor acted independently of the police and prosecution, and the search warrant issued by the mayor was issued in violation of the defendant's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 4. Jackson v. State, 150 Ga. App. 67, 256 S.E.2d 670 (1979).

"Probable cause" determinations are not always jury questions. Scott v. Donovan, 539 F. Supp. 255 (N.D. Ga. 1982).

Conflict between testimony of magistrate and law enforcement officer. — Where any conflict between testimony of magistrate and law enforcement officer seeking warrant as to circumstances surrounding seeking of warrant was resolved by the court and supported by the record, motion to suppress evidence was properly denied. Daitch v. State, 168 Ga. App. 830, 310 S.E.2d 703 (1983).

Scope of amendment not determined by subjective conclusion of officer. — Even though a police officer believed that probable cause for a search was lacking, the court still had the duty to objectively determine if probable cause was present. The scope of U.S. Const., amend. 4 is not determined by the subjective conclusion of the law enforcement officer. United States v. Clark, 559 F.2d 420 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 969, 98 S. Ct. 516, 54 L. Ed. 2d 457 (1977).

What constitutes probable cause is evidence that would warrant a person of reasonable caution to believe that a felony has been committed, and such evidence must be measured by the facts of the particular case in which legality is questioned. Cook v. Smith, 303 F. Supp. 90 (S.D. Ga. 1969), aff'd, 427 F.2d 1172 (5th Cir. 1970); United States v. Brown, 305 F. Supp. 299 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

Probable Cause (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Where the facts and circumstances known to the arresting officer are such as to warrant a person of prudence and caution in believing an offense has been committed, the quantum of evidence necessary to establish probable cause does not require proof of guilt. Hood v. State, 122 Ga. App. 547, 178 S.E.2d 44 (1970).

Probable cause exists under U.S. Const., amend. 4 if the facts and circumstances known to the officer warrant a prudent person in believing that the offense has been committed. United States v. Brookins, 423 F.2d 463 (5th Cir. 1970), different result reached on rehearing, 434 F.2d 41 (5th Cir. 1970), cert. denied, 401 U.S. 912, 91 S. Ct. 880, 27 L. Ed. 2d 811 (1971); United States v. Elsoffer, 671 F.2d 1294 (11th Cir. 1982).

Probable cause for arrest exists where the facts and circumstances within the officers' knowledge and of which they have reasonably trustworthy information are sufficient in themselves to warrant a person of reasonable caution in the belief that an offense has been or is being committed. United States v. Bullock, 441 F.2d 59 (5th Cir.); United States v. Williams, 322 F. Supp. 1074 (N.D. Ga. 1971); State v. Causey, 132 Ga. App. 17, 207 S.E.2d 225 (1974); Quinn v. State, 132 Ga. App. 395, 208 S.E.2d 263 (1974); Fenning v. State, 136 Ga. App. 569, 222 S.E.2d 122 (1975); Diamond v. Marland, 395 F. Supp. 432 (S.D. Ga. 1975); United States v. Casey, 540 F.2d 811 (5th Cir. 1976); United States v. Williams, 594 F.2d 86 (5th Cir. 1979); Palmer v. State, 156 Ga. App. 291, 274 S.E.2d 692 (1980); Daye v. City of Albany, 496 F. Supp. 1227 (M.D. Ga. 1980); McQuarter v. City of Atlanta, 572 F. Supp. 1401 (N.D. Ga. 1983), appeal dismissed, 724 F.2d 881 (11th Cir. 1984).

Test for probable cause is whether under facts a person of reasonable caution would believe that evidence was being possessed by defendant in the defendant's house. This requires merely a probability and not a certainty but does require more than a mere suspicion. Brooks v. State, 140 Ga. App. 371, 231 S.E.2d 138 (1976); Gordon v. State, 150 Ga. App. 862, 258 S.E.2d 664 (1979).

Probable cause means reasonable grounds, and is that apparent state of facts which seems to exist after reasonable and proper inquiry. Hogan v. State, 140 Ga. App. 716, 231 S.E.2d 802 (1976).

To establish probable cause (whether for the issuance of a warrant by a magistrate or, under exigent circumstances, for search without a warrant) three elements are essential: that there is reason to accept the informer's reliability; that the facts are sufficient to show how the informer obtained the information or that the criminal activity is described in such detail as to negate its being a mere rumor; and, that the information is current, not stale. State v. Watts, 154 Ga. App. 789, 270 S.E.2d 52 (1980).

What is "reasonable, articulable ground" for detention may be less than probable cause to make an arrest or conduct a search, but must be more than mere caprice or arbitrary harassment. Each case depends on its own facts. Where there are some reasonable articulable grounds for suspicion, the state's interest in the maintenance of community peace and security outweigh the momentary inconvenience and indignity of investigatory detention. Allen v. State, 140 Ga. App. 828, 232 S.E.2d 250 (1976).

Test for probable cause. — Judge may consider totality of information before the judge to determine if probable cause exists, before issuing a search warrant. Ward v. State, 234 Ga. 882, 218 S.E.2d 591 (1975).

Test for probable cause is the totality of the evidence before the magistrate. Inferences of probable cause may be drawn only by a neutral and detached magistrate, not by the officer engaged in the often competitive enterprise of ferreting out crime. State v. Guhl, 140 Ga. App. 23, 230 S.E.2d 22 (1976), rev'd on other grounds sub nom. Mitchell v. State, 239 Ga. 3, 235 S.E.2d 509 (1977).

The test for probable cause is the totality of the evidence before the magistrate. Walker v. State, 140 Ga. App. 418, 231 S.E.2d 386 (1976).

Under the "totality-of-the-circumstances test," evidence supplied by a citizen informant, corroborated by observation and information from police officers, plus complaints of other citizens to the police of late-night traffic at the location, provide a substantial basis for the magistrate to conclude that probable cause exists for a search. Whitten v. State, 174 Ga. App. 867, 331 S.E.2d 912 (1985).

What constitutes reasonable suspicion. — Specific and articulable facts, taken together with rational inferences from those facts, constitute reasonable suspicion. United States v. Elsoffer, 671 F.2d 1294 (11th Cir. 1982).

After an officer observed defendant's vehicle parked at a baseball park where there was no activity and saw a wide-eyed, scared look on the face of defendant's passenger, the officer did not have to have a reasonable suspicion that defendant or defendant's passenger were engaged in criminal activity to approach the passenger's side of the car and ask the passenger to roll down the passenger's window. Akins v. State, 266 Ga. App. 214, 596 S.E.2d 719 (2004).

Determination of probable cause for arrest without warrant. — Probable cause for an arrest without a warrant exists where the facts and circumstances within the officers' knowledge and of which they have reasonably trustworthy information are sufficient to give them reasonable ground to believe that the accused has committed a felony. McConnell v. State, 156 Ga. App. 612, 275 S.E.2d 697 (1980).

Probable cause standards for items sought to be seized. — The requirements of U.S. Const., amend. 4 secure the same protection of privacy whether the search is for mere evidence or for fruits, instrumentalities, or contraband. There must be a nexus — automatically provided in the case of fruits, instrumentalities, or contraband — between the item to be seized and criminal behavior. In the case of mere evidence, however, probable cause to conduct a search must be examined in terms of cause to believe that the evidence sought will aid in a particular apprehension or conviction. In so doing, consideration of police purposes will be required. United States v. Munroe, 421 F.2d 644 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 400 U.S. 851, 91 S. Ct. 79, 27 L. Ed. 2d 89 (1970).

Search warrant issuable upon fair probability. — In issuing a search warrant, the task of the issuing magistrate is simply to make a practical, common-sense decision whether, given all the circumstances set forth in the affidavit before the magistrate, including the veracity and basis of knowledge of persons supplying hearsay information, there is a fair probability that contraband or evidence of a crime will be found in a particular place.

State v. Morrow, 175 Ga. App. 743, 334 S.E.2d 344 (1985).

Requirements for issuance of search warrant generally. — Under U.S. Const., amend. 4, an officer may not properly issue a warrant to search a private dwelling unless the officer can find probable cause therefor from facts or circumstances presented to the officer under oath or affirmation. Farmer v. Lawson, 510 F. Supp. 91 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Emphasis is on credibility and reliability of information presented to the magistrate and reasonableness of the magistrate's issuing the search warrant. Keith v. State, 238 Ga. 157, 231 S.E.2d 727 (1977).

Difference between requirements for guilt and probable cause. — There is a great difference between what is required to prove guilt in a criminal case and what is required to show probable cause for arrest or search. Strauss v. Stynchcombe, 224 Ga. 859, 165 S.E.2d 302 (1968); Sanders v. State, 235 Ga. 425, 219 S.E.2d 768 (1975); Duffy v. State, 156 Ga. App. 847, 275 S.E.2d 658 (1980).

While the prosecution must bear the burden of persuasion with regard to probable cause for a warrantless search, it need not establish probable cause beyond a reasonable doubt, nor must a finding of probable cause rest upon evidence which is legally competent in a criminal trial. United States v. Rodgers, 442 F.2d 902 (5th Cir. 1971).

Law sanctions difference between methods permitted to prove ultimate issue of guilt and that of probable cause for search or arrest. Ward v. State, 234 Ga. 882, 218 S.E.2d 591 (1975).

The "reasonable cause" necessary to support arrest cannot demand the same strictness of proof as the accused's guilt upon a trial. Duffy v. State, 156 Ga. App. 847, 275 S.E.2d 658 (1980).

A lesser standard of proof is required to establish probable cause than to prove guilt. McConnell v. State, 156 Ga. App. 612, 275 S.E.2d 697 (1980).

Legal evidence not required for probable cause. — To show probable cause for the search and seizure it is not necessary that the arresting officer should have had before the officer legal evidence of the suspected illegal act. Crocker v. State, 114 Ga. App. 43, 150 S.E.2d 294 (1966).

"Staleness" as relates to probable cause is measured by the probability that the thing to be seized is located at the place to be searched and it involves the interval between: (1) the time when the thing to be seized is indicated by the evidence or information to be at the place to be searched; and (2) the time when the search warrant is issued. Cline v. State, 178 Ga. App. 470, 343 S.E.2d 506 (1986).

Probable Cause (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Information not stale. — Updated affidavit alleging ongoing criminal activity and a continuing relationship between coconspirators prior to the time of the search was not fatally stale. United States v. Harris, 20 F.3d 445 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 967, 115 S. Ct. 434, 130 L. Ed. 2d 346 (1994).

Suppression of evidence from "good" search. — Court erred by suppressing evidence in defendant's drug case because the search warrant was supported by probable cause as the informant's information was reliable, the information in the warrant was not stale, and the curtilage was properly searched. State v. Graddy, 262 Ga. App. 98, 585 S.E.2d 147 (2003), aff'd, 277 Ga. 765, 596 S.E.2d 109 (2004).

Suppression of evidence upheld. — Because the police had no information that two men were involved in any criminal conduct and the officers saw nothing that would give rise to reasonable suspicion, there was no error in the trial court's suppression of evidence. State v. Harris, 261 Ga. App. 119, 581 S.E.2d 736 (2003).

Collective knowledge of peace officers may form probable cause. — Probable cause for arrest is to be determined on basis of collective information of officers involved rather than only the one who makes the arrest. United States v. Jones, 352 F. Supp. 369 (S.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 481 F.2d 1402 (5th Cir. 1973).

Whether probable cause for arrest existed is to be decided by courts on basis of collective information of police involved in the arrest rather than upon the extent of knowledge of particular officer making arrest. The individual knowledge of the officer who made the arrest is not the standard by which the legality of a warrantless arrest is measured, but rather the existence of probable cause is determinable on the basis of the collective information of the officers participating in the arrest. Diamond v. Marland, 395 F. Supp. 432 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Probable cause for arrest can rest upon collective knowledge of police, rather than solely on that of the officer who actually makes the arrest, when there is some degree of communication between the two. United States v. Ashley, 569 F.2d 975 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 853, 99 S. Ct. 163, 58 L. Ed. 2d 159 (1978).

Where there is communication between the two, probable cause can rest upon the collective knowledge of the various peace officers involved. Williams v. State, 157 Ga. App. 476, 277 S.E.2d 923, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 823, 102 S. Ct. 109, 70 L. Ed. 2d 95 (1981).

Observations of fellow officers of government engaged in common investigation are reliable basis for a warrant applied for by one of their number. Walker v. State, 140 Ga. App. 418, 231 S.E.2d 386 (1976).

Probable cause is the sum total of layers of information and the synthesis of what the police have heard, what they know, and what they observe as trained officers. United States v. Edwards, 577 F.2d 883 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 968, 99 S. Ct. 458, 58 L. Ed. 2d 427 (1978).

Information conveyed by radio dispatch. — When a county deputy sheriff hears a radio dispatch concerning a crime in another jurisdiction, the deputy has probable cause to stop any suspects, arrest them, search their car, and seize any contraband contained therein, particularly where there is suspicious conduct once the suspects are spotted by the officer. Sanborn v. State, 251 Ga. 169, 304 S.E.2d 377 (1983).

Direct observation is not essential to the existence of probable cause. United States v. Morris, 491 F. Supp. 222 (S.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd, 647 F.2d 568 (5th Cir. 1981).

Probable cause for arrest for misdemeanor committed out of officer's presence.

— If an arrest is made by an officer for a misdemeanor committed out of the officer's presence, probable cause therefor may be established by the possession of knowledge and facts justifying the belief on the part of one of reasonable prudence that the person arrested was guilty of the crime charged. Diamond v. Marland, 395 F. Supp. 432 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Sufficient probability exists when nexus is shown between items to be seized and residence to be searched. Without direct observation, the appropriate indicia establishing this nexus include the type of crime, the nature of the items sought, the extent of an opportunity for concealment and normal inferences as to where a criminal would hide the instruments and fruits of the crime. United States v. Morris, 491 F. Supp. 222 (S.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd, 647 F.2d 568 (5th Cir. 1981).

Although flight alone will not provide probable cause that a crime is being committed, in appropriate circumstances it can supply the key ingredient justifying the decision of a law enforcement officer to take action. United States v. Bowles, 625 F.2d 526 (5th Cir. 1980).

Determination of probable cause to search automobile. — Probable cause to search an automobile exists when the facts and circumstances before the officer are such as would lead a reasonably discreet and prudent person to believe that the vehicle contains contraband. In determining whether there was reasonable cause to believe that a vehicle contained contraband, the court will look to the totality of the circumstances, including, but not limited to, information obtained by law enforcement agents conducting a common investigation. McDonald v. State, 156 Ga. App. 143, 273 S.E.2d 881 (1980).

Probable cause to search an automobile exists if the facts and circumstances before the officer are such as would lead a reasonably discreet and prudent person to believe that the contents of the vehicle offend the law. Williams v. State, 167 Ga. App. 42, 306 S.E.2d 46 (1983).

Reasonable cause required for search and seizure of automobile. — While Georgia has less stringent requirements for a warrantless search of an automobile than a permanent dwelling, the fact that it is an automobile is not talismanic. The right to search and the validity of the seizure are dependent on the reasonable cause the seizing officer has for belief that the contents of the automobile offend against the law. State v. Avret, 156 Ga. App. 527, 275 S.E.2d 113 (1980).

Probable cause for search of automobile believed to contain contraband. — An automobile in which contraband is concealed and transported may be searched without a warrant if police have probable cause for believing the automobile to be searched contains the contraband. The search without a warrant is permitted where it is impractical to obtain one because of the automobile's potential for instant mobility. State v. Avret, 156 Ga. App. 527, 275 S.E.2d 113 (1980).

Facts justified initial stop of defendant in vehicle for improper turn and later arrest. — Where the defendant, in the defendant's vehicle proceeded along the emergency lane and turned therefrom despite the presence of a solid white line indicating the end of such emergency lane prior to entry into the intersection, the officer was justified in stopping the defendant for making an improper right turn. Since this was true, the officer had specific and reasonably articulable facts warranting the defendant's detention and the request for identification. Upon learning that the defendant was driving with a revoked license, the officer then had probable cause to make a lawful arrest and to conduct a limited inventory search of the automobile. State v. Williams, 156 Ga. App. 813, 275 S.E.2d 133 (1980).

Probable cause present for search of car on school premises. — Police officers, having been called to investigate an accident on school premises and finding a motor vehicle trespassing thereon in the early hours of the morning, which are, to say the least, suspicious circumstances, did not perform an illegal search and seizure in taking the ignition keys out of the car and unlocking the trunk where they found stolen goods. Craft v. State, 124 Ga. App. 57, 183 S.E.2d 37 (1971).

Requirement that items will probably be found in place to be searched. — A probable cause finding must be based on more than the conclusion that a crime was committed and that the items sought are connected with the crime. The magistrate must also have a sufficient reason to believe that the items will be found in the place to be searched. Murphy v. State, 238 Ga. 725, 234 S.E.2d 911 (1977).

Probable cause for self-protective search for weapons. — In case of self-protective search for weapons, police officers must be able to point particularly to facts from which it reasonably can be inferred that individual is armed and dangerous. Smith v. State, 140 Ga. App. 94, 230 S.E.2d 101 (1976).

Mere propinquity with others engaged in crime does not without more justify either arrest or search. Williams v. State, 157 Ga. App. 476, 277 S.E.2d 923, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 823, 102 S. Ct. 109, 70 L. Ed. 2d 95 (1981).

Probable Cause (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Elimination of illegal drug manufacturing. — The governmental interest in eliminating illegal drug manufacture is a persuasive reason to permit minimally intrusive practice. Thus, an intermediate response based on something less than probable cause, is a proper investigatory tool to aid law enforcement agents in discovering and eliminating clandestine laboratory operations. United States v. Michael, 645 F.2d 252 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 950, 102 S. Ct. 489, 70 L. Ed. 2d 257 (1981).

Eavesdropping to ascertain probable cause. — Police agents' entry into a public hallway and listening to conversations inside an apartment by placing their ears to the front door was proper to ascertain if probable cause existed for the issuance of a search warrant. Cox v. State, 160 Ga. App. 199, 286 S.E.2d 482 (1981).

No probable cause created by refusing to furnish identification. — A police officer does not have probable cause to believe a suspect has violated Georgia law by falsely identifying himself when the suspect refuses to furnish identification. The refusal to furnish identification may create suspicion that the suspect has used a false name, but falls far short of probable cause. United States v. Brown, 731 F.2d 1491 (11th Cir.), modified, 743 F.2d 1505 (11th Cir. 1984).

Use of sworn unrecorded oral evidence outside affidavit. — The magistrate issuing a search warrant may consider sworn unrecorded oral evidence outside the affidavit to establish probable cause. Waller v. State, 251 Ga. 124, 303 S.E.2d 437 (1983), rev'd on other grounds, 467 U.S. 39, 104 S. Ct. 2210, 81 L. Ed. 2d 31 (1984).

Determination of probable cause before extradition. — U.S. Const., amend. 4 requires that determination of probable cause to arrest be made by neutral magistrate before pretrial interstate extradition. Batton v. Griffin, 240 Ga. 450, 241 S.E.2d 201 (1978).

Magistrate is entitled to rely on personal observations and conclusions of member of narcotics squad of a distant police force in determining whether it was probable that the box police officer had observed was being used to ship marijuana illegally. United States v. Black, 344 F. Supp. 537 (N.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 476 F.2d 267 (5th Cir. 1973).

Specificity of evidence constituting probable cause to stop vehicle. — Police officers who stopped vehicle without first obtaining search warrant did not err in so doing even though the information they possessed before stop was not specific enough to authorize issuance of a search warrant. State v. Estrado, 170 Ga. App. 889, 318 S.E.2d 505 (1984).

Right to search and validity of seizure are not dependent on the right to arrest. They are dependent on the reasonable cause the seizing officer has for belief that the contents of the automobile offend against the law. Meneghan v. State, 132 Ga. App. 380, 208 S.E.2d 150 (1974).

Probable cause for belief that certain articles subject to seizure are in dwelling cannot of itself justify a search without a warrant. Black v. State, 119 Ga. App. 855, 168 S.E.2d 916 (1969).

If considered a search, probable cause is to be determined on a case by case basis in light of the particular circumstances. Grimes v. United States, 405 F.2d 477 (5th Cir. 1968).

Police officers who stopped and searched vehicles without first obtaining warrant did not err by so doing because additional corroborative evidence, including accuracy of confidential information and strong odor of marijuana detected at time of stop, provided probable cause to search, even though prior information was not detailed enough to authorize issuance of warrant. State v. Estrado, 170 Ga. App. 889, 318 S.E.2d 505 (1984).

Presence of accused at probable cause hearing. — The arrested person need not be present when the judicial officer is determining whether probable cause to detain the arrested person exists following the arrest. It is the independent and neutral determination by a judicial officer of whether probable cause exists which is fundamental under the fourth amendment and which must be made within 48 hours, not the presence of the defendant. Fiscus v. City of Roswell, 832 F. Supp. 1558 (N.D. Ga. 1993).

Nature of probable cause hearing. — In a pretrial hearing, U.S. Const., amend. 4 does not require a full-fledged adversarial commitment hearing, although it does require some minimal probable cause hearing that has nothing to do with whether the accused should be prosecuted, at which the sole question is whether the accused should be detained pending further proceedings. If the suspect is incorrectly detained without a hearing in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 4, the accused may be entitled to habeas corpus relief, but in no event will the illegal detention void a subsequent conviction. State v. Middlebrooks, 236 Ga. 52, 222 S.E.2d 343 (1976).

Utilization of hearing testimony on issue of probable cause. — If testimony adduced at post-conviction hearing can be utilized to show whether or not there was probable cause for arrest, then it follows that testimony adduced at commitment hearing and at trial may be utilized for same purpose. Sanders v. State, 235 Ga. 425, 219 S.E.2d 768 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 976, 96 S. Ct. 2177, 48 L. Ed. 2d 800 (1976).

Deference on review to finding of probable cause. — When an application for a search warrant has been made by the police to a neutral and detached magistrate, and the magistrate has issued the warrant based on a finding of probable cause, a reviewing court will pay substantial deference to the magistrate's finding. Devier v. State, 247 Ga. 635, 277 S.E.2d 729 (1981).

After-the-fact scrutiny by courts of the sufficiency of an affidavit supporting a search warrant should not take the form of a de novo review. Instead, a magistrate's determination of probable cause should be paid great deference by reviewing courts. State v. Fultz, 171 Ga. App. 886, 321 S.E.2d 381 (1984).

Evidence that is seized in good-faith reliance upon a search warrant issued by a neutral and detached magistrate will generally not be subject to suppression on fourth amendment grounds, regardless of whether the allegations upon which the magistrate based the issuance of the warrant were sufficient to establish the probable cause for the search. Rodriguez v. State, 191 Ga. App. 241, 381 S.E.2d 529 (1989).

2. Affidavits

Before valid warrant may issue, affidavit must be submitted to court setting forth necessary facts and circumstances whereby the judge may determine probable cause. United States v. Hawes, 529 F.2d 472 (5th Cir. 1976).

Affidavit upon which justice of the peace issues search warrant is inadequate where it does not show facts and circumstances which would warrant a person of reasonable caution to believe that the articles sought are located at the place where it is proposed to search. Farmer v. Lawson, 510 F. Supp. 91 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Information supporting finding of probable cause may be presented to magistrate by means of affidavit or by oral testimony. Marshall v. State, 113 Ga. App. 143, 147 S.E.2d 666 (1966).

Affidavit enough to provide basis for magistrate's finding of probable cause. — See Borders v. State, 173 Ga. App. 110, 325 S.E.2d 626 (1984); Whitehead v. State, 184 Ga. App. 307, 361 S.E.2d 188 (1987).

In a murder prosecution, an affidavit in support of a search warrant stated that the victim and defendant left a ballpark where they worked in close temporal proximity; that the victim's car was found abandoned at a gas station next to the park; that a person fitting defendant's voice characteristics made two telephone calls claiming to have the victim; that the victim's ring was found near the pay phone from which the second call was made; and that defendant had a history of assaults on the opposite sex, having abducted a victim and secreted the victim to the defendant's home, gave the magistrate a substantial basis for concluding there was probable cause that evidence pertaining to the victim's disappearance would be found in defendant's home. Hinton v. State, 280 Ga. 811, 631 S.E.2d 365 (2006).

Determination by court of whether magistrate justified in issuing warrant. — In determining whether the magistrate was justified in issuing the search warrant, the court is not limited to the facts on the face of the affidavit, and is free to make judgments on the veracity of any or all of the evidence. Campbell v. State, 226 Ga. 883, 178 S.E.2d 257 (1970), cert. denied, 401 U.S. 1002, 91 S. Ct. 1246, 28 L. Ed. 2d 535 (1971).

Affidavit to support finding of probable cause need only show facts and circumstances that would warrant a person of reasonable caution to believe that the articles sought were located at the place where it was proposed to search. United States v. Morris, 491 F. Supp. 222 (S.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd, 647 F.2d 568 (5th Cir. 1981).

Probable Cause (Cont'd)2. Affidavits (Cont'd)

Affidavit not required. — U.S. Const., amend. 4 does not by its terms require that probable cause be shown by affidavit, but that the judicial officer be supplied with sufficient information to support an independent judgment that probable cause exists for the warrant. Cofield v. State, 247 Ga. 98, 274 S.E.2d 530 (1981).

Common-sense testing of affidavits for search warrants. — Affidavits for search warrants must be tested and interpreted by magistrates and courts in a common-sense and realistic fashion, and technical requirements of elaborate specificity have no proper place in this area. Driscoll v. State, 129 Ga. App. 702, 201 S.E.2d 11 (1973); State v. Babb, 134 Ga. App. 302, 214 S.E.2d 397 (1975).

Recital of underlying circumstances in the affidavit is essential if the magistrate is to perform a detached function and not serve merely as a rubber stamp for the police. Devier v. State, 247 Ga. 635, 277 S.E.2d 729 (1981).

Affidavit must recite specifics of informant's basis for information. — Although it is not required as a showing of probable cause for the issuance of a search warrant that the informant's name be stated, there must be a recital of specifics as to what the informant based the informant's information upon. Burns v. State, 119 Ga. App. 678, 168 S.E.2d 786 (1969).

Presentation of underlying circumstances in support of issuance of warrant. — The Constitution requires that there be presented to the judicial officer issuing the search warrant some of the underlying circumstances relied on by the officer applying for the warrant, and, if the officer relies on an informant, some of the underlying circumstances from which the officer concluded that the informant was reliable. Wood v. State, 118 Ga. App. 477, 164 S.E.2d 233 (1968).

Detail in affidavit sufficient to support issuance of search warrant. — Although an affidavit for procurement of a search warrant was not as detailed as it might be in affording information showing reliability of the informant upon whose information the police officer was proceeding, but because the information as to the activities and the whereabouts of the parties came from one who, in the past, had supplied information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons who had committed crimes, as well as from parties in stores who complained that the parties sought had passed altered or counterfeit money to them, there was sufficient detail to afford reasonable cause for seeking and obtaining the search warrant. Bostwick v. State, 124 Ga. App. 113, 182 S.E.2d 925 (1971).

Personal observation by affiant plus informant's information sufficient for issuance. — Personal observation by the affiant that known violators of the law sought to be enforced frequented the defendant's home, plus information from an informant, who had proven reliable in the past, of specific facts sufficient to constitute probable cause, will authorize the issuance of the warrant. Wood v. State, 118 Ga. App. 477, 164 S.E.2d 233 (1968).

Affidavit must contain underlying circumstances supporting hearsay. — Although an affidavit supporting a search warrant may be based on hearsay information and need not reflect the direct personal observations of the affiant, the magistrate must be informed of some of the underlying circumstances from which the informant concluded that the articles were where the informant claimed they were. Knowles v. State, 124 Ga. App. 377, 183 S.E.2d 617 (1971); Maddox v. State, 133 Ga. App. 709, 213 S.E.2d 1 (1975).

Requirements for officer's affidavit relying upon informant. — If an officer making an affidavit for a search warrant relies upon an informant, the officer must give sufficient information of the underlying circumstances from which the officer concluded that the informant was reliable. In the officer's affidavit should appear a recital of what the informant actually said, and why the officer thought that the information was credible, especially when the name of the informant is not stated. Burns v. State, 119 Ga. App. 678, 168 S.E.2d 786 (1969).

Production of nonaffidavit testimony when warrant challenged. — If the magistrate issuing the warrant does so not on the basis of the affidavit but on other testimony, such testimony should itself be produced when, on the trial of a criminal case, the affidavit and warrant are challenged. Veasey v. State, 113 Ga. App. 187, 147 S.E.2d 515 (1966).

Probable cause cannot be made out by affidavits which are purely conclusory. Veasey v. State, 113 Ga. App. 187, 147 S.E.2d 515 (1966).

Mere conclusion based on unspecified information insufficient. — It is not enough to show probable cause simply to recite in an affidavit that from information received from a reliable informant the affiant has come to suspect or to believe that a named person is in possession of contraband items. Burns v. State, 119 Ga. App. 678, 168 S.E.2d 786 (1969); Courson v. State, 125 Ga. App. 373, 187 S.E.2d 554 (1972).

Unsubstantiated conclusory allegation. — Exclusionary rule did not bar admission of seized contraband alleged to be the fruit of a search warrant issued without probable cause, because defendant did not substantiate with evidence the conclusory allegation that the magistrate did not act impartially and disinterestedly but instead rubber stamped a detective's offered affidavit. Giles v. State, 197 Ga. App. 895, 400 S.E.2d 368 (1990).

Deficiency in affidavit for search warrant cannot be supplied by facts discovered in making the search, for the sufficiency of the affidavit must be determined as of the time the warrant issues, and an appellate court can consider only the information brought to the magistrate's attention. Burns v. State, 119 Ga. App. 678, 168 S.E.2d 786 (1969).

Factual inaccuracies of peripheral relevance. — If, on the hearing of a motion to suppress evidence, the testimony of an informant is consistent with the material allegations in the affidavit, factual inaccuracies of peripheral relevance that are not the personal observations of the affiant do not destroy an otherwise adequate showing of probable cause. Pass v. State, 227 Ga. 730, 182 S.E.2d 779 (1971).

Consideration of attacks on legality of nonessential allegations in affidavit. — If certain allegations in a search warrant affidavit are sufficient per se to establish probable cause, the court need not consider a defendant's attacks on the legality or sufficiency of the other allegations in the affidavit. United States v. Williams, 594 F.2d 86 (5th Cir. 1979), rev'd on other grounds, 622 F.2d 830 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1127, 101 S. Ct. 946, 67 L. Ed. 2d 114 (1981).

Sufficiency of affidavit where defective affidavit unnecessary. — Even if police officer's affidavit filed in support of the issuance of a search warrant was fatally defective because it did not establish the reliability of informant, this was immaterial because the affidavit, without the informant's statement, was sufficient to establish probable cause and justify issuance of the search warrant. Roth v. State, 164 Ga. App. 347, 297 S.E.2d 107 (1982).

Magistrate may consider oral testimony as well as the affidavit in issuing a search warrant. Not only what is stated in the affidavit for the search warrant but also the totality of the sworn circumstances before the magistrate may be considered in establishing probable cause. Franklin v. State, 135 Ga. App. 718, 218 S.E.2d 641 (1975).

Oral testimony must be under oath or affirmation. — The magistrate, in considering whether to issue a search warrant, may consider both the affidavit and oral testimony as to probable cause. However, in considering matter other than that contained in the affidavit, such proof must be under oath or affirmation. Maddox v. State, 133 Ga. App. 709, 213 S.E.2d 1 (1975).

Coverage of oath administered after affidavit signed. — If the magistrate does not administer any oath until after the affidavit is signed, the oath covers only the truthfulness of the statements contained in the written affidavit and not the oral statements given to show probable cause. Riggins v. State, 136 Ga. App. 279, 220 S.E.2d 775 (1975).

Absence of time information relevant to probable cause in affidavit is fatal. — Failure to include in the affidavit for search warrant the time of the occurrence witnessed by informer upon which probable cause was based is a fatal defect. Windsor v. State, 122 Ga. App. 667, 178 S.E.2d 751 (1970).

If there is nothing appearing in an affidavit supporting a search warrant whereby the issuing officer could determine the time of the events relied upon for probable cause, and this fatal defect is asserted as a ground of a motion to suppress the evidence, a trial judge errs in overruling the motion.

Probable Cause (Cont'd)2. Affidavits (Cont'd)

Flournoy v. State, 123 Ga. App. 658, 182 S.E.2d 159 (1971).

Determination of existence of probable cause absent time information in affidavit.

— Absent any statement in an affidavit as to the time of the occurrence on which a warrant is based, a magistrate cannot make an independent determination as to whether probable cause still existed for the issuance of the search warrant. It is not necessary in an affidavit that the precise date of an occurrence on which a search warrant is based be given, but it should appear from the facts that the occurrence should be so near in point of time to the making of the affidavit and the execution of the search warrant as to create a reasonable belief that the same conditions described in the affidavit still prevailed at the time of the issuance of the warrant. Terry v. State, 123 Ga. App. 746, 182 S.E.2d 513 (1971).

Sufficient lawful information to overcome taint.

— If the lawfully obtained information amounts to probable cause and would have justified issuance of the warrant, apart from the tainted information, the evidence seized pursuant to the warrant is admissible. Rothfuss v. State, 160 Ga. App. 863, 288 S.E.2d 579 (1982).

Effect of misinformation in affidavit. — If there was sufficient information in an affidavit to support a finding of probable cause despite the presence of other mistaken information, the court did not err in finding that the affidavit was sufficient. Waller v. State, 251 Ga. 124, 303 S.E.2d 437 (1983), rev'd on other grounds, 467 U.S. 39, 104 S. Ct. 2210, 81 L. Ed. 2d 31 (1984).

If an affidavit is insufficient to establish probable cause once its false material is set aside, then evidence obtained by means of a search warrant issued in reliance on the affidavit is inadmissible. However, if the remaining information is sufficient to show probable cause, the search warrant is valid. Rimmer v. State, 197 Ga. App. 294, 398 S.E.2d 282 (1990).

False statements in affidavit. — A supporting affidavit was found to have established probable cause, even though it contained false material which the officer submitting the affidavit knew was not true. Kelly v. State, 184 Ga. App. 337, 361 S.E.2d 659, cert. denied, 257 Ga. 562, 362 S.E.2d 200 (1987).

Under the fourth and fourteenth amendments, if a defendant makes a preliminary showing that: (1) an affiant knowingly and intentionally included a false statement in an affidavit; or (2) an affiant made a false statement with reckless disregard for its truth; and (3) the false statement was necessary to the finding of probable cause; then constitutional mandate requires that a hearing be held at the defendant's request but if, after eliminating statements alleged to be false, sufficient allegations in the warrant affidavits remain to support a finding of probable cause, defendant's attempt to question the sufficiency of the warrant lacks merit. United States v. Sims, 845 F.2d 1564 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 957, 109 S. Ct. 395, 102 L. Ed. 2d 384 (1988).

Affidavit as a whole examined. — Remaining information was sufficient to show probable cause although the affiant's statement that affiant had maintained "constant surveillance", even though affiant had not witnessed actual transactions, may have implied to the trial judge that the agent observed the entire transaction, including the handing over of money in exchange for the drugs. The trial court could not conclude that this was the only implication flowing from those words, therefore, the search warrant was valid. State v. Thomas, 203 Ga. App. 623, 417 S.E.2d 328, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 907, 417 S.E.2d 328 (1992).

Practical reading. — Items described in an affidavit were "fruits" of the crimes although the affidavit did not list "robbery" as one of the crimes and although some of the items were also instrumentalities, because the affiant had stated that affiant had probable cause to believe the items taken were in defendant's residence or vehicle; it was obvious from a practical reading of the affidavit that the items to be seized were fruits, instrumentalities, or evidence of the crimes. Mozier v. State, 207 Ga. App. 264, 427 S.E.2d 551 (1993).

In reviewing the sufficiency of an affidavit containing false statements and omitting material information, the false statements must be deleted, the omitted truthful material must be included, and the affidavit must be reexamined to determine whether probable cause exists to issue a search warrant.

Redding v. State, 192 Ga. App. 87, 383 S.E.2d 640 (1989).

Effect of intentional and unintentional errors in affidavit on validity of warrant. — If a misrepresentation in an affidavit for a search warrant is made with the intention of deceiving the magistrate it will invalidate the warrant regardless of whether the error is material to the showing of probable cause. On the other hand, if the error was unintentional, it is of no moment unless it was material to the establishment of probable cause. United States v. Park, 531 F.2d 754 (5th Cir. 1976).

When an affidavit in support of a search warrant contains information which is in part unlawfully obtained, the validity of a warrant and search depends on whether the untainted information, considered by itself, establishes probable cause for the warrant to issue. Rothfuss v. State, 160 Ga. App. 863, 288 S.E.2d 579 (1982).

Sufficiency of affidavit to be determined as of time warrant issued. — A void search warrant cannot be validated and property illegally seized introduced in evidence merely because the officers were in fact reliably informed and did in fact recover contraband, nor can a deficiency be supplied by facts discovered in making the search, for the sufficiency of the affidavit must be determined as of the time the warrant issued. Anderson v. State, 155 Ga. App. 25, 270 S.E.2d 263 (1980).

Present belief of affiant as to commission of offense charged. — In determining whether probable cause exists for the issuance of a search warrant, it is necessary to determine whether the affiant, at the time of making the affidavit and the issuance of the warrant, had reasonable grounds to believe the offense charged was being or had been committed. United States v. Williams, 594 F.2d 86 (5th Cir. 1979), rev'd on other grounds, 622 F.2d 830 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1127, 101 S. Ct. 946, 67 L. Ed. 2d 114 (1981). United States v. Williams, 594 F.2d 86 (5th Cir. 1979), rev'd on other grounds, 622 F.2d 830 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1127, 101 S. Ct. 946, 67 L. Ed. 2d 114 (1981).

Affidavit provided substantial probable cause basis. — Affidavit containing investigator's corroboration of informant's statements describing people involved in operations, locations, and movements and report of a controlled buy presented a picture from which magistrate could conclude a search warrant should issue. United States v. Wright, 811 F. Supp. 1576 (S.D. Ga. 1993).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's suppression motion as the affidavit provided probable cause for the issuance of a search warrant under the totality of the circumstances test where: (1) the controlled buy from defendant was described; (2) defendant's willingness to turn over the cocaine at defendant's residence was set forth; and (3) a statement from the witness who was with defendant at the time of defendant's arrest that defendant had taken the witness to the residence to pick up cocaine was set forth. Johnson v. State, 267 Ga. App. 549, 600 S.E.2d 667 (2004).

Defendant's suppression motion was properly denied as: (1) the search warrant affidavit outlined the information provided by a New Hampshire detective's investigation, including the fact that the defendant had electronically sent the detective sexually explicit photographs of young children; (2) the officer's affidavit also included information regarding the New Hampshire detective's extensive background and vast experience in the investigation of child sexual exploitation cases; (3) the New Hampshire detective's investigation provided probable cause to search the defendant's residence wherever that was; (4) the warrant sought sexually explicit photographs and other sexually explicit visual depictions of children, as well as the computer hardware and software used to create, store, and distribute those depictions; and (5) the affidavit contained information based on the New Hampshire detective's contact and electronic correspondence with the defendant indicating the likelihood that defendant's computer files would contain evidence of child sexual exploitation, given that the affidavit stated that those who sexually exploited children often kept sexually explicit photographs and other images in their possession and often stored those images in computer files. Walthall v. State, 281 Ga. App. 434, 636 S.E.2d 126 (2006).

Where state revenue agent purchases the beer, affidavit sworn to by agent as informant is sufficient to establish the probable cause element in issuing a search warrant in the investigation of the defendant for the illegal sale of beer. Johnson v. State, 121 Ga. App. 477, 174 S.E.2d 246 (1970).

Probable Cause (Cont'd)2. Affidavits (Cont'd)

Arrest warrant held invalid. — Arrest warrant was issued without probable cause, where the incorporated affidavit supporting the warrant stated only that the affiant swore that “to the best of (his or her) knowledge and belief Teresa Ann Garmon did . . . commit the offense of false report of a crime.” Garmon v. Lumpkin County, 878 F.2d 1406 (11th Cir. 1989).

Search warrant held invalid. — Where an affidavit for a search warrant alleges that numerous complaints have been made to the sheriff’s department that a person is selling illegal beer and whiskey, and that heavy traffic and large amounts of beer cans have been observed on the road around that person’s residence, but no date is set as to these occurrences, and where the only dated occurrence in the affidavit is four months before the issuance of a warrant, a search warrant based on such an affidavit is invalid. Terry v. State, 123 Ga. App. 746, 182 S.E.2d 513 (1971).

Affidavit held ineffective to provide basis for magistrate’s finding of probable cause. See Poole v. State, 175 Ga. App. 374, 333 S.E.2d 207 (1985).

Merely existence of “hearsay upon hearsay” was not fatal to a search warrant because under the totality of the circumstances, the magistrate was informed of the underlying circumstances involving an undercover buy from the defendant, independent of the double hearsay, which did not depend upon the reliability of the hearsay declarations; further, a known informant’s statements to police against a penal interest elevated that statements’ reliability. Cochran v. State, 281 Ga. 4, 635 S.E.2d 701 (2006).

Affidavit did not support second search warrant. — Investigator’s affidavit did not supply a substantial basis on which the magistrate could find probable cause for issuing a second warrant since the extensiveness of the first search allowed for a second search only if new information established probable cause to believe that defendant’s home still contained seizable items. United States v. Wright, 811 F. Supp. 1576 (S.D. Ga. 1993).

Deficiency of state statutes failing to require affidavit to show probable cause. —

Before a warrant for either arrest or search can issue, the judicial officer issuing such warrant must be supplied with sufficient information to support an independent judgment that probable cause exists for the warrant. Former Code 1933, §§ 27-103, 27-103.1, and 27-104, and the forms prescribed therein (see O.C.G.A. §§ 17-4-41 and 17-4-45) do not contain this requirement, and to that extent they are deficient. The better practice clearly would be for the affidavit to show probable cause. Cofield v. State, 247 Ga. 98, 274 S.E.2d 530 (1981).

Showing of probable cause on motion to suppress by affidavit attached to warrant. —

Probable cause for the issuance of a search warrant, on a motion to suppress, may be shown by the affidavit attached to the warrant, together with evidence of the sworn testimony adduced before the issuing magistrate. State v. Causey, 132 Ga. App. 17, 207 S.E.2d 225 (1974).

Effect on validity of warrant of failure to record affidavit. —

If information sufficient to uphold a determination of probable cause is presented under oath to a state magistrate, the failure to record the information in the form of an affidavit will not invalidate the search warrant. Marshall v. State, 113 Ga. App. 143, 147 S.E.2d 666 (1966).

Although affidavit deficient, evidence in lower court may support probable cause finding. — Although the affidavit supporting a search warrant did not itself show probable cause, it was sufficient where the evidence of the law enforcement officer in the lower court as to what the officer told the issuing magistrate under oath supported a finding of probable cause. Daitch v. State, 168 Ga. App. 830, 310 S.E.2d 703 (1983).

3. Informants

Search warrants supported by affidavits based upon information furnished by reliable informants are not constitutionally inadequate. McSears v. State, 247 Ga. 48, 273 S.E.2d 847 (1981).

Probable cause to search may be provided by reasonably contemporaneous information from reliable confidential informant. Smith v. State, 135 Ga. App. 424, 218 S.E.2d 133 (1975); Collier v. State, 177 Ga. App. 217, 338 S.E.2d 724 (1985).

Present reliability of informant and totality of circumstances control. — An averment of previous reliability is not essential, the question being whether the informant's present information is truthful and reliable. Hence the facts known to the officer must be weighed and evaluated, not in terms of "prior reliability" of the informant or a judicial analysis of "probable cause" to search, but as understood by those versed in the field of law enforcement under the "totality of the circumstances" test. State v. Bassford, 183 Ga. App. 694, 359 S.E.2d 752 (1987).

"Totality of circumstances" test. — The U.S. Supreme Court discarded the strict two-pronged, requirement of (a) demonstrating an informant's reliability and (b) providing the source of the informant's tip in an affidavit to support issuance of a search warrant, and adopted the "totality of the circumstances" test. The task of the issuing magistrate is simply to make a practical, common-sense decision, whether, given all the circumstances set forth in the affidavit before the magistrate, including the "veracity" and "basis of knowledge" of persons supplying hearsay information, there is a fair probability that contraband or evidence of a crime will be found in a particular place. Carr v. State, 185 Ga. App. 504, 364 S.E.2d 633 (1988).

The sufficiency of information obtained from an informant is not to be judged by any rigid tests. Generally, probable cause is determined by the "totality of the circumstances" surrounding (1) the basis of the informant's knowledge and (2) the informant's veracity or reliability. A deficiency in one may be compensated for, in determining the overall reliability of a tip, by a strong showing as to the other, or by some other indicia of reliability. Polke v. State, 203 Ga. App. 306, 417 S.E.2d 22 (1992).

Name and description of defendant enough for arrest. — Because the arresting officer was given the name and description of defendant as perpetrator of both a murder and an aggravated assault, the officer had probable cause to arrest defendant without a warrant outside the defendant's home. Gibbons v. State, 253 Ga. 283, 319 S.E.2d 861 (1984).

Reliability of informant. — One may act on the information of an informer as to whom the magic phrase "has given reliable information in the past" cannot be applied. An averment of previous reliability is not essential; the question is whether the informant's present information is truthful and reliable. Meneghan v. State, 132 Ga. App. 380, 208 S.E.2d 150 (1974).

Informant's lack of previous contact with authorities is not fatal to the informant's veracity. Shaner v. State, 153 Ga. App. 694, 266 S.E.2d 338 (1980).

Police officer's statement that informant was known personally to the police officer, had no criminal record, and had supplied reliable information leading to nine drug-related arrests and one conviction in the past 14 months was sufficient to establish the informer's reliability for purposes of issuing a search warrant. Tabb v. State, 250 Ga. 317, 297 S.E.2d 227 (1982).

Because the affidavit provided the justice of the peace (now magistrate) with the knowledge that the informant had personally observed defendants in possession of the cocaine and the informant's reliability was demonstrated within the affidavit by statements that the informant had furnished information in the previous six months leading to the issuance of three felony warrants for possession of illegal drugs and that all information provided by the informant had proven to be true, both prongs of the test for a showing of probable cause based upon an unidentified informant's tip were met in the affidavit. Law v. State, 165 Ga. App. 687, 302 S.E.2d 570, aff'd, 251 Ga. 525, 307 S.E.2d 904 (1983).

An informant is established as reliable, if the informant has on more than one occasion given to the sheriff truthful information which led to at least one conviction. Lang v. State, 168 Ga. App. 693, 310 S.E.2d 276 (1983).

In considering the totality of the circumstances, the information disclosed to the officer was insufficient to establish reasonable cause for belief that the defendant was currently in possession of cocaine, where reliable informants had told the officer that defendant was a drug dealer, but there was no showing as to how those informants had come to that conclusion. Polke v. State, 203 Ga. App. 306, 417 S.E.2d 22 (1992).

Probable Cause (Cont'd)3. Informants (Cont'd)

Warrant to search defendant's residence was supported by probable cause, despite the fact that the affidavit in support thereof made only a conclusory statement regarding the "reliability" of the informant; the deficiency regarding reliability of the informant was corrected by the officer's independent investigation. Munson v. State, 211 Ga. App. 80, 438 S.E.2d 123 (1993).

The uncorroborated statement of an unnamed third-party source, as filtered through a reliable informant to a police affiant, did not give rise to probable cause sufficient to support the issuance of a search warrant. Wood v. State, 214 Ga. App. 848, 449 S.E.2d 308 (1994).

Probable cause supported a warrant for the search of the defendant's residence since the affidavit stated: (1) that a confidential and reliable informant told police that the codefendant, driving a described vehicle was delivering methamphetamine to the residence; (2) that approximately two weeks after receiving this information, police saw the vehicle parked at the above address; and (3) that the car was stopped and searched and trafficking amounts of methamphetamine were confiscated. The reliability of the informant was established by the confiscation of methamphetamine from the codefendant's car. Gordon v. State, 248 Ga. App. 776, 546 S.E.2d 925 (2001).

Determination of truthfulness of informant. — The reliable manner of acquisition of information having been demonstrated, it must now be determined whether the individual supplying this reliable information is a truthful person. Shaner v. State, 153 Ga. App. 694, 266 S.E.2d 338 (1980).

Information from one not known to be reliable, coupled with verification. — Information from an unidentified informant not known to be reliable, coupled with verification of that information in essential particulars, may form a basis for probable cause to arrest. United States v. Crane, 445 F.2d 509 (5th Cir. 1971).

If police officer is informant, reliability of the informant is presumed as matter of law. State v. Causey, 132 Ga. App. 17, 207 S.E.2d 225 (1974); Quinn v. State, 132 Ga. App. 395, 208 S.E.2d 263 (1974); Williams v. State, 157 Ga. App. 476, 277 S.E.2d 923, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 823, 102 S. Ct. 109, 70 L. Ed. 2d 95 (1981).

If coupled with corroboration by the personal observation of a law enforcement officer, a reliable informant's tip is sufficient to establish probable cause. State v. Hancock, 203 Ga. App. 577, 417 S.E.2d 381, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 907, 417 S.E.2d 381 (1992).

Reliability of informant and informant's informant. — If a search warrant is issued pursuant to an affidavit based upon information supplied by a confidential informant, who in turn based the information upon another unidentified informant, then there must be a showing as to why the informant and informant's informant are reliable. Osbourne v. State, 128 Ga. App. 81, 195 S.E.2d 662 (1973).

Probable cause existed for issuance of search warrant where informant was credible and stated, inter alia, that marijuana was being stored at and sold from a specific house in Atlanta, as personally witnessed by the informant within 72 hours before the warrant was sought. Wilbanks v. State, 176 Ga. App. 533, 336 S.E.2d 312 (1985), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1087, 106 S. Ct. 1473, 89 L. Ed. 2d 728 (1986).

Inadvertent error in describing informant's previous credibility not grounds for voiding warrant. — Where all that was shown at the hearing on defendant's motion to suppress was that the affiant mistakenly substituted the name of the victim of a burglary for the name of the burglar in the portion of the affidavit showing the reliability of a confidential informant, but the officer freely admitted the mistake, ascribing it to confusion arising from a change in filing systems, the trial court was authorized to find that there had been no intentional and knowing falsehood or reckless disregard for the truth making the warrant void under either the federal or state Constitution. Wells v. State, 180 Ga. App. 133, 348 S.E.2d 681 (1986).

Identity of informant. — Where reasonable grounds for belief that exigent circumstances exist relieving police officers of their duty to give verbal notice of their authority and purpose in the execution of a search warrant are supplied by an informer, the informant's identity need not be disclosed if the information meets the same tests as those for probable cause for the issuance of a warrant, i.e., reliability of the informer shown and the tip sufficiently detailed. Scully v. State, 122 Ga. App. 696, 178 S.E.2d 720 (1970).

Where sole question is whether information offered to support the warrant meets the test for probable cause, there is no need to reveal the informer's identity. Where the state relied on information supplied by an informer to establish probable cause for a search warrant, the state need not reveal the names of its informers at a motion to suppress. Keith v. State, 238 Ga. 157, 231 S.E.2d 727 (1977); State v. Burnett, 249 Ga. App. 334, 548 S.E.2d 443 (2001).

Absent a showing that the disclosure of an informer's identity or the contents of the informer's communications, if any, are relevant and helpful to the defense of an accused, or are essential to a fair determination of a cause relating to the guilt or sentence of such accused, it was error to require disclosure of the identity of an informant whose participation is limited to the establishment of probable cause for the issuance of a search warrant. State v. Martin, 156 Ga. App. 554, 275 S.E.2d 129 (1980).

There is no necessity to reveal name of informer where issue is preliminary one of probable cause and where guilt or innocence is not at stake. Even if the informant were a witness, this would not be controlling where such evidence is not necessary to obtain a conviction. State v. Martin, 156 Ga. App. 554, 275 S.E.2d 129 (1980).

Prosecution need not disclose name of informant who provided police with probable cause for a search. State v. Martin, 156 Ga. App. 554, 275 S.E.2d 129 (1980).

Where information supplied to the magistrate was sufficient to demonstrate the informant's reliability, although the better practice would have been to include the informant's felony history, the omission was not fatal and did not warrant revealing the informant's identity. Kessler v. State, 221 Ga. App. 368, 471 S.E.2d 313 (1996); Gremillion v. State, 233 Ga. App. 393, 504 S.E.2d 265 (1998).

Whether informer really exists is question of evidence to be decided by trial court after the officers have been thoroughly questioned and cross-examined. Keith v. State, 238 Ga. 157, 231 S.E.2d 727 (1977).

Issue of informer's privilege of anonymity is evidentiary, not constitutional. — When the state relies on information supplied by an informer to establish probable cause for a warrant, the informer's privilege to remain anonymous presents a question of evidentiary rather than constitutional magnitude at a motion to suppress, where the issue is the preliminary one of probable cause, and guilt or innocence is not at stake. If the informer's privilege to remain anonymous at a probable cause hearing is a state evidentiary question, the court must look to Georgia law. Keith v. State, 238 Ga. 157, 231 S.E.2d 727 (1977).

Requirement of specificity where informant not named. — Where the information upon which an officer seeks the issuance of a search warrant comes from an informant who is not named, it is essential that sufficient facts be stated with specificity to indicate that the informant was reliable. Courson v. State, 125 Ga. App. 373, 187 S.E.2d 554 (1972).

Rumors or information from unidentified persons cannot form basis for issuance of search warrant. Thornton v. State, 125 Ga. App. 374, 187 S.E.2d 583 (1972).

Tip from known informant. — A tip from an informant of unknown reliability will not ordinarily create a reasonable suspicion of criminality, but information from a known informant of unknown reliability has more indicia of reliability than an anonymous telephone tip. Burse v. State, 209 Ga. App. 276, 433 S.E.2d 386 (1993).

Corroboration of tip's details by independent police work. — If a tip is sufficiently detailed so as to show a reliable basis for the informant's information, independent police work can corroborate the details of the tip. Shaner v. State, 153 Ga. App. 694, 266 S.E.2d 338 (1980).

Independent police corroboration of inadequate tip. — To support the issuance of a search warrant the informant's tip must contain a sufficient statement of the underlying circumstances from which the informer reached the conclusions forming the basis of the tip, but the inadequacy of an informant's tip does not ipso facto invalidate the search warrant since independent corroboration can be supplied by police investigation. Farmer v. Lawson, 510 F. Supp. 91 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Probable Cause (Cont'd)3. Informants (Cont'd)

Insufficient corroboration of tip. — Where the independent investigation revealed only that defendant resided at certain premises and that defendant had been arrested on drug-related charges a decade prior, this minor corroboration did not infuse with reliability anonymous informant's tip regarding controlled substances on the premises. State v. Goodrich, 209 Ga. App. 280, 433 S.E.2d 390 (1993).

Determination of reliability of tip without reference to independent verification. — In determining the reliability of the manner in which an informant obtained information, determination of whether the tip meets the "sufficient detail" test is based exclusively on what information came from the informant without reference, at this point, to independent verification of the information. Shaner v. State, 153 Ga. App. 694, 266 S.E.2d 338 (1980).

Informer's tip which is insufficient to justify grant of search warrant may be buttressed by either: (1) independent observations by the affiant officer to corroborate sufficient details of the tip (whether suspicious or not) to negate the possibility that the informer fabricated the report out of whole cloth, or (2) independent observations by the affiant that contribute to a showing of probable cause by revealing not merely normal patterns of activity but activity that reasonably arouses suspicion. Davis v. Smith, 430 F.2d 1256 (5th Cir. 1970).

Consideration of corroborating information only when informant's report defective. — No corroborating information can be considered by a magistrate considering an application for a search warrant until the magistrate determines that the informant's report, standing alone, does not meet U.S. Const., amend. 4's standards. United States v. Black, 344 F. Supp. 537 (N.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 476 F.2d 267 (5th Cir. 1973).

Facts corroborating informer's allegations constituting probable cause for search. — See United States v. Rodgers, 442 F.2d 902 (5th Cir. 1971).

Factual basis for believing informant, coupled with affiant's own knowledge of accused's background, affords sufficient grounds upon which a magistrate can reasonably issue a warrant. Crumley v. State, 135 Ga. App. 394, 217 S.E.2d 464 (1975).

Where information in an affidavit was supplied by a "concerned citizen," and the information had been corroborated by the affiant, the magistrate had sufficient basis for finding that probable cause existed for issuance of a warrant. State v. Davis, 217 Ga. App. 225, 457 S.E.2d 194 (1995), aff'd, 266 Ga. 12, 465 S.E.2d 438 (1996).

Police officer's affidavit was insufficient where the informant had given no facts from which the officer could conclude that contraband might be found in defendants' home, and the officer admitted the information amounted to "just a suspicion" on the part of the informant. State v. Brown, 186 Ga. App. 155, 366 S.E.2d 816 (1988).

Where affidavit contains false statements as to informant. — Where the police officer who executed the search warrant affidavit acknowledged during the hearing and defendant's motion to suppress that the allegedly reliable information was actually just "street talk" picked up at various times from more than one person, and that the police officer/affiant, instead of receiving the material information from a single person possessing appropriate credentials as an informant, had pieced together fragments of information obtained from at least three persons and had concocted the fictitious "reliable informant" from three different people, and, affiant admitted, no single one of the three actual informants could have fully qualified, under the criteria recited in the affidavit as the sort of reliable informant whose information can ordinarily constitute the basis for probable cause for the issuance of a search warrant, the trial court erred in denying defendant's motion to suppress the inculpatory evidence seized during the search. Daniels v. State, 183 Ga. App. 651, 359 S.E.2d 735 (1987).

Affidavit based on information from informant sufficient. — Where the affidavit related that the affiant was told by an informant whose information had previously led to an arrest in a drug case and an arrest and conviction in a burglary case that the informant had personally observed marijuana and cocaine in defendant's possession within the past 36 hours, that information was sufficient, under the totality of the circumstances, to show probable cause to believe that appellant was in possession of contraband and to support issuance of a search warrant. Wells v. State, 180 Ga. App. 133, 348 S.E.2d 681 (1986).

Effect of failure to include informant's basis of knowledge in affidavit or testimony.

— It clearly is the better practice, if an informant has obtained information through personal observation, or contact, or through some other reliable manner, to include this fact in the affidavit or so inform the magistrate considering its issuance; however, failure to include a statement of the informant's basis of knowledge in the affidavit or to specifically inform the magistrate of that basis by sworn testimony does not always cause the resulting warrant to be fatally defective. Where neither the affidavit nor the sworn oral testimony demonstrates that the magistrate was informed of the manner in which the information was obtained by the informant, it is necessary to decide whether the affidavit and testimony concerning the informant's tip supplied the magistrate with a detailed report of the sort which in common experience may be recognized as having been obtained in a reliable way. Shaner v. State, 153 Ga. App. 694, 266 S.E.2d 338 (1980).

Purpose of "underlying circumstances" requirement. — The "underlying circumstances" requirement is designed to locate the original source of the incriminating information and to examine the validity or reliability of that information, but is not concerned with the overall reliability of the informant. Shaner v. State, 153 Ga. App. 694, 266 S.E.2d 338 (1980).

Informant only a "tipster" where participation in the offense merely established probable cause. — Where the informant's participation merely established probable cause to search the defendant's residence, and the defendant is charged with possession with intent to distribute and not for the sale of marijuana to the informant, in the strict sense, the informant was a "tipster" and not a "participant" in the offense charged against the defendant. State v. Martin, 156 Ga. App. 554, 275 S.E.2d 129 (1980).

Search warrant based on informant's observation of contraband was valid. — Where the affidavit related that the informant personally observed contraband at appellants' residence, the informant's observation was sufficient to establish the basis for information of the contraband. Therefore, appellants' contentions of error in regard to the sufficiency of the search warrant are not meritorious. Davidson v. State, 156 Ga. App. 457, 274 S.E.2d 807 (1980).

Informant's observation of where contraband concealed supported probable cause finding. — Evidence affirming details of an informant's tip, i.e., that defendant matched the description of a drug dealer and that defendant had "a large bulge" in the area of the defendant's pants where the informant had seen defendant conceal contraband, was sufficient to verify the tipster's veracity and support the trial court's finding that the police had probable cause on which to arrest the defendant. Manzione v. State, 194 Ga. App. 227, 390 S.E.2d 121 (1990).

Informant's information not stale. — Information was sufficiently detailed to show that it was more than a mere casual rumor or accusation made on reputation and not stale, where it stated that the informant had been on the property "in the very recent past" and that defendant "is presently storing marijuana in the described building." Lang v. State, 168 Ga. App. 693, 310 S.E.2d 276 (1983).

An affidavit for a search warrant stating that an informant has seen drugs on a suspect's premises within the past week is not invalid as containing stale information. Black v. State, 167 Ga. App. 204, 305 S.E.2d 837 (1983).

Stale information held not sole basis of probable cause. — Where, based upon information of an informant, surveillance is carried out for several months and up to one day prior to the securing of the warrant, which surveillance shows an activity and the manner in which it occurs, which activity indicates a very probable violation of the lottery law, the activity being a repetitive one and such as would ordinarily occur when a lottery was being carried on (in the manner as previously stated by the informant) as distinguished from a chance occurrence, the stale information of the informant is not the sole basis of probable cause. Logan v. State, 135 Ga. App. 879, 219 S.E.2d 615 (1975).

4. Hearsay

Hearsay itself can form basis for existence of probable cause if it is reliable or otherwise corroborated, and observations of fellow officers engaged in a common investigation are also plainly a reliable basis for a warrant applied for by one of their number. Dudley v. United States, 320 F. Supp. 456 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

Probable Cause (Cont'd)4. Hearsay (Cont'd)

An arrest may be made upon hearsay evidence. Duffy v. State, 156 Ga. App. 847, 275 S.E.2d 658 (1980).

Requirements for sufficient hearsay. — If hearsay tip of a reliable informer on which warrant is based does not sufficiently state the underlying circumstances from which informant has concluded the defendants are violating the law, or does not sufficiently detail the informant's activities, but is relying on mere casual rumor or general reputation, a warrant, search, or seizure based thereon is illegal. Register v. State, 124 Ga. App. 136, 183 S.E.2d 68 (1971), cert. denied, 405 U.S. 919, 92 S. Ct. 947, 30 L. Ed. 2d 790 (1972).

Creditable hearsay sufficient to support issuance of warrant. — Insufficiency of probable cause for a search warrant does not appear from the fact alone that some or all of the facts recited in an affidavit come from information furnished by others, if there is substantial basis for crediting the hearsay. Burns v. State, 119 Ga. App. 678, 168 S.E.2d 786 (1969).

An affidavit supporting a search warrant may be based on hearsay information so long as there is a substantial basis for crediting the hearsay. Devier v. State, 247 Ga. 635, 277 S.E.2d 729 (1981).

Substantial basis required for crediting hearsay. — Hearsay may support the issuance of a valid warrant if the magistrate is informed of some of the underlying circumstances supporting the affiant's conclusions and the affiant's belief that the informant was credible or the informant's information reliable; there must be a substantial basis for crediting such hearsay. Smith v. State, 136 Ga. App. 17, 220 S.E.2d 11 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 938, 96 S. Ct. 1671, 48 L. Ed. 2d 179 (1976).

Affidavit based on hearsay, without more, insufficient to support issuance. — If the affidavit submitted for the issuance of a search warrant does not set forth the underlying circumstances upon which the inform-er's conclusions are based and does not present facts to show the credibility and reliability of the informer, the magistrate should not issue the warrant. United States v. Williams, 322 F. Supp. 1074 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Necessity of underlying circumstances to support hearsay information. — Although an affidavit may be based on hearsay information and need not reflect the direct personal observations of the affiant, the magistrate must be informed of some of the underlying circumstances from which the officer concluded that the informant, whose identity need not be disclosed, was credible or the informant's information reliable. Gordon v. State, 150 Ga. App. 862, 258 S.E.2d 664 (1979).

Insufficient support where affidavit recites no underlying facts supporting hearsay. — There is insufficient probable cause for the issuance of the search warrant on its face if the affidavit states no factual reasons for the reliability of the unnamed informer nor any facts to support the reiterated, bare conclusion that the property was stolen. Johnson v. State, 128 Ga. App. 51, 195 S.E.2d 754 (1973).

Probable cause not precluded by "hearsay upon hearsay." — That there is "hearsay upon hearsay" for the information upon which an affidavit is based does not preclude a finding of probable cause. Gordon v. State, 150 Ga. App. 862, 258 S.E.2d 664 (1979).

Reliable hearsay information plus affiant's personal observations sufficient support. — Information received from an informant who has proven to be reliable in the past, in conjunction with affiant's personal observation that violators of the law sought to be enforced frequent the place to be searched, is sufficient to sustain a search warrant. Thornton v. State, 125 Ga. App. 374, 187 S.E.2d 583 (1972).

Hearsay information sufficient to support issuance of warrant. — If the underlying circumstances on which the warrant is sought and upon which the informant concluded the stolen articles sought were where the informant claimed them to be are disclosed in the affidavit, the fact that the circumstances involved hearsay information is immaterial so long as the information was sufficient to show probable cause for the issuance of the warrant. Knowles v. State, 124 Ga. App. 377, 183 S.E.2d 617 (1971).

Hearsay declarant reliable where identified as interested citizen. — On the defendant's contention that the affidavit on which a search warrant was based was defective because the hearsay declarants were not shown to be reliable, because the hearsay declarants were identified as interested citizens, the mere averments of those who provided the information were enough to support a presumption of reliability, credibility, and accuracy, and the hearsay statements therefore could serve as the foundation for probable cause. Cash v. State, 166 Ga. App. 835, 305 S.E.2d 618 (1983).

Information relayed by police to other law enforcement officers not double hearsay. — Factual information relayed by police to other law enforcement officers is not per se subject to "double hearsay" objection, question being whether probable cause is shown. Meneghan v. State, 132 Ga. App. 380, 208 S.E.2d 150 (1974).

5. Probable Cause Found

Facts sufficient to find probable cause for search in drug transaction. — Considering the totality of the facts, including an informant's statement, a timely connection between the informant's drug buy at defendant's apartment and the application for a warrant to search that apartment, the drugs found in the informant's car, and observations of the informant entering and leaving defendant's apartment, a magistrate had a substantial basis to find a fair probability that contraband would be found at defendant's apartment. Evans v. State, 263 Ga. App. 572, 588 S.E.2d 764 (2003).

Facts sufficient to find probable cause to arrest defendant for drug offenses. — Probable cause for a warrantless arrest existed since: (1) after receiving information from a county sheriff's department that a certain pager number might be that of a drug dealer, an agent of a narcotics squad called the pager number and arranged a drug buy using a confidential informant; (2) the buy took place, two individuals were arrested, and one of them informed the arresting officers that the defendant had given the arrested person the cocaine to sell and observed the transaction from a nearby alleyway; and (3) the officers went to the defendant's home and found defendant outside the home, running, and carrying a flashlight and a police scanner. Fortson v. State, 247 Ga. App. 533, 544 S.E.2d 719 (2001).

Facts justified officer's belief that officer had seen possession of marijuana. — Because a police officer, upon observing a person smoking what the officer believed to be a marijuana cigarette and upon discovering a partially smoked cigarette in the same area, the officer clearly had probable cause to believe the person possessed less than one ounce of marijuana, a misdemeanor (O.C.G.A. § 16-13-2(b)), thus authorizing a warrantless arrest. Corbitt v. State, 166 Ga. App. 311, 304 S.E.2d 123 (1983).

Odor of burning marijuana coming from defendant's vehicle was sufficient to provide probable cause for the warrantless search of the vehicle since the officer's initial approach was permissible. State v. Folk, 238 Ga. App. 206, 521 S.E.2d 194 (1999).

Trial court erred in granting defendant's motion to suppress since the police had probable cause to search the driver's vehicle because a police officer smelled the odor of burning marijuana coming from the car following a valid traffic stop and the driver gave consent to search the car, the police did not need to establish that probable cause existed to search individual containers in the car which might contain contraband since the probable cause that existed to search the car gave them the right to also search each of the car's containers, and, thus, the trial court should not have suppressed evidence of contraband found in the book bag of the passenger, the defendant. State v. Selph, 261 Ga. App. 541, 583 S.E.2d 212 (2003).

Police dog's positive reaction to presence of drugs as probable cause. — A police dog's positive reaction to the presence of drugs in the defendant's suitcase, along with the other facts present, supplied DEA agents with requisite probable cause to seek a search warrant for the luggage, where the defendant had given false information to the airline concerning the defendant's call back telephone number, as well as false information to a DEA agent concerning the telephone number of the defendant's residence, the defendant was traveling alone on a revalidated ticket paid for with cash from a known source city with little luggage and the defendant became nervous when interrogated by DEA agents. Bothwell v. State, 250 Ga. 573, 300 S.E.2d 126, cert. denied, 463

Probable Cause (Cont'd)5. Probable Cause Found (Cont'd)

U.S. 1210, 103 S. Ct. 3545, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1393 (1983); Carter v. State, 222 Ga. App. 345, 474 S.E.2d 240 (1996).

A drug dog's alert, together with the defendant's behavior, demeanor, and responses to the questions posed by law enforcement officers, provided probable cause for a search warrant for defendant's luggage. Rivera v. State, 247 Ga. App. 713, 545 S.E.2d 105 (2001), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 901, 122 S. Ct. 231, 151 L. Ed. 2d 165 (2001).

Probable cause based on companion's possession of contraband. — Defendant's motion to suppress was properly denied where defendant was stopped at an airport but the initial contact by the officers was terminated by them, the second stop was made only after contraband was discovered in the possession of the defendant's traveling companion, at which point the officers had probable cause to resume their investigation to determine defendant's relationship, if any, to the contraband, the defendant voluntarily accompanied them to the private room and chose to surrender the marijuana in the defendant's possession after the defendant was read the defendant's rights and consented to the search, and the defendant was then arrested and a valid search incident to the arrest revealed that the defendant was in possession of cocaine. Seals v. State, 181 Ga. App. 687, 353 S.E.2d 577 (1987).

Probable cause for murder arrest. — There was probable cause for a murder defendant's arrest where police officers had been informed by other residents in the home where the defendant was living that the defendant had admitted killing the victims and that the defendant had shown the residents a tooth from one of the victims. Stinski v. State, 281 Ga. 783, 642 S.E.2d 1 (2007).

Admitted possession or voluntary production of controlled substance gives rise to probable cause. — Even in the absence of consent, a defendant's admitted possession of controlled substances gives rise to probable cause to search the defendant's body and totebag, and in the alternative, defendant's voluntary production of the controlled substances gives rise to probable cause to arrest defendant for possession of controlled substances. Once probable cause to arrest is established, any search of the person incident to the arrest is valid. United States v. Moeller, 644 F.2d 518 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1097, 102 S. Ct. 669, 70 L. Ed. 2d 638 (1981).

Profiling of drug carrier. — Defendant's fourth amendment rights were not violated when drug agents searched the bag defendant was carrying after defendant got off a train in a Georgia city and defendant fit the profile of a drug courier who a confidential informant told one drug agent would be on the train; defendant's actions in attempting to flee after defendant had consented to speak with another drug agent and the totality of the circumstances in general showed that the drug agents had probable cause to search the bag and, thus, the search was part of a valid arrest. Higdon v. State, 261 Ga. App. 729, 583 S.E.2d 556 (2003).

Probable cause based on earlier corroborated allegations. — Affidavit indicating that attesting agent learned several months earlier that defendant had sold marijuana and that this information was corroborated by other unnamed, but multiple sources, was sufficient to establish probable cause for purposes of a search warrant. Welch v. State, 231 Ga. App. 74, 498 S.E.2d 555 (1998).

Information obtained from reliable confidential informant. — Probable cause existed for a warrantless search of the defendant because: (1) a reliable confidential informant told a police officer that the defendant was transporting cocaine, specifically described the vehicle the defendant would be operating, identified the passenger who would be accompanying the defendant, and identified the route the defendant would be taking; (2) the officers found the vehicle being driven by the defendant traveling in the direction described by the informant, and the defendant was accompanied by the person who had been identified by the informant; (3) the defendant was not completely cooperative when asked to step out of the vehicle; and (4) a search of the defendant revealed a small plastic bag which appeared to contain cocaine residue. Meadows v. State, 247 Ga. App. 634, 545 S.E.2d 76 (2001).

Probable cause supported the issuance of a search warrant since: (1) a reliable confidential informant informed a law enforcement officer about seeing a quantity of an off-white chunky substance in the defendant's residence within the past 72 hours and that the defendant represented the substance as methamphetamine; (2) the informant had provided information in the past month that led to the seizure of controlled substances and the arrest of individuals; (3) the informant rode with the officer to the defendant's home and pointed it out; and (4) the informant gave more detail by alerting the officer that the defendant carried a handgun. Claire v. State, 247 Ga. App. 648, 544 S.E.2d 537 (2001).

Police bulletin description plus additional evidence. — Because the descriptions in a police bulletin clearly were sufficient to justify detaining the defendant based upon the reasonable suspicion that the defendant was wanted for past criminal conduct and the arrest did not occur until after the legitimate discovery of additional evidence caused the officers' reasonable suspicion to ripen into probable cause for defendant's arrest, the arrest being proper, the officers' subsequent search of the defendant's car was justified as being incident to a lawful arrest. Thomas v. Newsome, 821 F.2d 1550 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 967, 108 S. Ct. 461, 98 L. Ed. 2d 401 (1987).

Detailed directions to, and description of, defendant's home. — There was a reasonable basis for probable cause where the affidavit contained detailed directions to the defendant's address as well as a detailed description of the defendant's house. Sims v. State, 207 Ga. App. 353, 427 S.E.2d 842 (1993).

Clearly defined paths between known contraband and defendant's house gave reasonable cause to believe that contraband was present in house. Brooks v. State, 140 Ga. App. 371, 231 S.E.2d 138 (1976).

Probable cause based on prior arrest of driver for driving with suspended license. — There was probable cause for arrest because, upon approaching a vehicle, a police officer recognized the driver as someone the officer had previously stopped and found to be driving with a suspended license, and when asked for the license, the driver stated that the driver did not have one and the officer confirmed via a radio call that the license was indeed suspended. Hightower v. State, 166 Ga. App. 177, 303 S.E.2d 515 (1983).

Handwriting samples described sufficiently. — Where, because of their nature, only a generic description of handwriting samples sought in warrant was possible, there was sufficient probable cause for issuance of the warrant. Lowe v. State, 203 Ga. App. 277, 416 S.E.2d 750, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 906, 416 S.E.2d 750 (1992).

Giving of false name as probable cause. — Defendant's giving of a false name to a Drug Enforcement Administration agent constituted probable cause for the defendant's arrest. Moran v. State, 170 Ga. App. 837, 318 S.E.2d 716 (1984).

Facts sufficient to find probable cause to arrest defendant for battery. — Where, upon arriving at the scene, an officer observed the reported victim bleeding from the head and saw the defendant outside the victim's shop, and where the defendant became hostile when the officer attempted to ask the defendant what had happened, the officer had probable cause to arrest the defendant for a battery upon the victim as well as a battery upon the officer in that the defendant acted in a hostile manner and resisted arrest. Newsome v. State, 149 Ga. App. 415, 254 S.E.2d 381 (1979).

Violation of building code regulation sufficient. — Plaintiffs violated building code regulation by transporting a house through the streets of the county without having obtained a permit or given the county the required 24 hours notice, and damaging a traffic light in the process. In the course of investigating the offense and determining how and whether to cite the plaintiffs, the police officer detained them and although the police officer perhaps could have acted somewhat more quickly in making a determination and perhaps could have been more solicitous of the discomfort that the plaintiffs purportedly suffered by having to sit in a hot car during the process, neither the officer nor the county violated the plaintiffs' constitutional rights. Lyle v. Dodd, 857 F. Supp. 958 (N.D. Ga. 1994).

Facts constituting probable cause to search vehicle for non-tax-paid distilled spirits. See United States v. Ramey, 464 F.2d 1240 (5th Cir. 1972).

Probable cause for stop of vehicle near burglary site. — Because a police officer, answering a burglary call at a house located on a narrow, sparsely populated, little travelled dirt road at 11:40 P.M., stopped a truck the police officer noticed driving by the burglarized home, and upon stopping the truck, noticed the smell of alcohol upon the defendant driver and arrested the driver for driving under the influence, although no traffic violation was observed, the officer had a reasonable, articulable suspicion to justify stopping defendant, and the defendant's fourth amendment rights were not violated. Smith v. State, 182 Ga. App. 58, 354 S.E.2d 681 (1987).

Probable Cause (Cont'd)5. Probable Cause Found (Cont'd)

Facts constituting probable cause that vehicle contained non-tax-paid whiskey. — See United States v. Hill, 442 F.2d 259 (5th Cir. 1971).

Probable cause based on belief that defendant was driving under suspended license. — Because a police officer learned that defendant's license was suspended and the officer had just seen defendant driving a car, the officer had probable cause to arrest defendant for driving without a license; because the officer could thereafter search defendant incident to arrest, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion to suppress. Edge v. State, 269 Ga. App. 88, 603 S.E.2d 502 (2004).

6. Probable Cause Not Found

Arrest based upon subjective evaluation not supported by probable cause. — Because accused never denied having something in the accused's boot but said the bulge was money, and the officer, while acknowledging that the bulge could have been currency, made the subjective evaluation that it was contraband, and that subjective evaluation became an integral part of the officer's decision to arrest the accused, the law enforcement officer did not have probable cause to arrest the accused, and the accused's motion to suppress the evidence uncovered in the ensuing search should have been granted. Rebeiro v. State, 186 Ga. App. 518, 367 S.E.2d 857 (1988).

Hindsight as basis. — The existence of probable cause cannot be determined on the basis of hindsight, such as a subsequent post-arrest search of defendant which produces drugs. Polke v. State, 203 Ga. App. 306, 417 S.E.2d 22 (1992).

Probable cause nonexistent when rug first seen by officer. — When the officer first viewed the rug, officer only suspected that it was one of the stolen turquoise rugs. It was not immediately apparent to the officer that the rug was stolen property; thus, it cannot be said that the officer had probable cause to seize a rug when it was first seen by the officer. Hogan v. State, 140 Ga. App. 716, 231 S.E.2d 802 (1976).

Mere suspicion that two young people look nervous and that "things didn't add up" is insufficient to warrant an arrest. Hill v. State, 140 Ga. App. 121, 230 S.E.2d 336 (1976).

Spouse's prior drug possession insufficient. — Possession by defendant's spouse of contraband drugs in another county some two weeks prior did not show probable cause. State v. Suddeth, 207 Ga. App. 103, 427 S.E.2d 76 (1993).

Facts insufficient to establish probable cause. — Even though a tip, combined with the discovery of defendant and prior information relating to the defendant, gave rise to an articulable suspicion of criminal wrongdoing sufficient to support an investigatory detention, these facts were insufficient under the circumstances to establish probable cause for the defendant's arrest for unlawful possession of drugs. Polke v. State, 203 Ga. App. 306, 417 S.E.2d 22 (1992).

A nervous black person standing outside an apartment complex at 7:00 P.M. with the person's hand in the person's pocket did not, standing alone, give rise to an articulable suspicion that the person was engaged in unlawful activity. State v. Banks, 223 Ga. App. 838, 479 S.E.2d 168 (1996).

Where a white person in a black neighborhood late at night picked up a black person at a location considered by police to be a high-crime area and then drove slowly through the neighborhood, such behavior was not alone sufficient to indicate that the individuals were or might be engaged in illegal activity. Hughes v. State, 269 Ga. 258, 497 S.E.2d 790 (1998).

Where the defendant was arrested without a warrant, but none of the statutory exceptions to the warrant requirement applied, no probable cause existed, and no authority to enter the defendant's dormitory room had been given, the arrest was illegal and a subsequent confession subject to exclusion. State v. Guillory, 236 Ga. App. 230, 511 S.E.2d 591 (1999).

Stopping in a parking lot while lost, being from out-of-state, and being in a car with a tag from another state were not factors that alone were sufficient to suggest criminal activity, and the fact that defendants were parked in a high drug area did not constitute a justification for a brief detention. State v. Kwiatkowski, 238 Ga. App. 390, 519 S.E.2d 43 (1999).

An officer who stopped defendant's vehicle for tinted windows had no probable cause to detain the defendant while the officer obtained the services of a drug dog to investigate the sealed package in the trunk for which defendant had withdrawn consent to search; the officer's knowledge that drugs were being transported down the interstate provided no basis whatsoever to establish probable cause as to defendant. Montero v. State, 245 Ga. App. 181, 537 S.E.2d 429 (2000).

Probable cause did not support a search warrant since: (1) the affidavit failed to mention that it was based on hearsay evidence from two confidential informants; (2) the affidavit failed to disclose that one informant had a criminal background and was being paid for the information; (3) the affidavit had no information regarding the reliability of the second informant; (4) the attesting officer had no personal knowledge of the reliability of either informant; and (5) there was insufficient corroboration of the information supplied by the informants to otherwise establish their credibility. Elom v. State, 248 Ga. App. 273, 546 S.E.2d 50 (2001).

Even though defendant matched a "sex offender profile," because there was no link established between defendant's apartment and the alleged molestation of the victim, the search of defendant's apartment and subsequent search of computer files was illegal. State v. Staley, 249 Ga. App. 207, 548 S.E.2d 26 (2001).

Since a trial court found probable cause for a vehicle search based, in part, on the discovery of contraband in the vehicle, and it was unclear whether the trial court would have reached the same result absent this factor, the trial court's order denying the defendant's motion to suppress in this regard was improper. Quick v. State, 279 Ga. App. 835, 632 S.E.2d 742 (2006).

Facts insufficient to provide reasonable cause to believe defendant had committed burglary. — The fact the appellant's automobile was seen late at night, 500 yards from the location of a recent burglary, did not in and of itself provide reasonable cause to believe that the defendant had committed the burglary or that the defendant's automobile contained stolen property. State v. Avret, 156 Ga. App. 527, 275 S.E.2d 113 (1980).

Reasonable suspicion not probable cause. — Where the drug enforcement officer identified travel characteristics of defendant consistent with drug trafficking; an incorrect phone number was given to a Miami ticket agent; the defendant showed manifestations of nervousness and gave inconsistent answers regarding whom defendant was visiting in Miami; and a roll of plastic wrap was found in defendant's backpack, while these factors may give rise to a reasonable suspicion of illicit drug activity, they were insufficient, even when combined, to constitute probable cause to believe a suspect is transporting drugs. State v. Williams, 242 Ga. App. 34, 528 S.E.2d 554 (2000).

Reasonableness

Factors for determining reasonableness. — In determining the reasonableness of a particular law enforcement practice, a court must weigh the public interest promoted by the practice against its intrusion upon the personal rights of the individual protected by the fourth amendment. Some of the factors that the court should consider are the scope of the particular intrusion, the manner in which it is conducted, the justification for initiating it, and the place in which it is conducted. Wanger v. Bonner, 621 F.2d 675 (5th Cir. 1980).

Unreasonableness depends on facts. — Reasonableness in terms of search and seizure is not determined by the hindsight of appellate court judges after weeks of academic deliberation; it is determined by the foresight of the police officer on the scene who must act in the public interest in a very short space of time. The reasonableness of the officer's action must be judged in relation to the circumstances then existing and is in the first instance a question for the trial judge to determine. Croker v. State, 114 Ga. App. 43, 150 S.E.2d 294 (1966).

Reasonableness (Cont'd)

The test of reasonableness cannot be stated in rigid and absolute terms and each case is to be decided on its own facts and circumstances. Watts v. Cannon, 224 Ga. 797, 164 S.E.2d 780 (1968).

Whether a search and seizure is unreasonable within the meaning of the fourth amendment depends upon the facts and circumstances of each case. United States v. Cassell, 542 F.2d 279 (5th Cir. 1976), cert. denied, 430 U.S. 985, 97 S. Ct. 1684, 52 L. Ed. 2d 380 (1977).

Whether a search and seizure is unreasonable within meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 4 depends upon facts and circumstances of each case. Martasin v. State, 155 Ga. App. 396, 271 S.E.2d 2 (1980).

The standard against which U.S. Const., amend. 4 requires that we judge the validity of a search or seizure is one of reasonableness in light of the totality of the circumstances. Wanger v. Bonner, 621 F.2d 675 (5th Cir. 1980).

It was reasonable for police officers, knowing that premises were to be the subject of the immediate execution of a search warrant, to detain temporarily a vehicle containing the defendant which had just left the property, in order to identify the occupants and see if one of them was the person they had just overheard discussing gambling and drugs on the phone. Garmon v. State, 235 Ga. App. 671, 510 S.E.2d 350 (1998).

"Reasonable" not construed in abstract. — The word "reasonable" with respect to arrests is not to be construed in the abstract or in a vacuum unrelated to the field to which it applies. Standards which might be reasonable for the apprehension of bank robbers might not be reasonable for the arrest of narcotics peddlers. United States v. Nooks, 446 F.2d 1283 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 945, 92 S. Ct. 299, 30 L. Ed. 2d 261 (1971).

Reasonableness a question for judge. — In the first instance the reasonableness of a search is a question for the trial judge to determine. Croker v. State, 114 Ga. App. 43, 150 S.E.2d 294 (1966).

What may be unreasonable search of house may be reasonable in the case of a motorcar; but even in the case of motorcars, the test is still whether the search is unreasonable. Croker v. State, 114 Ga. App. 43, 150 S.E.2d 294 (1966).

Stop was reasonable in light of the verification of the information supplied by the tipster, coupled with the agents' observations of defendant's behavior upon exiting the plane and defendant's hostility upon being advised of the reason for the stop. Gordon v. State, 242 Ga. App. 50, 528 S.E.2d 838 (2000).

Searches1. In General

When search occurs. — A search occurs when an expectation of privacy that society is prepared to consider reasonable is infringed. Thomas v. State, 203 Ga. App. 529, 417 S.E.2d 353, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 908, 417 S.E.2d 353 (1992).

Reasonableness determines legality of search. — Test of whether search was legal, is whether search was reasonable. Andreu v. State, 124 Ga. App. 793, 186 S.E.2d 137 (1971).

Police officers' pat-down search of the defendant, after detaining the defendant as the defendant left the site of a house about to be searched pursuant to a search warrant, was reasonable and justified under the circumstances. Garmon v. State, 235 Ga. App. 671, 510 S.E.2d 350 (1998).

Because the defendant was detained after leaving a residence at which a search warrant was about to be executed, and because the police, having ascertained the defendant's identity, relied on information regarding prior drug involvement to initiate a "free air search," there was sufficient articulable suspicion to justify the search. Garmon v. State, 235 Ga. App. 671, 510 S.E.2d 350 (1998).

Reasonable articulable suspicion existed to stop defendant in an investigative detention after a motel manager notified the police that drugs were being sold from a specific motel room, an officer placed the motel room under surveillance, defendant approached the motel room door while looking to see if anyone was observing, defendant walked away when the officer approached, and defendant refused to take hands out of pants pockets after the officer caught up with the defendant; therefore, the bag of crack cocaine found on the ground where defendant had been ordered to lie down was admissible evidence. Edwards v. State, 253 Ga. App. 837, 560 S.E.2d 735 (2002).

Reasonableness of search is not determined by hindsight of appellate court judges after weeks of academic deliberation; it is determined by the foresight of the police officer on the scene who must act in the public interest in a very short space of time. The reasonableness of the officer's action must be judged in relation to the circumstances then existing and is in the first instance a question for the trial judge to determine. Andreu v. State, 124 Ga. App. 793, 186 S.E.2d 137 (1971); Meneghan v. State, 132 Ga. App. 380, 208 S.E.2d 150 (1974).

Requirements of reasonable search. — Even though the execution of a warrant is directed to all peace officers, a search pursuant to it meets the requirements of the United States and Georgia Constitutions if it was limited in its scope to physically described persons in a specific vicinity, and the description sufficiently permitted a prudent officer with a search warrant to be able to locate the person and place definitely and with reasonable certainty. Fomby v. State, 120 Ga. App. 387, 170 S.E.2d 585 (1969), cert. denied, 397 U.S. 1008, 90 S. Ct. 1236, 25 L. Ed. 2d 421 (1970).

General searches are prohibited. Hogan v. State, 140 Ga. App. 716, 231 S.E.2d 802 (1976).

Grounds for search must satisfy objective standards which ensure that invasion of personal privacy is justified by legitimate governmental interests. The governmental interests to be served in the detection or prevention of crime are subject to traditional standards of probable cause to believe that incriminating evidence will be found. Bowers v. State, 151 Ga. App. 46, 258 S.E.2d 623 (1979), aff'd, 245 Ga. 367, 265 S.E.2d 57 (1980).

To violate U.S. Const., amend. 4, a search must be: (1) an unreasonable search; and (2) by a state or federal officer. A search by a private individual for purely private reasons does not fall within fourth amendment proscriptions. United States v. McDaniel, 574 F.2d 1224 (5th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 952, 99 S. Ct. 2181, 60 L. Ed. 2d 1057 (1979).

Search requires state conduct. — Public utility's termination of plaintiff's employment pursuant to the results of a urinalysis drug screening test were not actionable under U.S. Const., amend. 4 as it was conducted by a private actor under no governmental compulsion to do so. Parker v. Atlanta Gas Light Co., 818 F. Supp. 345 (S.D. Ga. 1993).

Right of privacy balanced against right of search. — When the right of privacy must reasonably yield to the right of search is, as a rule, to be decided by a judicial officer, not by a police officer or a government enforcement agent. Chapman v. United States, 365 U.S. 610, 81 S. Ct. 776, 5 L. Ed. 2d 828 (1961).

Necessity for kind of search made is weighed heavily in balance against expectation of privacy. State v. Young, 234 Ga. 488, 216 S.E.2d 586 (1975).

There can be no ready test for determining reasonableness of a search other than by balancing the need to search against the invasion which the search entails. In determining the reasonableness of a search, the social utility of the search must be balanced against the individual's reasonable expectation of privacy. State v. Young, 234 Ga. 488, 216 S.E.2d 586 (1975).

Where a fourth amendment intrusion serves special governmental needs, beyond the normal need for law enforcement, it is necessary to balance the individual's privacy expectations against the Government's interests to determine whether it is impractical to require a warrant or some level of individualized suspicion in the particular context. Chandler v. Miller, 952 F. Supp. 804 (N.D. Ga. 1994).

No standing to challenge search and seizure. — Where defendants deny having any right of possession or interest in the searched building or the items seized, they have no standing to challenge the search or seizure. Byers v. State, 204 Ga. App. 552, 420 S.E.2d 23 (1992), cert. denied, 507 U.S. 928, 113 S. Ct. 1305, 122 L. Ed. 2d 694 (1993).

Balancing of employer's and agency's interests. — The employer's right under U.S. Const., amend. 4 to be free from unreasonable searches must be offset against the weight to be accorded Occupational Safety and Health Administration's need to determine if the regulations it has issued to the industry are too oppressive. West Point-Pepperell, Inc. v. Marshall, 496 F. Supp. 1178 (N.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd on other grounds, 689 F.2d 950 (11th Cir. 1982).

Searches (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Reasonableness of search and nexus of seized items thereto. — Where an investigation of the accused was underway in connection with the accused's forging and uttering stolen bonds, the accused's use of a bank account in an assumed name, and the accused's forged endorsements of stolen bonds, and where the accused was connected in an affidavit to such a scheme, and where documents seized pursuant to a search warrant were used as handwriting exemplars, the nexus of the seized documents to the search and to their use as handwriting exemplars was ample. United States v. Munroe, 421 F.2d 644 (5th Cir. 1970), cert. denied, 400 U.S. 851, 91 S. Ct. 79, 27 L. Ed. 2d 89 (1970).

Reasonable suspicion based on specific and articulate facts. — Because the police officer had reasonable suspicion based on specific and articulable facts that defendant was engaged in criminal activity, the brief holdover of defendant until the canine unit arrived did not amount to a violation of defendant's rights. United States v. Gonzalez, 952 F. Supp. 813 (M.D. Ga. 1997), aff'd, 189 F.3d 483 (11th Cir. 1999).

Search need not precede formal arrest if probable cause exists absent the result of the search and if formal arrest follows on the heels of the search. United States v. Elsoffer, 671 F.2d 1294 (11th Cir. 1982); Berry v. State, 163 Ga. App. 705, 294 S.E.2d 562 (1982).

Extent of search. — A search may be as extensive as reasonably required to locate the objects of the search. When searching for documents, some perusal may be needed to determine their relevance, and removal of documents for subsequent review can be appropriate. United States v. Lambert, 887 F.2d 1568 (11th Cir. 1989).

Knocking on outer doors as search. — Where a police officer enters upon private property only to the extent of knocking on outer doors, the fourth amendment is not violated. Dean v. State, 200 Ga. App. 752, 409 S.E.2d 667, cert. denied, 200 Ga. App. 895, 409 S.E.2d 667 (1991).

Abandoned property. — The constitutional protection of the fourth and fourteenth amendments does not apply to property which has been abandoned. Thus, if a defendant has abandoned property, there is no entitlement to protection of that property by the fourth or fourteenth amendments from an illegal search or seizure. Gresham v. State, 204 Ga. App. 540, 420 S.E.2d 71 (1992).

Not all containers and packages found by police during search deserve protection of U.S. Const., amend. 4. Thus, some containers (for example a kit of burglar's tools or a gun case) by their very nature cannot support any reasonable expectation of privacy because their contents can be inferred from their outward appearance. Dressler v. State, 158 Ga. App. 11, 279 S.E.2d 454 (1981).

Stolen goods found during lawful search for other items. — Once officers lawfully conducting a search for marijuana ascertained that the contents of a bag was silverware of various patterns and one of the officers believed the patterns were consistent with certain silverware reported stolen as well as the fact that it was concealed in a container which reasonably could hold marijuana and was located in a place where one does not expect to find silverware, this was sufficient to arouse the suspicion that the silverware was stolen and justify its seizure. Whittington v. State, 165 Ga. App. 763, 302 S.E.2d 617 (1983).

Disclaimer of contraband found on companion after it is in possession of government did not preclude search. — Where defendant's disclaimer of a companion and the companion's luggage followed the search, the fact that defendant's disclaimer occurred after the contraband was in the possession of the government did not preclude a finding of abandonment of the defendant's expectations of privacy with respect to the luggage, since at the time the defendant denied knowing the companion the defendant was not aware that the cocaine had been discovered, and during the suppression hearing the defendant admitted that the defendant never intended to acknowledge an ownership interest in the bag or retake possession unless the companion reached the companion's final destination without incident. United States v. McKennon, 814 F.2d 1539 (11th Cir. 1987).

Incrimatory matter does not legalize unlawful search. — If one is unlawfully searched, fact that incriminatory matter is found will not render the search legal. Willis v. State, 122 Ga. App. 455, 177 S.E.2d 487 (1970).

Illegal search taints all evidence obtained. — An illegal search of the defendant's watch pocket tainted all evidence obtained as a result of the search and the trial court erred when it denied the defendant's motion to suppress evidence found in an inventory search of the defendant's car arising out of the arrest which had followed the illegal search. Corley v. State, 236 Ga. App. 302, 512 S.E.2d 41 (1999).

An after-the-search procedural deficit is not a violation of any right under U.S. Const., amend. 4. United States v. Baty, 486 F.2d 240 (5th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 416 U.S. 942, 94 S. Ct. 1948, 40 L. Ed. 2d 294 (1974).

Request for identification by a police officer does not constitute a "custodial search." United States v. Jones, 352 F. Supp. 369 (S.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 481 F.2d 1402 (5th Cir. 1973).

Search not done at point of detention. — Search is not rendered illegal by fact that it was not done at point of detention. Davis v. State, 135 Ga. App. 931, 219 S.E.2d 598 (1975).

Police may assume belongings on premises are part of it. — Without notice of some sort of the ownership of a belonging, the police are entitled to assume that all objects within premises lawfully subject to search under a warrant are part of those premises for the purpose of executing the warrant. Childers v. State, 158 Ga. App. 613, 281 S.E.2d 349 (1981).

Broadscale search of premises in executing arrest warrant. — Police officers who entered a home while executing an arrest warrant for the homeowner's child had no authority to conduct a broadscale search, looking into cabinets and drawers. Nash v. Douglas County, 733 F. Supp. 100 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

Search in executing probation arrest warrant. — Contraband seized in a search of defendant's home upon execution of a probation arrest warrant should have been suppressed because the warrant was invalid, having been issued on the basis of an earlier illegal search of defendant. Boatright v. State, 225 Ga. App. 181, 483 S.E.2d 659 (1997).

Searches of persons not named in search warrant but found on premises to be searched are illegal absent independent justification for a personal search. Childers v. State, 158 Ga. App. 613, 281 S.E.2d 349 (1981).

Probable cause required to search visitor's belongings. — An analysis which focuses entirely on whether a belonging is in the physical possession of a nonresident visitor to premises searchable under a warrant, while it serves to protect the zone of privacy around the visitor's person, ignores the substantial interest the visitor has in the privacy of all the visitor's possessions, wherever located. To overcome that interest, the federal and state Constitutions require a warrant supported by probable cause. Childers v. State, 158 Ga. App. 613, 281 S.E.2d 349 (1981).

Notice that items belong to visitor to searched premises. — Whether the police had notice that they were searching the personal effects of a visitor to searched premises must be determined on the facts of each case. Childers v. State, 158 Ga. App. 613, 281 S.E.2d 349 (1981).

Pat down search of passenger in a stopped vehicle. — Trial court erred in denying a motion to suppress evidence by a passenger in a vehicle that was stopped for a traffic violation because the state failed to meet its burden of being able to articulate a reasonable basis for the officer conducting a pat-down search of the passenger in that searching passengers who exit a stopped vehicle as a common practice was not sufficient grounds to justify the pat-down search of defendant. Milby v. State, 256 Ga. App. 429, 569 S.E.2d 256 (2002).

Consent search by owner uncovers illegal drugs of visitor. — Trial court did not err in denying a motion to suppress evidence where officers found marijuana in a bag under a bed in a trailer after the trailer's owner consented to the search and the person who owned the bag and was visiting the trailer at first denied ownership of the bag. Osment v. State, 256 Ga. App. 591, 569 S.E.2d 262 (2002).

Frisk must be confined to search for weapons. — A frisk involves the patting-down of a person's outer clothing by a police officer. Unlike a full search, a frisk is conducted solely for the purpose of insuring the safety of the officer and of others nearby, not to procure evidence for use at a subsequent trial; it must therefore be confined in scope to an intrusion reasonably designed to discover guns, knives, clubs, or other hidden instruments for the assault of the police officer. Clark v. State, 208 Ga. App. 896, 432 S.E.2d 220 (1993).

Searches (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Because a police officer was unable to provide specific facts to justify a concern that the item in defendant's pocket was a weapon, defendant's fourth amendment rights were violated when the officer reached into defendant's pockets; consequently, the trial court erred in denying defendant's motion to suppress. Castleberry v. State, 275 Ga. App. 37, 619 S.E.2d 747 (2005).

Search of persons arriving on premises being searched. — The pat down or "frisk" of the defendant when the defendant arrived at the scene of a police search, given all of the facts known to the police on the scene, i.e., that the defendant carried a gun and that earlier arrestees were frightened of the defendant, did not violate U.S. Const., amend. 4. United States v. Bonds, 829 F.2d 1072 (11th Cir. 1987).

Personal belongings brought by owner on visit to friend's house retain their constitutional protection until their owner meaningfully abdicates control or responsibility. Childers v. State, 158 Ga. App. 613, 281 S.E.2d 349 (1981).

Search by merely testing locks not illegal. — A law officer does not commit an illegal search when, with keys taken from the accused, the law officer tests the locks, but does not then enter the premises, never crosses the threshold of the premises, does not open the door, does not see or hear anything inside, receives no response to the law officer's knock, and then makes an affidavit and obtains a search warrant. Thomas v. State, 145 Ga. App. 69, 243 S.E.2d 250 (1978).

Normal security sweep prompting intrusion. — Officers who find an apparently closed business unlocked during a normal security sweep may conduct a limited intrusion on the business premises for the sole purpose of securing the area and ensuring no intruders are present. Banks v. State, 229 Ga. App. 414, 493 S.E.2d 923 (1997).

Searches of prisoners' cells. — No one can rationally doubt that room searches represent an appropriate security measure and neither the district court nor the Court of Appeals has prohibited such searches, and even the most zealous advocate of prisoner's right would not suggest that a warrant is required to conduct such a search. Riden v. State, 151 Ga. App. 654, 261 S.E.2d 409 (1979).

A trespass does not of itself constitute an illegal search. Ehlers v. Bogue, 626 F.2d 1314 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 909, 101 S. Ct. 1979, 68 L. Ed. 2d 298 (1981).

Observations of defendant from adjacent field not illegal search. — Observations of defendant, a known liquor violator, from an adjacent property owner's field about 50 yards away, by the use of binoculars, did not constitute an illegal search. United States v. Grimes, 426 F.2d 706 (5th Cir. 1970).

First-tier encounter. — Encounter between defendant, who was sitting with another person in a parked car at night near the edge of a wooded area, and three police officers who approached the car was a first-tier encounter that did not require an articulable suspicion, and contraband on defendant's person that defendant proffered in a consensual search was admissible at trial. Carrera v. State, 261 Ga. App. 832, 584 S.E.2d 2 (2003).

Reasonable cause sufficient to carry on clandestine surveillance in public toilets. — Where the police have reasonable cause to believe that public toilet stalls are being used in the commission of crime, and when they confine their activities to the times when such crimes are most likely to occur, they are entitled to institute clandestine surveillance, even though they do not have probable cause to believe that the particular persons whom they may thus catch in flagrante delicto have committed or will commit the crime. The public interest in its privacy must, to that extent, be subordinated to the public interest in law enforcement. Mitchell v. State, 120 Ga. App. 447, 170 S.E.2d 765 (1969).

Strip search of juvenile. — Law enforcement officers may subject a juvenile who is lawfully in custody to a strip search based upon reasonable suspicion that the juvenile is concealing a weapon or contraband, when the strip search is conducted in the least intrusive manner, even where the juvenile is in custody after being arrested for an offense that is not a felony. Justice v. City of Peachtree City, 961 F.2d 188 (11th Cir. 1992).

School students. — Even though a teacher had the requisite suspicion to conduct some type of search of the students in the teacher's fifth grade class for missing money, the conduct of strip searches exceeded the bounds of reasonableness, which means that they also exceeded constitutional limits. Thomas v. Clayton County Bd. of Educ., 94 F. Supp. 2d 1290 (N.D. Ga. 1999).

When there is merely generalized suspicion that one member of an entire class is hiding some contraband, the nature of the contraband becomes an important consideration in deciding how intrusive the search should be. Thomas v. Clayton County Bd. of Educ., 94 F. Supp. 2d 1290 (N.D. Ga. 1999).

Searches of students, during which the students were required to remove articles of clothing and to reveal their underwear, following the apparent disappearance of an envelope containing $26 from the teacher's desk were unconstitutional since the disappearance of $26 did not present such an extreme threat to school discipline or safety that the students could properly be subjected to intrusive strip searches without individualized suspicion; however, a more limited search of a single student, who entered the restroom in which searches were being conducted, was not unconstitutional. Thomas v. Roberts, 261 F.3d 1160 (11th Cir. 2001).

Strip searches to discover contraband. — There is no reason to differentiate between strip searches to discover contraband to protect the security of the institution and strip searches within the institution which may lead to contraband (drugs) to be used as evidence of a crime. Justice v. City of Peachtree City, 961 F.2d 188 (11th Cir. 1992).

Degree of intrusion into suspect's privacy. — The degree of intrusion into a suspect's privacy is relevant in deciding whether any of the suspect's constitutional rights have been infringed. Thus, intrusions into the human body, because of their extremely invasive nature, require more justification to satisfy the fourth amendment, than does a limited stop and frisk. United States v. Michael, 645 F.2d 252 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 950, 102 S. Ct. 489, 70 L. Ed. 2d 257 (1981).

Slight physical intrusion is insignificant if it infringes no privacy interest. United States v. Michael, 645 F.2d 252 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 950, 102 S. Ct. 489, 70 L. Ed. 2d 257 (1981).

Obtaining of contraband during pat-down. — Because an officer was patting-down defendant's outer garments in search of weapons or contraband and felt what seemed to be contraband in a pocket that was accessible only from the inside of defendant's jacket, the agent acted well within the scope of a reasonable narcotics pat-down by reaching into that inside pocket and removing what was later determined to be cocaine hydrochloride. United States v. Smith, 649 F.2d 305 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 460 U.S. 1068, 103 S. Ct. 1521, 75 L. Ed. 2d 945 (1983).

Officer who exceeds a pat-down search without first discovering an object which feels reasonable, like a knife, gun, or club, must be able to point to specific and articulable facts which reasonably support a suspicion that the particular suspect is armed with an atypical weapon which would feel like the object felt during the pat-down. Only then can judges satisfy the fourth amendment's requirement of a neutral evaluation of the reasonableness of a particular search by comparing the facts with the officer's view of those facts. Holtzendorf v. State, 125 Ga. App. 747, 188 S.E.2d 879 (1972).

Search of male defendant's outer clothing and pockets by female police officer was not an unreasonable search in contravention of fourth amendment rights to personal privacy and dignity. Although a male officer was present and could have conducted the search, the search was not of such an intrusive nature that it could not be conducted by a female officer. Singer v. State, 156 Ga. App. 416, 274 S.E.2d 612 (1980).

Search of pants pocket of individual who was not named in a warrant but who was on premises believed to be frequented by purchasers of illegal drugs was authorized where the warrant authorized searching the premises and any persons who might reasonably be involved in the crime of possession of illegal drugs. Jenkins v. State, 184 Ga. App. 844, 363 S.E.2d 35 (1987).

Searches (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Searches of item carried under person's arm and of item in person's pocket have been treated as searches of the person. Childers v. State, 158 Ga. App. 613, 281 S.E.2d 349 (1981).

Surgical extraction of bullet from defendant's leg. — Where there was no medical reason to remove a bullet from defendant's leg and the procedure required to retrieve the evidence posed an unnecessary risk to defendant's health, the trial court's order requiring surgical removal of the bullet overstepped defendant's fourth amendment right and the court erred in admitting testimony regarding defendant's resistance to removal of the bullet. Curry v. State, 217 Ga. App. 623, 458 S.E.2d 385 (1995).

Search of purse found close to defendant. — Police, executing a search warrant in the home of defendant's child, properly searched a purse found a few inches away from defendant, where the child was absent and the purse was by its nature a holding object and one capable of concealment of such items as drugs or weapons. Bonds v. State, 188 Ga. App. 135, 372 S.E.2d 448, cert. denied, 188 Ga. App. 911, 372 S.E.2d 448 (1988).

Use of seized property in investigation. — Officers were not required to obtain a warrant to use a cap that was seized from defendant at the time of arrest as a scent article for sniff dogs employed in a search near the crime scene. Carter v. State, 224 Ga. App. 367, 480 S.E.2d 376 (1997).

Use of trained dogs. — The use of a "narcotics" dog, especially trained to detect marijuana and narcotics, is an authorized investigative technique. Lockhart v. State, 166 Ga. App. 555, 305 S.E.2d 22 (1983); State v. Montford, 217 Ga. App. 339, 457 S.E.2d 229 (1995).

Use of a trained drug detection dog, in a location where the dog is entitled to be, to sniff the exterior of a container, is not an unreasonable search. O'Keefe v. State, 189 Ga. App. 519, 376 S.E.2d 406, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 913, 376 S.E.2d 406 (1988).

A dog sniff of a person's property located in a public place is not a search within the meaning of the fourth amendment. Hearn v. Board of Pub. Educ., 191 F.3d 1329 (11th Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1109, 120 S. Ct. 1962, 146 L. Ed. 2d 794 (2000).

Pistol thrown into vacant lot. — Where the appellant was not trying to hide the pistol but threw it in an overgrown vacant lot, separated from the appellant's back yard by a brick wall and shed, unwarranted search of the area did not intrude upon the appellant's reasonable expectations of privacy. Simmons v. State, 164 Ga. App. 643, 298 S.E.2d 313 (1982).

Denial of motion to suppress. — There was no error in denial of a motion to suppress the evidence, where the items seized from the home were obviously relevant to the crime and were properly seized as evidence and the warrants were issued by a neutral and detached magistrate. Ward v. State, 262 Ga. 293, 417 S.E.2d 130 (1992), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1084, 113 S. Ct. 1061, 122 L. Ed. 2d 366 (1993).

2. Warrantless Searches

Per se unreasonableness of warrantless searches. — A search without warrant is prima facie illegal and must be shown to come within some recognized exception before the evidence can be admitted. Hunter v. State, 127 Ga. App. 664, 194 S.E.2d 680 (1972).

The United States Supreme Court has held that warrantless searches are per se unreasonable under the fourth amendment subject only to a few specifically established and well-delineated exceptions, with the requirement that those seeking exemption from the rule must show exigency that necessitated search without a judicially approved warrant. Lowe v. Hopper, 400 F. Supp. 970 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd, 520 F.2d 1405 (5th Cir. 1975).

Rule that warrantless searches are per se unreasonable does not apply to evidence discovered in inventorying the effects of arrestees or suspects that are properly in possession of law enforcement officers. Lowe v. Hopper, 400 F. Supp. 970 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd, 520 F.2d 1405 (5th Cir. 1975).

Searches conducted outside judicial process, without prior approval by judge or magistrate, are per se unreasonable subject only to a few specifically established and well-delineated exceptions. State v. Guhl, 140 Ga. App. 23, 230 S.E.2d 22 (1976), rev'd on other grounds sub nom. Mitchell v. State, 239 Ga. 3, 235 S.E.2d 509 (1977).

Search without warrant is per se unreasonable unless within certain clearly defined exceptions. Williams v. State, 157 Ga. App. 476, 277 S.E.2d 923, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 823, 102 S. Ct. 109, 70 L. Ed. 2d 95 (1981).

Searches conducted outside the judicial process, without prior approval by a judge or magistrate, are per se unreasonable under the fourth amendment, subject to a few specifically established and well-delineated exceptions, which must be shown by those who seek the exemption to be necessary under the exigencies of the situation. Brown v. State, 181 Ga. App. 768, 353 S.E.2d 572 (1987).

Warrantless searches must come under recognized exception. — Generally, searches conducted without the prior approval of a judge or magistrate must be justified under one of the specifically established and well-delineated exceptions to the warrant requirement. McDonald v. State, 156 Ga. App. 143, 273 S.E.2d 881 (1980).

Searches conducted without prior approval of judge or magistrate must be justified under one of the specifically established and well-delineated exceptions to the warrant requirement. United States v. Gaultney, 581 F.2d 1137 (5th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 446 U.S. 907, 100 S. Ct. 1833, 64 L. Ed. 2d 259 (1980).

Warrantless conduct by police. — Questions as to whether warrantless conduct by the police is lawful under the fourth amendment are not strictly determined by common-law property law concepts, but are determined by whether the police action was reasonable under all the circumstances. Perry v. State, 204 Ga. App. 643, 419 S.E.2d 922 (1992).

Burden on government to show that warrantless search is within one of the exceptions to the warrant requirements of U.S. Const., amend. 4. Lowe v. Hopper, 400 F. Supp. 970 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd, 520 F.2d 1405 (5th Cir. 1975).

Requirement of warrant not absolute. — U.S. Const., amend. 4 has never been held to require that every valid search and seizure be effected under authority of search warrant. Search and seizure incident to lawful arrest is a practice of ancient origin and has long been an integral part of the law enforcement procedures of the United States and of the individual states. Cash v. State, 222 Ga. 55, 148 S.E.2d 420 (1966).

U.S. Const., amend. 4 has never been held to require that every valid search and seizure be effected under authority of a search warrant. Watts v. Cannon, 224 Ga. 797, 164 S.E.2d 780 (1968).

To make a search reasonable on the spot it must either be incident to arrest or contain other elements sufficient in themselves to authorize the peremptory action, and, as to the latter, probable cause may be a contributing or even a sufficient factor. Hunter v. State, 127 Ga. App. 664, 194 S.E.2d 680 (1972).

Warrantless search of a passenger in an automobile was unreasonable where the officer testified that the officer felt no particular threat from the passenger during the officer's questioning and pat-down of the driver, and saw nothing unusual or threatening. United States v. Hale, 934 F. Supp. 427 (N.D. Ga. 1996).

Probable cause requirements for warrantless searches. — The probable cause requirements for a search without a warrant are the same requirements necessary for the issuance of a warrant by a magistrate. Morgan v. Kiff, 230 Ga. 277, 196 S.E.2d 445 (1973), overruled on other grounds, Jacobs v. Hopper, 238 Ga. 461, 233 S.E.2d 169 (1977).

Warrantless seizures with respect to automobile and home. — Whatever justification for seizing an automobile without a warrant may be spelled out of its fugitive and ambulatory abilities, none may be advanced to excuse the compulsory search of and seizure in a private home without one. Ray v. United States, 84 F.2d 654 (5th Cir. 1936).

Warrantless entry into a home. — Search of private dwelling without warrant is in itself unreasonable and abhorrent to our laws. Congress has never passed an act purporting to authorize the search of a house without a warrant. Ray v. United States, 84 F.2d 654 (5th Cir. 1936).

Absent exigent circumstances or consent, the entry into a private dwelling to conduct a search or effect an arrest is unreasonable without a warrant. Thompson v. State, 248 Ga. 343, 285 S.E.2d 685 (1981).

Searches (Cont'd)2. Warrantless Searches (Cont'd)

Probable cause, however well founded, cannot provide justification for a warrantless intrusion of a person's home absent a showing that the exigencies of the situation made that course imperative. Phillips v. State, 167 Ga. App. 260, 305 S.E.2d 918 (1983).

Warrantless entry into a home merely to question someone in the investigation of a misdemeanor offense and without probable cause to search or arrest is unreasonable, absent consent or exigent circumstances. Griffith v. State, 172 Ga. App. 255, 322 S.E.2d 921 (1984).

Where officers did not have a search warrant for the plaintiff's residence when they entered the house, nor did they have probable cause to believe that a crime was taking place at the plaintiff's house, as such, the officers should have known that entry risked violating the residents' constitutional rights. Hartsfield v. Lemacks, 50 F.3d 950 (11th Cir. 1995).

Police officer violated the fourth amendment by entering defendant's home without a warrant and without defendant's consent to question defendant about a report received from a concerned citizen that defendant had been seen by the citizen just minutes before driving erratically across lanes of traffic. Threatt v. State, 240 Ga. App. 592, 524 S.E.2d 276 (1999).

Trial court erred in denying defendant's motion to suppress the evidence after police officers found about one gram of methamphetamine in defendant's residence upon entering defendant's residence without a warrant. Although as the police officers approached they saw defendant, through an open door, start to run away, their entry into defendant's residence was not justified by any exigent circumstances; thus, defendant's fourth amendment rights were violated. Bolton v. State, 258 Ga. App. 217, 573 S.E.2d 479 (2002).

Consent to search. — Suppression motion was properly denied after defendant voluntarily consented to police officers searching defendant's bedroom and the officers found a firearm in plain view; moreover, the officers did not threaten defendant into giving defendant's consent merely by telling defendant that they could obtain a warrant based on their earlier seizure of marijuana in another part of the house. Butler v. State, 272 Ga. App. 557, 612 S.E.2d 865 (2005).

Search of the defendant's motel room did not violate Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII or U.S. Const., amend. 4; comparing the officers' testimony, that the defendant gave them permission to enter the motel room and to search the pants that were lying on the floor, with the defendant's girlfriend's uncertain testimony, the trial court did not err in crediting the officers' testimony, and since the officers searched defendant's wallet after they arrested defendant for possession of methamphetamine, the search of the wallet was authorized as a search incident to an arrest. Johnson v. State, 281 Ga. App. 7, 635 S.E.2d 278 (2006).

Visitor's belongings. — Personal belongings brought by their owner on a visit to a friend's house retain their constitutional protection until their owner meaningfully abdicates control or responsibility. State v. Browning, 209 Ga. App. 197, 433 S.E.2d 119 (1993).

Search of probationer's home was not reasonable because it was not based upon "reasonable grounds" to believe that contraband would be found at the home and because it was conducted by a law enforcement official without any communication with a probation officer. Fox v. State, 272 Ga. 163, 527 S.E.2d 847 (2000).

Conduct not unreasonable. — The conduct of the detective in entering onto private land through a gate and driving on a dirt road located along a power line easement to investigate the self-confirmed complaint of loud noise and the suspected fighting, was a legitimate intrusion and not unreasonable conduct within the meaning of the fourth amendment. Perry v. State, 204 Ga. App. 643, 419 S.E.2d 922 (1992).

A court's decision to admit evidence obtained in a warrantless search was affirmed where it was based on a police officer's fear that the defendant had a gun and was getting it when defendant retrieved a box and reached inside it, since this was a reasonable belief under the circumstances of the police having received a complaint about drugs, the limited entry to see whether this was a gun was therefore justified, and the drugs which were then seen in plain view were properly seized. Owens v. State, 236 Ga. App. 534, 512 S.E.2d 394 (1999).

There was no search in violation of the fourth amendment since: (1) police officers had a right to be in the defendant's yard in order to investigate; (2) the use of flashlights by the officers was not improper; and (3) the act of bending down by the officers to see contraband under a car did not violate any legitimate expectation of privacy. Williams v. State, 249 Ga. App. 119, 547 S.E.2d 679 (2001).

Apartment where crime was committed. — Because the police arrived at the crime scene, discovered the victim of a shooting, and observed evidence of an apparent burglary that had taken place at the apartment, the police were authorized in making a prompt warrantless search of the defendant's entire apartment in order to secure the crime scene. Isbell v. State, 179 Ga. App. 363, 346 S.E.2d 857 (1986), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1098, 107 S. Ct. 1319, 94 L. Ed. 2d 172 (1987).

Hot pursuit is grounds for warrantless entry. — A warrantless entry of a home is justified if the police are in hot pursuit of a fugitive. Steagald v. United States, 451 U.S. 204, 101 S. Ct. 1642, 68 L. Ed. 2d 38 (1981).

Discretionary, warrantless searches of businesses unconstitutional. — City ordinance which permitted discretionary searches of businesses after closing hours without a warrant and did not provide a reasonable deterrence against forced entries was unconstitutional because it failed to meet the ultimate fourth amendment standard of reasonableness. Yingsum Au v. State, 258 Ga. 419, 369 S.E.2d 905 (1988).

Finding of drugs pursuant to search following burglary. — Where warehouse manager had searched defendant's compartment after observing evidence of a break-in and discovered illegal drugs in the compartment, police officer's subsequent search of compartment and seizure of drugs without a warrant was valid. State v. Johnston, 171 Ga. App. 224, 319 S.E.2d 83 (1984).

Warrantless entry into a warehouse. — Agents could not have reasonably believed that lessee had authority over premises to consent to warrantless search, where lessee did not purport to possess any authority over the premises, but instead informed the agents that lessee had no key or other means of access and that lessee had never been inside the warehouse or seen its contents.

Indeed the fact that the agents had to cut the padlock to enter the warehouse belied any claim that they reasonably believed lessee had authority to enter it. State v. Stewart, 203 Ga. App. 829, 418 S.E.2d 110 (1992).

Belief that article concealed in dwelling. — Belief, however well founded, that article sought is concealed in dwelling house furnishes no justification for search of that place without a warrant. Such searches are unlawful notwithstanding facts unquestionably showing probable cause. Chapman v. United States, 365 U.S. 610, 81 S. Ct. 776, 5 L. Ed. 2d 828 (1961).

Reasonable belief that person needs immediate aid as grounds for entry and search. — U.S. Const., amend. 4 does not bar police officers from making warrantless entries and searches when they reasonably believe that a person within is in need of immediate aid. Gilreath v. State, 247 Ga. 814, 279 S.E.2d 650 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 984, 102 S. Ct. 2258, 72 L. Ed. 2d 862 (1982).

When police come upon scene of homicide they may make prompt warrantless search of the area to see if there are other victims or if a killer is still on the premises and they may seize any evidence that is in plain view during the course of their legitimate emergency activities. Gilreath v. State, 247 Ga. 814, 279 S.E.2d 650 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 984, 102 S. Ct. 2258, 72 L. Ed. 2d 862 (1982).

Effect of defective warrant in warrantless search. — If the police officers having sufficient probable cause to stop and search a moving vehicle choose not to search it immediately but to do so later, the fact that a defective warrant has issued between the time of the seizure and the search will not destroy the validity of that search as a reasonable warrantless search. State v. Bradley, 138 Ga. App. 800, 227 S.E.2d 776 (1976).

After accessing a defendant's residence from a person who was not authorized to allow access and making no attempt to question anyone's authority to allow access by use of an automatic door opener, the subsequent warrantless search of the defendant's residence was unjustified and, likewise, the subsequent search by warrant was illegal. State v. Gray, Ga. App. , S.E.2d , 2007 Ga. App. LEXIS 431 (Apr. 16, 2007).

Warrantless search absent cause for arrest under ordinance. — If there is no cause for arrest within the purview of a city ordinance, then a warrantless search and seizure are not legally supportable. Harper v. State, 135 Ga. App. 924, 219 S.E.2d 636 (1975).

Searches (Cont'd)2. Warrantless Searches (Cont'd)

Warrantless search of purse is valid where exigent circumstances exist. — Exigent circumstances, including the fact that officers spied a gun on the console of the defendants' car, authorized them to search a purse carried by one of the defendants to eliminate the possibility of its containing a weapon dangerous to themselves. Burroughs v. State, 190 Ga. App. 467, 379 S.E.2d 175, cert. denied, 190 Ga. App. 897, 379 S.E.2d 175 (1989).

O.C.G.A. §§ 44-12-133 and 44-12-137, authorizing a warrantless inspection of pawn shop records, do not violate the fourth amendment. Howell v. Roberts, 656 F. Supp. 1150 (N.D. Ga. 1987).

Warrantless search as a condition of probation. — A probation condition allowing warrantless searches during the term of probation without probable cause was valid. Even if not specifically stated, the condition carried with it the implied requirement that there be at least reasonable grounds for any such search. Ellis v. State, 221 Ga. App. 103, 470 S.E.2d 495 (1996).

"Plain view" doctrine permits warrantless search and seizure. — The "plain view" doctrine authorizes seizure of illegal or evidentiary items visible to a police officer only if the officer's access to the object itself has some prior fourth amendment justification. State v. David, 269 Ga. 533, 501 S.E.2d 494 (1998).

Violation negated by consent to search. — Although a police officer should not have leaned into defendant's apartment to look for stolen items when a person in the apartment answered the door, the police lawfully seized items the officer saw because defendant subsequently gave them consent to conduct a search. Smith v. State, 262 Ga. App. 614, 585 S.E.2d 888 (2003).

Suppression of evidence held erroneous. — The trial court erred in granting a motion to suppress drugs discovered in an authorized nonconsensual warrantless search of an automobile. State v. Dopson, 204 Ga. App. 51, 418 S.E.2d 623, cert. denied, 204 Ga. App. 922, 418 S.E.2d 623 (1992).

There was no violation of the defendant's fourth amendment rights where (1) officers went to the defendant's automobile paint shop on the basis of information that drugs were being sold and used at that location; (2) as the officers approached the shop, which was located just behind the defendant's residence, the defendant and another individual fled from a side entrance, carrying something in their hands; and (3) the officers pursued, and after detaining the defendant, found a plastic container containing methamphetamines and weighing scales which the defendant, after being informed of Miranda rights, admitted were the defendant's property; the defendant's rights were not violated when the officers pursued the defendant onto the curtilage of the defendant's property once the defendant started running away from them. Stewart v. State, 236 Ga. App. 888, 513 S.E.2d 778 (1999).

3. Vehicles

Rationale for warrantless searches of cars. — For the purposes of U.S. Const., amend. 4, there is a constitutional difference between houses and cars. This constitutional difference stems both from the ambulatory character of the latter and from the fact that extensive, and often noncriminal, contact with automobiles will bring local officials in "plain view" of evidence, fruits, or instrumentalities of crime, or contraband. United States v. Gaultney, 581 F.2d 1137 (5th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 446 U.S. 907, 100 S. Ct. 1833, 64 L. Ed. 2d 259 (1980).

State rule same as federal rule. — For purposes of searching a vehicle contemporaneously with the lawful arrest of an individual, the state rule is the same as the federal rule. Such a search, legal under federal law, is legal under state law. Daniel v. State, 199 Ga. App. 180, 404 S.E.2d 466 (1991).

Warrantless search of automobile, in the absence of exigent circumstances, violates U.S. Const., amend. 4. United States v. Michael, 622 F.2d 744 (5th Cir. 1980), rev'd on other grounds, 645 F.2d 252, (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 950, 102 S. Ct. 489, 70 L. Ed. 2d 257 (1981).

Phrase "automobile exception" connotes a legitimate warrantless search of this otherwise constitutionally protected area whenever: (1) probable cause to believe that the automobile contains contraband or evidence of a crime conjoins with (2) exigent circumstances making the warrant procedure impractical and causing the resort to an immediate warrantless search to be reasonable and necessary. McDonald v. State, 156 Ga. App. 143, 273 S.E.2d 881 (1980).

Test of legality of warrantless search of automobile. — If a search of an automobile is made by a police officer without a warrant, the test of its legality is whether the search was reasonable. Meneghan v. State, 132 Ga. App. 380, 208 S.E.2d 150 (1974).

A warrantless automobile search is constitutional if the officers, acting as a result of their combined knowledge, have probable cause to make the search and if exigent circumstances justify the failure to secure a warrant. The ultimate test is that the search must be reasonable under the circumstances, as viewed objectively. United States v. Gaultney, 581 F.2d 1137 (5th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 446 U.S. 907, 100 S. Ct. 1833, 64 L. Ed. 2d 259 (1980).

Probable cause. — Automobiles and other conveyances may be searched without a warrant in circumstances that would not justify the search without a warrant of a house or an office, provided that there is probable cause to believe that the car contains articles that the officers are entitled to seize. United States v. Hill, 442 F.2d 259 (5th Cir. 1971).

Search of a movable vehicle is authorized without a search warrant, provided there is sufficient probable cause for such search. Satterfield v. State, 127 Ga. App. 528, 194 S.E.2d 295 (1972).

A vehicle that has the capacity to convey its occupants and possible contraband contents to a place of refuge from a warranted search, may be searched without a warrant provided there is probable cause to suspect the commission of a crime or the possession of contraband. United States v. Summerville, 477 F.2d 393 (5th Cir. 1973).

Although the search of a dwelling is not authorized without a proper search warrant, when the officers have ample time to procure one, a search of a movable vehicle is an exception, provided there is sufficient probable cause for such search. Walker v. State, 130 Ga. App. 860, 205 S.E.2d 49 (1974).

In order for police authorities to search automobiles on highway, there must be probable cause for the search where no consent has been granted. The officer in making a limited protective search during a reasonable investigatory stop of a vehicle must have specific facts which, taken together with rational inferences from those facts, reasonably warrant the intrusion. Nix v. State, 138 Ga. App. 122, 225 S.E.2d 714 (1976).

A police officer was authorized to open a trunk to insure that no one was in the trunk who might pose a threat to the safety of the officers, where the car matched an armed robbery "Be on the lookout" and its unlocked trunk was moving after the car had stopped. Williams v. State, 236 Ga. App. 102, 511 S.E.2d 216 (1999).

Where an officer knew that the defendant had sold cocaine to a confidential informant on other occasions and the officer was on surveillance when the defendant arrived to make another sale to the same informant, the officer had probable cause to believe the vehicle contained illegal drugs and a warrantless search was lawful under the automobile exception. Benton v. State, 240 Ga. App. 243, 522 S.E.2d 726 (1999).

Since the officer initially stopped defendant when defendant hastily pulled over near an intersection in a high drug traffic area, defendant's subsequent out-of-context and inconsistent responses to the officer's questions, nervousness, and reports that the person leaning in defendant's window sold drugs all combined to support the officer's suspicion that defendant may have been purchasing illegal drugs. Almond v. State, 242 Ga. App. 650, 530 S.E.2d 750 (2000).

Totality of circumstances. — Search of defendant's car was supported by probable cause independent of defendant's arrest as the officer saw defendant attempting to secrete something under the seats of the car, and the officer saw defendant in an area known for drug activity; although these factors alone did not constitute probable cause to search defendant's car, together they did. Sanders v. State, 259 Ga. App. 422, 577 S.E.2d 94 (2003).

If vehicle is not moving or readily movable, probable cause must be determined by magistrate and a warrant must issue. State v. Bradley, 138 Ga. App. 800, 227 S.E.2d 776 (1976).

Vehicle stopped on highway "movable". — Where car was stopped on highway, it remained readily mobile, thus justifying a warrantless search of a loose panel where probable cause existed due to the driver's previous drug conviction and claim that driver had borrowed the car. United States v. Butler, 102 F.3d 1191 (11th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1219, 117 S. Ct. 1712, 137 L. Ed. 2d 836 (1997).

Searches (Cont'd)3. Vehicles (Cont'd)

Impoundment of vehicle. — If an effective search is to be made at any time, either the search must be made immediately without a warrant or the car itself must be seized and held without a warrant for whatever period is necessary to obtain a warrant for the search. United States v. McDonald, 317 F. Supp. 879 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

For constitutional purposes, there is no difference between, on the one hand, seizing and holding a car before presenting the probable cause issue to a magistrate and, on the other hand, carrying out an immediate search without a warrant. Given probable cause to search, either course is reasonable under U.S. Const., amend. 4. United States v. McDonald, 317 F. Supp. 879 (N.D. Ga. 1970); Whitlock v. State, 124 Ga. App. 599, 185 S.E.2d 90 (1971); State v. Watts, 154 Ga. App. 789, 270 S.E.2d 52 (1980).

If the vehicle of one arrested might be searched on the spot, there is a choice between leaving it guarded while someone goes for a warrant or taking it in custody while the warrant is being obtained, and, if the latter, a search of the vehicle at the time the vehicle is brought in or during the same morning will not be held unreasonable if it would not be unreasonable if performed on the spot; but it cannot be held for several days and then searched without a warrant. Hunter v. State, 127 Ga. App. 664, 194 S.E.2d 680 (1972).

Vehicle stopped upon probable cause may be searched without warrant even though vehicle is no longer mobile, and a warrantless search is permitted even after the vehicle has been moved to police headquarters. United States v. Ramey, 464 F.2d 1240 (5th Cir. 1972).

Where U.S. Const., amend. 4 permits a warrantless seizure of the car and the denial of its use to anyone until a warrant is secured, there is little to choose in terms of practical consequences between an immediate search without a warrant and the car's immobilization until a warrant is obtained. Caito v. State, 130 Ga. App. 831, 204 S.E.2d 765 (1974).

There is little to choose in terms of practical consequences between immediate search without warrant and the car's immobilization until a warrant is obtained. Davis v. State, 135 Ga. App. 931, 219 S.E.2d 598 (1975).

When officers have probable cause to search and seize a moving vehicle, they may either seize and hold it until the probable cause issue can be presented to a magistrate or they may carry out an immediate warrantless search. If a vehicle is moving, probable cause can be determined by a police officer, and the vehicle can be seized and searched without a warrant either immediately or later even though a search warrant might have been obtained between the seizure and the search. State v. Bradley, 138 Ga. App. 800, 227 S.E.2d 776 (1976).

Police officers with probable cause to search an auto on the scene where it was stopped may constitutionally do so later at the station house without first obtaining a warrant. Glover v. State, 139 Ga. App. 162, 227 S.E.2d 921 (1976).

The impoundment of a vehicle prior to the issuance of a warrant to search it is not permissible when the driver of the motor vehicle is arrested and a reliable friend is present, authorized, and capable to remove the vehicle which is capable of being safely removed. Whisnant v. State, 185 Ga. App. 51, 363 S.E.2d 341 (1987).

The impoundment and inventory search of a car were proper, where each of the persons in the vehicle appeared to be intoxicated, and no one present was capable of safely removing the vehicle. Stotts v. State, 199 Ga. App. 316, 404 S.E.2d 635, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 907, 404 S.E.2d 635 (1991).

Because defendant was arrested for the misdemeanor offense of obstructing a police officer, and the violation was in no way related to defendant's vehicle which was legally parked in a safe and secure place on private property, impoundment and the subsequent search of the vehicle were pretextual and improper. State v. Lowe, 224 Ga. App. 228, 480 S.E.2d 611 (1997).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion to suppress evidence found during the inventory of defendant's car, which was parked on private property, as: (1) defendant was arrested, at night, for carrying a concealed weapon while walking away from a motel after a clerk had reported defendant to the police as a suspicious person; (2) the motel clerk testified that the motel's policy was to tow unclaimed cars parked in their lot; (3) a detective testified that it was the police department's policy to impound a suspect's car so that it would not be stolen or towed by the motel; (4) it was the police department's policy to inventory the contents of the car before impounding it, to protect the department from a suspect later claiming that valuable items were missing from the suspect's car; and (5) the detective's decision to impound the car was reasonable within the meaning of the fourth amendment. Johnson v. State, 263 Ga. App. 443, 587 S.E.2d 775 (2003).

Impound search of defendant's car was reasonably necessary to protect the car and its contents where defendant, who was arrested for driving under the influence, was the lone occupant of defendant's car, the car was parked at the side of the road at 4 a.m., defendant did not ask for an alternative disposition to impoundment, and absent a reasonable request, officers were not obligated to offer impound alternatives to those they placed under arrest. Evans v. State, 267 Ga. App. 706, 600 S.E.2d 671 (2004).

Right to search automobile not dependent on right to arrest. — When the search and seizure is made under the automobile exception, the right to search and the validity of the seizure are not dependent on the right to arrest, but rather are dependent on the reasonable cause the seizing officer has for belief that the contents of the automobile offend against the law. McDonald v. State, 156 Ga. App. 143, 273 S.E.2d 881 (1980).

Search incident to arrest. — Where a driver was lawfully arrested for operating a car without a license and for not having proof of insurance, a police officer did not exceed the permissible scope of a search incident to arrest when officer searched the car. Vega v. State, 236 Ga. App. 319, 512 S.E.2d 65 (1999).

Defendant had standing to raise a challenge to a search of a vehicle, in which defendant was riding as a passenger, because defendant could challenge the prolonged detention and the subsequent vehicle search; however, the taint of the illegal detention was thereafter purged by the intervening arrest of defendant on outstanding warrants, which then justified the officer's lawful search incident to an arrest and accordingly, marijuana found in the passenger compartment of the car was not subject to suppression under the principles established by U.S. Const., amend. 4, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII, and under O.C.G.A. § 17-5-1. State v. Cooper, 260 Ga. App. 333, 579 S.E.2d 754 (2003).

Consented search. — Post-stop contact evolved into a consensual encounter where defendant had a clear understanding that defendant was free to go and was not under any compulsion to remain to obey the officer's request. Daniel v. State, 277 Ga. 840, 597 S.E.2d 116 (2004).

Trial court to address whether search of vehicle was authorized as an incident of a lawful detention. State v. Jarrells, 207 Ga. App. 192, 427 S.E.2d 568 (1993).

It is not unreasonable to search car which is validly held for use as evidence in a forfeiture proceeding. United States v. Edwards, 441 F.2d 749 (5th Cir. 1971).

Scope of search of lawfully stopped vehicle. — If probable cause justifies the search of a lawfully stopped vehicle, then it justifies the search of every part of the vehicle and its contents that may conceal the object of the search. United States v. Grillo, 705 F. Supp. 576 (M.D. Ga. 1989).

The broad scope of authority granted to police officers in conducting searches of automobiles pursuant to the search incident to arrest exception extends to the entire passenger compartment of the automobile and any closed containers therein. Bagwell v. State, 214 Ga. App. 15, 446 S.E.2d 739 (1994).

Officer's act in approaching stopped vehicle. — Trial court did not err in denying the first juvenile and second juvenile's motion to suppress, as the police officer did not illegally stop their vehicle; rather, the officer followed them until they stopped the vehicle in a driveway. The officer's acts in stopping the officer's vehicle and approaching their stopped vehicle was a consensual encounter that did not involve an unreasonable search and seizure, and when the officer smelled alcohol and noticed the first juvenile's bloodshot eyes, it was then that the officer had reasonable suspicion to detain the juveniles in order to investigate the situation further. In the Interest of A.A., 265 Ga. App. 369, 593 S.E.2d 891 (2004).

Searches (Cont'd)3. Vehicles (Cont'd)

Determining identification number. — Inspections of vehicles by police officers, who are entitled to be on the property where the vehicle is located, which in no way damage the vehicle, and which are limited to determining the correct identification numbers of the vehicle, are not searches within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 4. United States v. Jones, 432 F.2d 773 (5th Cir. 1970); United States v. Wood, 500 F.2d 681 (5th Cir. 1974).

Opening an automobile door to obtain the identification number does not constitute a "search." United States v. Jones, 352 F. Supp. 369 (S.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 481 F.2d 1402 (5th Cir. 1973).

Inspection of vehicle identification numbers was not a search prohibited by U.S. Const., amend. 4 because police officers were on the defendant's business premises pursuant to a valid search warrant and the vehicle identification numbers were on the dashboards, readily visible through the windshields. State v. Shaw, 170 Ga. App. 404, 317 S.E.2d 298, aff'd, 253 Ga. 382, 320 S.E.2d 371 (1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1212, 105 S. Ct. 1183, 84 L. Ed. 2d 331 (1985).

The fact that police officers are required to open a car's door in order to locate the vehicle identification number does not make the viewing an unreasonable search under U.S. Const., amend. 4. Nothing in U.S. Const., amend. 4 prohibits such an inspection or an investigatory registration check which follows. United States v. Kitowski, 729 F.2d 1418 (11th Cir. 1984).

Merely looking into the window of an automobile is not a search. United States v. Gazaway, 297 F. Supp. 67 (N.D. Ga. 1969); State v. Key, 164 Ga. App. 411, 296 S.E.2d 60 (1982).

Reasonable expectation of privacy. — Pickup truck passenger had a reasonable expectation of privacy so as to enable the passenger to challenge the seizure of contraband in a closed bag "laying on the seat in the middle of the driver's seat" of the truck. State v. Corley, 201 Ga. App. 320, 411 S.E.2d 324 (1991).

Rental cars. — The driver of a rental car, whose name was on the rental agreement, had standing to challenge an automobile search; however, the passenger did not have standing. United States v. Gonzalez, 952 F. Supp. 813 (M.D. Ga. 1997), aff'd, 189 F.3d 483 (11th Cir. 1999).

Search of abandoned car valid. — When following a high speed chase legally initiated by the police, the defendant fled the defendant's car on foot, a police officer's search of the automobile's trunk was not an unreasonable search prohibited by U.S. Const., amend. 4, since the defendant could have no reasonable expectation of privacy with respect to an automobile which the defendant abandoned to the police. United States v. Edwards, 441 F.2d 749 (5th Cir. 1971).

Search of car abandoned by fleeing defendant. — Because a fleeing defendant, pursued by the police, abandoned the defendant's car on a public street and started running, the defendant lost the constitutional protection against the search and seizure of the car. Whitlock v. State, 124 Ga. App. 599, 185 S.E.2d 90 (1971).

Search of automobile for contraband. — If a search and seizure without a warrant are made upon probable cause, that is, upon a belief, reasonably arising out of circumstances known to the seizing officer, that an automobile or other vehicle contains that which by law is subject to seizure and destruction, the search and seizure are valid. United States v. Blackwell, 430 F.2d 1270 (5th Cir. 1970); United States v. Rodgers, 442 F.2d 902 (5th Cir. 1971); United States v. Ramey, 464 F.2d 1240 (5th Cir. 1972).

Where regulations prohibit the transportation of certain dangerous drugs in the possession of a driver, inspection of vehicles would encompass what is actually a search for these drugs. Trucks can be searched by inspectors without a warrant and without any necessity for consent further than that which exists by virtue of its operation under the public permit. Braddock v. State, 127 Ga. App. 513, 194 S.E.2d 317 (1972).

An automobile in which contraband goods are concealed and transported may be searched without a warrant provided the police have probable cause for believing that the automobile contains contraband. The reason for this rule is obvious. An automobile, unlike a home or place of business, is mobile and can be quickly moved out of the locality or jurisdiction; therefore, a search without a warrant is allowed where it is impractical to obtain a warrant. Meneghan v. State, 132 Ga. App. 380, 208 S.E.2d 150 (1974).

Where a law enforcement officer has probable cause to believe that a vehicle (as opposed to a particular container within the vehicle), while in transit, contains contraband; i.e., where the objective facts known to the officer would justify issuance of a search warrant authorizing that the vehicle be searched, the "automobile exception" to the warrant requirement of the fourth amendment applies and a warrantless search of the entire vehicle, including all containers and packages that may contain contraband, is not unconstitutional. Love v. State, 254 Ga. 697, 334 S.E.2d 173 (1985).

As an exception to the warrant requirements of the fourth amendment, police may conduct a warrantless search of an automobile when such facts and circumstances exist as would lead a reasonably prudent person to believe the automobile contained contraband. Durden v. State, 199 Ga. App. 397, 405 S.E.2d 50, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 905, 405 S.E.2d 50 (1991).

Evidence in the record, which consisted of testimony provided by the officers involved in a surveillance, regarding their observations, surveillance techniques, and experience with drug sales, as well as the general modes of operation of persons involved in drug sales, was sufficient to support the denial of defendant's motion to suppress, when the evidence was coupled with the fact that the detention of defendant lasted, at most, fifteen minutes and did not amount to an unreasonable and impermissible seizure of defendant's person. Further, the officers were authorized to stop defendant's vehicle as one involved in a drug sale, while acting in concert with another vehicle and showing an obvious interest in the endeavor. Hickman v. State, 279 Ga. App. 558, 631 S.E.2d 778 (2006).

Denial of the defendant's motion to suppress evidence was proper because the evidence at the suppression hearing showed that an officer's suspicions were aroused during a traffic stop due to the defendant's erratic behavior and the fact that, on the floorboard behind the driver's seat of the defendant's car, the officer observed a bag similar to others the officer had seen used to transport illegal drugs; after the officer filled out the citation and returned it to the defendant to sign, the officer asked the defendant for consent to search the car which the defendant gave. Dowd v. State, 280 Ga. App. 563, 634 S.E.2d 509 (2006).

Trooper's detection of odor of marijuana smoke coming from within automobile, together with totality of circumstances, was sufficient to provide probable cause to search automobile for marijuana. Holmes v. State, 163 Ga. App. 753, 294 S.E.2d 719 (1982).

Detention of automobile with unlicensed driver in vicinity of burglary valid. — Detention of an automobile and its occupants was lawful, where police officers were aware that the driver was not properly licensed and the officers, who were responding to a burglary call, saw the automobile enter the street from the driveway of a house where a burglary was reported to have occurred. Clarrington v. State, 178 Ga. App. 663, 344 S.E.2d 485 (1986).

Evidence may be seized from car fleeing robbery and found obstructing traffic. — Where car suspected by police to have been used in a robbery is followed, eludes police, and is found obstructing traffic with its windows open and the doors unlocked, a finding that defendant did not retain a legitimate expectation of privacy in the automobile was authorized and defendant was not entitled to grant of motion to suppress evidence subsequently seized from the car. Gardner v. State, 172 Ga. App. 677, 324 S.E.2d 535 (1984).

Movement of vehicle does not preclude an otherwise permissible search. — The fact that a vehicle is first moved to another location does not render the search of its trunk impermissible if the bailee-defendant is placed under lawful arrest and the vehicle could have been legally searched at the time of such arrest. Williams v. State, 157 Ga. App. 476, 277 S.E.2d 923, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 823, 102 S. Ct. 109, 70 L. Ed. 2d 95 (1981).

Viewing and photographing of ashes in automobile justified. — The police officer's viewing of ashes in the defendant's car through the windshield did not constitute a search and to the extent that the opening of the car door and photographing of the ashes constituted a warrantless search and/or seizure, this was justified by the exigencies of the case because the officer had reasonable cause to believe that the officer would find evidence pertaining to an arson under investigation. Catchings v. State, 256 Ga. 241, 347 S.E.2d 572 (1986).

Searches (Cont'd)
3. Vehicles (Cont'd)

Search of prison employee's vehicle. — Where a sign was posted at the entry of a prison, giving notice that all vehicles passing the guard line of the prison were subject to search, prison officials had authority to search the vehicle of an employee parked inside the guard line. By driving the automobile onto the premises, defendant consented to such a search. Howard v. State, 185 Ga. App. 465, 364 S.E.2d 600 (1988).

Police officer, entitled to be on property where car is located, may search a vehicle to determine the identity of its owner. United States v. Edwards, 441 F.2d 749 (5th Cir. 1971).

Traffic stop for failing to wear seatbelt. — A motorist arrested following a traffic stop for failing to wear a seatbelt and after consenting to a search of the car, had not been unlawfully detained in violation of the fourth amendment, given the trooper's reasonable articulable suspicion of drug possession and the trooper's reasonable inquiry. Evans v. State, 262 Ga. App. 712, 586 S.E.2d 400 (2003).

Even though automobile could not be quickly removed from the scene of an accident under its own propulsion, it was clearly "movable" for purposes of the automobile exception to the warrant requirement in that it would have to be towed from the intersection to prevent its obstruction of traffic. Fluker v. State, 171 Ga. App. 415, 319 S.E.2d 884 (1984).

Search of motor vehicle improper. — Because the defendant was arrested on a violation of a municipal ordinance unconnected with the defendant's car, and the car was legally and safely parked on private property, it was not clearly erroneous for the trial court to find that a search of the car was not a lawful search incident to arrest; further, the trial court was authorized to find that the impoundment of the vehicle was not reasonably necessary and to grant the defendant's motion to suppress evidence seized from the car. State v. Bell, 259 Ga. App. 328, 577 S.E.2d 39 (2003).

Because the trial court had ample evidence to support its conclusion that the reason police officers supplied as the basis to stop the defendant's vehicle, specifically, an alleged computer insurance inquiry, was "suspect and insufficient," it did not clearly err in disbelieving the evidence; hence, the court properly granted the defendant's motion to suppress the evidence seized from the vehicle as a result of the stop. State v. Starks, 281 Ga. App. 15, 635 S.E.2d 327 (2006).

Automobile exception to warrant requirement did not apply. — Evidence that was found during a warrantless search of defendant's automobile after the police hauled it away for the later search should have been suppressed because the automobile exception to the warrant requirement did not apply since: (1) defendant's car was legally parked in defendant's residential parking space; (2) defendant and any alleged cohorts did not have access to the vehicle; and (3) the police lacked probable cause to search the car because their claim of probable cause was based on information from an informant and on a "controlled" telephone call, but there was no indication of the informant's reliability and no testimony regarding what was said during the telephone call. State v. Lejeune, 276 Ga. 179, 576 S.E.2d 888 (2003).

Seizures

Test of lawful seizure is whether it was made incident to a lawful arrest or pursuant to a lawful search warrant. Good v. State, 127 Ga. App. 775, 195 S.E.2d 264 (1972).

Finding of "seizure" as threshold inquiry. — In determining whether a given contact between a police officer and a citizen violated a defendant's fourth amendment rights, the court must first determine whether the encounter was a "seizure" within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 4. Moran v. State, 170 Ga. App. 837, 318 S.E.2d 716 (1984).

No definitive standard for determining whether seizure has occurred. — The Supreme Court has not yet provided a definitive standard for determining when a seizure under U.S. Const., amend. 4 has occurred. United States v. Setzer, 654 F.2d 354 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1041, 103 S. Ct. 457, 74 L. Ed. 2d 609 (1982).

Test for determining when seizure has occurred. — Whenever police officer accosts an individual and restrains the freedom to walk away, the officer has “seized” that person. United States v. Gazaway, 297 F. Supp. 67 (N.D. Ga. 1969); Brisbane v. State, 233 Ga. 339, 211 S.E.2d 294 (1974); Sanders v. State, 235 Ga. 425, 219 S.E.2d 768 (1975); Franklin v. State, 143 Ga. App. 3, 237 S.E.2d 425 (1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 950, 98 S. Ct. 1575, 55 L. Ed. 2d 799 (1978); Vaughn v. State, 247 Ga. 136, 274 S.E.2d 479 (1981).

It must be recognized that whenever a police officer accosts an individual and restrains that individual’s freedom to walk away, the officer has “seized” that person, and a careful exploration of the outer surfaces of a person’s clothing all over his or her body in an attempt to find weapons is a “search.” Holtzendorf v. State, 125 Ga. App. 747, 188 S.E.2d 879 (1972).

When an encounter is effected at gunpoint or when there is physical restraint, there can be little question that a seizure has occurred; any restraint of movement will do. United States v. Elmore, 595 F.2d 1036 (5th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 910, 100 S. Ct. 2998, 64 L. Ed. 2d 861 (1980).

A person has been seized within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 4 only if, in view of all of the circumstances surrounding the incident, a reasonable person would have believed that there was no freedom to leave. United States v. Fry, 622 F.2d 1218 (5th Cir. 1980); United States v. Bowles, 625 F.2d 526 (5th Cir. 1980); State v. Reid, 247 Ga. 445, 276 S.E.2d 617 (1981); Dupree v. State, 247 Ga. 470, 277 S.E.2d 18 (1981); United States v. Berd, 634 F.2d 979 (5th Cir. 1981); State v. Bryant, 203 Ga. App. 69, 416 S.E.2d 368 (1992).

Any restraint on movement is sufficient to constitute a seizure. Only when the officer, by means of physical force or show of authority, has in some way restrained the liberty of a citizen may the court conclude that a seizure has occurred. United States v. Bowles, 625 F.2d 526 (5th Cir. 1980).

The proper standard for determining when a seizure has occurred is whether, under the totality of the circumstances, a reasonable person would have thought there was no freedom to leave. United States v. Robinson, 625 F.2d 1211 (5th Cir. 1980), rev’d on other grounds, 690 F.2d 869 (11th Cir. 1982).

A person is seized only when, by means of physical force or a show of authority, freedom of movement is restrained. State v. Reid, 247 Ga. 445, 276 S.E.2d 617 (1981).

A person is not “seized” unless an officer applies physical force, however slight, or the person submits to the officer’s show of authority; where defendant was in a state of flight when cocaine was discarded, it was not the fruit of an illegal arrest. Hunt v. State, 205 Ga. App. 490, 423 S.E.2d 24 (1992).

Arrestee who was not subjected to physical force and who did not yield or submit when the deputies commanded the arrestee to come out of the bathroom was not seized. Wilson v. Northcutt, 987 F.2d 719 (11th Cir. 1993); Smith v. State, 217 Ga. App. 680, 458 S.E.2d 704 (1995).

When a seizure exceeds the limited intrusion of an investigative stop, it must be justified by the probable cause standard or be based on consent. Such a seizure occurs when, in view of all of the circumstances surrounding the incident, a reasonable person would have believed that there was no freedom to leave. McQuarter v. City of Atlanta, 572 F. Supp. 1401 (N.D. Ga. 1983), appeal dismissed, 724 F.2d 881 (11th Cir. 1984).

Under U.S. Const., amend. 4 the determination of the reasonableness of a seizure is a conclusion of law. United States v. Bowles, 625 F.2d 526 (5th Cir. 1980); United States v. Berd, 634 F.2d 979 (5th Cir. 1981).

Determination of reasonableness of seizure. — Where the seizure under U.S. Const., amend. 4 is less intrusive than traditional arrest, determination of the reasonableness of that seizure involves a weighing of the gravity of the public concerns served by the seizure, the degree to which the seizure advances the public interest, and the severity of the interference with individual liberty. United States v. Bowles, 625 F.2d 526 (5th Cir. 1980).

Whether a given contact between the police and citizens constitutes a “seizure” within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 4 — and, if so, is “reasonable” — is determined by balancing the government interest involved against the nature of the intrusion on the individual. Bothwell v. State, 250 Ga. 573, 300 S.E.2d 126, cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1210, 103 S. Ct. 3545, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1393 (1983).

Seizures (Cont'd)

Seizures reasonable under certain circumstances. — Seizures under circumstances where the object is open to view or seizures contemporaneous with the commission of the crime and the arrest fall into categories held not to constitute an unreasonable search under U.S. Const., amend. 4. Roach v. Mauldin, 277 F. Supp. 54 (N.D. Ga. 1967), aff'd, 391 F.2d 907 (5th Cir. 1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1095, 89 S. Ct. 884, 21 L. Ed. 2d 786 (1969).

In determining legality of particular seizure, court must ascertain facts known by police officer at the moment of the seizure. United States v. Berd, 634 F.2d 979 (5th Cir. 1981).

Necessity of actual knowledge of restraint. — Actual knowledge that one has been restrained is an essential element of a fourth amendment seizure claim. Thompson v. Spikes, 663 F. Supp. 627 (S.D. Ga. 1987).

Being chased is not tantamount to being seized, since seizure requires the application of physical force by the officer or submission by the defendant to the officer's show of authority. Watson v. State, 247 Ga. App. 498, 544 S.E.2d 469 (2001).

Examples of circumstances that might indicate a seizure, even where the person did not attempt to leave, would be the threatening presence of several officers, the display of a weapon by an officer, some physical touching of the person of the citizen or use of language or tone of voice indicating that compliance with the officer's request might be compelled. Aguero v. State, 169 Ga. App. 462, 313 S.E.2d 735 (1984).

Seizures have been found when an encounter is precipitated by a show of authority, such as when a siren was used to pull a motorist over; when a motorist stepped out of camper, with hands up, in response to an officer's knock on the camper door; or when under other circumstances it was apparent that the individual was not free to ignore the officer and proceed on the individual's way. United States v. Elmore, 595 F.2d 1036 (5th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 910, 100 S. Ct. 2998, 64 L. Ed. 2d 861 (1980).

Merely approaching does not constitute seizure. — Merely approaching an individual and requesting that individual give consent for a search does not constitute a seizure and need not be supported by an articulable suspicion. State v. Westmoreland, 204 Ga. App. 312, 418 S.E.2d 822 (1992).

Effect of initial approach without suspicion. — No reasonable suspicion was required for an officer's approach to a car, where the officer approached the vehicle to tell the defendant to park correctly and thus was lawfully in the presence of defendant so as to invoke the plain view doctrine. Consequently, the marijuana seeds and leaves seized by the officer were admissible. State v. Bryant, 203 Ga. App. 69, 416 S.E.2d 368 (1992).

Offering a ride home to defendant, who had just been issued a speeding ticket and had a suspended license, was not a fourth amendment seizure of defendant. Disharoon v. State, 263 Ga. App. 787, 589 S.E.2d 339 (2003).

No “seizure” where person may walk away. — As long as the person to whom questions are put remains free to disregard the questions and walk away, there has been no “seizure,” i.e., no intrusion upon that person's liberty or privacy as would under the constitution require some particularized and objective justification. Smith v. State, 187 Ga. App. 14, 369 S.E.2d 307 (1988); State v. Bryant, 203 Ga. App. 69, 416 S.E.2d 368 (1992).

Three encounters between the defendant and the police officers were noncoercive communications that did not rise to the level of a seizure where the officers generally asked questions of the defendant, where defendant was not under any police compulsion to remain and answer the officers' questions, where the officers were in uniform, but did not reach for the defendant or have their hands near their weapons, and where they did not arrest defendant prior to defendant's flight and capture. Copeland v. State, 213 Ga. App. 39, 443 S.E.2d 869 (1994).

No “seizure” where officers identify themselves and suspect not blocked. — Where suspect believed to be concealing illegal drugs on the suspect's person was approached by law enforcement agents who were casually dressed and did not display weapons, where the officers identified themselves, spoke in a deferential and conversational tone, and stood at suspect's side in order not to block the suspect's path, there was no "seizure" of the suspect during the encounter. Allen v. State, 172 Ga. App. 663, 324 S.E.2d 521 (1984).

No "seizure" occurs when citizen elects to cooperate with police. — When an individual is free to choose whether to enter or continue an encounter with police and elects to do so, there is no seizure. United States v. Elmore, 595 F.2d 1036 (5th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 910, 100 S. Ct. 2998, 64 L. Ed. 2d 861 (1980).

Not all police-citizen contacts are seizures subject to the proscriptions of the fourth amendment. United States v. Smith, 649 F.2d 305 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 460 U.S. 1068, 103 S. Ct. 1521, 75 L. Ed. 2d 945 (1983).

Not all personal intercourse between police officers and citizens involves seizures of persons. Only when the officer, by means of physical force or show of authority, has in some way restrained the liberty of a citizen may it be said that a seizure has occurred. State v. Reid, 247 Ga. 445, 276 S.E.2d 617 (1981).

Not all personal intercourse between police officers and citizens involves seizures of persons. United States v. Berd, 634 F.2d 979 (5th Cir. 1981).

Not every contact between citizen and police is a "seizure" within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 4. United States v. Williams, 647 F.2d 588 (5th Cir. 1981).

The central consideration in determining whether a police-citizen contact falls within the purview of U.S. Const., amend. 4 is whether in the view of all the circumstances surrounding the incident, a reasonable person would have believed that there was no freedom to leave. United States v. Smith, 649 F.2d 305 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 460 U.S. 1068, 103 S. Ct. 1521, 75 L. Ed. 2d 945 (1983).

Only when the officer, by means of physical force or a show of authority, has in some way restrained the liberty of a citizen may one conclude that a "seizure" has occurred. Bothwell v. State, 250 Ga. 573, 300 S.E.2d 126, cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1210, 103 S. Ct. 3545, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1393 (1983); State v. Bryant, 203 Ga. App. 69, 416 S.E.2d 368 (1992).

So long as a citizen is not restrained in any way or so long as his or her cooperation is not obtained by coercion, force, or other use of authority, a mere police-citizen contact is generally not within the protections of U.S. Const., amend. 4. Thus, neither probable cause nor reasonable suspicion is required to justify such a stop. United States v. Moeller, 644 F.2d 518 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1097, 102 S. Ct. 669, 70 L. Ed. 2d 638 (1981).

The fourth amendment in no way prohibits voluntary interaction between citizens and police, and it is only when the officer, by means of physical force or show of authority, has in some way restrained the liberty of a citizen that a "seizure" has occurred. Bothwell v. State, 250 Ga. 573, 300 S.E.2d 126, cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1210, 103 S. Ct. 3545, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1393 (1983); Hudgins v. State, 188 Ga. App. 798, 374 S.E.2d 566 (1988).

Defendant was not seized where a police officer stopped to question defendant in an "extremely high crime, high drugs" area and used a conversational tone of voice, did not draw a weapon, and did not get out of the car until defendant told the officer that defendant had a shooter in defendant's pocket. Whisenant v. State, 239 Ga. App. 259, 521 S.E.2d 204 (1999).

Three tiers of police-citizen encounters. — There are three tiers of police-citizen encounters: (1) communication between police and citizens involving no coercion or detention and therefore without the compass of the fourth amendment; (2) brief "seizures" that must be supported by reasonable suspicion; and (3) full-scale arrests that must be supported by probable cause. State v. Bryant, 203 Ga. App. 69, 416 S.E.2d 368 (1992).

Request for identification not seizure. — Where a federal agent stopped a suspect in a public concourse, identified self as a federal agent, and requested but did not demand the suspect's identification, no "seizure" occurred. Voight v. State, 169 Ga. App. 653, 314 S.E.2d 487 (1984).

Approaching individual and asking questions not "seizure". — A law enforcement officer's act of merely approaching an individual, asking to see the individual's identification, and posing to the individual a few questions is not a "seizure" and need not be justified by the existence of an articulable suspicion. State v. Akinsonwon, 200 Ga. App. 287, 407 S.E.2d 434 (1991).

Seizures (Cont'd)

Trial court properly refused to suppress evidence based on defendant's initial seizure as a deputy initiated a first-level police-citizen encounter when the deputy approached defendant's stopped car and asked defendant to get out; it was only after the deputy smelled alcohol on defendant and noticed defendant's bloodshot eyes that the deputy acted upon a reasonable suspicion that defendant might be intoxicated. Johnson v. State, 268 Ga. App. 426, 602 S.E.2d 177 (2004).

Request for information in a public place not a "seizure". — Defendant was not "seized" where there was no evidence that a reasonable person in the defendant's position would have believed there was no freedom to leave at the time the defendant was asked by a police officer in a parking lot if the defendant had any drugs in the defendant's possession. Ward v. State, 193 Ga. App. 137, 387 S.E.2d 150, cert. denied, 193 Ga. App. 911, 387 S.E.2d 150 (1989).

The initial approach of the arresting officer to the defendant's vehicle, and the officer's subsequent inquiry as to defendant's well-being, did not constitute a fourth amendment seizure. At most there was a police-citizen verbal encounter involving no coercion or detention within the meaning of Verhoeff v. State, 184 Ga. App. 501, 362 S.E.2d 85 (1987). O'Donnell v. State, 200 Ga. App. 829, 409 S.E.2d 579, cert. denied, 200 Ga. App. 896, 409 S.E.2d 579 (1991); Stokes v. State, 238 Ga. App. 230, 518 S.E.2d 447 (1999).

Given the lack of apparent purpose for defendant's actions, the consistencies such actions had with drug sale activity, the fact that such actions occurred in a known drug crime area, and the fact that such actions occurred at what had been reported as a frequent drug crime locale, officers had sufficient reasonable, articulable suspicion to support a brief detention of defendant in order to determine what was going on. State

v. Ledford, 247 Ga. App. 412, 543 S.E.2d 107 (2000).

Crack cocaine found on the defendant was admissible into evidence because the defendant's fourth amendment rights were not violated by police officers, responding to a telephone tip from an informant about drug sales, approached the defendant and two other individuals, whom the officers knew to be underage, and asked them about their drinking alcohol. When the defendant and one of the other individuals attempted to flee, but were apprehended, the crack cocaine found on the defendant and the crack cocaine and money found on the other individual were admissible against defendant at trial for possessing cocaine with intent to distribute. Smith v. State, 264 Ga. App. 533, 591 S.E.2d 442 (2003).

Defendant held seized when stopped and questioned by police. — When police officers alighted from their car, stopped the defendant and a companion, questioned them, and demanded to see the contents of a paper bag, the youths were at the time seized or arrested within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 4. Holtzendorf v. State, 125 Ga. App. 747, 188 S.E.2d 879 (1972).

Inarticulate hunches are insufficient to justify seizure. — Feelings that something is "wrong" or "amiss," like inarticulate hunches, are not sufficient to justify a seizure under the fourth amendment. State v. Combs, 191 Ga. App. 625, 382 S.E.2d 691 (1989).

Articulable suspicion not found. — Discovery of a large, unexplained sum of money, standing alone, does not constitute articulable suspicion of criminal activity which would justify seizure of an individual. Quinn v. State, 268 Ga. 70, 485 S.E.2d 483 (1997).

Detention in jail. — The sheriff's office violated the fourth and fourteenth amendments when, without probable cause, deputies seized defendant and took defendant to a jail and locked defendant in a cell for approximately 30 to 45 minutes before the defendant was taken to the sheriff's office where Miranda warnings were given and defendant was questioned. State v. Harris, 256 Ga. 24, 343 S.E.2d 483 (1986).

Seizure is not unreasonable simply because police have taken precaution to arm themselves in light of unknown danger.

Franklin v. State, 143 Ga. App. 3, 237 S.E.2d 425 (1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 950, 98 S. Ct. 1575, 55 L. Ed. 2d 799 (1978).

Use of deadly force. — As a matter of law, an officer who uses deadly force against a person who threatens the officer or others with serious harm or who the officer has probable cause to believe has already inflicted serious harm on others does not thereby commit an unreasonable seizure or deprivation of life or liberty without due process. The use of deadly force by police officers in such circumstances is not, as a matter of law, unreasonable or excessive. O’Neal v. DeKalb County, 667 F. Supp. 853 (N.D. Ga. 1987), aff’d, 850 F.2d 653 (11th Cir. 1988).

Apprehension by the use of deadly force is a seizure subject to the reasonableness requirement of the fourth amendment. Patterson v. Fuller, 654 F. Supp. 418 (N.D. Ga. 1987).

Plaintiff had a clearly established constitutional right not to be seized by means of deadly force unless the police officer had probable cause to believe that plaintiff posed a threat of serious physical harm, either to the officer or to others. Thompson v. Spikes, 663 F. Supp. 627 (S.D. Ga. 1987).

Police officer’s decision during burglary investigation to shoot unidentified assailant after advising assailant to drop assailant’s gun, without identifying self as a police officer, was not unreasonable in light of assailant’s pointing and using gun at officer. Linder v. Richmond County, 844 F. Supp. 764 (S.D. Ga.), aff’d, 38 F.3d 574 (11th Cir. 1994).

Excessive force not found. — Plaintiff’s claim of excessive force based on police officer’s “rough, rude” treatment whereby plaintiff received an injured eye was groundless, as not every push or shove, even if it may later seem unnecessary in the peace of a judge’s chambers, violates an arrestee’s constitutional rights. Newsome v. Webster, 843 F. Supp. 1460 (S.D. Ga. 1994).

Police officer’s alleged “grabbing” and “dragging” away of intoxicated defendant who struck officer for preventing defendant from interfering, at the direction of the attending emergency medical technicians at the scene of defendant’s child’s car wreck, did not constitute excessive force. Hodges v. Waters, 843 F. Supp. 1470 (S.D. Ga. 1994).

Because 40 law enforcement officers who provided the official personnel to check the identifications of night club patrons were the reasonable means to assist a revenue agent in conducting an administrative search, plaintiffs failed to state the violation of a constitutional right in the context of excessive force. Crosby v. Paulk, 187 F.3d 1339 (11th Cir. 1999).

Shooting held not seizure. — Where there is no evidence that a police officer intended to shoot plaintiff’s decedent or that the officer did so volitionally, the shooting does not constitute a “seizure” within the meaning of the fourth amendment. Matthews v. City of Atlanta, 699 F. Supp. 1552 (N.D. Ga. 1988).

Actions of police officers who, responding to emergency call, were attacked by decedent, and, against the family’s wishes, entered the house to subdue the decedent, were fired upon and fired back, resulting in the decedent’s death, while constituting a “seizure,” were neither unreasonable nor offensive to the fourth amendment. Menuel v. City of Atlanta, 25 F.3d 990 (11th Cir. 1994).

Legality of seizure of contraband whiskey. — Untaxed whiskey is contraband, the very possession of which is illegal, so that the law enforcement authorities are entitled to seize and not return it, wherever found, regardless of constitutional requirements. United States v. Edwards, 441 F.2d 749 (5th Cir. 1971).

Validity of warrantless seizure of car where police know of present illegal use. — Warrantless seizure of a car parked on private property, because the car had been used for illegal purposes, violates fourth amendment rights where the police know that it is presently being used for illegal purposes and a warrant could have been readily obtained. United States v. Pruett, 551 F.2d 1365 (5th Cir. 1977).

Validity of officer’s seizure of luggage from third party. — Where an officer requested and seized defendant’s luggage, as a protective custody action, from an individual in whose automobile the luggage had been placed prior to the defendant’s arrest, the officer’s acts were not improper and issues of probable cause and time to obtain a warrant did not arise. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337 (1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S.

Seizures (Cont'd)

886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

Tapping on shoulder. — In view of all the circumstances, the physical contact of merely tapping the defendant on the shoulder from the outset to get the defendant's attention alone does not constitute a seizure such that a reasonable person would believe one was not free to leave. State v. Reid, 247 Ga. 445, 276 S.E.2d 617 (1981).

Hearing required prior to seizure of film. — A prior adversary judicial hearing designed to focus searchingly on the question of obscenity must be held before the state may seize any motion picture film. Any seizure of an allegedly obscene film should be preceded by a state court finding of obscenity in an adversary judicial hearing. Central Agency, Inc. v. Brown, 306 F. Supp. 502 (N.D. Ga. 1969) Good v. State, 127 Ga. App. 775, 195 S.E.2d 264 (1972).

After some years of confusion in the law, it now appears that a prior adversarial hearing to determine obscenity is not a constitutional prerequisite for seizure of materials as evidence in a criminal prosecution. Good v. State, 127 Ga. App. 775, 195 S.E.2d 264 (1972) (but see, Central Agency, Inc. v. Brown, 306 F. Supp. 502 (N.D. Ga. 1969)).

Placement of driver in police car and taking of driver's license constituted seizure. — When a police officer takes possession of a driver's license and suggests that the owner sit in the backseat of the patrol car (from which the driver cannot alight without outside assistance), the driver has effectively been "seized," and the protection of the fourth amendment comes into play. Alexander v. State, 166 Ga. App. 233, 303 S.E.2d 773 (1983).

Requirement of certain vehicle documents not illegal seizure. — Requiring a person to send the revenue commissioner the certificate of title and the manufacturer's serial plate of a motor vehicle disposed of as wreckage or salvage does not constitute an illegal seizure of private property without just compensation in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 4, since the only purportedly valuable property involved is the title certificate and the serial plate, and such quasi-public documents do not constitute property within the protection of the constitutional provision. McDonald v. State, 222

Ga. 596, 151 S.E.2d 121 (1966).

Seizure of package opened by employees of defendant's condominium complex. — Police officer, who had seen the contents of an unsealed package which had been opened by employees of defendant's condominium complex and who had probable cause to believe that what the officer saw was cocaine, was authorized to seize the package without resort to a warrant. Ehrlich v. State, 189 Ga. App. 294, 375 S.E.2d 272, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 911, 375 S.E.2d 272 (1988).

Seizure of a pawn ticket from defendant's pocket did not violate the defendant's fourth amendment rights, where there was probable cause for the defendant's arrest on a charge of "loitering or prowling" in a high-crime area at 1:30 A.M. Pinkston v. State, 189 Ga. App. 851, 377 S.E.2d 864, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 913, 377 S.E.2d 864 (1989).

Requiring traffic violator to drive car to correctional center. — Requiring a motorist cited for a traffic violation to drive the car to a correctional center, in accordance with standard procedure for booking out-of-state motorists and requiring them to post bond, did not constitute an unlawful detention of the motorist or the automobile. O'Keefe v. State, 189 Ga. App. 519, 376 S.E.2d 406, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 913, 376 S.E.2d 406 (1988).

Seizure of suicidal individual. — Visibly intoxicated decedent who wielded a gun and threatened to commit suicide was not seized in violation of the decedent's constitutional rights, as the officer's actions were reasonable under the circumstances. Merideth v. Grogan, 812 F. Supp. 1223 (N.D. Ga. 1992), aff'd, 985 F.2d 579 (11th Cir. 1993).

Detention of weapons. — Police officers who were executing a search warrant for certain documents came upon a weapon and, in the interest of safety, removed the weapon from the premises for the duration of the search. Then, in the course of running a computer check on the occupants, which was permitted, the officers obtained information which led them to believe that the fact that the defendant had had possession of the weapon made the weapon evidence of a crime, since the information obtained related to the defendant's prior criminal record, which might have included a felony conviction. The detention of the weapon after that point without a warrant, therefore, did not violate the defendant's constitutional rights. United States v. Burke, 613 F. Supp. 576 (N.D. Ga. 1985), reversed on other grounds, 784 F.2d 1090 (11th Cir. 1986), cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1174, 106 S. Ct. 2901, 90 L. Ed. 2d 987 (1986).

Use of improperly seized evidence in forfeiture proceedings. — An object illegally seized cannot in any way be used either as evidence or as a basis for jurisdiction; accordingly, evidence derived because of a violation of the fourth amendment cannot be used in a forfeiture proceeding. An improper seizure, however, does not jeopardize the government's right to secure forfeiture if the probable cause to seize the vehicle can be supported with untainted evidence. United States v. $80,080.00 in United States Currency, 779 F. Supp. 169 (N.D. Ga. 1991).

Temporary detention of individuals leaving searchable area. — It was reasonable under the fourth and fourteenth amendments for a police officer, knowing that certain persons and premises were the subject of an immediately executable search warrant, to detain temporarily a vehicle containing occupants who just departed the premises to see if one of them was a person named in the warrant. Fritzius v. State, 225 Ga. App. 642, 484 S.E.2d 743 (1997).

Defendant was not seized under the fourth amendment when the officers first entered the motel room where defendant's companion invited the officers into the room and agreed to talk with them, and defendant and defendant's companion had a "normal conversation" with the officers about drug problems at the motel; this encounter was a first-tier encounter. Keilholtz v. State, 261 Ga. App. 1, 581 S.E.2d 660 (2003).

Arrests

1. In General

Purpose of arrest warrant. — An arrest warrant is issued by magistrate upon a showing that probable cause exists to believe that the subject of the warrant has committed an offense. Thus, it primarily serves to protect an individual from an unreasonable seizure. Steagald v. United States, 451 U.S. 204, 101 S. Ct. 1642, 68 L. Ed. 2d 38 (1981).

Arrest does not require formal words or stationhouse booking. United States v. Jones, 352 F. Supp. 369 (S.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 481 F.2d 1402 (5th Cir. 1973).

Time of arrest is a question of fact which depends upon evaluation of testimony by the trial judge. Franklin v. State, 143 Ga. App. 3, 237 S.E.2d 425 (1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 950, 98 S. Ct. 1575, 55 L. Ed. 2d 799 (1978).

It is not when the officer formally proclaims a person to be in custody but when one is effectively restrained and is cognizant thereof that an arrest is considered to have taken place. United States v. Jones, 352 F. Supp. 369 (S.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 481 F.2d 1402 (5th Cir. 1973).

To constitute an arrest there must be actual or constructive detention with intention to do so and so understood by the person restrained. Whether a defendant is in custody is determined both by the defendant's subjective feeling as to arrest and the nature of police intentions and actions in light of the surrounding circumstances. United States v. Jones, 352 F. Supp. 369 (S.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 481 F.2d 1402 (5th Cir. 1973).

If there is significant interference with the defendant's liberty, fact that the police did not intend to make a formal arrest or did not think that their actions constituted an arrest is irrelevant to compliance with the standards of U.S. Const., amend. 4. United States v. Jones, 352 F. Supp. 369 (S.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 481 F.2d 1402 (5th Cir. 1973).

Arrest is accomplished whenever liberty of another to come and go as one pleases is restrained, no matter how slight such restraint may be. The defendant may voluntarily submit to being considered under arrest without any actual touching or show of force, and the arrest is complete. Bowers v. State, 151 Ga. App. 46, 258 S.E.2d 623 (1979), aff'd, 245 Ga. 367, 265 S.E.2d 57 (1980).

Arrest is accomplished whenever liberty of another to come and go as the individual pleases is restrained, no matter how slight such restraint may be. Vaughn v. State, 247 Ga. 136, 274 S.E.2d 479 (1981).

Because defendant's car was hemmed in by police vehicles, the keys had been removed from the vehicle, and the defendant was sitting in the back of a marked patrol car, defendant was arrested (though maybe not formally) the instant the defendant's car was stopped on the street. United States v. Brown, 822 F. Supp. 750 (M.D. Ga. 1993), aff'd, 50 F.3d 1037 (11th Cir. 1995).

Arrests (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Intent to detain. — The subjective intention of the law enforcement officer to detain the respondent, had the respondent attempted to leave, is irrelevant except insofar as that may have been conveyed to the respondent. Dupree v. State, 247 Ga. 470, 277 S.E.2d 18 (1981).

Arrest which meets standards of probable cause described in Beck v. Ohio, 379 U.S. 89, 85 S. Ct. 223, 13 L. Ed. 2d 142 (1964), is valid whether or not former Code 1933, § 27-207 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-4-20) is violated. Vaughn v. State, 247 Ga. 136, 274 S.E.2d 479 (1981).

Effect of Miranda warnings following arrest on less than probable cause. — There is no per se rule that Miranda warnings in and of themselves suffice to cure violation involved in obtaining inculpatory statements during custodial interrogation following a formal arrest on less than probable cause. Little v. State, 153 Ga. App. 574, 266 S.E.2d 265, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 861, 101 S. Ct. 164, 66 L. Ed. 2d 77 (1980).

Person is arrested or seized when officer stops and questions person and runs national crime check on person. To justify it, the state must be able to point to specific and articulable facts, which, together with rational inferences drawn therefrom, reasonably warrant the intrusion. Hill v. State, 140 Ga. App. 121, 230 S.E.2d 336 (1976).

Arrest by task force member lawfully operating outside member's own county. — Defendant's fourth amendment right to be free from unreasonable searches and seizures clearly was not violated merely because the defendant's arrest was effected by a county law enforcement officer who, though a member of a duly constituted task force lawfully operating in another county, had not been sworn as a deputy in that other county. State v. Giangregorio, 181 Ga. App. 324, 352 S.E.2d 193 (1986).

Validity of arrest where one of two officers outside the officer's jurisdiction. — If an arrest is effected by two officers, one of whom is a deputy sheriff of the county in which the arrest takes place, and the other is outside jurisdiction, the arrest is made under lawful authority as long as all other constitutional standards are met. Coley v. State, 135 Ga. App. 810, 219 S.E.2d 35 (1975).

Proof that arrest was legal is not made by statement of witness that arrest was made under warrant. Marshall v. State, 130 Ga. App. 572, 203 S.E.2d 885 (1974).

Defendant not under arrest prior to search of car and home. — A person who came into police station to pay traffic ticket and was questioned after being given Miranda rights because that person fit the description of a suspect, and who was then transported to the county police department to take a lie detector test, was not under arrest because that person went voluntarily. Defendant was not arrested until after a search of the defendant's car, with the defendant's permission and a search of the defendant's home with a warrant and with the defendant's wife's cooperation, turned up incriminating evidence. This finding was made even though one of the initial detaining officers did not regard the suspect as free to leave. Vaughn v. State, 247 Ga. 136, 274 S.E.2d 479 (1981).

Evidence insufficient to find defendant was under arrest. — Because the only evidence of any restraint upon appellant prior to giving a statement was the appellant's testimony at the end of trial and after the admission of the confession, where the appellant testified that the appellant did not understand that the appellant was free to leave, and where there was ample testimony by law enforcement officers that appellant was free to leave at any time, the appellant was not under arrest. Vaughn v. State, 247 Ga. 136, 274 S.E.2d 479 (1981); Blanchard v. Blanchard, 261 Ga. 11, 401 S.E.2d 714 (1991).

Illegal detention (without a valid probable cause hearing) does not preclude indictment by grand jury. — Illegal arrest or detention does not void a subsequent conviction, and the failure to provide counsel at a probable cause hearing may not be raised after conviction by petitioners for writ of habeas corpus. State v. Houston, 234 Ga. 721, 218 S.E.2d 13 (1975).

Basis for stopping occupants of vehicle insufficient. — A person's rights under U.S.

Const., amend. 4 are infringed when they are stopped only on the basis that it was after midnight and that they turned off the main road onto a side road and were then arrested after the discovery of marijuana. Brooks v. State, 129 Ga. App. 109, 198 S.E.2d 892 (1973).

An arrest may be made upon hearsay evidence; and indeed, the reasonable cause necessary to support an arrest cannot demand the same strictness of proof as the accused's guilt upon a trial, unless the powers of peace officers are to be so cut down that they cannot possibly perform their duties. Sanders v. State, 235 Ga. 425, 219 S.E.2d 768 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 976, 96 S. Ct. 2177, 48 L. Ed. 2d 800 (1976).

Arrest based on unfounded assumption unauthorized. — Neither the law of Georgia nor the Constitution authorize an arrest on account of an unfounded assumption that a private citizen has already effected an arrest for shoplifting. Daye v. City of Albany, 496 F. Supp. 1227 (M.D. Ga. 1980).

Where suspect voluntarily exits home, arrest outside home constitutional. — Where a suspect is telephonically requested to exit the suspect's home and voluntarily does so, the suspect's arrest, outside the suspect's home, by officers who have probable cause to believe that the suspect has participated in a felony is constitutionally valid. Mincey v. State, 251 Ga. 255, 304 S.E.2d 882 (1983), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 977, 104 S. Ct. 414, 78 L. Ed. 2d 352 (1983).

The defendant's arrest occurred on the front porch of the defendant's house, after the defendant had complied with the request of a police officer to step outside. An arrest under such circumstances did not constitute an arrest that was made inside the defendant's home. Keyser v. State, 187 Ga. App. 95, 369 S.E.2d 309, cert. denied, 187 Ga. App. 908, 369 S.E.2d 309 (1988).

Where defendant willingly agreed to accompany police to the police station, was not under arrest when defendant did so, was not handcuffed, was advised defendant was free to go at any time, and rode to the police station in an unmarked car without a "cage," no fourth amendment violation occurred when the detectives entered the defendant's workplace or when the defendant accompanied the officers to the police station. Singleton v. State, 195 Ga. App. 119, 393 S.E.2d 6 (1990).

Municipal liability for confinement. —

The defendant, who was arrested without a warrant, charged with, inter alia, possession of a controlled substance, and confined in the city jail, was deprived of liberty without due process where the defendant requested a lab analysis and, pursuant to the practice of the municipal court, the case was reset, delaying the determination of probable cause until over two months later. The city, who was the responsible custodian of those confined in the jail, was liable. Lambert v. McFarland, 612 F. Supp. 1252 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Apprehension of suspect in public place. —

If probable cause exists, no warrant is required to apprehend a suspected felon in a public place. Steagald v. United States, 451 U.S. 204, 101 S. Ct. 1642, 68 L. Ed. 2d 38 (1981).

Emergency arrest at scene of homicide. —

When the police come upon the scene of a homicide, they may make a prompt warrantless search to see if there are other victims or if a killer is still on the premises. The need to protect or preserve life or avoid serious injury is justification for what would be otherwise illegal absent an exigency or emergency, and the police may seize any evidence that is in plain view during the course of their legitimate emergency activities. Delay v. State, 258 Ga. 229, 367 S.E.2d 806, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 850, 109 S. Ct. 132, 102 L. Ed. 2d 105 (1988).

Police justified in arresting defendant, and in detaining companion, before defendant's identity confirmed. — See United States v. Kapperman, 764 F.2d 786 (11th Cir. 1985).

Mistaken arrest of wrong person. — When the police have probable cause to arrest one party, and they reasonably mistake a second party for the first party, then the arrest of the second party is a valid arrest. Garcia v. State, 200 Ga. App. 741, 409 S.E.2d 683 (1991).

No wrongful arrest under circumstances. —

A prudent person could have suspected that a driver of an automobile stopped by a police officer was a rapist, based on the victim's description of the assailant, despite discrepancies between the alleged rapist and the driver, and based on the victim's personal identification of the driver as the assailant. There was therefore no wrongful arrest. Goodson v. City of Atlanta, 763 F.2d 1381 (11th Cir. 1985).

Arrests (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Protection of interests of persons not named in warrant. — An arrest warrant is not adequate to protect interests under U.S. Const., amend. 4 of persons not named in the warrant when their homes are searched without their consent and in the absence of exigent circumstances. United States v. Gaultney, 656 F.2d 109 (5th Cir.), mandate modified, 664 F.2d 1241 (5th Cir. 1981).

Booking for "investigation" did not render arrests invalid as a matter of law, there being a valid basis for the arrests. Wilson v. Attaway, 757 F.2d 1227 (11th Cir. 1985).

Arrest made pursuant to an invalid bench warrant was illegal, where records clearly showed that the warrant had been recalled several months prior to the arrest. State v. Stringer, 258 Ga. 605, 372 S.E.2d 426 (1988).

Lawful to arrest and search suspect fleeing from an unlawful initial arrest. — Even assuming that the initial arrest of a defendant in a police-citizen airport encounter was unlawful, the defendant had no right to flee and to strike the law enforcement officer in an effort to escape; probable cause existed for a second arrest for resisting arrest, and a search of the defendant incident to the second arrest was lawful. United States v. Bailey, 691 F.2d 1009 (11th Cir. 1982), cert. denied, 461 U.S. 933, 103 S. Ct. 2098, 77 L. Ed. 2d 306 (1983).

Arrest under valid warrant proper even with knowledge of expiration of limitations period. — Where deputies arrested a jail visitor after a computer search revealed outstanding arrest warrants on bad check charges, even if the deputies knew the statute of limitations had expired at the time they served the warrants, they were entitled to qualified immunity in a civil rights action; the deputies had no responsibility to determine the viability of a statute of limitations defense when executing a valid arrest warrant. Pickens v. Hollowell, 59 F.3d 1203 (11th Cir. 1995).

Bulge in clothing. — Officer's observation of an odd-sized and shaped bulge in a suspect's sock and the suspect's false response to an inquiry about the object in the sock provided probable cause for the suspect's warrantless arrest. Accordingly, the search incident to that arrest was not violative of U.S. Const., amend. 4 or the fourteenth amendment. Reid v. State, 179 Ga. App. 144, 345 S.E.2d 635 (1986).

Because police officers properly detained defendant on the basis of a telephone tip regarding suspected drug activity, observation of a bulge at the defendant's waist authorized a limited search for weapons, and the defendant's arrest was justified when the bulge turned out to be apparent contraband. Roberts v. State, 193 Ga. App. 96, 386 S.E.2d 921 (1989).

Arrest following withdrawal of consent to search. — The trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion to suppress the contraband on which the conviction was based, where the cocaine was seized during a search of the defendant conducted following the defendant's arrest at the Atlanta airport for giving a false name to a law enforcement officer, although the agent had not arrested defendant for giving a false name at the time that offense had allegedly occurred but waited until defendant had withdrawn defendant's consent to the search, since there was probable cause to arrest defendant for the offense of giving a false name to a law enforcement officer and consequently the subsequent search of defendant's person was permissible as a search incident to a valid arrest. Taylor v. State, 181 Ga. App. 703, 353 S.E.2d 619 (1987).

Claims relating to excessive force in the course of an arrest are properly analyzed under the fourth amendment's "objective reasonableness" standard. Turton v. City of Atlanta, 738 F. Supp. 1419 (N.D. Ga. 1990).

Pregnant woman claiming excessive force. — There was no excessive force sufficient to indicate an officer violated any clearly established constitutional right where a plaintiff, a woman in her eighth month of pregnancy, passed a road block without permission which provided the officer with arguable probable cause, drove away from the scene, parked and ran into a building, and the officer, catching her in the building, only firmly held her and contacted her abdomen in the process; the act of physically holding back a misdemeanor suspect who was attempting to leave the scene, even given her pregnant condition, was not disproportionate although the woman later miscarried. Moore v. Gwinnett County, 967 F.2d 1495 (11th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1081, 113 S. Ct. 1049, 122 L. Ed. 2d 357 (1993).

Excessive force found. — Officers were not justified in using any force to arrest plaintiffs who were not suspected of committing a serious crime, did not pose an immediate threat to anyone, and did not actively resist arrest. Thornton v. City of Macon, 132 F.3d 1395 (11th Cir. 1998).

Reasonable to place arrestee in “body chains.” — A policy requiring that every person taken into custody by the federal marshals service be placed in “body chains” without regard to the nature of the crime charged reasonably balanced the government’s legitimate interest in protecting the safety of the marshals, innocent bystanders, and the arrestee, as well as the government’s interest in preventing the escape of an arrestee, against the arrestee’s liberty interest. King v. Thornburg, 762 F. Supp. 336 (S.D. Ga. 1991).

Exculpatory evidence. — Detectives had no affirmative duty to make the district attorney aware of an exculpatory lab report, where there was no evidence two of the detectives ever saw the report, or had a clearly established duty to ferret it out, and where the third detective did receive the report, but it was not clearly established that the detective was required to turn over exculpatory evidence to a prosecutor since the detective had reason to believe that the prosecutor already had the evidence. Kelly v. Curtis, 21 F.3d 1544 (11th Cir. 1994).

Misleading or pressuring grand jury. — An arrest pursuant to a grand jury indictment may violate the fourth amendment if the grand jury was misled or experienced undue pressure. Mastroianni v. Bowers, 160 F.3d 671 (11th Cir. 1998).

Warrant supported by probable cause. — Defendant’s motion to suppress was properly denied as to an arrest warrant as the warrant was supported by probable cause since a witness identified the defendant and stated that the defendant was present at the murder scene and another witness confirmed the identification through a photo lineup and testified to observing the defendant carry out the actual crime; even if the affidavit contained allegedly misleading information that one witness was the victim’s cousin and that the defendant was identified by witnesses via a six-photo lineup was redacted, the remaining information was still sufficient to support the probable cause finding. Waters v. State, 281 Ga. 119, 636 S.E.2d 538 (2006).

2. Warrantless Arrest

Validity of warrantless arrest. — The constitutional validity of arrest without a warrant depends upon whether, at the moment the arrest was made, the officers had probable cause to make it — whether at that moment the facts and circumstances within their knowledge and of which they had reasonably trustworthy information were sufficient to warrant a prudent person in believing that the defendant had committed or was committing an offense. Lynn v. State, 130 Ga. App. 646, 204 S.E.2d 346 (1974); Sanders v. State, 235 Ga. 425, 219 S.E.2d 768 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 976, 96 S. Ct. 2177, 48 L. Ed. 2d 800 (1976); Duffy v. State, 156 Ga. App. 847, 275 S.E.2d 658 (1980); Timmons v. State, 166 Ga. App. 489, 304 S.E.2d 453 (1983); State v. Grant, 257 Ga. 123, 355 S.E.2d 646 (1987).

Former Code 1933, § 27-207 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-4-20) provides for three exceptions to requirement that warrant be obtained prior to arrest. These exceptions are: (1) the offense is committed in the officer’s presence; (2) the offender is endeavoring to escape; (3) for some other cause there is likely to be a failure of justice for want of an officer to issue a warrant. The federal constitutional standard, on the other hand, is not as stringent. Vaughn v. State, 247 Ga. 136, 274 S.E.2d 479 (1981).

Defendant’s suppression motion was properly denied as: (1) the police personally heard an individual say to the informant on the telephone that the individual had a kilogram of cocaine in the individual’s hotel room that the individual intended to sell to the informant if the informant would come to that certain hotel at a certain time, where that individual would be waiting on the third-floor balcony to throw the informant a key; (2) when the informant arrived at the designated hotel at the designated time, the police observed the defendant standing on the third-floor balcony and further observed the defendant respond favorably to the informant’s request not to throw down the key and instead to come to the back door to let the informant in; (3) the police did not arrest the defendant until the defendant appeared at that back door; and (4) the information received from an untested informant might have been helpful and corroborating, but the personal observations and perceptions of the police alone more than sufficed to supply the probable cause needed for a warrantless arrest. Fleming v. State, 282 Ga. App. 373, 638 S.E.2d 769 (2006).

Arrests (Cont'd)2. Warrantless Arrest (Cont'd)

Reasonableness of warrantless arrests. — U.S. Const., amend. 4 protects citizens from unreasonable searches and seizures and from the issuance of warrants without probable cause; it does not prohibit an arrest without a warrant, when there is reasonable or probable cause for the arrest. Dailey v. United States, 261 F.2d 870 (5th Cir. 1958), cert. denied, 359 U.S. 969, 3 L. Ed. 2d 836, 79 S. Ct. 881 (1959).

Attenuation of arrest. — Assuming, without deciding, that defendant was subjected to a warrantless arrest without probable cause at the time defendant was handcuffed and placed in the police vehicle, it was clear that any taint arising therefrom became attenuated; therefore, the trial court did not err by overruling defendant's motion to exclude evidence of defendant's confession. Paradise v. State, 212 Ga. App. 166, 441 S.E.2d 497 (1994).

Where arrest is without warrant, crime must be committed in presence of officer and the officer must have evidence of the same obtained through the use of the officer's senses. Barron v. State, 109 Ga. App. 786, 137 S.E.2d 690 (1964).

Arrest without warrant in misdemeanor case is lawful where offense is committed in arresting officer's presence and where the officer has probable cause to believe that it is being committed. Stephens v. Lindsey, 304 F. Supp. 203 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

U.S. Const., amend. 4 does not prohibit warrantless arrests for misdemeanors committed outside presence of the arresting state officer. Diamond v. Marland, 395 F. Supp. 432 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Matters of warrantless detentions and arrests must be handled on case-by-case basis looking at the totality of circumstances to determine if a reasonable and articulable suspicion or some exigent circumstance existed to authorize the intrusion. Frankum v. State, 174 Ga. App. 660, 331 S.E.2d 52 (1985).

Information that accused charged with serious crime. — O.C.G.A. § 17-13-34, which authorizes a warrantless arrest of a person by officers in this state upon reasonable information that the accused is charged in the courts of a state with a crime punishable by death or imprisonment for more than a year, is justified under the fourth, fifth, and fourteenth amendments, in that it is based upon a standard which comports with the constitutional standard of probable cause as set forth in Beck v. Ohio, 379 U.S. 89, 85 S. Ct. 223, 13 L. Ed. 2d 142 (1964); Ledesma v. State, 251 Ga. 487, 306 S.E.2d 629 (1983), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 1069, 104 S. Ct. 975, 79 L. Ed. 2d 213 (1984).

Facts insufficient to support probable cause for arrest. — Under the Tate standard, defendant's breath test results, obtained while defendant was in custody, were properly suppressed as the arresting officer lacked probable cause to arrest defendant for driving under the influence where: (1) defendant had a single-car accident; (2) defendant had two clues for intoxication in the HGN test, while the other four clues were inconclusive or indicated no intoxication; (3) defendant's alco-sensor test results were positive for alcohol; (4) the trial court found that all of the alleged indicia of impairment were caused by the accident or lacked credibility; and (5) defendant adequately explained the accident to the officer. State v. Gray, 267 Ga. App. 753, 600 S.E.2d 626 (2004).

Arrest without warrant is lawful where arresting officer has probable cause to believe that a felony has been or is being committed. Cook v. Smith, 303 F. Supp. 90 (S.D. Ga. 1969), aff'd, 427 F.2d 1172 (5th Cir. 1970).

Warrantless arrests based on probable cause and made in a public place are permissible under U.S. Const., amend. 4. United States v. Costa, 691 F.2d 1358 (11th Cir. 1982).

Warrantless arrest in home. — Officers need not always have warrant to enter house for arrest of felon. If they have probable cause to arrest for a felony and the exigencies of the situation make it imperative that they proceed without waiting to obtain a warrant, the arrest is not constitutionally invalid. United States v. Gaultney, 581 F.2d 1137 (5th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 446 U.S. 907, 100 S. Ct. 1833, 64 L. Ed. 2d 259 (1980).

Arrest clearly violates U.S. Const., amend. 4 where it takes place in home without warrant and without either exigent circumstances or consent. Thompson v. State, 248 Ga. 343, 285 S.E.2d 685 (1981).

Warrantless arrest inside home allowable only with suspect's consent or under exigent circumstances. Mincey v. State, 251 Ga. 255, 304 S.E.2d 882 (1983), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 977, 104 S. Ct. 414, 78 L. Ed. 2d 352 (1983).

A warrantless seizure that occurred in a defendant's home did not violate the fourth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, where the evidence showed that the defendant committed the violation of driving with defective equipment in the officer's presence and, when the officer first tried to issue a citation for the offense in the yard, the defendant ignored the officer and retreated toward the defendant's house, where the officer caught the defendant in the doorway. Brock v. State, 196 Ga. App. 605, 396 S.E.2d 785 (1990).

Pending danger of injury to an infant being held by the defendant provided exigency authorizing the warrantless arrest of the defendant in the defendant's home. McCauley v. State, 222 Ga. App. 600, 475 S.E.2d 669 (1996).

An officer who entered a home in hot pursuit of defendant who had committed a traffic violation in the officer's presence was authorized to make a warrantless arrest. State v. Nichols, 225 Ga. App. 609, 484 S.E.2d 507 (1997).

Where police entry into defendant's residence was without probable cause or exigent circumstances, a statement taken from defendant at the time was not admissible at trial. State v. Sims, 240 Ga. App. 391, 523 S.E.2d 619 (1999).

Statements made by the defendant outside the defendant's home during custodial interrogation were admissible regardless of whether the defendant's arrest inside the home without a warrant was illegal. Stinski v. State, 281 Ga. 783, 642 S.E.2d 1 (2007).

Where an individual commits an offense in his or her home and that offense is committed in the presence of a law enforcement officer, the officer is authorized to arrest the individual in the home without a warrant only where the officer's entry into the home is by consent or where there are exigent circumstances. Carranza v. State, 266 Ga. 263, 467 S.E.2d 315 (1996).

Flight accompanied by other suspicious circumstances will sometimes authorize a warrantless arrest even though the officers do not at the time know that the particular crime for which the arrestee is brought to trial has been committed. Morton v. State, 132 Ga. App. 329, 208 S.E.2d 134 (1974).

Flight in connection with other circumstances sufficient to constitute probable cause for arrest without a warrant. Green v. State, 127 Ga. App. 713, 194 S.E.2d 678 (1972); State v. Smalls, 203 Ga. App. 283, 416 S.E.2d 531 (1992).

Where persons in the suspected group fled as the police approached, and others, including defendant, attempted to leave the scene more slowly, circumstances gave rise to an articulable suspicion that a criminal act may have been occurring so as to authorize a brief investigatory stop. State v. Smalls, 203 Ga. App. 283, 416 S.E.2d 531 (1992).

Entry of house not justified by "hot pursuit" of vehicle. — Where police officers had chased a speeding yellow motorcycle and subsequently found the motorcycle leaning against the side of defendant's house, the "hot pursuit" doctrine did not justify entry of the house in order to effect an arrest. Hamrick v. State, 198 Ga. App. 124, 401 S.E.2d 25 (1990).

Because of mobility of automobiles, officers not always required to delay their arrest in order to obtain warrants, especially if there is a likelihood that the suspect will escape resulting in a failure of justice if the suspect is not arrested that moment. Coley v. State, 135 Ga. App. 810, 219 S.E.2d 35 (1975).

No distinction between felonies and misdemeanors. — Under federal constitutional standards as to warrantless arrests, no distinction exists between felony and misdemeanor in respect to probable cause and good faith belief. Diamond v. Marland, 395 F. Supp. 432 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Using results of unlawful search to justify warrantless arrest. — Where the defendant has committed no crime in the presence of the arresting officer, and the latter has no valid warrant, the arrest without a warrant will not justify the search, the result of which forms the basis of the charge. Harper v. State, 135 Ga. App. 924, 219 S.E.2d 636 (1975).

Arrests (Cont'd)2. Warrantless Arrest (Cont'd)

Alleged arrest warrant. — State violated defendant's rights by serving and arresting defendant on an alleged bench warrant in the defendant's home, and thereafter obtaining a search warrant for a suspected controlled substance spotted during the arrest, because this arrest warrant was never physically produced in the criminal proceedings nor its existence otherwise confirmed by the record. Baez v. State, 206 Ga. App. 462, 425 S.E.2d 882 (1992).

In making a warrantless arrest, police officers not required to predict how courts will interpret or how they will decide as to the validity of a law. Diamond v. Marland, 395 F. Supp. 432 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Judicial determination of reasonableness of warrantless arrest. — Where the constitutional validity of a warrantless arrest is challenged in a criminal case, it is the function of the court to determine whether the facts available to the officer at the moment of arrest would warrant a person of reasonable caution in a belief that an offense had been committed. Diamond v. Marland, 395 F. Supp. 432 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Corroboration of an individual's mere presence at a designated public location is not corroboration of otherwise unreliable rumors of criminal activity so as to authorize an immediate warrantless arrest. Polke v. State, 203 Ga. App. 306, 417 S.E.2d 22 (1992).

Warrantless arrest based on informer's hearsay. — An informer's hearsay forms the basis for the warrantless arrest if the reliability of the informant is shown and the evidence establishes that the informant had obtained the information in a reliable manner so as to give the arresting officer probable cause to believe the defendant was committing a crime. Crowley v. State, 140 Ga. App. 208, 230 S.E.2d 358 (1976).

Belief that felony committed. — Without warrant police officer may arrest one believed by officer on reasonable cause to have been guilty of a felony. United States v. Williams, 573 F.2d 348 (5th Cir. 1978).

City shoplifting policy eliminated constitutionally derived right of all persons to be free from arrest without a warrant by a police officer except in those instances in which the police officer has probable cause to believe the person had committed or was committing a crime. Daye v. City of Albany, 496 F. Supp. 1227 (M.D. Ga. 1980).

Facts insufficient to warrant arrest for shoplifting. — Assuming that a police officer is constitutionally authorized to arrest without a warrant on a misdemeanor — a proposition which is extremely doubtful — in light of obviously used condition of the allegedly new $3.99 shoes that individual was accused of taking and that officer looked at, the officer as a matter of common sense could not have believed accused had committed the offense of shoplifting and did not have good faith probable cause to arrest individual for shoplifting. Daye v. City of Albany, 496 F. Supp. 1227 (M.D. Ga. 1980).

Possession of large sums of money certainly may be suspicious, but it is not itself a crime and does not constitute probable cause for an immediate warrantless arrest for possession of contraband. Polke v. State, 203 Ga. App. 306, 417 S.E.2d 22 (1992).

Initial investigative search was authorized. — When the arresting officer stopped defendant, officer had reasonable articulable grounds for suspicion, based on the description given by both the victim and a man who was using a pay telephone at the scene of the crime, that defendant was the person who assaulted the victim, and the officer was authorized to make a protective patdown search to maintain the status quo while questioning appellant. Dorsey v. State, 203 Ga. App. 397, 416 S.E.2d 879 (1992).

Warrants1. In General

Purpose of warrant is to allow a neutral judicial officer to assess whether the police have probable cause to make an arrest or conduct a search. Steagald v. United States, 451 U.S. 204, 101 S. Ct. 1642, 68 L. Ed. 2d 38 (1981).

A search warrant is issued upon a showing of probable cause to believe that the legitimate object of a search is located in a particular place. Therefore, it safeguards an individual's interest in the privacy of the home and possessions against the unjustified intrusion of the police. Steagald v. United States, 451 U.S. 204, 101 S. Ct. 1642, 68 L. Ed. 2d 38 (1981).

The warrant traditionally has represented independent assurance that search and arrest will not proceed without probable cause to believe that a crime has been committed and that the person or place named in the warrant is involved in the crime. State v. Guhl, 140 Ga. App. 23, 230 S.E.2d 22 (1976), rev'd on other grounds sub nom. Mitchell v. State, 239 Ga. 3, 235 S.E.2d 509 (1977).

Presumption of validity. — A search warrant, regular and proper on its face, is presumptively valid, and the burden is on the person who moves to suppress evidence to show that the affiant engaged in misconduct in executing the affidavit or that material misrepresentations were knowingly or recklessly included in the affidavit. Hunter v. State, 198 Ga. App. 41, 400 S.E.2d 641 (1990), cert. denied, 198 Ga. App. 898, 400 S.E.2d 641 (1991).

Standards for warrant under fourth and fourteenth amendments. — Proscriptions of U.S. Const., amend. 4 are enforced against states through U.S. Const., amend. 14, and the standard for obtaining a search warrant is the same under the two amendments. Carson v. State ex rel. Price, 221 Ga. 299, 144 S.E.2d 384 (1965).

Authority to issue warrant not specified. — This constitutional guaranty does not specify who has authority or jurisdiction to issue search warrant. Pruitt v. State, 123 Ga. App. 659, 182 S.E.2d 142 (1971).

The city court would have had jurisdiction to issue a search warrant for any part of the City of Atlanta, whether in Fulton or DeKalb County; however, no part of the City of Atlanta extends to Coweta County and thus city court did not have jurisdiction to issue a search warrant for a house located there. State v. Kirkland, 212 Ga. App. 672, 442 S.E.2d 491 (1994).

Practicality of procuring a search warrant is not a sine qua non to reasonableness of a search. Some flexibility will be accorded law officers. Thomas v. State, 118 Ga. App. 359, 163 S.E.2d 850 (1968), cert. denied, 394 U.S. 943, 89 S. Ct. 1273, 22 L. Ed. 2d 477 (1969).

Arrest warrants and search warrants compared. — While an arrest warrant and a search warrant both serve to subject the probable cause determination of the police to judicial review, the interests protected by the two warrants differ. Steagald v. United States, 451 U.S. 204, 101 S. Ct. 1642, 68 L. Ed. 2d 38 (1981).

Requirement of warrant for search of private property. — Except in certain classes of cases, a search of private property is unreasonable if it is not conducted pursuant to a valid search warrant. Romano v. Home Ins. Co., 490 F. Supp. 191 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

No reasonable grounds for issuing warrant. — The Supreme Court enunciated four instances when an officer cannot be said to have reasonable grounds for believing a warrant was properly issued: (1) The warrant is facially defective; (2) the judge who issued the warrant has wholly abandoned the judicial role; (3) the affidavit was so lacking in indicia of probable cause as to render a belief that it was valid to be unreasonable; and (4) the magistrate was misled by information the affiant either knew or reasonably should have known to be false. Bell v. State, 204 Ga. App. 528, 419 S.E.2d 729 (1992).

Judicial preference is accorded searches under a warrant. United States v. Morris, 491 F. Supp. 222 (S.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd, 647 F.2d 568 (5th Cir. 1981).

"Anticipatory" search warrants are not per se illegal. State v. Baker, 216 Ga. App. 66, 453 S.E.2d 115 (1995).

Warrant required to enter home absent consent or exigency. — In the absence of consent or exigent circumstances, entry into a home to conduct a search or make an arrest is unreasonable under U.S. Const., amend. 4 unless done pursuant to a warrant. Steagald v. United States, 451 U.S. 204, 101 S. Ct. 1642, 68 L. Ed. 2d 38 (1981).

Searches by private individuals. — The warrant requirement of U.S. Const., amend. 4 is intended solely as a restraint upon the activities of sovereign authority, and a search conducted by a private individual for purely private reasons does not fall within the protective ambit of U.S. Const., amend. 4. If, under the circumstances of the case, the private party acted as an instrument or agent of the government, the ostensibly private search must meet the amendment's standards; the decisive factor is the actuality of a share by a federal official in the total enterprise of securing and selecting evidence by other than sanctioned means. United States v. Robinson, 504 F. Supp. 425 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Warrants (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

"Staleness" of warrant. — The requirement for timely execution of a search warrant under former Code 1933, § 27-306 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-5-25) indicates the legislative intent, as well as constitutional demand, that probable cause relate to current and not stale information. Fowler v. State, 121 Ga. App. 22, 172 S.E.2d 447 (1970).

An unreasonable delay before securing a search warrant, after receiving information from an informant, where the probable cause must be based solely on the information given, will cause the invalidity of the warrant because it is based on "stale" information. Logan v. State, 135 Ga. App. 879, 219 S.E.2d 615 (1975).

Time alone is inadequate to resolve questions of staleness of information in warrants because the ultimate question is whether, under the facts and circumstances of a particular case, information about evidence is so fresh that there is probable cause to believe the evidence still exists in the same place or is so stale that such a conclusion of probable cause is unreasonable. McDade v. State, 175 Ga. App. 204, 332 S.E.2d 672 (1985).

Five years after an alleged murder, police searching defendant's parents' home found a vice (in which defendant had allegedly placed the victim's head) with blood evidence on it; the trial court erred in finding that information in the search warrant affidavit was stale, as the vise was not perishable, and it was reasonable to expect it to still be there. State v. Lejeune, 277 Ga. 749, 594 S.E.2d 637, cert. denied, 543 U.S. 861, 125 S. Ct. 187, 160 L. Ed. 2d 103 (2004).

Search cannot exceed warrant's scope. — A search in execution of a warrant may not exceed in scope the particular article or things to be seized. Lockhart v. State, 166 Ga. App. 555, 305 S.E.2d 22 (1983).

A search in execution of a warrant may not exceed in scope the particular article or things to be seized, so, where a warrant authorized seizure of the following: "Cruelly treated animals who are sick and are not being treated medically, animals in overcrowded and diseased environment, business records which document condition of animals, euthanizing drugs," there was no judicial authorization for seizure of drugs other than euthanizing drugs, business records which did not document the condition of animals, and any animal which was not in perfect health. Military Circle Pet Ctr. No. 94, Inc. v. State, 181 Ga. App. 657, 353 S.E.2d 555, aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 257 Ga. 388, 360 S.E.2d 248 (1987).

Officer cannot use a warrant as pretext for launching full scale investigation as to the origins of an item which is not incriminating on its face. Hogan v. State, 140 Ga. App. 716, 231 S.E.2d 802 (1976).

Objects on premises named in search warrant. — Without notice of some sort of the ownership of a belonging, police are entitled to assume that all objects within premises lawfully subject to search under a warrant are part of those premises for the purpose of executing the warrant. Hayes v. State, 141 Ga. App. 706, 234 S.E.2d 360 (1977).

Where the facts are consistent with the searching officer's belief that a suitcase that turned out to belong to defendant, a visitor, was part of the premises lawfully subject to search under the warrant, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion to suppress as to the cocaine found in the luggage. Brown v. State, 181 Ga. App. 768, 353 S.E.2d 572 (1987).

Search of containers within larger container. — U.S. Const., amend. 4 does not require additional search warrant for each container within a larger container when the warrant covers the search of the larger for a specified item. United States v. Morris, 491 F. Supp. 222 (S.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd, 647 F.2d 568 (5th Cir. 1981).

Items not named in search warrant, but seized in connection with crime under investigation, are proper. Dudley v. United States, 320 F. Supp. 456 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

Seizure of item not named in search warrant is permissible when article itself relates to another crime being committed in the presence of officers at time of search. When possession of an article itself constitutes a crime and is, therefore, tantamount to the commission of a crime in the presence of the searching officers, it may be seized, although not mentioned in the search warrant. Dudley v. United States, 320 F. Supp. 456 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

If the searching officers have probable cause to believe that an article not named in the warrant, but found in an otherwise lawful search, will aid in apprehension or conviction of a specific and particular offense, it may be seized. Dudley v. United States, 320 F. Supp. 456 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

There must be a bona fide search for the item sought to be found, as it is listed on the search warrant, but if, in the course of an authorized search, another contraband is found on the party or premises searched, the officer is authorized to seize it, for the search, though not productive of that which was sought, was legal. Bostwick v. State, 124 Ga. App. 113, 182 S.E.2d 925 (1971).

Where probable cause exists, seizure of items other than those described in search warrant is authorized. State v. Causey, 132 Ga. App. 17, 207 S.E.2d 225 (1974).

Evidence obtained from premises not named in warrant inadmissible. — Where a search warrant has no description of the premises to be searched other than the street address, and the street or number is incorrectly given, it is error for a trial judge to overrule a motion to suppress the evidence produced, even where the officers who conducted the search went to the correct address because of personal observation of the premises prior to the search. Bell v. State, 124 Ga. App. 139, 182 S.E.2d 901 (1971).

Person with unknown status to premises searched under warrant. — Although a search warrant carries with it the limited authority to detain the occupants of the premises while a proper search is conducted, that authority does not extend to a person whose status with respect to the premises is unknown, who has already left the premises, and who the police know is not named in the warrant. Emery v. State, 249 Ga. App. 114, 548 S.E.2d 23 (2001).

Search of persons arriving on premises being searched. — The right to search those coming in while a search of the premises is going on, not being expressly authorized by the warrant, must be shown by the grounds of probable cause or must have been authorized under the provisions of former Code 1933, § 27-309 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-5-28). Logan v. State, 135 Ga. App. 879, 219 S.E.2d 615 (1975).

Searches of persons not named in search warrant but found on premises to be searched are illegal absent independent justification for a personal search. Hayes v. State, 141 Ga. App. 706, 234 S.E.2d 360 (1977).

Use of properly seized item in another prosecution. — Item named in warrant, and therefore properly seized, may be basis for prosecution of another offense. Dudley v. United States, 320 F. Supp. 456 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

Arrest warrant alone suffices to enter suspect's own residence to effect suspect's arrest. Steagald v. United States, 451 U.S. 204, 101 S. Ct. 1642, 68 L. Ed. 2d 38 (1981).

It is the general rule that a warrant is required to search the curtilage, and the yard immediately surrounding one's dwelling is well within the curtilage. Black v. State, 119 Ga. App. 855, 168 S.E.2d 916 (1969).

Warrant to search house extended to driveway and vehicle within the driveway. — When a search warrant was issued allowing a search of defendant's house, this extended by implication to areas within the curtilage of the dwelling, and to a vehicle parked within that curtilage. Solis v. State, 268 Ga. App. 493, 602 S.E.2d 166 (2004).

Invoking warrant as authority to enter homes of third parties. — An arrest warrant, to the extent that it is invoked as authority to enter the homes of third parties, suffers from the same constitutional infirmity pertinent to the general warrants that occurred in England and the writs of assistance used in the American colonies. Steagald v. United States, 451 U.S. 204, 101 S. Ct. 1642, 68 L. Ed. 2d 38 (1981).

Arrest warrant authorizes invasion of privacy of own home, but not that of third party. — Because an arrest warrant authorizes the police to deprive a person of the person's liberty, it necessarily also authorizes a limited invasion of that person's privacy interest when it is necessary to arrest the person in the person's home. However, when the police seek to use an arrest warrant as legal authority to enter the home of a third party to conduct a search, this reasoning is inapplicable. Steagald v. United States, 451 U.S. 204, 101 S. Ct. 1642, 68 L. Ed. 2d 38 (1981).

An arrest warrant, as opposed to a search warrant, is inadequate to protect the fourth amendment interests of persons not named in the warrant, when their homes are searched without their consent and in the absence of exigent circumstances. Otwell v. State, 201 Ga. App. 71, 410 S.E.2d 178 (1991).

Warrants (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Lack of signature on copy of search warrant. — Where one of three copies of a search warrant was not signed but at least one copy was signed at the time it was issued, the warrant is not invalid if the magistrate did make a judicial finding of the existence of probable cause prior to issuing the warrant. Braden v. State, 135 Ga. App. 827, 219 S.E.2d 479 (1975).

Conclusion of witness that paper is warrant allowing legal arrest not proper proof.

— The conclusion of a witness that a given paper is a warrant under which an arrest may legally be made is not proper proof that such a paper is in fact a warrant by virtue of which a legal arrest has been made, so as to authorize the admission of evidence obtained by means of an arrest under such paper or alleged warrant. Marshall v. State, 130 Ga. App. 572, 203 S.E.2d 885 (1974).

Production of photocopy of search warrant was sufficient to evidence valid search where issuing magistrate testified that the magistrate had searched the files and had not found the original warrant, and the police officer who executed the warrant similarly found only the photocopy in the officer's file. Early v. State, 170 Ga. App. 158, 316 S.E.2d 527 (1984).

Affidavit alone insufficient to support search warrant. — A warrant affidavit complying with § 17-4-41 is not alone sufficient to demonstrate the validity of an arrest warrant, because probable cause must still be shown to the issuing magistrate. Devier v. State, 253 Ga. 604, 323 S.E.2d 150 (1984), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1009, 105 S. Ct. 1877, 85 L. Ed. 2d 169 (1985).

Trial court properly found that the supporting affidavit for the search warrant for a search of defendant's apartment was insufficient to establish probable cause, as the affidavit contained mainly unsupported hearsay from an informant with no information corroborating the informant's veracity; accordingly, the trial court properly suppressed evidence that was seized from defendant's apartment pursuant to the search warrant. State v. Lejeune, 276 Ga. 179, 576 S.E.2d 888 (2003).

Search warrant may not be granted simply because police officer states police officer has received reliable information from a credible person. There must be some evidence of reliability other than the conclusory statement of the police officer that the informer is reliable, to justify the grant of a search warrant. Davis v. Smith, 430 F.2d 1256 (5th Cir. 1970).

Arrest warrant based on victim's statement. — Although the magistrate did not have an exculpatory witness's statement, the magistrate did have the victim's statement and other evidence offered by law enforcement which was sufficiently reliably trustworthy to find that probable cause existed to justify arrest. Rock v. Lowe, 893 F. Supp. 1573 (S.D. Ga. 1995), aff'd without op., 79 F.3d 1161 (11th Cir. 1996).

Magistrate may issue warrant based on police officer's knowledge of suspect's reputation. — A police officer's knowledge of a suspect's reputation is a practical consideration of everyday life upon which a magistrate may properly rely in issuing a search warrant. Law v. State, 165 Ga. App. 687, 302 S.E.2d 570, aff'd, 251 Ga. 525, 307 S.E.2d 904 (1983).

Warrants authorizing the seizure of materials presumptively protected by U.S. Const., amend. 1 may not issue based solely on the conclusory allegations of a police officer that the sought-after materials are obscene, but instead must be supported by affidavits setting forth specific facts in order that the issuing magistrate may focus searchingly on the question of obscenity. State v. Kramer, 260 Ga. App. 546, 580 S.E.2d 314 (2003).

Hearsay can be basis for issuance of warrant so long as there is substantial basis for crediting the hearsay. Ward v. State, 234 Ga. 882, 218 S.E.2d 591 (1975).

An affidavit supporting a search warrant may be based on hearsay information as long as there is a substantial basis for crediting the hearsay. Deal v. State, 199 Ga. App. 184, 404 S.E.2d 343 (1991).

Validity of warrant based on probability of current violation of lottery law. — If occurrences are such as to indicate the probability of the violation of the lottery law at a current date, a warrant is valid. Logan v. State, 135 Ga. App. 879, 219 S.E.2d 615 (1975).

Mere threat to obtain search warrant does not amount to coercion. United States v. Gaultney, 581 F.2d 1137 (5th Cir. 1978).

Valid warrants require determinations only of matters of fact. — If the warrant calls for the search and seizure of intoxicating liquors at a described location, the executing officer may be required to determine as a matter of fact which of several different containers found on the premises searched contain intoxicating liquors or which contain other beverages of a nonintoxicating character. In the very nature of things, the officer cannot be relieved of making this determination, and so long as the determination that the officer is required to make is a determination of a matter of fact as distinguished from a determination of a matter of opinion, the warrant is valid. Strauss v. Stynchcombe, 224 Ga. 859, 165 S.E.2d 302 (1968).

Failure of the police to knock and give verbal notice of their authority and purpose in the execution of a search warrant may be excused where the police have reasonable grounds to believe that forewarning would either greatly increase their peril or lead to the immediate destruction of the evidence. Scull v. State, 122 Ga. App. 696, 178 S.E.2d 720 (1970); Martin v. State, 165 Ga. App. 760, 302 S.E.2d 614 (1983).

Unannounced entry by Georgia Bureau of Investigation agents is authorized where evidence can be otherwise easily destroyed and where agents request the judge who issued the search warrant to include a no-knock provision. Cox v. State, 160 Ga. App. 199, 286 S.E.2d 482 (1981).

2. Who May Issue

Neutral and detached magistrate required. — Magistrate who issues warrant must be neutral and detached, and must be capable of determining whether probable cause exists for the requested arrest or search. State v. Guhl, 140 Ga. App. 23, 230 S.E.2d 22 (1976), rev'd on other grounds sub nom. Mitchell v. State, 239 Ga. 3, 235 Ga. 509 (1977); Vaughn v. State, 160 Ga. App. 283, 287 S.E.2d 277 (1981).

Rule under U.S. Const., amend. 4 that warrant be issued by neutral and detached magistrate requires severance and disengagement from activities of law enforcement. Thomason v. State, 148 Ga. App. 513, 251 S.E.2d 598 (1978); Vaughn v. State, 160 Ga. App. 283, 287 S.E.2d 277 (1981).

A justice of the peace or anyone else issuing a warrant should not participate in the searches so as to avoid giving the appearance of not being a detached and neutral magistrate. McAllister v. State, 157 Ga. App. 158, 276 S.E.2d 669 (1981).

Validity of search warrants issued by justice of peace. — Although the United States Supreme Court has held that the issuance of a search warrant by a justice of the peace violates the protections of U.S. Const., amend. 4, that holding will not be applied retroactively so as to exclude evidence obtained under such a warrant where the warrant was issued according to law and in complete good faith. State v. Patterson, 143 Ga. App. 225, 237 S.E.2d 707 (1977).

Magistrate not disqualified because of possible additional compensation. — The argument that a magistrate who, in the event a search warrant is issued, might possibly receive additional compensation in the form of a fee for holding a subsequent committal hearing is not "neutral and detached" in the initial decision to issue the warrant is without merit. Anderson v. State, 166 Ga. App. 459, 304 S.E.2d 550 (1983).

Mayor's financial interest not disqualification as judge in committal court. — The rule which forbids a "trial" before a mayor who is responsible for that city's finances and whose court, through fines, forfeitures, and fees, provides a substantial portion of the mayor's city's revenue does not extend to a committal court which deals only with probable cause to bind a defendant over for trial. McLarty v. State, 176 Ga. App. 433, 336 S.E.2d 273 (1985).

Judge who also serves as county coroner is not per se disqualified from issuing a search warrant in the capacity as ex officio justice of the peace. Tabb v. State, 250 Ga. 317, 297 S.E.2d 227 (1982).

Judge who had not served as deputy sheriff for approximately eight years at the time the search warrant in question was issued was not disqualified to issue warrant. Tabb v. State, 250 Ga. 317, 297 S.E.2d 227 (1982).

Mere personal associations with police officers, without more, do not disqualify a magistrate from issuing a search warrant. Tabb v. State, 250 Ga. 317, 297 S.E.2d 227 (1982).

Warrants (Cont'd)2. Who May Issue (Cont'd)

Prior issuance of blank warrants. — Where defendant contended the search warrant was invalid because the executing magistrate was not neutral and detached, because the magistrate admitted, after first having denied, that at sometime in the past in an unrelated incident or incidents, the magistrate had signed blank warrants to accommodate an officer when the magistrate was to be at a family dinner, it was held that the incident suggested by defendant was an isolated incident or incidents in the past and that there was no evidence except remote speculation that the magistrate's posture in issuing the search warrant in this case was not neutral and detached. Lang v. State, 168 Ga. App. 693, 310 S.E.2d 276 (1983).

Right to alter warrant. — Since only a judicial officer may issue a search warrant, the right to alter, modify, or correct that warrant is necessarily vested only in that authority. Delaney v. State, 135 Ga. App. 612, 218 S.E.2d 318 (1975).

When new or modified warrant required. — Once officers concluded the defendant was to be searched at a later time for a different batch of drugs, they were bound to return to a judicial officer to seek a new or modified warrant. Delaney v. State, 135 Ga. App. 612, 218 S.E.2d 318 (1975).

3. Particularity of Description

General warrant is void. — General warrant, one which does not sufficiently specify place or person to be searched, is void. Willis v. State, 122 Ga. App. 455, 177 S.E.2d 487 (1970).

Particularity being the sine qua non of valid warrant, general warrant is void. State v. Cochran, 135 Ga. App. 47, 217 S.E.2d 181 (1975).

General exploratory warrants are void. By definition, a general warrant is one which does not sufficiently specify the person, place, or thing to be searched. Lockhart v. State, 166 Ga. App. 555, 305 S.E.2d 22 (1983).

Test for determining sufficiency of description in warrant. — To be valid, a search warrant must contain a description of the person and premises to be searched with such particularity as would enable a prudent person executing the warrant to locate the person and premises definitely and with reasonable certainty. Mercer v. State, 146 Ga. App. 143, 245 S.E.2d 492 (1978); State v. Blews, 148 Ga. App. 73, 251 S.E.2d 10 (1978); Anderson v. State, 155 Ga. App. 25, 270 S.E.2d 263 (1980).

United States Const., amend. 14 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII, requiring that "no warrant shall issue except upon probable cause . . . particularly describing the place, or places to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized" is met if the description sufficiently permits a prudent officer with a search warrant to be able to locate the person and place definitely and with reasonable certainty. Cuevas v. State, 151 Ga. App. 605, 260 S.E.2d 737 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 943, 100 S. Ct. 1338, 63 L. Ed. 2d 776 (1980).

A search warrant is not invalid for want of description of the premises to be searched if the description sufficiently permits a prudent officer executing the warrant to locate the place definitely and with reasonable certainty, and without depending upon the officer's discretion. Chambless v. State, 165 Ga. App. 194, 300 S.E.2d 201 (1983).

Description indefinite if officer can exercise selective discretion. — A search warrant is constitutionally inadequate if the description of the premises to be searched is so indefinite that under the authority of the warrant an officer can exercise a selective discretion in determining where the officer will search. State v. Blews, 148 Ga. App. 73, 251 S.E.2d 10 (1978).

Writ should not leave executing officer in doubt or require officer to exercise personal discretion. It will be deemed sufficient if the information permits the officer to locate the premises without the aid of other information. Mercer v. State, 146 Ga. App. 143, 245 S.E.2d 492 (1978).

Description which is exclusive is sufficient. — If a search warrant, read as a whole, points out the place to the exclusion of all others, and on inquiry leads the officers unerringly to it, it meets the description requirement. Chambless v. State, 165 Ga. App. 194, 300 S.E.2d 201 (1983).

Elaborate specificity in a warrant is not necessary. — A description is sufficiently particular when it enables a searcher to reasonably ascertain and identify the items authorized to be seized. United States v. Moody, 763 F. Supp. 589 (M.D. Ga. 1991), aff'd, 977 F.2d 1420 (11th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 507 U.S. 944, 113 S. Ct. 1348, 122 L. Ed. 2d 729 (1993).

Affidavit which described how one of defendant's rape victim's identified defendant, gave the description of defendant that all the rape victims gave of defendant, described the car that defendant was driving, described the gun replica that defendant used, under the totality of the circumstances, was sufficient to support a search warrant and it was not error for the trial court to admit the evidence obtained in the execution of the warrant. Collins v. State, 267 Ga. App. 784, 600 S.E.2d 802 (2004).

Effect of practical necessities of search milieu on particularity of description. — U.S. Const., amend. 4 describes the maximum extent to which U.S. Const., amend. 4 permits the particularity of description in a search warrant to be encroached by the practical necessities of the search environment. Wallace v. State, 131 Ga. App. 204, 205 S.E.2d 523 (1974).

"Buy money" need not be attached. — Failure to attach a photocopy of "buy money" to an affidavit did not violate the particularity requirement, where the warrant specified "monies derived from the sale of controlled substances." Smith v. State, 207 Ga. App. 463, 428 S.E.2d 403 (1993).

Exploratory rummaging prohibited. — The fourth amendment requires that a warrant particularly describe the place to be searched and the items or persons to be seized; exploratory rummaging is prohibited. United States v. Jenkins, 901 F.2d 1075 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 901, 111 S. Ct. 259, 112 L. Ed. 2d 216 (1990).

Description of contraband may be given in less detail than other articles. State v. Causey, 132 Ga. App. 17, 207 S.E.2d 225 (1974).

Mere statement of affiant's conclusion. — A warrant is clearly insufficient on its face to show probable cause if it merely states the bold conclusion of the affiant district attorney that the defendant had exhibited two named films which were obscene material. Good v. State, 127 Ga. App. 775, 195 S.E.2d 264 (1972).

Search warrant is "general" as to particular defendant when the defendant is neither listed by name specifically nor described generally, and no additional indicia of probable cause are provided at the scene of the search. State v. Cochran, 135 Ga. App. 47, 217 S.E.2d 181 (1975).

Generally, inclusion of name of person to be arrested on arrest warrant constitutes a sufficient description to satisfy the requirement of U.S. Const., amend. 4 that the person to be seized be described with particularity. Wanger v. Bonner, 621 F.2d 675 (5th Cir. 1980).

Failure to name a person in a search warrant is not fatal. — Search warrants are not directed at persons; they authorize the search of "places" and the seizure of "things," and as a constitutional matter they need not even name the person from whom the things will be seized. Bing v. State, 178 Ga. App. 288, 342 S.E.2d 762 (1986).

Search of unnamed persons involved in crime on named premises. — A search warrant to search designated premises will not authorize the search of every individual who happens to be on the premises, but a warrant which identifies the premises and its owners or occupants is not void as a general warrant because it authorizes the search of other persons found there who may reasonably be involved in the commission of the crime for which the warrant is issued. Willis v. State, 122 Ga. App. 455, 177 S.E.2d 487 (1970).

Warrant's description of place searched is not required to meet technical requirements or have the specificity sought by conveyancers; the warrant need only describe the place to be searched with sufficient particularity to direct the searcher, to confine the searcher's examination to the place described, and to advise those being searched of the searcher's authority. United States v. Burke, 784 F.2d 1090 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1174, 106 S. Ct. 2901, 90 L. Ed. 2d 987 (1986).

Omission of county from description in copy of warrant. — Where a copy of a warrant which omits the name of the county is used to be directed to the executing officers, and where the affidavit included the name of the county along with the other description, the omission of the name of the county does not affect the substantial rights of U.S. Const., amend. 4. Cuevas v. State, 151 Ga. App. 605, 260 S.E.2d 737 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 943, 100 S. Ct. 1338, 63 L. Ed. 2d 776 (1980).

Warrants (Cont'd)

3. Particularity of Description (Cont'd)

Adequacy of designation or description known to locality. — A search warrant should be read as a whole, and any designation or description known to the locality that points out the place to the exclusion of all others, and on inquiry leads the officers unerringly to it, satisfies the constitutional requirement. State v. Blews, 148 Ga. App. 73, 251 S.E.2d 10 (1978).

Incorrect street number. — Even though a street number is incorrect, where there are other elements of description sufficiently particular, the search warrant may be valid. Chambless v. State, 165 Ga. App. 194, 300 S.E.2d 201 (1983).

Where a search warrant fails to name an individual and describes incorrectly the street number, county and city, naming only the street name correctly, it is defective. State v. Hatch, 160 Ga. App. 384, 287 S.E.2d 98 (1981).

Failure to specify residential units within dwelling. — Trial court should not have granted a motion to suppress on the ground that the warrant was invalid for failure to specify which of two residential units in the dwelling was to be searched, where a pre-warrant inspection of the exterior of the premises revealed a single entrance and street address and only one mailbox on the front porch, and a pre-warrant search of a city directory indicated no residents in the building other than defendants. State v. Capps, 256 Ga. 14, 342 S.E.2d 676 (1986).

If neither the affiant nor investigating officers nor executing officers knew of or had reason to know of a structure's actual multiple occupancy character until execution of the warrant was under way, and the outward appearance of the building reflects a single-occupancy structure, the warrant is not invalid for failure to specify a subunit within the building. Bing v. State, 178 Ga. App. 288, 342 S.E.2d 762 (1986).

Warrant that did not specify the subunits of a house subsequently alleged to be a "boarding house" was properly executed for the entire dwelling, because the circumstances showed that multi-family occupancy would not have been obvious to a reasonably diligent law enforcement officer. Davis v. State, 198 Ga. App. 310, 401 S.E.2d 326 (1991).

Sufficient identification of apartment. —

When an affidavit used to obtain a search warrant for defendant's apartment falsely stated that an informant told the affiant that the informant had purchased drugs at a particular apartment, the affidavit still supported issuance of the search warrant because law enforcement agents observing defendant's apartment were able to establish that the informant had gone to and come from defendant's apartment immediately prior to being arrested for possession of a quantity of drugs. Defendant's argument that an affidavit used to obtain a search warrant for defendant's apartment did not state a correct address was without merit as the address stated in the affidavit was sufficient because there was no probability that it identified another apartment. Evans v. State, 263 Ga. App. 572, 588 S.E.2d 764 (2003).

Warrant held invalid for search of two motel rooms not registered in proper name. —

A search warrant directed to a room in either one or another of two motels at different addresses in the same city and identified only by the statement that they will be registered in the name of a specified person will not authorize a search of two motel rooms in one of the motels registered in the name of another person not identified in the warrant. Garner v. State, 124 Ga. App. 33, 182 S.E.2d 902 (1971).

Warrant not overbroad where it authorizes search of "other persons" or "any motor vehicle". — A search warrant is not impermissibly overbroad and general where it authorizes the agents to search "any other person found on said premises who reasonably might be involved in the commission of the aforesaid violation of the laws" as well as "any motor vehicle found on said premises" and both clauses appear in the preprinted portion of the search warrant form, since a warrant which identifies the premises and its owners or occupants is not void as a general warrant because it authorizes the search of other persons found there who may reasonably be involved in the commission of the crime for which the warrant is issued, and the scope of the search is sufficiently limited by the specific language typed in the blank spaces of the form, describing the vehicles by color, make, type, and license plate number and stating they are at the premises described. Castillo v. State, 166 Ga. App. 817, 305 S.E.2d 629 (1983).

Warrant sufficient with “person, premises or property.” — Search warrant that authorized the search and seizure of “the person, premises or property” was sufficiently particular; the use of the word “or” did not give the officers unbridled discretion in what to search. Minter v. State, 206 Ga. App. 692, 426 S.E.2d 169 (1992).

Search warrant based on anonymous tips and other information allowed. — When law enforcement received two anonymous tips that defendant would be traveling from another state with cocaine in a certain model car licensed in the other state, would be taking a certain route, and would be staying in a certain hotel, the tips’ range of details relating to future acts not easily predicted, combined with information obtained while defendant was lawfully detained that $150,000.00 was seized from a concealed compartment in defendant’s vehicle and defendant was deceptive during a conversation with a police officer, allowed the issuance of a search warrant for defendant’s house. Solis v. State, 268 Ga. App. 493, 602 S.E.2d 166 (2004).

Type and color description of clothing sufficient. — There was no merit in the contention that a search warrant did not properly describe certain clothing identified by the victim and similarly described in the warrant, where the victim described clothing worn by the assailant as to type and color, the type and color description being sufficient to meet the “generic description” required by the law of this state. Johnson v. State, 179 Ga. App. 467, 346 S.E.2d 903 (1986).

Exact caliber of pistol not required. — Requirement of U.S. Const., amend. 4 to describe particularly the article to be seized does not intend exclusion of pistol as evidence because the victim assaulted could not tell the exact caliber of the pistol. Young v. Caldwell, 229 Ga. 653, 193 S.E.2d 854 (1972).

Description of pornographic material and marijuana sufficient. — Search warrant description that authorized search for pornographic materials and marijuana was sufficient to enable the searching officer to seize the described items with “reasonable certainty.” Tyler v. State, 176 Ga. App. 96, 335 S.E.2d 691 (1985).

Description of pornographic materials insufficient. — A search warrant’s description was so open-ended that the warrant violated both the United States and Georgia Constitutions. As a result, use of the warrant to seize pornographic video tapes was invalid, and the tapes should have been suppressed as the fruits of an illegal search. Dobbins v. State, 262 Ga. 161, 415 S.E.2d 168 (1992).

Particularity of warrant held insufficient. — Trial court properly suppressed videotapes that were seized from defendant’s home during the execution of a search warrant, as the description in the warrant that the items sought were videotapes that were instruments used in the crimes of molesting and sexually exploiting children did not meet the particularity requirements of U.S. Const., amend. 4 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII, especially in light of the fact that videotapes involved activity protected by U.S. Const., amend. 1, where there was no evidence of any videotape activity involving the victim, and the warrant did not elaborate on what types of videotapes were to be seized, leaving that determination solely to the discretion of the officers, which amounted to an impermissible general warrant; circumstances may make an exact search warrant description of instrumentalities a virtual impossibility and, in those circumstances, the searching officer can only be expected to describe the generic class of items sought, but a warrant authorizing the seizure of “videotapes” with nothing more does not pass constitutional muster. State v. Kramer, 260 Ga. App. 546, 580 S.E.2d 314 (2003).

Effect of discrepancy as to time of issuance and time of execution of warrant. — An entry on a warrant showing it to have been issued at 12:55 P.M. on a particular day is certainly in conflict with that showing the warrant to have been executed at 12:00 Noon of the same date, but a court is authorized to find this to have been error either as to the time of issuance or as to the time of execution, and such a finding is implicit in an order overruling the motion to suppress. Bostwick v. State, 124 Ga. App. 113, 182 S.E.2d 925 (1971).

Evidence as pathway to incriminating evidence. — Police did not exceed the scope of a search warrant where the warrant specified “receipts” and a furniture receipt was found in defendant’s car leading to defendant’s paramour’s home, where police, in a consented to search, found incriminating evidence; the police were not required to overlook relevant evidence where they knew defendant's paramour's name and the receipt was a pathway to evidence. Brown v. State, 260 Ga. App. 627, 580 S.E.2d 348 (2003).

Warrants (Cont'd)3. Particularity of Description (Cont'd)

Investigative Stops1. In General

Prohibition of searches and seizures under U.S. Const., amends. 4 and 14, not supported by some objective justification, governs all seizures of the person, including seizures that involve only a brief detention short of traditional arrest. Reid v. Georgia, 448 U.S. 438, 100 S. Ct. 2752, 65 L. Ed. 2d 890 (1980); United States v. Berd, 634 F.2d 979 (5th Cir. 1981).

Probable cause not always required for police intrusion. — Circumstances short of probable cause for arrest may justify stopping of pedestrian or motorist for limited questioning. Merrill v. State, 130 Ga. App. 745, 204 S.E.2d 632 (1974).

Constitution does not always require standard as strict as probable cause to justify some degree of police intrusion. United States v. Gonzalez-Vargas, 496 F. Supp. 1296 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

That police receive information which does not amount to probable cause does not require them to shrug their shoulders and make no inquiry, but rather the circumstances may justify investigation. State v. Smalls, 203 Ga. App. 283, 416 S.E.2d 531 (1992).

An anonymous phone call, while not amounting to probable cause, was sufficient to warrant a visual inspection of the public premises for investigation based on the police officers' common experience as to drug activity in such residential areas. State v. Smalls, 203 Ga. App. 283, 416 S.E.2d 531 (1992).

Test of reasonableness of detention without arrest. — A court, in assessing reasonableness of a detention where no actual arrest has been made, should look to: (1) whether the officers had a particularized and objective basis for suspecting the plaintiff of criminal activity; (2) whether the methods used were the least intrusive means reasonably available to verify or dispel the officers' suspicions in a short period of time; (3) whether the length of the detention was "significant" or otherwise longer than was necessary to effectuate the purpose of the stop; and (4) whether the officers diligently pursued a means of investigation that was likely to confirm or dispel their suspicion quickly. Thompson v. Spikes, 663 F. Supp. 627 (S.D. Ga. 1987).

Reasonableness of suspicion of criminal activity. — The question of whether a seizure was supported by a reasonable suspicion of criminal activity requires an evaluation of the articulable facts known to the police officer at the moment of the seizure. United States v. Robinson, 625 F.2d 1211 (5th Cir. 1980), rev'd on other ground, 690 F.2d 869 (11th Cir. 1982).

Determination of whether seizure is supported by reasonable suspicion requires evaluation of articulable facts known to the police officer at the time of the seizure. United States v. Berry, 636 F.2d 1075 (5th Cir. 1981), aff'd, 670 F.2d 583 (5th Cir. 1982).

A police officer may stop an individual where there is a "reasonable, articulable ground" for detention which can be less than probable cause to make an arrest or conduct a search, but must be more than a mere caprice or arbitrary harassment. Hambright v. State, 161 Ga. App. 877, 289 S.E.2d 24 (1982).

Investigative stops of vehicles are analogous to Terry stops, Terry v. Ohio, 392 U.S. 1, 88 S. Ct. 1868, 20 L. Ed. 2d 889 (1968), and are invalid if based upon only an unparticularized suspicion or hunch. An investigatory stop must be justified by some objective manifestation that the person stopped is, or is about to be engaged in criminal activity. This specific, articulable suspicion must be based on the totality of the circumstances — e.g., objective observations, information from police reports, the modes or patterns of certain kinds of law-breakers, and the inferences drawn and deductions made by a trained law enforcement officer. Cheatham v. State, 204 Ga. App. 483, 419 S.E.2d 920 (1992).

In determining whether a stop was justified by reasonable suspicion, the court takes into account the totality of the circumstances including consideration of objective observations, patterns of operations of certain kinds of lawbreakers, and information from police reports because a trained police officer draws inferences and makes deductions from this type of data. Gonzalez v. State, 235 Ga. App. 253, 509 S.E.2d 144 (1998).

After a store cashier reported conduct arguably amounting to disorderly conduct and then when the police arrived at the closed store minutes after the cashier's complaint, they found only a black pickup as mentioned by the cashier, with no other vehicles in sight, this provided the basis for an articulable suspicion justifying the stop. Morris v. State, 239 Ga. App. 100, 520 S.E.2d 485 (1999).

Initial stop and detention of defendant was not solely dependent upon the restricted power of police to detain occupants of a premises while a warranted search is conducted, but was an authorized Terry stop. Garmon v. State, 271 Ga. 673, 524 S.E.2d 211 (1999), affirming Garmon v. State, 235 Ga. App. 671, 510 S.E.2d 350 (1998).

Civil forfeiture order was affirmed and suppression motion was properly denied as drugs were found in defendant's possession after an arrest following a Terry stop as the officer had a reasonable suspicion of criminal activity since the officer had been advised of defendant's banishment, which defendant acknowledged to be violating; the officer was charged with enforcing court orders and, although the banishment was illegal, the order had not been challenged at the time of the Terry stop. Sanders v. State, 259 Ga. App. 422, 577 S.E.2d 94 (2003).

Officer's pat-down of defendant, during which the officer seized credit cards from defendant's person, was lawful as defendant had been seen in a stolen car, had previously fled police, knew the officer was investigating a crime, put defendant's hands in defendant's pockets, the officer knew defendant had lied about two items in defendant's pockets that could be used as weapons, and the objects the officer felt in defendant's pocket were ones that, in the officer's experience, had been known to have been fashioned into weapons by attaching razor blades to them. Mohamed v. State, 276 Ga. 706, 583 S.E.2d 9 (2003).

"Totality-of-circumstances" test. — Where police informant had previously supplied information that led to drug arrests and in the instant case accurately predicted that the defendant would proceed to a specific location after first going to his residence, such circumstances combined with informant's statement that defendant would be in possession of cocaine satisfied "totality-of-the-circumstances" test justifying brief investigative detention. State v. Watson, 205 Ga. App. 313, 422 S.E.2d 202 (1992).

State's interests balanced against momentary inconvenience of detention. — In cases where there are some reasonable articulable grounds for suspicion, the state's interest in the maintenance of community peace and security outweigh the momentary inconvenience and indignity of investigatory detention. Brisbane v. State, 233 Ga. 339, 211 S.E.2d 294 (1974).

U.S. Const., amend. 4 applies to all seizures of the person, including seizures that involve only brief detention short of traditional arrest. Whenever a police officer accosts an individual and restrains the freedom to walk away, the police officer has seized that person. Bowers v. State, 151 Ga. App. 46, 258 S.E.2d 623 (1979), aff'd, 245 Ga. 367, 265 S.E.2d 57 (1980).

Police officer has a limited right to an investigative stop of a person or vehicle. Circumstances short of probable cause for arrest may justify the stopping of a pedestrian or motorist for limited questioning. Bailey v. State, 158 Ga. App. 96, 279 S.E.2d 334 (1981).

The fourth amendment does not require a police officer who lacks the precise level of information necessary for probable cause to arrest to simply shrug the officer's shoulders and allow a crime to occur or a criminal to escape. On the contrary, it may be the essence of good police work to adopt an intermediate response. A brief stop of a suspicious individual, in order to determine identity or to maintain the status quo momentarily while obtaining more information, may be most reasonable in light of the facts known to the officer at the time. Howell v. State, 160 Ga. App. 479, 287 S.E.2d 294 (1981); Holley v. State, 157 Ga. App. 863, 278 S.E.2d 738 (1981); Williams v. State, 163 Ga. App. 866, 295 S.E.2d 361 (1982).

Momentary detention and questioning

Investigative Stops (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

are permissible if based upon specific and articulable facts, which, taken together with rational inferences from those facts, justify a reasonable scope of inquiry not based on mere inclination, caprice or harassment. An authorized officer may stop an automobile and conduct a limited investigative inquiry of its occupants, without probable cause, if the officer has reasonable grounds for such action, a founded suspicion is all that is necessary, some basis from which the court can determine that the detention was not arbitrary or harassing. Holley v. State, 157 Ga. App. 863, 278 S.E.2d 738 (1981).

Momentary detention and questioning are permissible if based upon specific and articulable facts which, taken together with rational inferences from those facts, justify a reasonable course of inquiry not based on mere inclination, caprice, or harassment. Bailey v. State, 202 Ga. App. 427, 414 S.E.2d 330 (1992).

If there is a reasonable suspicion of criminal wrongdoing based on specific and articulable facts from which it can be determined that the police officer's action is not arbitrary and harassing, the officer may make a brief, investigatory detention of the individual to determine identity or to maintain the status quo momentarily while obtaining more information. Gonzalez v. State, 235 Ga. App. 253, 509 S.E.2d 144 (1998).

Elements of a Terry stop. — A Terry stop is a brief stop, limited in time to that minimally necessary to investigate the allegation invoking suspicion, and limited in scope to identification, licensing of a driver and a vehicle if appropriate, a protective "patdown" of the outer surface of clothing for weapons if the officer has reasonable apprehension that the person is armed or dangerous, and limited questioning reasonably related to the circumstances that justified the initiation of the momentary stop. State v. Avret, 156 Ga. App. 527, 275 S.E.2d 113 (1980).

Legality of scope of "Terry stop". — Once a "Terry stop" has been made, the legality of its scope is determined in each case by balancing the extent of the intrusion against the immediacy and importance of the interest in crime prevention or law enforcement which is sought to be advanced. Vanloo v. State, 187 Ga. App. 290, 370 S.E.2d 44 (1988).

Weapons search not limited to pat-down.

— Terry v. Ohio does not limit a weapons search to a so-called pat-down search. Any limited intrusion designed to discover guns, knives, clubs or other instruments of assault is permissible. Under the circumstances, the officer's act of reaching into the defendant's left-hand pocket was not overly intrusive. The defendant's conduct in pushing the officer's hand away when officer attempted to pat down the pocket, and defendant's subsequent conduct in turning defendant's body sideways, coupled with the fact that the officer had seen the defendant, a suspected drug violator, reach into the console before stepping from the vehicle, would create a reasonable suspicion that the defendant was armed. Hayes v. State, 202 Ga. App. 204, 414 S.E.2d 321 (1991).

Where officers acted lawfully in stopping defendant to ask what defendant was doing and defendant attempted to avoid the officers and then nervously reached for defendant's pocket, the officers had a right to stop defendant from going into the pocket and to make a limited search because they reasonably believed that their safety had been compromised. Pace v. State, 219 Ga. App. 583, 466 S.E.2d 254 (1995).

Probable cause not required for "stop and frisk". — U.S. Const., amend. 4 does not require a police officer who lacks the precise level of information necessary for probable cause to arrest to simply shrug one's shoulders and allow a crime to occur or a criminal to escape. A brief stop of a suspicious individual in order to determine identity or to maintain the status quo momentarily while obtaining more information, may be most reasonable in light of the facts known to the officer at the time. United States v. Robinson, 535 F.2d 881 (5th Cir. 1976); Reese v. State, 145 Ga. App. 453, 243 S.E.2d 650 (1978); State v. Purdy, 147 Ga. App. 340, 248 S.E.2d 683 (1978); Jackson v. State, 155 Ga. App. 386, 271 S.E.2d 32 (1980).

A police officer may in appropriate circumstances and in an appropriate manner approach a person for purposes of investigating possibly criminal behavior even though there is no probable cause to make an arrest. State v. Purdy, 147 Ga. App. 340, 248 S.E.2d 683 (1978); Jackson v. State, 155 Ga. App. 386, 271 S.E.2d 32 (1980).

Probable cause is not required for police officer to make investigative stop of individual if the officer reasonably suspects that the individual is involved in criminal activity. United States v. Allison, 616 F.2d 779 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 857, 101 S. Ct. 156, 66 L. Ed. 2d 72 (1980).

Since the intrusion involved in a "stop and frisk" is so much less severe than that involved in traditional "arrests," the general rule requiring probable cause to make arrests reasonable under U.S. Const., amend. 4 does not cover such intrusions. United States v. Hill, 626 F.2d 429 (5th Cir. 1980).

Momentary detention and questioning do not have to be based on probable cause to believe there has been criminal wrongdoing. Bailey v. State, 202 Ga. App. 427, 414 S.E.2d 330 (1992).

Specific and articulable facts required. — What is demanded of police officer, as agent of state, is a founded suspicion, some necessary basis from which the court can determine that the detention was not arbitrary or harassing. Brisbane v. State, 233 Ga. 339, 211 S.E.2d 294 (1974).

Where investigatory detentions made without probable cause have been approved, the police have had some reason to suspect that criminal activity had either taken place, was in progress, or was about to take place at the time of the detention. Brooks v. State, 144 Ga. App. 97, 240 S.E.2d 593 (1977).

In some circumstances, officer may detain suspect briefly for questioning although the officer does not have probable cause to believe that the suspect is involved in criminal activity as is required for a traditional arrest. However, the officer must have a reasonable suspicion, based on objective facts, that the individual is involved in criminal activity. Bowers v. State, 151 Ga. App. 46, 258 S.E.2d 623 (1979), aff'd, 245 Ga. 367, 265 S.E.2d 57 (1980).

Initial investigative stop, in order to be lawful, must be based on specific and articulable facts which, taken together with rational inferences from those facts, reasonably warrant the intrusion. United States v. Roundtree, 596 F.2d 672 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 871, 100 S. Ct. 149, 62 L. Ed. 2d 96 (1979); State v. Misuraca, 157 Ga. App. 361, 276 S.E.2d 679, cert. denied, 454

U.S. 846, 102 S. Ct. 163, 70 L. Ed. 2d 133 (1981); Howell v. State, 160 Ga. App. 479, 287 S.E.2d 294 (1981).

Reasonable suspicion must be based upon specific articulable facts, together with rational inferences from those facts known at the time of the stop to the officers effecting the stop. United States v. Bowles, 625 F.2d 526 (5th Cir. 1980).

Articulable suspicion for mere verbal encounter not required. — State is not required to show an articulable suspicion to justify initiation of a mere verbal encounter with suspect. State v. Willis, 207 Ga. App. 76, 427 S.E.2d 306 (1993).

Officer is entitled to assess the facts in light of the officer's experience. United States v. Bowles, 625 F.2d 526 (5th Cir. 1980).

Requirement of reasonable suspicion prior to detention. — While in some circumstances a person may be detained briefly, without probable cause to arrest the person, any curtailment of a person's liberty by the police must be supported at least by a reasonable and articulable suspicion that the person seized is engaged in criminal activity. Reid v. Georgia, 448 U.S. 438, 100 S. Ct. 2752, 65 L. Ed. 2d 890 (1980).

"Random stop" is impermissible and evidence derived from such a seizure and/or search is inadmissible. United States v. Turner, 628 F.2d 461 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 988, 101 S. Ct. 2325, 68 L. Ed. 2d 847 (1981).

Officer need not indicate subjective fear of defendant or that the officer personally suspected that defendant was armed to justify decision to stop and search defendant. Graves v. State, 138 Ga. App. 327, 226 S.E.2d 131 (1976).

Mere unlikelihood insufficient to authorize invasion of privacy. — The mere fact that an officer feels it is unlikely that an individual has regular business where the individual is found is not sufficient alone to authorize an intrusion to an individual's right of privacy. The state must be able to point to specific and articulable facts that, together with rational inferences drawn therefrom, reasonably warrant an intrusion. Howard v. State, 150 Ga. App. 847, 258 S.E.2d 652 (1979).

Intrusions into areas of privacy based on exigencies as they appear to officers involved. — Even though acts of peace officers in detaining and questioning a citizen are necessarily a curtailment of the citizen's right to go about one's business unmolested (i.e., a seizure of the person) and because investigation and questioning are necessary elements of crime prevention and detection, the exigencies of the situation as they reasonably appear at the time to the officer involved must dictate the extent of intrusion into constitutionally protected areas. State v. Misuraca, 157 Ga. App. 361, 276 S.E.2d 679, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 846, 102 S. Ct. 163, 70 L. Ed. 2d 133 (1981).

Investigative Stops (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Justification of officer's restraining individual's freedom. — To justify a police officer's action in accosting an individual and restraining the individual's freedom to walk away, the state must be able to point to specific and articulable facts, which, together with rational inferences drawn therefrom, reasonably warrant the intrusion. If no circumstances at all appear that might give rise to an articulable suspicion (less than probable cause, but greater than mere caprice) that the law has been violated, the act of following and detaining a vehicle and its occupants must be judged as an impermissible intrusion on the rights of the citizen. Brisbane v. State, 233 Ga. 339, 211 S.E.2d 294 (1974).

Defendants were not unlawfully detained, where their encounter with plain-clothed police officers was not drawn out or prolonged and defendants were not addressed in a harsh or threatening manner or subjected to physical duress or threat of physical injury. State v. Jackson, 201 Ga. App. 810, 412 S.E.2d 593 (1991).

Profile characteristics alone will not give rise to requisite reasonable suspicion necessary to justify investigatory stop. United States v. Herbst, 641 F.2d 1161 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 851, 102 S. Ct. 292, 70 L. Ed. 2d 141 (1981).

Suspicious looking defendants. — Officer's stop of defendant was not justified on the basis that defendant "looked suspicious" and "like [defendant] was getting ready to run." Barnes v. State, 228 Ga. App. 44, 491 S.E.2d 116 (1997).

Information sufficiently reliable to justify "stop and frisk" and subsequent admission. — Where an informant's unverified tip may have been insufficient for a narcotics arrest or search warrant, the information nevertheless carried enough indicia of reliability to justify the officer's forcible stop and frisk of the defendant, and the fruits of the search were admissible evidence. Graves v. State, 138 Ga. App. 327, 226 S.E.2d 131 (1976).

Communication of information between officers. — Reasonable suspicion required to make investigative stop may exist on collective knowledge of police when there is reliable communication between the officer supplying the information and the officer acting on that information. United States v. Allison, 616 F.2d 779 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 857, 101 S. Ct. 156, 66 L. Ed. 2d 72 (1980).

Communication by citizen to officer. — An investigatory stop of defendant was not justified by the fact that defendant was riding a bicycle in an area where drug use was known to occur, and approached police officers stating, "I believe that you all are looking for me." State v. Taylor, 226 Ga. App. 690, 487 S.E.2d 454 (1997).

Officer answering official call has not only a right but a duty to investigate suspicious circumstances. A police officer need not have probable cause before officer can begin investigating persons or circumstances which to the officer appear suspicious. United States v. Allen, 472 F.2d 145 (5th Cir. 1973).

Arrests based on reports of witnesses. — When the police received a call to be on the lookout for a car which had been involved in a shooting and the car in question roughly fit the description given for the lookout, this provided the basis for an articulable suspicion justifying the stop. McGhee v. State, 253 Ga. 278, 319 S.E.2d 836 (1984).

Informant's tip as probable cause to stop suspect. — While an unverified tip from an unknown informant may not supply probable cause for a search or a warrant, if the information carries enough indicia of reliability, it will authorize a forcible stop of a suspect to maintain the status quo momentarily while obtaining more information. State v. Rhule, 197 Ga. App. 47, 397 S.E.2d 556 (1990).

An unsupported anonymous tip leading to police officer's stop of defendant solely on the basis that defendant was arguably in the company of another person who fit the description provided in the tip, was insufficient to support a search of the defendant. Archer v. State, 217 Ga. App. 257, 456 S.E.2d 754 (1995).

Observation of drinking driver. — Merely observing a can of beer in the hand of one who is otherwise driving a car or operating a boat in a safe manner constitutes an articulable suspicion that a violation of O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391 or O.C.G.A. § 52-7-12 may be occurring so as to authorize a brief investigatory stop. State v. Baker, 197 Ga. App. 1, 397 S.E.2d 554 (1990).

Police officer, who was responding to a store burglar alarm, had sufficient “articulable suspicions” to stop defendants’ car, where it was after midnight on a snowy evening, no businesses were open in the area, and the car was nearly identical to one described in a police “lookout.” Evans v. State, 183 Ga. App. 436, 359 S.E.2d 174 (1987).

Once a stop becomes a seizure, it can be constitutional only if based upon reasonable suspicion. Bothwell v. State, 250 Ga. 573, 300 S.E.2d 126, cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1210, 103 S. Ct. 3545, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1393 (1983).

Request for ticket and identification at airport. — Where a federal narcotics agent, who was dressed casually and did not display a weapon, requested, but did not demand, defendant’s ticket and identification at an airport, the agent’s approach was not a seizure. Rolle v. State, 198 Ga. App. 507, 402 S.E.2d 106 (1991).

Officers’ approach and questioning of defendant was not a seizure where they asked to see the defendant’s airplane ticket and identification and promptly returned the materials before asking if they could make a patdown search of the defendant’s outer clothing. Aranda v. State, 226 Ga. App. 157, 486 S.E.2d 379 (1997).

Police officer’s encounter with defendant became a seizure for fourth amendment purposes because the officer retained defendant’s license and registration and probed into arrested person’s possession of contraband or weapons, and defendant was in a remote area off an interstate highway, hundreds of miles from home, with only the defendant’s van for transportation. Defendant was immobilized without a driver’s license and so the encounter matured from a routine traffic inquiry into an investigative stop. Rogers v. State, 206 Ga. App. 654, 426 S.E.2d 209 (1992).

Request to move to lighted area. — Police officer’s request that defendant move into a better-lighted area was a reasonable protective measure and did not become an illegal arrest. Chaney v. State, 207 Ga. App. 72, 427 S.E.2d 63 (1993).

Drawing of weapons by police. — Fact that a police officer had weapon drawn at the time defendant was stopped was reasonable and did not, in and of itself, transform the stop and search into an illegal arrest where upon approaching the defendant the officer believed that a concealed weapon was seen under defendant’s shirt. Edwards v. State, 165 Ga. App. 527, 301 S.E.2d 693 (1983).

Where police officers had seen the defendant remove a shiny silver object from the waistband of the defendant’s pants, the mere fact that at least one of the officers had drawn a weapon prior to the actual confrontation with the defendant did not, in and of itself, transform the officers’ authorized investigatory reactions to the defendant’s suspicious activity into an illegal arrest. State v. Grimes, 195 Ga. App. 773, 395 S.E.2d 42 (1990).

Investigatory stop is not automatically an arrest simply because officer is armed with shotgun. Franklin v. State, 143 Ga. App. 3, 237 S.E.2d 425 (1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 950, 98 S. Ct. 1575, 55 L. Ed. 2d 799 (1978).

Questioning suspect despite insufficient probable cause for warrant. — If an officer reasonably concludes that there is insufficient evidence to establish probable cause for the issuance of a warrant because of an incomplete auto license number, and lack of certainty of the time and place of an intercept, this does not require the officer to turn one’s back and walk away and permit a crime to occur. While an unverified tip from an unknown informant may not supply probable cause for a search or a warrant, if the information carries enough indicia of reliability, it will authorize a forcible stop of a suspect to maintain the status quo momentarily while obtaining more information. State v. Bassford, 183 Ga. App. 694, 359 S.E.2d 752 (1987).

Search incidental to an investigative stop cannot be justified by any need to prevent the disappearance or destruction of evidence of a crime. State v. Stephens, 167 Ga.

Investigative Stops (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

App. 707, 307 S.E.2d 518 (1983).

Investigatory stop does not automatically justify search. — An informant's tip, which provided a police officer with sufficient articulable facts to make an investigatory stop of defendant, did not justify a search where, once the defendant was stopped, the officer conducted no investigation or questioning of the suspect but immediately commenced the search. Rucker v. State, 199 Ga. App. 854, 406 S.E.2d 277 (1991).

Officer's authority after valid stop. — Having effected a valid traffic stop, the officer was authorized to request the defendant's name and date of birth since the defendant did not have the defendant's driver's license even though the defendant could provide the officer with the vehicle registration and proof of insurance. Darby v. State, 239 Ga. App. 492, 521 S.E.2d 438 (1999).

Brief pat-down of automobile passenger permissible. — A brief pat-down search of an automobile passenger for weapons prior to a search of the automobile was permissible, where the time required to complete the automobile search, and thereby determine whether or not there was probable cause to make an arrest, was probably a matter of minutes. Lindsey v. Storey, 936 F.2d 554 (11th Cir. 1991).

Traveler's luggage containing narcotics. — If an officer's observations lead the officer reasonably to believe that a traveler is carrying luggage which contains narcotics, the officer may detain the luggage briefly to investigate the circumstances that initially aroused the officer's suspicion, provided that the detention is properly limited in scope. United States v. Armstrong, 722 F.2d 681 (11th Cir. 1984).

Initial stop held valid. — Under the facts known to the police officer and the physical observations available to the officer at the time of the stop, and considering officer's limited response and actions, the initial stop was not an abuse of state action and not in violation of any rights protected by U.S. Const., amend. 4. State v. Misuraca, 157 Ga. App. 361, 276 S.E.2d 679, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 846, 102 S. Ct. 163, 70 L. Ed. 2d 133 (1981).

Police officer was authorized to conduct a brief on-the-scene investigative detention, where officer observed defendant and two companions sitting for no apparent reason in a parked automobile in a remote part of a motel parking lot located in a "high crime area" at 4:45 a.m. Bozeman v. State, 196 Ga. App. 743, 397 S.E.2d 30 (1990).

An investigatory stop by GBI agents was proper because (1) the agents were suspicious that the defendant was carrying drugs because they had information that defendant's cousin flew to Fort Lauderdale, a known drug-source city, to get drugs and bring them back to Atlanta, that cousin was traveling with the defendant, and that the drugs were likely strapped to the defendant's body; (2) the agents observed the defendant and the cousin deplane and then wait in and leave the baggage claim area with no checked baggage; and (3) the agents observed the men go to the taxicab stand and prepare to take a taxicab, as predicted by the informant. Solomon v. State, 237 Ga. App. 655, 513 S.E.2d 520 (1999).

The defendant's known history of selling drugs within two blocks of the area in question, i.e. defendant's home, defendant's presence from 4:00 P.M. to 1:08 A.M. alone in a chair in defendant's driveway beside a car on a street corner known for heavy drug sales, the presence of a large amount of cash in defendant's pocket, defendant's extreme nervousness at the approach of the officers, and defendant's abruptly volunteered assertions that "What did I do? I ain't got nothing on me." were sufficient to provide reasonable articulable suspicion that the defendant might have been engaged in drug sales so as to permit an investigative detention and questioning. Williams v. State, 249 Ga. App. 119, 547 S.E.2d 679 (2001).

Second investigatory stop supported by articulable suspicion. — Defendant's suppression motion was properly denied, even though an officer lacked a reasonable suspicion of criminal activity to support a first investigatory stop, as defendant's flight after the officer's general questions, defendant's suspicious claim that defendant was biking home from a job 10 miles away, and defendant's proximity to a car with flashing lights consistent with a triggered car alarm, supported a second investigatory stop; the evidence defendant sought to suppress was obtained after the second investigatory stop. Crowley v. State, 267 Ga. App. 718, 601 S.E.2d 154 (2004).

Observation of attempt to hide objects. — Police officers had articulable suspicion to justify investigative detention of two youths in a parked car in an empty lot where the youths attempted to hide objects under the car seat when the officers' presence was noted. State v. Hodges, 184 Ga. App. 21, 360 S.E.2d 903, cert. denied, 184 Ga. App. 910, 360 S.E.2d 903 (1987).

Blocking suspect's path. — A police officer's action in blocking a suspect's path to ascertain identity and the purpose for being in an area known for drug transactions constituted a brief seizure that had to be supported by reasonable suspicion. Gonzalez v. State, 235 Ga. App. 253, 509 S.E.2d 144 (1998).

Pat-down search not justified. — Officer's mere hunch that defendant was involved with drugs and that drugs were linked to violence did not justify a Terry pat-down for weapons. State v. King, 227 Ga. App. 466, 489 S.E.2d 361 (1997).

Rights of probationers. — Trial court did not err when it revoked defendant's probation after defendant tried to run from officers and six or seven dime bags of marijuana were found in defendant's pocket; the brief, investigatory detention that led to defendant's arrest was based on a reasonable suspicion, and defendant waived defendant's fourth amendment rights when defendant agreed to the special condition of defendant's probation. Witcher v. State, 258 Ga. App. 430, 574 S.E.2d 455 (2002).

2. Vehicle Stops

When stop authorized. — Authorized officer may stop automobile and conduct a limited investigative inquiry of its occupants, without probable cause, if the officer has reasonable grounds for such action. A founded suspicion is all that is necessary. There must be some basis from which the court can determine that the detention was not arbitrary or harassing. State v. Misuraca, 157 Ga. App. 361, 276 S.E.2d 679, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 846, 102 S. Ct. 163, 70 L. Ed. 2d 133 (1981).

Test to be used in determining whether a particular vehicular stop passes constitutional muster is whether a reasonable officer, who is presented with the same facts available to the arresting officer, would have made the stop in the absence of an illegitimate motive. United States v. Harris, 716 F. Supp. 1470 (M.D. Ga. 1989), aff'd, 928 F.2d 1113 (11th Cir. 1991).

The two possible justifications for stopping an automobile are when the police officer has probable cause to believe that the driver is committing a traffic violation and when an investigatory stop is supported by articulable suspicion of criminal conduct. United States v. Skinner, 957 F. Supp. 228 (M.D. Ga. 1997).

When a police officer sees a traffic offense occur, a resulting traffic stop does not violate the fourth amendment, even if the officer has ulterior motives in making the stop. State v. Harris, 236 Ga. App. 525, 513 S.E.2d 1 (1999).

Because it was undisputed that the defendant was driving on a suspended license, it was error for the trial court to hold that the stop was pretextual and therefore invalid. State v. Harris, 236 Ga. App. 525, 513 S.E.2d 1 (1999).

A traffic stop was not "pretextual" when an officer saw a traffic offense occur, even if the officer had ulterior motives in initiating the stop, and even if a reasonable officer would not have made the stop under the same circumstances. Clark v. State, 243 Ga. App. 362, 532 S.E.2d 481 (2000).

Behavior giving rise to an officer's reasonable suspicion to support a traffic stop need not be a violation of the law; even if the driver's actions do not amount to a per se traffic violation, an officer may have a reasonable, articulable suspicion that a traffic offense was being committed. The question to be decided in reviewing traffic stops is whether the officer's motives and actions at the time of the traffic stop and under all the circumstances, including the nature of the officer's mistake, if any, were reasonable and not arbitrary or harassing. State v. Keddington, 264 Ga. App. 912, 592 S.E.2d 532 (2003).

After an officer observed defendant's vehicle parked at a baseball park where there was no activity, saw a wide-eyed, scared look on the face of defendant's passenger, approached the passenger's side of the car, asked the passenger to roll down the passenger's window, and defendant and the passenger gave conflicting reasons for why they were there, the officer had a reasonable suspicion of criminal activity which allowed the officer to ask the passenger to exit the vehicle. Akins v. State, 266 Ga. App. 214, 596 S.E.2d 719 (2004).

Investigative Stops (Cont'd)2. Vehicle Stops (Cont'd)

Since the defendant ignored the officers' commands during an investigatory stop based on a tipster's report of illegal drug activity, fled from the scene, and led the officers on a chase in violation of O.C.G.A. § 40-6-395(a), any taint arising from the allegedly illegal stop was purged and the defendant's flight provided a legitimate basis for discovery of evidence in the defendant's car. Prather v. State, 279 Ga. App. 873, 633 S.E.2d 46 (2006).

Stop held invalid. — Defendant was subjected to an improper Terry stop when the defendant was stopped and ordered to exit the vehicle as the police did not have specific articulable facts sufficient to give rise to a reasonable suspicion that the defendant was engaged in criminal conduct since the defendant was not a subject of a search warrant the officers were executing, the defendant had not committed any traffic violations, and the defendant's vehicle was not within the curtilage of the home subject to the search warrant. Reynolds v. State, 280 Ga. App. 712, 634 S.E.2d 842 (2006).

Authority to make routine traffic stop. — The fact that the state trooper who spotted a traffic violation by defendants was trained to be vigilant for drug traffickers would not alter the trooper's authority to make a routine traffic stop. Coop v. State, 186 Ga. App. 578, 367 S.E.2d 836, cert. denied, 186 Ga. App. 917, 367 S.E.2d 836 (1988).

Where an arresting officer witnessed a driver breaking even a relatively minor traffic law, denial of a motion to suppress, based on the argument that the stop was pretextual, was required. State v. Reddy, 236 Ga. App. 106, 511 S.E.2d 530 (1999).

Defendant was not illegally stopped under U.S. Const., amend. 4 because the deputy observed that the defendant improperly change lanes. Tri Huynh v. State, 239 Ga. App. 62, 518 S.E.2d 920 (1999).

Reposing an unfettered discretion in a field officer to stop and start a roadblock at will (randomly), based on a vague and undocumented articulation of public safety, rendered the roadblock unreasonable. State v. Manos, 237 Ga. App. 699, 516 S.E.2d 548 (1999).

When an officer sees a traffic offense occur, a resulting traffic stop does not violate the fourth amendment even if the officer has ulterior motives in initiating the stop, and even if a reasonable officer would not have made the stop under the same circumstances. Maxwell v. State, 249 Ga. App. 747, 549 S.E.2d 534 (2001).

Stop of a vehicle that was being operated with a dealer's drive-out tag that appeared faded or weathered was authorized for the purpose of investigating compliance with the state's registration law. Chiasson v. State, 250 Ga. App. 63, 549 S.E.2d 503 (2001).

Stop based on obstructed license plate proper. — A police officer properly stopped the defendant's vehicle after noticing that the vehicle had a black plate that bordered and partially concealed its license tag. Nelson v. State, 247 Ga. App. 455, 544 S.E.2d 189 (2001).

Stop of vehicle that fit description of vehicle used in recent robbery. — Alabama police were justified in stopping a car that fit the description of a vehicle that two robbers entered after they robbed a victim in Georgia and detaining the occupants until Georgia police arrived with the victim, and the trial court properly denied defendant's motion to suppress evidence which police found in the car and the victim's testimony identifying two defendants who were in the car as the persons who robbed the victim. Garlington v. State, 268 Ga. App. 264, 601 S.E.2d 793 (2004).

Car abandoned by fleeing defendant. — Since during the course of the defendant's flight from officers during an investigatory stop, the defendant abandoned the vehicle and ran on foot, the officers were authorized to search the vehicle; the protection of the fourth amendment did not apply to property which had been abandoned. Prather v. State, 279 Ga. App. 873, 633 S.E.2d 46 (2006).

Stop based on unknown insurance status not authorized. — Computer's return of "unknown" in response to a query regarding the insured status of a vehicle did not create a reasonable suspicion of criminal activity; thus, an officer's stop of the defendant's car solely on the basis of an "unknown" insurance status was improper, the later search of the car was tainted, and the trial court properly suppressed its results. State v. Dixon, 280 Ga. App. 260, 633 S.E.2d 636 (2006).

Probable cause was not necessary to justify brief investigative stop of automobile. State v. Watson, 205 Ga. App. 313, 422 S.E.2d 202 (1992).

Duration of stop as affecting reasonableness. — Investigative stop of defendants and their automobile, which lasted approximately 50 minutes, was not impermissible, where officers acted with propriety, particularly in avoiding any questioning of defendants while waiting for the arrival of a narcotics dog. United States v. Hardy, 855 F.2d 753 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1019, 109 S. Ct. 137, 10 L. Ed. 2d 198 (1989).

Defendant's detention for 30 minutes while a state trooper waited for the arrival of a drug dog and magistrate constituted an arrest which was supported by probable cause, where the trooper was warranted, under the circumstances, in believing that defendant was transporting contraband in the trunk of a rental automobile. Schmidt v. State, 188 Ga. App. 85, 372 S.E.2d 440 (1988), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1014, 109 S. Ct. 1126, 10 L. Ed. 2d 188 (1989).

Scope and duration of stop not impermissibly expanded. — Trial court erred in suppressing evidence found in a consensual search of a car in which defendant was a passenger as the police officer did not impermissibly expand the scope or the duration of a valid traffic stop for an improperly displayed tag in violation of O.C.G.A. § 40-2-41 by determining the status of the driver's license and whether the driver or defendant had outstanding warrants against them; even though 26 minutes into the stop the officer had not yet written the driver a ticket for the improperly displayed tag, the officer was not required to write the ticket and conclude the stop prior to diligently completing the background checks, which were delayed by the driver's admission that the driver might have had an outstanding warrant in another county that the officer had not discovered, and investigating the officer's reasonable suspicions regarding alcohol and open containers arising out of the officer's knowledge of another officer's encounter with the individuals earlier in the evening. State v. Williams, 264 Ga. App. 199, 590 S.E.2d 151 (2003).

Officer's request to search defendant's car while a check of defendant's driver's license was in progress was not intrusive, lengthy, or extraneous, and did not unreasonably expand the scope or duration of the valid traffic stop. State v. Mauerberger, 270 Ga. App. 794, 608 S.E.2d 234 (2004).

License and registration checks. — Because the driver and passenger were making some movements on the back seat as if to cover up something, an officer had articulable grounds for suspicion, particularly in an area in which recent burglaries had occurred, sufficient to justify a stop for license check and identification. State v. Purdy, 147 Ga. App. 340, 248 S.E.2d 683 (1978).

Officer's inspection of driver's operator's license and identification, incidental to stopping the vehicle based on an articulable suspicion of possible criminal behavior, did not violate U.S. Const., amend. 4. Jackson v. State, 155 Ga. App. 386, 271 S.E.2d 32 (1980).

Because a police officer was justified in placing the defendant in the patrol car for the duration of the license check after observing the defendant trying to hide something under the seat of the car, the officer's conduct obviously was undertaken to maintain the status quo during the course of a reasonable investigative stop, and thus did not constitute a de facto arrest. Thomas v. Newsome, 821 F.2d 1550 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 967, 108 S. Ct. 461, 98 L. Ed. 2d 401 (1987).

Where defendants argued that a state trooper had the right pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 40-5-29 (see now O.C.G.A. § 40-2-31) to ask a driver to display the driver's license but that the state trooper did not have the right to demand the vehicle's registration or its rental documents because of the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 40-2-90(b)(2), so that detention was unreasonable, it was held that by its terms, O.C.G.A. § 40-2-90(b)(2) gives visitors to the state the right to use and operate motor vehicles on the public streets and highways for pleasure purposes only for 90 days without registering the vehicle, but this did not restrict a law enforcement officer from performing the officer's duty when stopping a visiting motorist for a traffic violation. Coop v. State, 186 Ga. App. 578, 367 S.E.2d 836, cert. denied, 186 Ga. App. 917, 367 S.E.2d 836 (1988).

Investigative Stops (Cont'd)2. Vehicle Stops (Cont'd)

An officer appropriately stopped defendant because, based on officer's prior experience with defendant and officer's knowledge that defendant's license had been suspended, it would not have been unreasonable for the officer to suspect that the license suspension remained in effect and that defendant was violating the law by driving. Johnson v. State, 246 Ga. App. 197, 540 S.E.2d 212 (2000).

After defendant showed defendant's registration to an officer who had stopped defendant's vehicle on suspicion that it was not registered, the investigation for which the officer had originally stopped defendant concluded; as the officer's subsequent request to see defendant's driver's license was not based on any reasonable suspicion that defendant lacked one, this request exceeded the scope of the initial detention and evidence that defendant did not have a license was properly suppressed. State v. Joyner, 270 Ga. App. 533, 607 S.E.2d 184 (2004).

High-speed pursuit. — In an arrestee's 42 U.S.C. § 1983 suit that alleged that the arrestee's fourth amendment right against the use of excessive force was violated when a sheriff's deputy crashed a cruiser into the car during a high-speed pursuit, rendering the arrestee a quadriplegic, the arrestee's deliberate indifference claim against the county was dismissed on summary judgment because the county's official policy of permitting deputies to use their own judgment in deciding when to make high-speed stops was not unconstitutional. Harris v. Coweta County, F. Supp. 2d , 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27348 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 25, 2003).

Detention to investigate car rental status. — Reasonable suspicion supported the detention of the defendant following the stop of the defendant's vehicle because neither the defendant driver nor the defendant's passenger were wearing seatbelts since a car rental agreement displayed by the defendant had expired, and the officer contacted the car rental agency to ensure that the defendant had not converted the vehicle.

Crenshaw v. State, 248 Ga. App. 505, 546 S.E.2d 890 (2001).

Use of a trained drug detection dog. — Using a dog to sniff for evidence of narcotics is not a search, and may, under proper circumstances, be utilized as part of the investigation conducted within the limited scope of a Terry stop. State v. Foster, 209 Ga. App. 143, 433 S.E.2d 109 (1993).

Record supported the trial court's judgment that a vehicle checkpoint that was established to check drivers' licenses, registrations, and proof of insurance was established for a legitimate purpose, that a police officer did not violate defendant's rights when the officer walked a drug detection dog around defendant's car while another officer was checking the validity of defendant's driver's license, and that police had probable cause to search defendant's car after the dog alerted on it. McCray v. State, 268 Ga. App. 84, 601 S.E.2d 452 (2004).

Use of drug dog during stop. — After the defendant was validly detained following a traffic stop, the arresting officer was free to have a dog handler walk a drug detection dog around the car, as use of a trained drug detection dog, in a location where it is entitled to be, to sniff the exterior of a car, is not an unreasonable search. Crenshaw v. State, 248 Ga. App. 505, 546 S.E.2d 890 (2001).

Canine sniff of vehicle improper. — A canine sniff of the defendant's vehicle, which occurred after the conclusion of the arresting officer's investigation into the dealer's drive-out license tag on the vehicle, was improper as the arresting officer did not have reasonable suspicion of criminal conduct and conducted the canine sniff based on merely a hunch that drugs might be found in a garbage bag seen in the car. Berry v. State, 248 Ga. App. 874, 547 S.E.2d 651 (2001), aff'd sub nom. Gober v. State, 275 Ga. 356, 566 S.E.2d 317 (2002).

Terry search of auto passenger. — A Terry pat-down search is authorized when the officer reasonably believes that it is necessary to protect the officer from attack, including the search of passengers in vehicles omitted from the original police notifications. Dowdy v. State, 209 Ga. App. 311, 433 S.E.2d 293 (1993).

Pat-down of operator justified. — An officer was justified in conducting a pat-down search of the defendant and defendant's jacket for the officer's safety because: (1) after stopping defendant for operation of a motorcycle without a headlight, the defendant took off the jacket, laid it on the motorcycle and walked over to the officer's car door before the officer had stopped the officer's own vehicle; (2) after telling defendant to step back, take off the helmet and produce a license, the defendant moved back to the motorcycle; and (3) the officer noticed that the defendant's pupils were constricted which, based on the officer's training, meant that the defendant might be under the influence of drugs. Sikes v. State, 247 Ga. App. 855, 545 S.E.2d 73 (2001).

Roadblocks. — The trial court improperly suppressed evidence found as a result of a roadblock when it incorrectly relied upon non-binding provisions in a county employee handbook relating to roadblocks in determining the propriety of the roadblock. State v. Dymond, 248 Ga. App. 582, 546 S.E.2d 69 (2001).

A license and insurance check roadblock was properly set up and operated, and evidence found as a result of the roadblock was not subject to suppression since, because it was drizzling rain and the road was slick, a determination was made that it was unsafe to allow any cars to back up on the roadway, and cars were allowed to proceed through the roadblock when all the officers on duty were busy with other cars. Hodges v. State, 248 Ga. App. 295, 546 S.E.2d 54 (2001).

Driving under the influence roadblock was proper where the decision to set up the roadblock was made by a supervisory officer, where the roadblock served a legitimate purpose, where all vehicles were stopped at the roadblock, where the screening officer had prior training and experience with respect to driving under the influence arrests, where the delay to motorists was minimal, and where the roadblock was well identified by reflective signs with flashing strobe lights, several police cars, and officers dressed in reflective gear; therefore, the police had every right to stop defendant at the roadblock, and a stop of defendant's vehicle after defendant avoided the roadblock was authorized. Dale v. State, 267 Ga. App. 897, 600 S.E.2d 763 (2004).

General investigative roadblock to question people regarding a murder in the area served a "legitimate primary purpose," and was legal; a trial court's denial of defendant's motion to suppress evidence seized from defendant after defendant stopped before reaching the roadblock was proper. Strickland v. State, 270 Ga. App. 187, 605 S.E.2d 890 (2004).

Despite the defendant's claim on appeal that evidence was obtained by police conducting an illegal roadblock and that an arbitrary desire to keep officers busy was not a sufficient purpose to justify the roadblock, the trial court properly denied a motion to suppress evidence seized from the roadblock, as its primary purpose was to check for drivers' licenses, seat belts, and vehicle registrations, and not general law enforcement. Cater v. State, 280 Ga. App. 891, 635 S.E.2d 246 (2006).

Roadblock based on anonymous tip or hearsay. — Roadblock was not unreasonable or an invasion of fourth amendment rights, even though the reasons for setting it up were founded upon an anonymous tip or hearsay. Brimer v. State, 201 Ga. App. 401, 411 S.E.2d 128 (1991).

Proper training of screening officer at roadblock. — A screening officer at a roadblock had sufficient training since the officer: (1) was a ten-year veteran of the police department; (2) had received training in DUI detection at the police academy when the officer first became a police officer and at several of the annual in-service training sessions the officer attended over ten years; and (3) had "on-the-job training" dealing with intoxicated people, making, on average, one DUI arrest per month which the officer calculated to be over one hundred arrests over ten years. Wrigley v. State, 248 Ga. App. 387, 546 S.E.2d 794 (2001), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1129, 122 S. Ct. 1068, 151 L. Ed. 2d 971 (2002).

Roadblock purpose was proper. — A roadblock conducted only by the motorcycle squad, backed up by the DUI countermeasures team, was conducted for a proper purpose, notwithstanding that the roadblock was part of a larger operation aimed at general crime control. Wrigley v. State, 248 Ga. App. 387, 546 S.E.2d 794 (2001), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1129, 122 S. Ct. 1068, 151 L. Ed. 2d 971 (2002).

Defendant's detention and search at a police roadblock was not an unconstitutional search and seizure because the roadblock was implemented as a safety check-point based on a number of citizen complaints about drunken and reckless drivers in the area. Hardin v. State, 277 Ga. 242, 587 S.E.2d 634 (2003).

Investigative Stops (Cont'd)2. Vehicle Stops (Cont'd)

Roadblock purpose was improper. — Trial court properly granted defendant's motion in limine to suppress evidence gathered from defendant at a roadblock as a substantial basis existed for the trial court's decision that the roadblock violated the fourth amendment since a police officer admitted at the suppression hearing that the roadblock was set up with a primary purpose of general law enforcement, which was a constitutionally impermissible reason for a roadblock since the individualized suspicion of wrongdoing was absent. State v. Ayers, 257 Ga. App. 117, 570 S.E.2d 603 (2002).

Roadblock lacked the necessary supervisory approval where a written authorization showed that the roadblock was only authorized for one day, the day after the car occupied by defendant was stopped; a trial court's finding that the roadblock was unauthorized was not clearly erroneous, and without supervisory approval, the roadblock violated the fourth amendment. State v. Morgan, 267 Ga. App. 728, 600 S.E.2d 767 (2004).

Alleged avoidance of roadblock. — Officer's mere intuition that defendant was avoiding a roadblock by turning into a residential complex was not sufficient to justify a stop. Jorgensen v. State, 207 Ga. App. 545, 428 S.E.2d 440 (1993).

Failure to signal. — Stop of defendant for failure to signal when defendant pulled into the left turn lane was authorized and, following the stop, the officer was entitled to execute a pat-down search for weapons. Buffington v. State, 229 Ga. App. 450, 494 S.E.2d 272 (1997).

Erratic driving where the vehicle was impeding the flow of traffic and was weaving within its lane. Gabbidon v. State, 184 Ga. App. 475, 361 S.E.2d 861 (1987).

Stop of defendant's vehicle was not unconstitutional, where defendant weaved into the emergency lane on two separate occasions during a one-mile stretch on an interstate highway, and the officer who stopped the defendant did not make the stop until the defendant weaved the second time. United States v. Harris, 716 F. Supp. 1470 (M.D. Ga. 1989), aff'd, 928 F.2d 1113 (11th Cir. 1991).

Where a state trooper stopped defendant's vehicle after observing it weave two or three times across the yellow line setting off the shoulder from the travelled portion of the highway, there was adequate support for concluding that the stop was based on an objective violation of a statute for which the state highway patrol regularly made stops, with or without suspicion of drug-related activity. United States v. Pollock, 926 F.2d 1044 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 985, 112 S. Ct. 593, 116 L. Ed. 2d 617 (1991).

Although an anonymous informant's reliability was not established, defendant's traffic violations, including driving at speeds in excess of 65 mph and a subsequent collision with a telephone pole as well as the vehicle driven by agents, all of which occurred in the presence of the agents, were sufficient to authorize an investigatory stop; indeed, they had a duty to stop defendant's vehicle. Weaver v. State, 208 Ga. App. 105, 430 S.E.2d 60 (1993).

Information provided by a concerned citizen who witnessed defendant's erratic driving behavior, along with the officer's observations when the officer arrived at the scene, gave the officer reasonable grounds to block defendant's truck. Sayers v. State, 226 Ga. App. 645, 487 S.E.2d 437 (1997).

Police officer who witnessed driver weaving from the driver's lane to the curb lane had reasonable information to believe that a criminal offense was being committed, and therefore had probable cause to stop the automobile. State v. Bowen, 231 Ga. App. 95, 498 S.E.2d 570 (1998).

Defendant's act of making a sudden and abrupt change in speed followed by a quick unsafe turn and backing maneuver was a sufficiently suspicious and furtive response to a police road check to warrant further investigation. Castillo v. State, 232 Ga. App. 354, 502 S.E.2d 261 (1998).

Officer had a reasonably articulable suspicion to stop defendant where officer saw defendant cross completely to the right lane marker and then drift to the left to partially cross the center line. State v. Kirbabas, 232 Ga. App. 474, 502 S.E.2d 314 (1998).

An officer properly stopped the defendant's vehicle because the defendant displayed two instances of weaving within the lane and also acted furtively by abruptly changing the course of travel as though to avoid encountering the police, who were visibly present. Semich v. State, 234 Ga. App. 89, 506 S.E.2d 216 (1998).

Lane changes without signaling. — The stop of the defendant's vehicle was proper since the arresting officer testified to observing the defendant abruptly change lanes three times without signaling, and that, including the officer's car, there were three or four cars on the roadway when the officer made the observations. Johnson v. State, 249 Ga. App. 29, 546 S.E.2d 922 (2001).

Detention pending computer check and arrival of backup. — State trooper's detention of defendant for approximately 33 minutes from time of a vehicle stop to time of signing of a consent to search and for a total period of approximately one and one-half hours from time of stop until defendant was turned over to local police authorities was not unreasonable, where the trooper was awaiting a response to a computer check and the arrival of a backup officer. Mallarino v. State, 190 Ga. App. 398, 379 S.E.2d 210 (1989), aff'd, 194 Ga. App. 212, 390 S.E.2d 114 (1990).

Asking identity of passenger who resembled escaped prisoner or the prisoner's sibling. — Where, based upon the personal knowledge concerning the escape of a prisoner and the recognition of the passenger in an automobile as being either the prisoner or the prisoner's sibling, an officer had an "articulable suspicion" that the passenger might be an escaped convict and asking the passenger the passenger's name was clearly a "reasonable" action for the officer to take in making an authorized-but-limited investigation concerning the identity of the passenger of the vehicle. State v. Roberson, 165 Ga. App. 727, 302 S.E.2d 591 (1983).

Officers may initially stop vehicle for inoperative brake lights. — The observation that the brake stop lights of a vehicle do not operate when stopping for a traffic light is sufficient basis for police officers to make an initial stop of a vehicle. Wilson v. State, 167 Ga. App. 148, 306 S.E.2d 16 (1983).

Investigatory stop authorized. — Investigatory stop was authorized given officer's receipt of a police radio dispatch about suspicious behavior and the officer's own personal observation of such behavior involving the prolonged examination of automobiles by two individuals. Hopkins v. State, 209 Ga. App. 337, 433 S.E.2d 423 (1993).

When law enforcement received two anonymous tips that defendant would be traveling from another state with cocaine in a certain model car licensed in the other state, would be taking a certain route, and would be staying in a certain hotel, the tips' range of details relating to future acts not easily predicted allowed police to conduct an investigatory stop of defendant. Solis v. State, 268 Ga. App. 493, 602 S.E.2d 166 (2004).

Inconsistencies in the defendant's answers during a valid traffic stop raised an articulable suspicion that the defendant was involved in another crime, and thus deputies were authorized to detain and question the defendant; the vehicle's condition also led the deputies to believe that contraband was hidden in its roof; finally, the defendant consented to a search of the vehicle, so the defendant's motion to suppress cocaine which was found in a compartment of the roof of the defendant's vehicle was properly denied. Perez v. State, 280 Ga. App. 241, 633 S.E.2d 572 (2006).

Police officer entitled to stop driver in need of assistance. — A police officer does not need "probable cause" to stop a person where that person is driving at a very low rate of speed, stops on the road and the officer thinks that person needs assistance. Hightower v. State, 166 Ga. App. 177, 303 S.E.2d 515 (1983).

Furtive driving actions. — It was error to grant defendant's motion to suppress evidence of an armed robbery which was found in defendant's car, where the defendant was driving too closely behind a suspected vehicle being followed by police and was apparently attempting to frustrate the approaching officer's identification efforts. Such deliberately furtive actions, at the approach of law officers were strong indicia of mens rea, and gave the officers at least a reasonable suspicion of criminal activity to warrant further investigation. State v. Chambers, 194 Ga. App. 609, 391 S.E.2d 657 (1990).

Where officer testified that, as the officer approached defendant, the officer saw "the headlights of the defendant's truck bounce up and down like [the defendant] either hit a curb real hard or hit the railroad ties real hard," this conduct, combined with the proximity of a roadblock, was sufficiently abnormal or unusual to justify a Terry-type (i.e., second-tier) stop. Taylor v. State, 249 Ga. App. 733, 549 S.E.2d 536 (2001).

Investigative Stops (Cont'd)2. Vehicle Stops (Cont'd)

Speeding. — In view of the testimony that defendant was driving in excess of the speed limit, the stop of the defendant's vehicle was justified and the contention that it was pretextual, fails. Partridge v. State, 187 Ga. App. 325, 370 S.E.2d 173 (1988), cert. denied, 187 Ga. App. 908, 370 S.E.2d 173 (1988).

When two officers stopped defendant and one officer (the driver) was unable to testify, there was reliable communication between the officer driving, who explained that defendant was speeding, and the testifying officer, as both officers acted jointly to conduct the stop and although the testifying officer could not testify on actual speed, the officers were acting in concert when stopping defendant. Thus, reasonable suspicion was established, and the trial court erred in granting the motion to suppress evidence. State v. Pennyman, 248 Ga. App. 446, 545 S.E.2d 365 (2001).

Officer's mistake as to offense for which vehicle was stopped. — Even though defendant's behavior did not technically violate the "laying drags" statute (O.C.G.A. § 40-6-251), the specific offense for which the officer stopped the defendant, the fact that defendant was driving in such a manner as to endanger others reasonably justified an investigative stop. State v. Armstrong, 223 Ga. App. 350, 477 S.E.2d 635 (1996).

Where an officer stopped defendant for driving through an intersection without the vehicle's headlights on, because the officer acted in good faith believing that an unlawful act had been committed, the officer's actions were not rendered improper by a later legal determination that defendant's actions were not a crime according to a technical legal definition or distinction determined to exist in the penal statute. State v. Hammang, 249 Ga. App. 811, 549 S.E.2d 440 (2001).

Intoxicated driver. — Police officer was authorized to stop a driver to determine if the driver was intoxicated, but while a reasonable investigative stop does not offend against the fourth amendment, such a stop must be a brief stop, limited in time to that minimally necessary to investigate the allegation invoking suspicion, and limited in scope to identification and limited questioning reasonably related to the circumstances that justified the initiation of the momentary stop. Raney v. State, 186 Ga. App. 758, 368 S.E.2d 528 (1988).

Citizen's report of drunk driver. — The report of a "concerned citizen" driver that the citizen believed the driver of the car behind the citizen was drunk was a reasonable and articulable basis for suspicion by a police officer that the second driver might be driving under the influence of alcohol authorizing the officer to detain the driver briefly for the limited purpose of determining whether the driver in fact exhibited perceptible manifestations of intoxication. State v. Noble, 179 Ga. App. 785, 347 S.E.2d 722 (1986).

Anonymous tip sufficient to justify stop. — The reliability of an anonymous tip sufficient to justify an investigatory stop was established where: verified aspects of the tip predicted the time and location in which defendant would drive a described truck; it was indicated that the information was acquired by the personal observations of the caller; and aspects of the tip were corroborated by prior information the police had acquired about defendant. Britton v. State, 220 Ga. App. 120, 469 S.E.2d 272 (1996).

Information obtained by an officer from lookout heard on a broadcast, without more, was not sufficient to justify an investigatory stop of defendants' vehicle. McSwain v. State, 240 Ga. App. 60, 522 S.E.2d 553 (1999).

Stop of vehicle with dealer's drive-out license tag improper. — The initial stop of the defendant's vehicle was improper since the arresting officer stopped the vehicle because it had a dealer's drive-out license tag rather than a state-issued tag. Berry v. State, 248 Ga. App. 874, 547 S.E.2d 651 (2001), aff'd sub nom. Gober v. State, 275 Ga. 356, 566 S.E.2d 317 (2002).

"Terry-type" stop of defendant's automobile was justified, where the evidence showed that defendant was seen in the driveway of a house where several burglaries had occurred and that the defendant and a passenger acted in a suspicious manner when they saw a police cruiser. Dillard v. State, 177 Ga. App. 805, 341 S.E.2d 310 (1986).

Stop of defendant's motor home was authorized based on the existence of a reasonable and articulable suspicion that it was being used to transport marijuana, where officers who were present when the vehicle was stopped knew that it was traveling north after the driver had met with a known marijuana smuggler, and they had observed that it was so heavily loaded that it rode low on its axles and swayed from side to side. Eisenberger v. State, 177 Ga. App. 673, 340 S.E.2d 232, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 818, 107 S. Ct. 77, 93 L. Ed. 2d 33 (1986).

Three persons driving along dirt road late at night in high crime area may give rise to an articulable ground for suspicion. State v. Purdy, 147 Ga. App. 340, 248 S.E.2d 683 (1978).

Defendant's act of pulling into a parking lot did not furnish any additional reason sufficient to create an articulable suspicion justifying an investigative stop. State v. Canidate, 220 Ga. App. 276, 469 S.E.2d 710 (1996).

On facts, articulable ground for suspicion existed. — Where police officers observed a truck traveling along a dirt road after midnight in an area where several recent burglaries had taken place, it cannot be said that an articulable ground for suspicion does not exist. Allen v. State, 140 Ga. App. 828, 232 S.E.2d 250 (1976).

Where the officers received a tip which did not furnish probable cause to stop appellant and search, but led them to the location specified and to find appellant, who fit the description given, attempting to leave the area in the car described by the informant, the officers had an articulable suspicion warranting the stop of the vehicle to investigate the circumstances. Stiggers v. State, 151 Ga. App. 546, 260 S.E.2d 413 (1979).

The brief investigatory stop of defendant was permissible even though the officers did not personally observe defendant commit a traffic violation or any other criminal act before they made the stop, where there was a report of recent unlawful discharge of a firearm, with the appearance of only the defendant's truck, coming from the direction where the shots were fired, and the presence of fresh mud on that truck, which suggested defendant had been in the wooded area where the shots were fired. Cheatham v. State, 204 Ga. App. 483, 419 S.E.2d 920 (1992).

Investigatory stop was authorized where police had witnessed or had knowledge of at least five indicia which contributed to an articulable suspicion of criminal activity. Lewis v. State, 233 Ga. App. 560, 504 S.E.2d 732 (1998).

Where a police officer detained the defendant because the defendant failed to give straight answers regarding the defendant's plans, this gave rise to an articulable suspicion justifying additional investigation and was not unconstitutionally intrusive in light of the problem of interstate drug traffic. State v. Hall, 235 Ga. App. 412, 509 S.E.2d 701 (1998).

Where an officer manning a checkpoint saw defendant suddenly brake and turn the vehicle into a driveway short of the checkpoint and that, prior to the abrupt turn, defendant had not used a turn signal and defendant's vehicle lacked two rear lights, and because the officer knew that the defendant had been identified as a supplier of methamphetamines, collectively, these facts formed a sufficient, reasonable basis for the officer to believe defendant was transporting illegal drugs or was otherwise engaged in criminal conduct. Gary v. State, 249 Ga. App. 879, 549 S.E.2d 826 (2001).

No unconstitutional seizure occurred, where patrol units without flasher lights on followed defendant for several blocks observing that defendant committed multiple traffic offenses then stopped defendant and made an arrest for DUI. State v. Wright, 221 Ga. App. 202, 470 S.E.2d 916 (1996).

Seizure of evidence during investigatory stop of automobile upheld. — An investigative stop of defendant's automobile which resulted in seizure of narcotics and defendant's arrest did not violate the fourth amendment where the anonymous tip that formed the basis for the stop had been sufficiently corroborated by the arresting officer's recognition of defendant as having been involved in an earlier drug investigation to furnish reasonable suspicion that defendant was engaged in criminal activity. State v. Ball, 207 Ga. App. 729, 429 S.E.2d 258 (1993).

Investigative Stops (Cont'd)2. Vehicle Stops (Cont'd)

Stop held valid. — State trooper's conduct fell within the permissible scope of a noncustodial traffic stop, where the initial stop of an automobile was valid and officer then asked the Spanish-speaking driver to step out of the car, sought information about the car's ownership, asked for a driver's license and questioned driver and driver's bilingual spouse generally regarding their destination before obtaining consent to search the vehicle. United States v. Suarez, 694 F. Supp. 926 (S.D. Ga. 1988), aff'd, 885 F.2d 1574 (11th Cir. 1989).

Where, after being stopped at a properly configured New Year's eve roadblock, the defendant was diverted to the side of the road, this was not a "second detention," but a continuation of the original investigative stop, and no added proof was required to make the brief prolonging of the stop valid. Workman v. State, 235 Ga. App. 800, 510 S.E.2d 109 (1998).

The stop of the defendant's vehicle was authorized by a trooper's observation of the traffic offense of following too close, even though the trooper acknowledged that the trooper would not have stopped the defendant but for the tip that the defendant had been smoking a joint; an officer's ulterior motive for a stop is of no consequence where the stop is made for a valid reason. Cotton v. State, 237 Ga. App. 18, 513 S.E.2d 763 (1999).

Police officers had a reasonable, articulable suspicion of criminal wrongdoing; hence the stop of an automobile was justified since: (1) officers received several reports of youths driving by in a car and shooting darts at people with a blow gun; (2) based on information from the victims and witnesses, police issued a "be on the lookout" notice for a small compact teal green vehicle with a white male driver with a crew cut and a black male passenger; (3) officers investigating the attacks drove around in the general area described in the notice and spotted two juveniles driving a small teal green car with a white male driver with a crew cut and a black male in the passenger seat; (4) the officers stopped the car; and (5) the car's driver did not have a valid driver's license and there were illegal fireworks in plain view on the backseat. In re B.K.M., 247 Ga. App. 588, 544 S.E.2d 504 (2001).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion to suppress items that were found in the trunk of defendant's car after defendant was apprehended on suspicion of shoplifting despite defendant's claim that defendant did not consent to the search of the car, as the trial court weighed the credibility of the testimony and the record supported the trial court's finding that defendant freely and voluntarily consented to the search; moreover, even if defendant did not consent to the search, the search was valid under the automobile exception to the warrant requirement, which allows a warrantless search of a vehicle where there is probable cause, because the police had probable cause to search the vehicle in light of information from a store manager who saw defendant place store items in defendant's trunk without paying for them and in light of defendant's subsequent conduct of shoplifting at another store down the road 30 minutes later. Horne v. State, 260 Ga. App. 640, 580 S.E.2d 644 (2003).

Where, after being stopped at a properly configured New Year's eve roadblock, the defendant was diverted to the side of the road, this was not a "second detention," but a continuation of the original investigative stop, and no added proof was required to make the brief prolonging of the stop valid. Slocum v. State, 267 Ga. App. 337, 599 S.E.2d 299 (2004).

Officer's be-on-the-lookout (BOLO) bulletin provided reasonable suspicion of criminal activity sufficient to authorize the stop of defendant's vehicle. The BOLO provided particularized information describing the color, manufacturer, and model of the vehicle, the number and race of its occupants, and its location and direction of travel. Faulkner v. State, 277 Ga. App. 702, 627 S.E.2d 423 (2006).

Stop held invalid. — Stop of the defendant's car by an officer was held invalid as inarticulate hunch of illegal activity where the officer was patrolling the apartment complex at 4 A.M. and observed the defendant pull into the complex parking lot at a "rapid speed", then quickly enter the apartment building and emerge a short time later, re-enter the defendant's vehicle and drive away at a "rapid speed." United States v.

Momodu, 909 F. Supp. 1571 (N.D. Ga. 1995).

Because the only arguably suspicious behavior by the defendant was driving around a subdivision several times late at night, because there was no evidence introduced that such activity violated any local ordinances or other applicable law, or that there was any other basis for a stop, and because the police had received no information that the defendant had committed any acts of vandalism in the area, there was no particularized and objective basis to justify an investigatory stop, and the trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion to suppress. Attaway v. State, 236 Ga. App. 307, 511 S.E.2d 635 (1999).

The mere fact that an older model yellow car of a particular kind was seen three days after the issuance of an alert was not sufficient to raise a reasonable suspicion that it was the same car involved in a purse snatching three days earlier at a location two miles away. State v. Burns, 238 Ga. App. 683, 520 S.E.2d 39 (1999).

The mere fact that past incidents of vandalism had occurred in the area of the stop did not indicate that the driver was, or was about to be, engaged in criminal conduct in the absence of some information linking the driver to the vandalism. In re M.J.H., 239 Ga. App. 894, 522 S.E.2d 491 (1999).

The officer lacked reasonable suspicion for stopping the vehicle where defendant merely pulled into a parking lot and then began to drive away, and at the time the officer made the stop, the officer had no "particularized and objective" reason for believing that the occupants of the truck were engaged in criminal activity. State v. Winnie, 242 Ga. App. 228, 529 S.E.2d 215 (2000).

An investigative stop of the defendant's van was improper since: (1) the patrol officers who stopped the defendant did not see any traffic violations or other suspicious conduct justifying the stop and, instead, stopped the defendant based solely on a lookout broadcast by undercover officers; (2) the only facts known by the undercover officers were that the defendant stopped defendant's van at an apartment complex parking lot where they were watching a particular apartment, went down the stairs, came back up the stairs, and left in the van. Duke v.

State, 247 Ga. App. 512, 544 S.E.2d 201 (2001).

Grant of defendant's motion to suppress was not clearly erroneous as the officer stopping defendant's automobile for an investigatory stop provided no factual basis for believing that defendant's older model automobile violated the taillight specifications in O.C.G.A. § 40-8-23(e) simply because newer models violated the statute; further, the trial court could have found that the officer's testimony that the officer had conducted research into the newer models' taillights was less than credible. State v. Keddington, 264 Ga. App. 912, 592 S.E.2d 532 (2003).

Because the police officer pulled defendant over based only on the fact that defendant's car was parked in a truck fueling area of a travel center for a long time, the stop was not supported by a reasonable suspicion, and it was, therefore, in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 4. Moore v. State, 265 Ga. App. 108, 592 S.E.2d 892 (2004).

Where a 911 call from an unidentified informant did not provide the police with reasonable suspicion to stop defendant's vehicle, the stop unreasonably intruded upon defendant's fourth amendment rights; as a result, the trial court erred by denying defendant's motion to suppress. Slocum v. State, 267 Ga. App. 337, 599 S.E.2d 299 (2004).

Defendant's motion to suppress evidence obtained during a traffic stop was granted because the arresting officer had no articulable suspicion for making the stop based on defendant's driving 10 miles under the speed limit in the left lane of a highway. State v. Whelchel, 269 Ga. App. 314, 604 S.E.2d 200 (2004).

On facts, articulable ground for suspicion did not exist. — Trial court properly suppressed evidence obtained in a traffic stop of defendant's vehicle as the police officers who initiated the stop, in reliance on information they obtained from a tipster that they had just arrested, did not have a reasonable articulable suspicion for stopping defendant's vehicle at the time of the stop. Furthermore, the fact that an officer saw defendant pass a bag to the passenger in defendant's car did not support the state's argument that articulable suspicion existed to initiate the stop, because the stop had already been initiated before the officer saw anything being passed between defendant and the passenger. State v. Davenport, 268 Ga. App. 704, 603 S.E.2d 324 (2004).

Investigative Stops (Cont'd)2. Vehicle Stops (Cont'd)

Information that car operator wanted for felony. — Where an arresting officer has adequate reason to stop a car, obtain the license of the operator during that momentary detention, and verify that the operator is not drunk or under the influence of intoxicants, subsequently obtained information that the operator is wanted for a felony warrant justifies the arrest and a subsequent search of the vehicle without a warrant. Graves v. State, 167 Ga. App. 246, 305 S.E.2d 913 (1983).

Informant's identification of defendant as supplier of marijuana and the defendant's presence in the parking lot of the informant's apartment justified an investigatory stop. Burdette v. State, 210 Ga. App. 471, 436 S.E.2d 502 (1993).

Evidence obtained after investigatory stop of car admissible. — Where an officer was authorized to make a limited investigation of the defendant's identity and when the officer asked for the defendant's name, a response known to the officer to be false was given, this authorized the arrest of the defendant for violating O.C.G.A. § 16-10-25, and the fruits of a search of the defendant and the car in which the defendant was a passenger conducted pursuant to this legal arrest would be admissible at the defendant's trial. State v. Roberson, 165 Ga. App. 727, 302 S.E.2d 591 (1983).

After traffic stop had concluded and consent to search was refused, officers could not legally detain defendants based only on their nervous behavior. Parker v. State, 233 Ga. App. 616, 504 S.E.2d 774 (1998).

Testimony as to illegally arrested defendants. — A police officer who had the authority to stop a car and ask the occupants to identify themselves could testify to seeing the defendants in the car, even though the defendants were then illegally arrested. United States v. Kelly, 749 F.2d 1541 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 472 U.S. 1029, 105 S. Ct. 3506, 87 L. Ed. 2d 636 (1985).

Stopping an automobile and detaining its occupants constitute a seizure, even though the purpose of the stop is limited and the resulting detention quite brief. Bowers v. State, 151 Ga. App. 46, 258 S.E.2d 623 (1979), aff'd, 245 Ga. 367, 265 S.E.2d 57 (1980).

By instructing defendant to either roll down the car window or open the door, police officer "seizes" the defendant within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 4. To justify such intrusion, the state has to produce evidence of articulable facts which give rise to a suspicion that the law has been violated. Although this suspicion need not meet the standard of probable cause, it must be more than mere caprice, or a hunch, or an inclination. State v. Smith, 137 Ga. App. 101, 223 S.E.2d 30 (1975).

Suspected occupants of home in motor vehicle. — Where police had probable cause to believe the law was being violated by the occupants of an apartment, police properly approached and briefly detained the occupants of a car that had just come to a stop at the residence to determine whether any of them lived there. Claffey v. State, 209 Ga. App. 455, 433 S.E.2d 441, aff'd, 211 Ga. App. 335, 439 S.E.2d 516 (1993).

Compliance with county manual not necessary. — The state was not required to show compliance with a particular section of a county police policies and procedures manual in order to establish a valid search and seizure at a roadblock established to make license and insurance checks as well as apprehend DUI drivers. State v. Sherrill, 247 Ga. App. 708, 545 S.E.2d 110 (2001).

Request for information unrelated to traffic stop and for consent to search for drugs. — An officer does not necessarily illegally exceed the scope of a valid traffic stop by asking for information unrelated to the traffic stop and for consent to search for drugs while the person is still being detained and without articulable suspicion of a crime. State v. Sims, 248 Ga. App. 277, 546 S.E.2d 47 (2001).

The trial court did not err in suppressing evidence obtained in a search of the defendant's vehicle since the defendant was detained without justification when an officer began to interrogate defendant about the contents of defendant's car following a traffic stop, and the defendant's subsequent consent to search was the product of this impermissible seizure. State v. Sims, 248 Ga. App. 277, 546 S.E.2d 47 (2001).

Scope of search following stop based on seatbelt violation. — The trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to suppress marijuana and a handgun found in defendant's car following a traffic stop which was conducted because neither the defendant nor the passenger were wearing seatbelts since: (1) the officer asked for defendant's license to establish defendant's identity and asked questions reasonably related to the traffic violation; (2) the defendant's license showed a Macon address, so the officer asked defendant about still living in Macon and then, based on the defendant's voluntary comments about what defendant was doing in Atlanta, asked defendant a follow-up question about a friend; (3) the defendant then refused to answer the officer's question and kept looking around while the passenger attempted to get out of the car and then refused to fully comply with the officer's request to close the door; and (4) the officer noticed large bags located on the car's back seat. Bell v. State, 248 Ga. App. 254, 546 S.E.2d 34 (2001).

Seatbelt violation. — Reasonable suspicion supported the stop of the defendant's vehicle since the arresting officer stopped the vehicle after noticing that neither the defendant driver nor the passenger were wearing seatbelts. Crenshaw v. State, 248 Ga. App. 505, 546 S.E.2d 890 (2001).

Improper expansion of scope of traffic investigation. — A state trooper impermissibly expanded the scope of a traffic investigation following a stop of the defendant's car because neither the defendant nor the passenger were wearing seatbelts since the trooper asked the defendant numerous questions that were unrelated to the reason for the stop then asked for permission to search the defendant's pockets and found a vial with cocaine residue. State v. Gibbons, 248 Ga. App. 859, 547 S.E.2d 679 (2001).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion to suppress marijuana and cocaine that was found lying in plain site on the floorboard of the truck that defendant used by an officer who approached the truck, identified himself as a police officer, and asked defendant if the officer could speak with defendant, as the officer's approach to the vehicle was not a stop requiring reasonable suspicion, but rather was a first tier police-citizen encounter. Marion v.

State, 268 Ga. App. 699, 603 S.E.2d 321 (2004).

Search and Seizure Incident to Lawful Arrest

Purpose. — Searches incident to lawful custodial arrests comprise one of the narrow exceptions to the general principle that searches are unconstitutional unless authorized by a prior judicial warrant. The exception serves two purposes: (1) it allows the arresting officer to disarm the suspect, thus protecting the officer's safety and foreclosing the possibility of escape; and (2) the exception permits the officer to prevent the suspect from destroying evidence. A lawful incident search cannot extend beyond the perimeters established by these goals. United States v. Edwards, 554 F.2d 1331 (5th Cir. 1977), vacated on other grounds, 577 F.2d 883 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 968, 99 S. Ct. 458, 58 L. Ed. 2d 427 (1978).

Lawful arrest authorizes searches. — U.S. Const., amend. 4 protects against an unreasonable search all those suspected or known to be offenders as well as the innocent, and unquestionably extends to the premises where the search was made, but a search in connection with a lawful arrest is valid, although without a warrant. Barron v. State, 109 Ga. App. 786, 137 S.E.2d 690 (1964).

Legal search may be made incident to lawful arrest or by consent of the owner of the premises or property. Abrams v. State, 223 Ga. 216, 154 S.E.2d 443 (1967).

As general rule, search and seizure incident to arrest is reasonable if the arrest is lawful and the search is incident to the arrest in purpose, time, scope, and place. United States v. Ryan, 415 F.2d 847 (5th Cir. 1969).

A search without a warrant but incident to a lawful arrest may be lawful. Black v. State, 119 Ga. App. 855, 168 S.E.2d 916 (1969).

Where no contention is made that the arrest was not lawful, the search of the motor vehicle in which the defendant was a passenger for things connected with the crime for which the defendant was arrested was not unlawful. Lindsey v. State, 227 Ga. 48, 178 S.E.2d 848 (1970).

When, in the eyes of the law, a person is in detention, a search of the person and seizure of effects of a suspect in detention is incidental to such arrest and is reasonable. United States v. Jones, 352 F. Supp. 369 (S.D.

Search and Seizure Incident to Lawful Arrest (Cont'd)

Ga. 1972), aff'd, 481 F.2d 1402 (5th Cir. 1973).

Lawful arrest will authorize a search. United States v. Turner, 628 F.2d 461 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 988, 101 S. Ct. 2325, 68 L. Ed. 2d 847 (1981).

Search of defendant was authorized as incident to a lawful arrest, after the defendant and another person were observed by the arresting officer displaying crack cocaine as they were walking very closely together in a "well-known drug area." Jackson v. State, 197 Ga. App. 154, 397 S.E.2d 737 (1990).

Standing to contest validity of search. — Defense counsel was not ineffective in failing to file a motion to suppress the gun and knitted caps found in the car, as defendant, a passenger, lacked standing to contest the search of the car; further, the caps were found in a search of the car incident to a lawful arrest. Patterson v. State, 259 Ga. App. 630, 577 S.E.2d 850 (2003).

Validity of search depends on validity of arrest. — In order for the warrantless search to have been valid the arrest must have been legal. Where no reasonable cause for the defendant's arrest existed when the search was made and it was not made in connection with or incident to a lawful arrest without a warrant, then the search was unlawful. Hill v. State, 140 Ga. App. 121, 230 S.E.2d 336 (1976).

Federal constitutionality of search incident to arrest depends upon the constitutional validity of the arrest. Whether that arrest was constitutionally valid depends in turn upon whether, at the moment the arrest was made, the officers had probable cause to make it — whether at the moment the facts and circumstances within their knowledge and of which they had reasonably trustworthy information were sufficient to warrant a prudent person in believing that the petitioner had committed or was committing an offense. Vaughn v. State, 247 Ga. 136, 274 S.E.2d 479 (1981).

"Fruit of poisoned tree" doctrine. — Under the "fruit of the poisoned tree" doctrine, the search must fall, if the original arrest was invalid. Marshall v. State, 130 Ga. App. 572, 203 S.E.2d 885 (1974).

Incident search may not precede an arrest and serve as part of its justification. Hill v.

State, 140 Ga. App. 121, 230 S.E.2d 336 (1976).

Once the defendant is in custody, a search at another place is not incident to the arrest but must be treated as though it is in the defendant's or the defendant's agent's own possession, safe from intrusion. Hunter v. State, 127 Ga. App. 664, 194 S.E.2d 680 (1972).

Search must be contemporaneous with arrest. — Search is not permissible as incident to the arrest without warrant when it is not contemporaneous with it and conducted in an area within the immediate control of the prisoner, that is, an area so contiguous that the prisoner might gain control of a weapon, destroy evidence, and so on. Hunter v. State, 127 Ga. App. 664, 194 S.E.2d 680 (1972).

Search held contemporaneous to arrest. — Where defendant's arrest was lawful, the fact that the arresting officer took the time to write out two traffic tickets before searching defendant's vehicle did not render the search noncontemporaneous to the arrest. Oswell v. State, 181 Ga. App. 35, 351 S.E.2d 221 (1986).

Scope of search. — Except under exigent and unusual circumstances, a search incident to arrest can be held reasonable only for the purposes of preventing the defendant from access to a weapon or evidence which defendant may be desirous of destroying, and this usually limits the search to the defendant's person and clothing, and that very narrow area surrounding defendant where defendant might reach even though under restraint. Scott v. State, 122 Ga. App. 204, 176 S.E.2d 481 (1970).

Nature of offense for which accused is arrested has important bearing upon what objects may be seized as incidental to arrest. Abrams v. State, 223 Ga. 216, 154 S.E.2d 443 (1967); Scott v. State, 122 Ga. App. 204, 176 S.E.2d 481 (1970).

Areas subject to warrantless search at time of lawful arrest. — An officer at the time of lawful custodial arrest may, without a warrant, make a full search of the person of the accused, a limited area within the control of the person arrested, and of an automobile in the arrested person's possession at the scene of the arrest for the discovery and preservation of criminal evidence. Glover v. State, 139 Ga. App. 162, 227 S.E.2d 921 (1976).

Search of person. — Having lawfully placed the suspect under arrest, officers are authorized to search the suspect's person for the purpose of protecting themselves from attack or preventing the suspect from escaping. Coley v. State, 135 Ga. App. 810, 219 S.E.2d 35 (1975).

Once defendant has been placed under custodial arrest, police may search the defendant's person, incident to that arrest, for weapons or contraband. Graves v. State, 138 Ga. App. 327, 226 S.E.2d 131 (1976).

The authority to search the person incident to a lawful custodial arrest, while based upon the need to disarm and to discover evidence, does not depend on what a court may later decide was the probability in a particular arrest situation that weapons or evidence would in fact be found upon the person of the suspect. It is the fact of the lawful arrest that establishes the authority to search, and in the case of a lawful custodial arrest, a full search of the person is not only an exception to the warrant requirement amendment, but is also a reasonable search under U.S. Const., amend. 4. Graves v. State, 138 Ga. App. 327, 226 S.E.2d 131 (1976).

Officer at time of lawful custodial arrest may, without warrant, make full search of the person of the accused, a limited area within the control of the person arrested, and of an automobile in the defendant's possession at the scene of the arrest for the discovery and preservation of criminal evidence. Williams v. State, 150 Ga. App. 852, 258 S.E.2d 659 (1979).

Where a police officer was going to issue a citation to defendant for violating the local open container ordinance, and defendant became nervous after the officer noticed a bulge in defendant's pocket, the officer was fully authorized to conduct a pat-down search of defendant prior to placing defendant in the back of a patrol car, and once a .32 caliber revolver was discovered in defendant's rear pocket, probable cause existed for defendant's arrest, and the subsequent search which yielded the illegal contraband was permissible as a search incident to a lawful arrest. Mashburn v. State, 186 Ga. App. 488, 367 S.E.2d 881 (1988).

Search incident to arrest was proper, where the circumstances surrounding the arresting officer's response to a report of a drug sale were sufficient to establish probable cause for the arresting officer to believe that defendant possessed a controlled substance. Scott v. State, 201 Ga. App. 162, 410 S.E.2d 362 (1991).

Heimlich maneuver. — Use of a "Heimlich Maneuver" to remove suspected contraband from defendant's mouth did not violate U.S. Const., amend. 4. Merriweather v. State, 228 Ga. App. 246, 491 S.E.2d 467 (1997).

Officer hearing defendant state place for illegal activity. — Because officer actually heard the defendant state that the defendant would be at "Silver Creek" early the next morning with cocaine and law enforcement officers observed the defendant appear at "Silver Creek" early the next day, probable cause existed for the defendant's arrest, and the search of the defendant which resulted in the discovery of cocaine was lawfully conducted pursuant to a lawful warrantless arrest. State v. Hancock, 203 Ga. App. 577, 417 S.E.2d 381, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 907, 417 S.E.2d 381 (1992).

Search of surrounding area. — A search may extend beyond the person arrested to the place where the person is arrested in order to find and seize things connected with the crime, as its fruits, or as means by which it was committed, as well as weapons and other things to effect escape from custody; and a dwelling place where arrest is made may be subjected to search going beyond the room where the arrest was made. Cash v. State, 222 Ga. 55, 148 S.E.2d 420 (1966).

It is reasonable for officer to search area surrounding arrest area into which a suspect might reach to obtain a weapon. Banks v. State, 246 Ga. 178, 269 S.E.2d 450 (1980).

Where there was probative evidence that defendant was driving in excess of the lawful speed limit, there was evidence from which the trial court could reasonably conclude that the police officer did not overstep officer's bounds in stopping the defendant, arresting defendant for a traffic violation and conducting a protective search of the immediate vicinity of defendant's automobile. Kilgore v. State, 158 Ga. App. 55, 279 S.E.2d 239 (1981).

Where necessary, police arresting a suspect may conduct a protective sweep of the area to check for other persons who might pose a threat to the safety of the officers or the public. If the officers spot evidence during a protective sweep, they may seize it. United States v. Standridge, 810 F.2d 1034 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1072, 107 S. Ct. 2468, 95 L. Ed. 2d 877 (1987).

Search and Seizure Incident to Lawful Arrest (Cont'd)

Possessing an arrest warrant and probable cause to believe suspect was in the suspect's home, the officers were entitled to enter and to search anywhere in the apartment in which the suspect might be found. Until the suspect was found, the search for the suspect was not over, and there was still that particular justification for entering any place that had not yet been searched. State v. Wright, 204 Ga. App. 382, 419 S.E.2d 334, cert. denied, 204 Ga. App. 922, 419 S.E.2d 334 (1992).

Search of defendant's apartment could not be justified as a protective sweep since defendant was arrested just outside the front door and the evidence did not establish that the officers had reason to believe that any other person was present in the apartment at the time of the arrest. United States v. Sunkett, 95 F. Supp. 2d 1367 (N.D. Ga. 2000), aff'd, 264 F.3d 1146 (11th Cir. 2001).

Because the police were entitled to conduct a limited sweep of a residence to ensure their safety prior to obtaining consent to search and because the contraband was not discovered during the "protective sweep," the search did not violate the fourth amendment; consequently, the trial court properly denied defendant's motion to suppress. Nelson v. State, 271 Ga. App. 658, 610 S.E.2d 627 (2005).

Search of an automobile incident to a lawful arrest is proper. Cook v. Smith, 303 F. Supp. 90 (S.D. Ga. 1969), aff'd, 427 F.2d 1172 (5th Cir. 1970); Stephens v. Lindsey, 304 F. Supp. 203 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

If a police officer has made a lawful custodial arrest of the occupant of automobile, the officer may, as a contemporaneous incident of that arrest, search the passenger compartment of that automobile. Coley v. State, 177 Ga. App. 669, 341 S.E.2d 9 (1986); Fortson v. State, 201 Ga. App. 272, 410 S.E.2d 774 (1991), aff'd, 262 Ga. 3, 412 S.E.2d 833 (1992).

Because defendant was arrested on speeding and driving without a license or proof of insurance charges before the passenger compartment of the defendant's automobile was searched, the warrantless search was therefore legal so long as the arrest itself was legal. Dixon v. State, 180 Ga. App. 222, 348 S.E.2d 742 (1986).

Search of the defendant's automobile after the defendant had been handcuffed and was no longer in the car was valid, where the defendant was the subject of a lawful custodial arrest, and the search of the defendant's vehicle immediately followed the arrest. Sims v. State, 197 Ga. App. 214, 398 S.E.2d 244 (1990).

Where police officers had reasonable grounds to detain defendant and the defendant's companion briefly for the limited purpose of ascertaining their identity and conducting a driver's license and vehicle registration check, a search of their vehicle was authorized as a search incident to arrest. State v. Miller, 197 Ga. App. 99, 397 S.E.2d 508 (1990).

The search of the defendant's vehicle, after the defendant had been arrested for a traffic violation, resulting in the discovery of a .38 caliber revolver "stuffed down" between the front seat and the console, was justified as a search incident to a lawful arrest. Daniel v. State, 199 Ga. App. 180, 404 S.E.2d 466 (1991).

The contemporaneous, warrantless search of the interior of an automobile recently occupied by an arrestee is justified in order to secure any weapons that might be available to the arrestee and to prevent the concealment or destruction of evidence. Fortson v. State, 262 Ga. 3, 412 S.E.2d 833 (1992).

As the arresting officer had made a lawful custodial arrest of the defendant, the officer had authority to conduct, as a contemporaneous incident of that arrest, a warrantless search of the vehicle compartment of the automobile which defendant had just been operating. Barnett v. State, 204 Ga. App. 491, 420 S.E.2d 43 (1992).

The police had probable cause to make an immediate, warrantless search of the automobile seat back for cocaine whether exigency existed and regardless of whether the vehicle was then impounded, where defendant's voluntary admission against penal interest regarding the precise location of and nature of the drugs was corroborated adequately by the officer's observation of defendant's location and vantage point within the car. Barnett v. State, 204 Ga. App. 491, 420 S.E.2d 43 (1992).

The search of the defendant's car after defendant fled from a traffic stop and then attempted to flee on foot was permissible as a search incident to arrest. Scoggins v. State, 248 Ga. App. 1, 545 S.E.2d 19 (2001).

A search of an automobile was valid as an incident to a lawful custodial arrest although the defendant had been handcuffed and placed in a patrol car while the search was conducted. The decisive factor is whether the arrestee was, at the time of arrest, a recent occupant of the automobile, not whether the automobile and its contents were in the arrestee's immediate control at the time of the search. Scoggins v. State, 248 Ga. App. 1, 545 S.E.2d 19 (2001).

Once the passenger was placed under arrest, the officer could lawfully search the entire passenger compartment of the defendant's vehicle as a search incident to arrest. Tutu v. State, 252 Ga. App. 12, 555 S.E.2d 241 (2001).

Seizure of gun located inside passenger compartment of car in which appellant had been a passenger just before being arrested was not violative of fourth and fourteenth amendment rights. State v. Hopkins, 163 Ga. App. 141, 293 S.E.2d 529 (1982).

Search of defendant's briefcase was permissible as a search incident to a lawful arrest. Wade v. State, 184 Ga. App. 289, 361 S.E.2d 266 (1987).

Instrumentalities used in commission of crime may be seized at time of arrest without search warrant. Abrams v. State, 223 Ga. 216, 154 S.E.2d 443 (1967).

Where evidence showed that the defendant's cell phone was an instrumentality of the crime of cocaine trafficking and that the details of the drug transaction were arranged by telephone, the trial court did not err in denying the motion to suppress the search of the defendant's cell phone because the defendant's cell phone was confiscated during a lawful search incident to defendant's arrest and because it was an instrumentality of the crime that was probative of criminal conduct. Lopez v. State, 267 Ga. App. 532, 601 S.E.2d 116 (2004).

Removal of weapons. — It is reasonable that when lawful arrest is made the arresting officer may remove any weapons that the suspect might seek to use to try to resist arrest or to escape. Banks v. State, 246 Ga. 178, 269 S.E.2d 450 (1980).

Evidence found in search incident to lawful arrest is admissible. Evans v. State, 235 Ga. 396, 219 S.E.2d 725 (1975).

A search and seizure incident to a lawful arrest is valid although made without a warrant and evidence thus obtained is admissible at trial. Cook v. Smith, 303 F. Supp. 90 (S.D. Ga. 1969), aff'd, 427 F.2d 1172 (5th Cir. 1970); Stephens v. Lindsey, 304 F. Supp. 203 (S.D. Ga. 1969); United States v. Brown, 305 F. Supp. 299 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

While it has been held by standards of U.S. Const., amend. 4 that the search of premises under circumstances where the defendant is under lawful arrest is limited by its proximity to the defendant, and may thus be unreasonable where geographically removed, and while a search which is reasonable at its inception may violate U.S. Const., amend. 4 by virtue of its intolerable intensity and scope yet no one questions the right, without a search warrant, to search the person after a valid arrest. Yet, to be admissible, the evidence must have been obtained by means of a search and seizure reasonably related in scope to the justification for their initiation. Holtzendorf v. State, 125 Ga. App. 747, 188 S.E.2d 879 (1972).

Property that an arrestee takes with the arrestee to jail is subject to search under analysis similar to that allowing search incident to an arrest. Loden v. State, 199 Ga. App. 683, 406 S.E.2d 103 (1991).

Cocaine obtained during lawful arrest. — The fact that Drug Enforcement Administration agents suspected appellant of criminal conduct other than that for which the appellant was lawfully arrested is irrelevant to the legality of the arrest, and the cocaine discovered during a search pursuant to a lawful arrest was not an unlawful seizure within the proscription of U.S. Const., amend. 4. United States v. Pulvano, 629 F.2d 1151 (5th Cir. 1980).

Cocaine was seized in a valid search incident to arrest, where police officers noticed a bulge in the defendant's clothing that appeared not to be caused by the defendant's body and, in response to the officers' questions, the defendant began to perspire and pull the defendant's jacket together in front of the bulge. United States v. Tomaszewski, 833 F.2d 1532 (11th Cir. 1987).

Search and Seizure Incident to Lawful Arrest (Cont'd)

Marijuana obtained by warrantless search incident to warrantless arrest inadmissible. — Defendant may not be lawfully convicted of possessing marijuana obtained by a search without warrant that the defendant verbally protested, justified by an arrest without warrant and justified by a different crime discovered only by the defendant's "voluntary" statement after being stopped, seized, or detained without any probable cause whatever. Holtzendorf v. State, 125 Ga. App. 747, 188 S.E.2d 879 (1972).

Burden on state to show evidence obtained by illegal search was incident to lawful arrest. — Evidence obtained by illegal seizure and search of the defendant's person, by which the defendant is compelled to incriminate self, being inadmissible against a defendant accused of crime, the burden devolves upon the state to show that evidence obtained by search was procured after a legal arrest. Marshall v. State, 130 Ga. App. 572, 203 S.E.2d 885 (1974).

Inventory Searches

Purposes. — An inventory search serves three distinct purposes: the protection of personal property which may be in the automobile, the protection of the police against claims arising from property allegedly lost or stolen while the automobile is in police custody, and the protection of the police from possible danger. United States v. Edwards, 577 F.2d 883 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 968, 99 S. Ct. 458, 58 L. Ed. 2d 427 (1978).

Inventory searches. — Inventory searches are valid only because they may attain three goals: (1) they may protect the car owner's property while it remains in police custody; (2) they may protect the police against disputes over lost or stolen property; and (3) they may protect the police from danger. To be constitutionally permissible, an inventory search must be no more intrusive than necessary to respond to these goals alone. United States v. Edwards, 554 F.2d 1331 (5th Cir. 1977), vacated on other grounds, 577 F.2d 883 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 968, 99 S. Ct. 458, 58 L. Ed. 2d 427 (1978).

Inventory searches have two purposes: to protect the vehicle and the property in it; and to safeguard the police or other officers from claims of lost possessions. Garner v. State, 154 Ga. App. 839, 269 S.E.2d 912 (1980).

An inventory search serves three distinct purposes: the protection of personal property; the protection of the police against claims arising from property allegedly lost or stolen; and the protection of the police from possible danger. To prevent escape, self-injury, or harm to others, the police have a legitimate interest in separating the accused from the property found in the accused's possession. An inventory is then necessary both to preserve the property of the accused while the accused is in jail and to forestall the possibility that the accused may later claim that some item has not been returned to the accused. However, the inventory must not be done with an investigative intent, but it should be incident to the caretaking function of the police. Gaston v. State, 155 Ga. App. 337, 270 S.E.2d 877 (1980).

Consent not required for inventory search. — An inventory is not for the exclusive protection of the owner, but also serves to protect the police, and, therefore, it is not necessary that police ask a prisoner whether the prisoner wants the items to be inventoried. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

U.S. Const., amend. 4 is not violated when police take custody of property of persons they arrest to store that property for safekeeping. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

Custodial seizures and accompanying inventory searches are reasonable. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

Reasonableness of mere inventorial search. — Merely because the police are not searching with the express purpose of finding evidence of crime, they are not exempt from the requirements of reasonableness set down in U.S. Const., amend. 4. However, the real purpose of the inspection must be inventorial and nonpretextuous with an unexpected result insofar as turning up evidence is concerned. Lowe v. Hopper, 400 F. Supp. 970 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd, 520 F.2d 1405 (5th Cir. 1975).

Inventory searches that follow standard police procedure are reasonable. United States v. Wade, 564 F.2d 676 (5th Cir. 1977); United States v. Roberson, 897 F.2d 1092 (11th Cir. 1990).

Inventory searches are reasonable if conducted in accordance with standard police practice. United States v. Edwards, 577 F.2d 883 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 968, 99 S. Ct. 458, 58 L. Ed. 2d 427 (1978); Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979); Gaston v. State, 155 Ga. App. 337, 270 S.E.2d 877 (1980).

Unauthorized search based on informant's tip. — Inventory search of defendant's vehicle was not authorized, because the search was based on the tip of an informant who did not reveal the source of the information, nor was the information the informant provided sufficiently detailed to suggest that it was based on anything more substantial than mere rumor. Salter v. State, 198 Ga. App. 242, 401 S.E.2d 541 (1990); Polke v. State, 203 Ga. App. 306, 417 S.E.2d 22 (1992).

Evidence obtained under guise of inventory search. — Because a bag was placed in custody of another individual by defendant after the defendant's involvement in traffic accident (such individual putting it in the individual's apartment) and, additionally, because the defendant's friend was willing and able to take custody of the bag, the state could not premise seizure of the bag on necessity to protect it from being lost or stolen or to protect themselves; consequently, police conducted a warrantless investigatory search (without probable cause) under the guise of an inventory search, and the defendants' motion to suppress should have been granted. Gaston v. State, 155 Ga. App. 337, 270 S.E.2d 877 (1980).

If it is clear that police officers are conducting a warrantless investigatory search without probable cause under the guise of an inventory search, courts should refuse to allow such apparent subterfuges to erode the strictures of U.S. Const., amend. 4. The same is true of an "impulse" search that is not, at the time it occurs, a proper caretaking function of the police. Williams v.

State, 157 Ga. App. 476, 277 S.E.2d 923, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 823, 102 S. Ct. 109, 70 L. Ed. 2d 95 (1981).

Because a patrol officer briefly detained the unlicensed driver of a van to make an investigation of suspicious circumstances, and the trial record showed that a licensed passenger was allowed to drive the van from the location where the unlicensed driver was arrested to the sheriff's office and that a computer check gave the officer no reason to believe the van had been stolen, the subsequent impoundment and inventory of the van was not reasonably necessary, so that evidence discovered and seized as a result of the inventory was not admissible at trial. Reed v. State, 195 Ga. App. 821, 395 S.E.2d 294 (1990).

The absence of an impound inventory sheet should not have impacted a trial court's determination as to the admissibility of the evidence found during the search of the defendant's vehicle or whether the search violated the defendant's constitutional rights, and therefore, as a matter of law, the trial court erred in granting the defendant's motion to suppress. State v. Haddock, 235 Ga. App. 726, 510 S.E.2d 561 (1998).

Inventory rationale is one which may be abused and stretched to cover unnecessary searches; but even some suspicion that contraband will be found will not void an otherwise valid inventory search. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

Where a police officer in good faith, conducts an inventory search without any investigative intent, such search is not violative of defendant's constitutional rights and it is not error to deny defendant's motion to suppress. Carl v. State, 160 Ga. App. 464, 287 S.E.2d 379 (1981).

Mere expectation of uncovering evidence will not vitiate an otherwise valid inventory search. United States v. Roberson, 897 F.2d 1092 (11th Cir. 1990).

Officers immune from damages for improper inventory search. — Where the law as to inventory searches was not "clearly established" at the time FBI agents opened plaintiff's luggage, the agents were shielded from liability for damages as a matter of law. Sellers v. United States, 709 F.2d 1469 (11th Cir. 1983).

Inventory Searches (Cont'd)

Interests to be protected by reasonable inventory. — Only so long as the scope of the search is reasonable, taking into consideration the three interests to be protected by the inventory (the protection of the owner's property while it remains in police custody; the protection of police against claims or disputes over lost or stolen property; and the protection of the police from potential danger), will it be held to be a constitutionally permissible intrusion. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

Inventory-type search in executing writ of possession reasonable. — It was reasonable for state officials to conduct an inventory-type search in executing a writ of possession and to remove weapons, drugs, or other items that might endanger the public from the defendant's personal property before placing it on a public street. United States v. Reynolds, 726 F.2d 1536 (11th Cir. 1984).

Search held for inventory, not investigative purposes. — Because the evidence demanded a finding that an impoundment and an inventory of defendant's wrecked and deserted automobile were authorized and the trial court apparently so found and the impounding officer found a carrying case in the trunk which the officer opened, the trial court was not authorized to find that the actions of the officer who discovered the evidence constituted an unwarranted investigative search, rather than a valid inventory search, of the automobile, and the grant of defendant's motion to suppress evidence contained in the case was reversed. State v. Evans, 181 Ga. App. 422, 352 S.E.2d 599 (1986).

An inventory must not be done with an investigative intent, but it should be incident to the caretaking function of the police. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

Probable cause not required for inventory searches. — In circumstances involving non-criminal inventory searches, where probable cause to search is irrelevant, search warrants are not required, linked as the warrant requirement textually is to the probable cause concept. Garner v. State, 154 Ga. App. 839, 269 S.E.2d 912 (1980).

Validity of warrant based on inventory search. — Where an automobile inventory search is not illegal, a later search warrant, based upon this information, is not invalid. Anglin v. State, 244 Ga. 1, 257 S.E.2d 513 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Welch v. State, 254 Ga. 603, 331 S.E.2d 573 (1985).

Warrant which authorized the seizure of "all items contained within a specified room and motel at the time of the fire on February 17, 2001, and which remain therein which is evidence of the crime of Insurance Fraud" was not impermissibly vague because the warrant included detailed information about the removal of cats and a dog from defendant's home and the taking of those animals to the motel room prior to a fire at the home allegedly started by defendant's son with the knowledge and consent of defendant in the warrant application, an investigator testified that CD's, tapes, stereo equipment, and other electronics were witnessed being taken to the specified motel and room number and were noticeably absent from the fire scene, and an insurance investigator further testified that in a recorded statement, defendant said that there were no items removed from the house prior to the fire. Maddox v. State, 272 Ga. App. 440, 612 S.E.2d 484 (2005).

Criteria as to legality of impoundment of vehicle. — Where a defendant was arrested pursuant to a valid bench warrant while driving in Georgia with the defendant's spouse, where the federal agents impounded the car the defendant was driving and where the defendant challenged the motives of the arresting officers in impounding the defendant's vehicle when it was not impeding traffic or otherwise presenting a hazard to the public and when the defendant specifically but unsuccessfully requested to be allowed to make arrangements for its disposition, the critical question was not whether the police needed to impound the vehicle in some absolute sense, or could have effected an impoundment more solicitously, but whether the decision to impound and the method chosen for implementing that decision were, under all the circumstances, within the realm of reason. Sammons v. Taylor, 967 F.2d 1533 (11th Cir. 1992).

Impounded vehicle. — No search warrant is necessary to inspect an impounded vehicle because such inspections are reasonable and do not violate the rights of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects. United States v. Jones, 432 F.2d 773 (5th Cir. 1970).

Warrantless search of automobile at police station after arrest elsewhere is constitutionally permissible, although the persons under arrest were in custody at the time and there was ample opportunity to obtain a warrant. United States v. Edwards, 441 F.2d 749 (5th Cir. 1971).

Automobiles coming into lawful custody of police may be searched without warrant for purpose of inventorying the contents and providing for their safekeeping, without having probable cause to believe that evidence of a crime will be discovered. United States v. Edwards, 441 F.2d 749 (5th Cir. 1971).

Police procedure in conducting an inventory upon impounded motor vehicles is not an unreasonable search in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 4. Hall v. State, 143 Ga. App. 706, 240 S.E.2d 125 (1977).

When vehicles are impounded, police routinely follow caretaking procedures by securing and inventorying the cars' contents. These procedures have been widely sustained as reasonable under U.S. Const., amend. 4. Martasin v. State, 155 Ga. App. 396, 271 S.E.2d 2 (1980).

After the lawful initial stop and arrest of defendant, a subsequent inventory search of a defendant's automobile, which revealed additional contraband, is proper where defendant makes no request to retrieve the vehicle but, instead, voluntarily acquiesces to an officer's driving the automobile to the police station to be impounded. Kilgore v. State, 158 Ga. App. 55, 279 S.E.2d 239 (1981).

Inventory search authorized both as search of properly impounded vehicle and as search incident to lawful arrest. See State v. Gilchrist, 174 Ga. App. 499, 330 S.E.2d 430 (1985).

A police officer's decision to impound a car and to conduct an inventory search was upheld where the car was involved in a parking lot collision; the defendant was arrested after driving with a suspended driver's license and a license tag issued to another vehicle and driving without insurance; the officer was unable to reach anyone locally who could take custody of the car; and other alternatives to impoundment would have incurred the risk of theft or damage to the car or its contents. State v. Gilchrist, 174 Ga. App. 499, 330 S.E.2d 430 (1985).

Inventory search was lawful after defendant was arrested and the defendant's car was impounded for improper tag registration. Dillard v. State, 177 Ga. App. 805, 341 S.E.2d 310 (1986).

An inventory search is appropriate whenever the police department selects the towing vehicle rather than the defendant in order to protect the police against claims of lost or stolen property. Fortson v. State, 201 Ga. App. 272, 410 S.E.2d 774 (1991).

Because police officers decided that it was unsafe to leave the defendant's vehicle at the place where the defendant was arrested because it would cause a road hazard the next morning since it would be blocking the driveway of a bank, the action of the officers in impounding and inventorying the vehicle was reasonable when measured against the fourth amendment's interest in protecting the individual's right to privacy. Martin v. State, 201 Ga. App. 716, 411 S.E.2d 910 (1991).

A police officer had the legal right to impound a parked vehicle occupied by the defendant at the time the officer learned of an improper license plate, and an ensuing search was justified either as an onsite inventory search or under the inevitable discovery doctrine. United States v. Williams, 936 F.2d 1243 (11th Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 503 U.S. 912, 112 S. Ct. 1279, 117 L. Ed. 2d 504 (1992).

Where there were no passengers in defendant's car and defendant was ineligible to further drive the car because of lack of a valid driver's license, and the car was in a dangerous position on the roadway, it had to be moved for safety's sake. Choosing impoundment was reasonably necessary to safeguard defendant's property, protect the public by removing the roadway obstruction, and prevent exposure of the officer to potential danger. Williams v. State, 204 Ga. App. 372, 419 S.E.2d 351 (1992).

Where a vehicle was lawfully impounded following the defendant's arrest and the tools in question were included in the inventory of the items contained in the car, the seizure of these particular items was authorized although the warrant on which the search was based neither mentioned them nor contained any information suggesting that they had been used in the commission of a crime. Day v. State, 203 Ga. App. 186, 416 S.E.2d 548 (1992).

Inventory Searches (Cont'd)

Where at the time of the defendant's arrest, the defendant was living on leased premises in a remote mountain location, and the defendant's lessor actually requested and assisted in the vehicle's removal, the action of the officers in impounding and inventorying the vehicle was lawful. Moulder v. State, 207 Ga. App. 335, 427 S.E.2d 793 (1993).

An inventory search of defendant's truck following impoundment was not illegal since the police department had a long standing policy that all parts of a vehicle were to be inventoried, including all containers. Staley v. State, 224 Ga. App. 806, 482 S.E.2d 459 (1997).

The validity of an inventory search hinges on the legality of the decision to impound a car, which must be made according to standard criteria and on the basis of something other than suspicion of evidence of criminal activity; therefore, because the officer's decision to impound an automobile was not made in accordance with police guidelines but was motivated by a desire to find incriminating evidence, the inventory search of the car was invalid. United States v. Skinner, 957 F. Supp. 228 (M.D. Ga. 1997).

Even though a vehicle did not pose a hazard to other drivers since it was parked off the road and on private property, the vehicle and its contents were exposed to a risk of theft or damage and impoundment was reasonably necessary. Scott v. State, 232 Ga. App. 337, 501 S.E.2d 255 (1998).

Contents of an impounded vehicle are routinely inventoried to protect the property of the owner, protect the officers against claims for lost or stolen property, and protect the police from potential danger, and the validity of such conduct is not dependent upon the absolute necessity for the police to take charge of property to preserve it, but depends instead on whether the police conduct was reasonable under the fourth amendment in light of the circumstances confronting the police at the time; thus, police were authorized to impound and later perform a routine inventory of defendant's car where defendant was arrested at the home of a friend in connection with a murder and the disappearance of defendant's spouse, defendant's car was at the home of the friend, and police knew that defendant had been planning to leave the state with the friend and that defendant's car was wanted in an investigation in another county, because, under the circumstances, the police had reason to believe that defendant's detention would be lengthy and the officers were not required to trust that the car would remain untouched if they left it at the friend's home. Wright v. State, 276 Ga. 454, 579 S.E.2d 214 (2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1106, 124 S. Ct. 1059, 157 L. Ed. 2d 892 (2004).

Time limit for removal of vehicle. — Impoundment and inventory search of defendant's vehicle, pursuant to a police department policy requiring an arrestee's vehicle to be removed within 15 minutes, was not unreasonable as a matter of law. Gooden v. State, 196 Ga. App. 295, 395 S.E.2d 634 (1990).

Unreasonable impoundment and inventory. — Because the defendant's car was being towed away by a wrecking service of the defendant's choice to a destination of the defendant's choice and the defendant was present and physically capable of making arrangements for the safekeeping of the defendant's belongings, there was no justification for police intrusion in the form of an inventory search. Such a search was unreasonable under U.S. Const., amend. 4. State v. Travitz, 140 Ga. App. 351, 231 S.E.2d 127 (1976).

Unless the rationale for an inventory search inheres in the decision to seize and inventory, the impoundment itself may be unreasonable and the resulting inventory search invalid. Garner v. State, 154 Ga. App. 839, 269 S.E.2d 912 (1980).

After an automobile owner has been arrested and the police allow a private party to drive the car home, any subsequent search and impoundment of the vehicle without a warrant constitutes an illegal search and seizure. Phillips v. State, 167 Ga. App. 260, 305 S.E.2d 918 (1983).

Where a driver was arrested and a reliable friend was present who was authorized and capable of removing the vehicle, the rationale for impoundment did not exist, making the impoundment unreasonable and resulting inventory search invalid. Strobhart v. State, 165 Ga. App. 515, 301 S.E.2d 681 (1983).

Areas of automobile subject to inventory search. — In conducting an inventory search pursuant to standard police practice, an officer may search those places within an automobile where, under the facts of the particular case, the officer can reasonably conclude that personal property may be located. United States v. Edwards, 577 F.2d 883 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 968, 99 S. Ct. 458, 58 L. Ed. 2d 427 (1978).

Police, in conducting an inventory search, may ordinarily inspect the glove compartment, the trunk, on top of the seats as well as under the front seats, and the floor of the automobile. An inspection of these areas is reasonable because these are common locations in or on which it is reasonably to be expected that the owner or occupant of an automobile may place items of personalty. The intrusion, although serious, is justified by the need to protect the property of the owner, and to protect the police from claims. This is to say no more than in the typical case it is not unreasonable for the police to search such places while conducting an inventory. Arnold v. State, 155 Ga. App. 581, 271 S.E.2d 714 (1980).

When police take custody of any sort of container, such as automobile, it is reasonable to search the container to itemize the property to be held by the police. Garner v. State, 154 Ga. App. 839, 269 S.E.2d 912 (1980).

Circumstances not justifying inventory search. — When the driver of a motor vehicle is arrested and a reliable friend is present, authorized, and capable of removing an owner's vehicle which is capable of being safely removed, it is unnecessary for the police to impound the car and the rationale for an inventory search does not exist. Therefore, impoundment and search under these circumstances would be a serious intrusion upon rights provided by U.S. Const., amend. 4. State v. Lubvick, 147 Ga. App. 784, 250 S.E.2d 503 (1978); Fortson v. State, 262 Ga. 3, 412 S.E.2d 833 (1992).

Where the driver of a motor vehicle is arrested and a reliable friend is present, authorized, and capable of removing an owner's vehicle which is capable of being safely removed; or where the arrestee expresses a preference as to towing service and designates an appropriate carrier and destination for the vehicle, it is unnecessary for the police to impound it. In either of these instances, the rationale for an inventory search does not exist. Mulling v. State, 156 Ga. App. 404, 274 S.E.2d 770 (1980).

Even though police, rather than the arrestee had selected the towing service, an inventory search was not appropriate in order to protect the police against claims of lost or stolen property. Fortson v. State, 262 Ga. 3, 412 S.E.2d 833 (1992).

Circumstances under which police may take charge of property. — Police seizure and inventory are not dependent for their validity upon the absolute necessity for the police to take charge of property to preserve it. They are permitted to take charge of property under broader circumstances than that. Garner v. State, 154 Ga. App. 839, 269 S.E.2d 912 (1980).

Validity of seizure and inventory not dependent on necessity to take charge of property. — A police seizure and inventory is not dependent for its validity upon the absolute necessity for the police to take charge of property to preserve it. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

In circumstances involving noncriminal inventory searches, search warrants are not required, linked as the warrant requirement textually is to the probable cause concept. This is so because the salutary functions of a warrant simply have no application in that context; the constitutional reasonableness of inventory searches must be determined on other bases. Carl v. State, 160 Ga. App. 464, 287 S.E.2d 379 (1981).

Civil seizure of house does not justify inventory search. — The government's lawful seizure of a house in connection with pending civil forfeiture proceedings did not entitle the government to conduct an inventory search of the house's contents over the objection of the tenant occupying the house. United States v. Ladson, 774 F.2d 436 (11th Cir. 1985).

Once lawfully within a house, officers are authorized to make a search of the entire house for the limited purpose of securing it, i.e., discovering the presence of all occupants and eliminating the possibility of harm to the officers and the destruction of evidence. State v. Camp, 175 Ga. App. 591, 333 S.E.2d 896 (1985).

Inventory Searches (Cont'd)

Evidence adduced from inventory of property reported stolen admissible. — Where police recovered property defendant reported stolen and conducted a routine inventory to determine whether the property was in fact defendant's, incriminating evidence found during the inventory was properly admitted at trial against the defendant because the inventory was conducted in good faith and was a reasonable search and seizure. Ledesma v. State, 251 Ga. 885, 311 S.E.2d 427, cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1241, 104 S. Ct. 3510, 82 L. Ed. 2d 819 (1984).

Subsequent reading of documents found in inventory search justified under "second glance doctrine". — Where one officer pursuant to a valid and proper inventory had read and called attention to a death note found in defendant's possessions and where the discovery and disclosure of the note were appropriate police actions, the subsequent acts of other officers, in rereading and perusing the documents in question were plainly justified under the "second glance doctrine." Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

Inventory of shopping bag was reasonable. — Where police officers acting in good faith and while carrying out an inventory procedure without investigative intent, discovered and read "death note" contained in defendant's open ended shopping bag, the search was deemed reasonable and, therefore, was not violative of the defendant's rights. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

Heroin obtained during inventory search admissible. — Heroin discovered by police officers conducting an inventory of the contents of an automobile in order to remove the valuables for safekeeping while the owner was under arrest was admissible and was not obtained as the result of an unreasonable search and seizure. Denson v. State, 128 Ga. App. 456, 197 S.E.2d 156 (1973).

Search valid as items inevitably discovered. — Even though exigent circumstances did not require a search of defendant's locked briefcase, the contents thereof would have been inevitably discovered in an inventory search, and therefore, defendant's motion to suppress was properly denied. Taylor v. State, 228 Ga. App. 325, 491 S.E.2d 417 (1997).

Consent Searches1. In General

Facts of every case must be examined in light of the "reasonable expectation of privacy" test. Only after it is determined that the aggrieved party did not have such expectations do the more traditional consent tests come back into play. Braddock v. State, 127 Ga. App. 513, 194 S.E.2d 317 (1972).

Probable cause and warrant not required. — Search conducted with one's consent need not meet the probable cause and warrant requirements of U.S. Const., amend. 4. United States v. Sihler, 562 F.2d 349 (5th Cir. 1977); Curry v. State, 144 Ga. App. 129, 240 S.E.2d 280 (1977); Green v. State, 242 Ga. 261, 249 S.E.2d 1 (1978), rev'd on other grounds sub nom. Green v. Georgia, 442 U.S. 95, 99 S. Ct. 2150, 60 L. Ed. 2d 738 (1979); Williams v. State, 151 Ga. App. 833, 261 S.E.2d 720 (1979); Murphy v. State, 155 Ga. App. 128, 270 S.E.2d 335 (1980); Witt v. State, 157 Ga. App. 564, 278 S.E.2d 145 (1981); Crews v. State, 170 Ga. App. 104, 316 S.E.2d 549 (1984); Weaver v. State, 178 Ga. App. 91, 341 S.E.2d 921 (1986); Allen v. State, 191 Ga. App. 623, 382 S.E.2d 690 (1989); Ramirez v. State, 192 Ga. App. 255, 384 S.E.2d 279 (1989); Calixte v. State, 197 Ga. App. 723, 399 S.E.2d 490 (1990).

A valid consent eliminates the need for either probable cause or a search warrant, and only if the issue of consent is decided adversely to the state need the trial court consider the issue of probable cause. State v. Bassford, 183 Ga. App. 694, 359 S.E.2d 752 (1987).

Even though a state police officer had no probable cause and nothing more than a general suspicion that there might be contraband in the car, one of the exceptions to the requirement of both a warrant and probable cause is a search conducted pursuant to consent, and even if the defendant was detained beyond the time minimally necessary to investigate the circumstances that caused the initial stop, the defendant's consent authorized the search of the car the defendant was driving. Raney v. State, 186 Ga. App. 758, 368 S.E.2d 528 (1988); Hunter v. State, 190 Ga. App. 52, 378 S.E.2d 338, cert. denied, 190 Ga. App. 898, 378 S.E.2d 338 (1989).

Consensual search upon a traffic stop for a seatbelt violation supported the trial court's denial of a motion to suppress, as the search conducted pursuant to the defendant's consent was not a search based solely on the defendant's failure to wear a seatbelt; thus, the trial court did not err by ruling that law enforcement did not violate the fourth amendment during an officer's traffic stop for a violation of O.C.G.A. § 40-8-76.1. Blitch v. State, 281 Ga. 125, 636 S.E.2d 545 (2006).

Search must be within scope of consent.

— Consensual searches are reasonable only if kept within the bounds of the actual consent given. Mason v. Pulliam, 557 F.2d 426 (5th Cir. 1977).

Search of defendant's shoes did not exceed the scope of the consent given to search because defendant responded to a permissible police inquiry by voluntarily consenting to a search of defendant's person and bags and the agents were still within the scope of consent given when the police found evidence amounting to probable cause to search defendant's shoes. Perez v. State, 249 Ga. App. 399, 547 S.E.2d 699 (2001).

In a drug case, a court erred by suppressing evidence found on defendant, a passenger in a validly stopped car, where pursuant to a valid request to search for drugs after drugs were seen in the car, defendant voluntarily consented to the search of defendant's person. State v. Gooch, 266 Ga. App. 746, 598 S.E.2d 341 (2004).

Search pursuant to probation agreement lawful. — The lack of a probation officer's involvement in a warrantless search pursuant to a probational agreement did not violate defendant's constitutional rights given the express language of that agreement and the investigative officer's good faith suspicion of drug transacting. State v. Bethune, 207 Ga. App. 340, 427 S.E.2d 795 (1993).

Scope of search may be limited by individual consenting to search. — If an individual gives consent to a search of the individual's vehicle, then that individual may limit the scope of the search. In those cases in which no limitation is placed on the consent, a police officer is allowed the discretion to conduct a complete search, including closed containers. United States v. Harris, 716 F. Supp. 1470 (M.D. Ga. 1989), aff'd, 928 F.2d 1113 (11th Cir. 1991).

Scope of search proper. — A police officer did not exceed the proper scope of a search to which the defendant consented since: (1) officers asked the defendant and others whether they had any weapons, including needles; (2) the defendant was then asked individually if defendant could be searched for weapons or similar objects; (3) the defendant agreed and gave no indication that the officer could not empty defendant's pockets in conducting the search. McNeil v. State, 248 Ga. App. 70, 545 S.E.2d 130 (2001).

Search of curtilage. — Defendant's consent to search the defendant's house impliedly included consent to search the curtilage, in which a "hobo," or garbage can, was located. Woods v. State, 258 Ga. 540, 371 S.E.2d 865 (1988).

Continuing nature of consent. — Legally obtained consent for search continues throughout the duration of the search unless revoked. Conley v. State, 180 Ga. App. 662, 350 S.E.2d 45 (1986); Miller v. State, 183 Ga. App. 55, 357 S.E.2d 876 (1987); Beguiristain v. State, 187 Ga. App. 164, 369 S.E.2d 774 (1988).

Defendant's failure to limit scope of search. — Police officer did not exceed the scope of the defendant's consent by searching luggage in the trunk of the defendant's car, where the defendant was physically present while the officer searched the car and had ample opportunity to limit the scope of the search or request that it be discontinued. United States v. Harris, 928 F.2d 1113 (11th Cir. 1991).

Evidence supported court's determination that search of defendant's vehicle following consent at police roadblock did not exceed scope of consent. See Kan v. State, 199 Ga. App. 170, 404 S.E.2d 281, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 906, 404 S.E.2d 281 (1991).

Consent may have retroactive effect. — Although a police officer entered a suspect's premises before consent to search was given but discovered stolen items on the premises after the consent was given, the officer's presence was authorized at the time of discovery, and the discovered items could not be suppressed. Atkins v. State, 173 Ga. App. 9, 325 S.E.2d 388 (1984), aff'd, 254 Ga. 641, 331 S.E.2d 597 (1985).

Consent Searches (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Manifestation of consent can be by word or deed. United States v. Bowles, 625 F.2d 526 (5th Cir. 1980).

Mere submission to claim of lawful authority is not consent. — The state's burden of proving that the necessary consent was freely and voluntarily given is not satisfied by showing a mere submission to a claim of lawful authority. Garcia v. State, 200 Ga. App. 741, 409 S.E.2d 683 (1991).

Because a passenger in a car was not informed of the right to refuse to consent of a search of the passenger's purse and did not give any express consent but merely remained silent, the trial court did not err in finding that the cocaine found in the passenger's purse was the product of a non-consensual search. State v. Harris, 236 Ga. App. 525, 513 S.E.2d 1 (1999).

Sufficient evidence to support nonverbal consent to patdown. — See Borda v. State, 187 Ga. App. 49, 369 S.E.2d 327 (1988).

Because there was no evidence contesting the police officers' testimony that defendant consented to a search by gestures, the totality of the circumstances supported the trial court's determination that defendant consented to the search; consequently, the trial court properly denied defendant's motion to suppress. Galvan v. State, 270 Ga. App. 282, 605 S.E.2d 919 (2004).

A voluntary consent to search does not remove the taint of an illegal seizure; rather, voluntariness is merely a threshold requirement. United States v. Robinson, 625 F.2d 1211 (5th Cir. 1980), rev'd on other grounds, 690 F.2d 869 (11th Cir. 1982).

Consent cannot be product of illegal detention. — In order to eliminate any taint from an involuntary seizure or arrest preceding a consent to search, there must be proof both that the consent was voluntary and that it was not the product of illegal detention. Proof of a voluntary consent alone is not sufficient. The relevant factors include the temporal proximity of an illegal seizure and consent, intervening circumstances, and the purpose and flagrancy of the official misconduct. Brown v. State, 188 Ga. App. 184, 372 S.E.2d 514 (1988).

Consent search of a bag in defendant's possession and consent search of defendant's residence was tainted by illegality of stop of defendant where defendant's consent to the search came within fifteen minutes of the illegal stop, there were no intervening circumstances between the initiation of the illegal detention and the consent, the stop of defendant was not based on suspicious behavior, and the defendant was not informed of the right to refuse consent to the search nor given any appreciable time to decide whether to give consent to the search. United States v. Momodu, 909 F. Supp. 1571 (N.D. Ga. 1995).

Coercive question by officer. — Because a police officer approached the appellee and asked if the officer could search appellee, the officer stated that the officer did not need a search warrant, and because the appellee's testimony demonstrated that the appellee had construed the officer's statement in the coercive sense (the appellee had acquiesced only because the officer stated that the officer didn't need a warrant to search), the cocaine was the inadmissible product of a nonconsensual "seizure" by the officer rather than the admissible product of appellee's consent to be searched. State v. Westmoreland, 204 Ga. App. 312, 418 S.E.2d 822 (1992).

Inviting officer into home. — There was no fourth amendment violation where defendant implicitly consented to police officer's presence on the defendant's property by inviting officer into the defendant's home and even if the officer technically trespassed on defendant's property this of itself did not constitute an illegal search. Ball v. Georgia, 733 F.2d 1557 (11th Cir. 1984).

Although police officer's initial entry into defendant's residence to discuss information the officer had with defendant regarding defendant's allegedly having drugs around defendant's residence was illegal because the officer's entry was not authorized, the officer's subsequent act in leaving and in being invited to enter again after defendant got out of the bathroom was sufficiently attenuated from the officer's initial illegal entry that the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion to suppress after defendant consented to a search of defendant's property and defendant showed police where drugs were hidden, as the officer's second entry into the residence was at defendant's request. Brown v. State, 261 Ga. App. 351, 582 S.E.2d 516 (2003).

Where officer never sought defendant's permission to enter apartment, defendant could not possibly have consented to the intrusion. The notion of "implied consent" advanced in support of this type of search has no basis within the context of U.S. Const., amend. 4. Clare v. State, 135 Ga. App. 281, 217 S.E.2d 638 (1975).

Permission to search car obtained after arrest. — Where the evidence showed that after defendant was stopped for speeding and found to be without a driver's license, the defendant followed the trooper to the sheriff's office in order to post a cash bond, and while that process was taking place, the trooper decided to seek defendant's consent to search the defendant's car, and when defendant was about to leave after posting bond, the trooper asked the defendant to sign a written permission and defendant complied, defendant failed to show the consent was illegally obtained. Partridge v. State, 187 Ga. App. 325, 370 S.E.2d 173 (1988), cert. denied, 187 Ga. App. 908, 370 S.E.2d 173 (1988).

Motorist was precluded from challenging legality of consent search of the motorist's vehicle, because, not only did the motorist fail to manifest a subjective expectation of privacy in suitcases containing marijuana, the motorist affirmatively disavowed any such expectation. United States v. McBean, 861 F.2d 1570 (11th Cir. 1988).

Implied consent from acceptance of continued employment. — Under circumstances in which one voluntarily accepts and continues employment which subjects the person to search on a routine basis, such search is made with the person's consent. United States v. Sihler, 562 F.2d 349 (5th Cir. 1977).

Seizure of a robbery weapon pursuant to a consent search is proper. Cantrell v. State, 237 Ga. 851, 230 S.E.2d 287 (1976).

Proof of consent when subject of search not in custody. — When the subject of a search is not in custody and the state attempts to justify a search on the basis of the person's consent, U.S. Const., Amends. 4 and 14 require that it demonstrate that the consent was in fact voluntarily given, and not the result of duress or coercion, express or implied. Brand v. State, 129 Ga. App. 747, 201 S.E.2d 180 (1973).

Effect of laws of property and agency. — U.S. Const., amend. 4 protects people, not places; only the aggrieved person or expressly authorized agent may waive the person's rights; any power to consent to a search derived from traditional and subtle distinctions in the law of property or agency cannot override that expectation of privacy upon which an individual justifiably relies. With no reasonable expectation of privacy in the premises, however, the consent of another with equal or superior possessory or property interests is then sufficient to validate the search. Braddock v. State, 127 Ga. App. 513, 194 S.E.2d 317 (1972).

Observing evidence of crime prior to consent. — The fruits of a search of the defendant's premises, by a conservation ranger looking for deer carcasses, conducted with the defendant's consent, were admissible. The legality of such a search was not vitiated because, prior to obtaining consent, the ranger had observed the evidence of the crime by walking around the side of the house. State v. Sutton, 258 Ga. 382, 369 S.E.2d 249 (1988).

Evidence admissible where obtained from consensual, though otherwise illegal, search. — When the defendant grants permission to an otherwise illegal search (whether the defendant "gives up" and admits guilt, or whether the defendant feels that by expressing unconcern defendant may yet escape detection) and on request defendant personally unlocks the automobile, gives the keys to the officers, or expresses verbal permission for the search to be made, a waiver results, and evidence gained therefrom is admissible. Young v. State, 113 Ga. App. 497, 148 S.E.2d 461 (1966).

Warrant issued based on searches voluntarily given is valid. — If a defendant's consent to the first two searches was freely and voluntarily given, the subsequent search warrant, the issuance of which was based on the evidence obtained from the first two searches, was valid. Kosal v. State, 204 Ga.

Consent Searches (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

App. 708, 420 S.E.2d 621 (1992).

Where information imparted to appellant was in fact underlying, if mistaken, basis for officers' request for permission to search, such circumstances do not demonstrate that the appellant's consent was obtained by officers' deceit. Suddeth v. State, 162 Ga. App. 460, 291 S.E.2d 430 (1982).

Denial of motion not error where search consented to. — Where defendant consents to a search of defendant's car at the time of the defendant's arrest and later signs a consent to search, the trial court does not err in denying defendant's motion to suppress the evidence seized from the defendant's car inasmuch as the defendant voluntarily consented to the search. Thompson v. State, 157 Ga. App. 600, 278 S.E.2d 62, aff'd, 248 Ga. 343, 285 S.E.2d 685 (1981).

Reason on consent form other than reason for investigatory stop. — Because there was no evidence that the defendant was misled about the purpose of the search or that the evidence seized was used for any purpose other than that to which the defendant consented, the fact that the officer indicated on the consent form that the search was in connection with an investigation of a drug crime when the traffic stop was purportedly for a license violation did not invalidate the consent. State v. Harris, 236 Ga. App. 525, 513 S.E.2d 1 (1999).

Condition of probation. — The defendant's waiver of fourth amendment right to be free from unreasonable search and seizure was consented to and was a valid condition of probation since the defendant was informed of the waiver at sentencing in the presence of counsel, who did not object. Johnson v. State, 248 Ga. App. 454, 546 S.E.2d 562 (2001).

Traffic stop. — Where defendant was free to go after a valid traffic stop, was not unreasonably detained or asked numerous questions unrelated to the traffic stop, defendant's constitutional rights were not violated when a police officer requested consent to search a car and defendant was subsequently convicted of trafficking in cocaine. Daniel v. State, 260 Ga. App. 732, 580 S.E.2d 682 (2003), aff'd, 277 Ga. 840, 597 S.E.2d 116 (2004).

Summary judgment was denied to a pursuing deputy sheriff and the supervisor in an arrestee's 42 U.S.C. § 1983 suit because ramming the arrestee's car during a high-speed chase, causing an accident that left the arrestee a quadriplegic, constituted a fourth amendment seizure; the pair did not have qualified immunity because the supervisor authorized the deputy to use excessive force without knowing the minor nature of the arrestee's traffic offense. Harris v. Coweta County, F. Supp. 2d , 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27348 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 25, 2003).

There was no fourth amendment violation under circumstances in which, during the course of a traffic stop, the officer asked the defendant to get out of the car for safety reasons and asked the defendant for consent to search the car before completing the traffic citation and obtaining information on the status of the defendant's license, which consent was given by the defendant. Salmeron v. State, 280 Ga. 735, 632 S.E.2d 645 (2006).

Consent not valid. — Trial court did not err in granting defendant's motion to suppress evidence of cocaine found during a search incident to a traffic stop because defendant's consent to search was not valid where defendant was under arrest for loud music; the fact that defendant was nervous after being stopped by a state trooper was not in and of itself sufficient articulable suspicion which would result in probable cause to search defendant's vehicle. State v. McCloud, 261 Ga. App. 37, 581 S.E.2d 679 (2003).

2. Who May Consent

Consent of head of household. — It is the general rule that the voluntary consent of the head of a household to the search of premises owned or controlled by the head of the household is sufficient to authorize a search of the premises without a search warrant, and such search does not violate the constitutional prohibition against unreasonable searches and seizures. Tolbert v. State, 224 Ga. 291, 161 S.E.2d 279, cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1005, 89 S. Ct. 493, 21 L. Ed. 2d 468 (1968); Montgomery v. State, 155 Ga. App. 423, 270 S.E.2d 825 (1980); Crawford v. State, 181 Ga. App. 454, 352 S.E.2d 635 (1987).

Where the defendant's spouse, the sole lessee of an apartment, called the police because their children had been stabbed, invited them into the home, and then left, entrusting it to the police, and later gave written consents to search, the trial court properly denied the defendant's motion to suppress evidence found during searches of the apartment. Caldwell v. State, 260 Ga. 278, 393 S.E.2d 436 (1990).

Owner of house with whom defendant lives may consent to search of area not specifically set aside for such occupant. United States v. Jones, 352 F. Supp. 369 (S.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 481 F.2d 1402 (5th Cir. 1973).

Consent of spouse. — When a wife reported a domestic disturbance at the marital residence, and told responding officers that her husband used cocaine, after which the husband refused the officers' request for consent to search the residence, the wife's subsequent grant of such consent did not authorize a search, and the officers were required to obtain a warrant, as the husband was reasonably entitled to expect that his wife would honor his refusal, and the "common authority" allowing her to consent to a search also allowed him to assert a right to be free from a search on behalf of all occupants of the residence. Randolph v. State, 264 Ga. App. 396, 590 S.E.2d 834 (2003).

Where a divorce decree gave the defendant's ex-spouse the right to unobstructed access to the defendant's house to remove the ex-spouse's property, the warrantless entry into the basement by a police officer accompanying the ex-spouse, based on the ex-spouse's consent, was authorized and not in violation of the defendant's fourth amendment rights. Despite the fact that the defendant had padlocked the basement door and that the defendant was not present, the trial court properly refused to suppress evidence found by the officer in plain view in the basement. Bray v. State, 265 Ga. App. 886, 595 S.E.2d 687 (2004).

Sibling's consent to search of defendant's bedroom in sibling's apartment. — Defendant's sibling, who was the lessee of an apartment, could consent to a search of the entire apartment, including the bedroom where the defendant was staying; lessee did not give up control and authority of the apartment merely by allowing the defendant to stay in one of its bedrooms and accepting money from the defendant and the lessee did not give up the right to object to the defendant's use of the lessee's home for illegal purposes. Ford v. State, 214 Ga. App. 284, 447 S.E.2d 334 (1994).

Former roommate and landlord unable to consent to search. — Neither a roommate who had moved out of apartment prior to search nor landlord before the defendant/tenant had abandoned the apartment, could, absent certain exigent circumstances, consent to a warrantless search of the defendant's apartment. Browning v. State, 176 Ga. App. 420, 336 S.E.2d 41 (1985).

Ten-year-old child did not have sufficient authority to validly consent to the search of child's parents' home. Davis v. State, 262 Ga. 578, 422 S.E.2d 546 (1992).

Validity of consent. — A warrantless search based on consent that would not satisfy the test set out in U.S. v. Matlock, 415 U.S. 164, 94 S. Ct. 988, 39 L. Ed. 2d 242 (1974), could nonetheless be upheld if the law enforcement officer conducting the search reasonably (albeit erroneously) believed the consent given was valid. Resolution of this issue requires a determination by the factfinder, applying an objective standard, that the facts available to the officer at the time of the search would warrant one of reasonable caution in the belief that the consenting party had authority over the premises. State v. Stewart, 203 Ga. App. 829, 418 S.E.2d 110 (1992).

Officer's warrantless entry into the defendant's home and bedroom was a search requiring a valid consent, but the trial court did not consider the relevant factors in deciding if the defendant's 14-year-old child gave a valid consent to such a search; the trial court's order suppressing evidence seized during the search was vacated, and the case was remanded with directions to consider the relevant factors. State v. McKinney, 268 Ga. App. 296, 601 S.E.2d 777 (2004).

Consent by co-inhabitant insufficient. — Since defendant was present and refused to consent to a warrantless search of defendant's residence, the search was invalid even though defendant's co-inhabitant consented to the search. State v. Randolph, 278 Ga. 614, 604 S.E.2d 835 (2004), aff'd, U.S. , 126 S. Ct. 1515, 164 L. Ed. 2d 208 (2006).

Resident cannot consent to search of travel bag of temporary guest. — As a resident of a house, who voluntarily consented to a search by law enforcement personnel, did not have "common authority" over a travel bag of a temporary guest, the resident's consent was ineffective to authorize a search of it, and the agent conducting the search, who deduced that the bag belonged to one of two guests, should have sought consent of the believed owners, both of whom were on the scene. United States v. Gilley, 608 F. Supp. 1065 (S.D. Ga. 1985).

Consent Searches (Cont'd)2. Who May Consent (Cont'd)

Search of another's premises. — Since U.S. Const., amend. 4 protects persons, not places, one cannot object to the searching of another's premises or property if the latter consents to the search, even though property is found for the possession of which defendant is subsequently prosecuted. Cook v. State, 134 Ga. App. 712, 215 S.E.2d 728 (1975).

Third-party consent. — The state may show that permission to search was obtained from a third party who possessed common authority over or other sufficient relationship to the premises or effects sought to be inspected. Park v. State, 154 Ga. App. 348, 268 S.E.2d 401 (1980).

Consent may be given by a third party, if the third party has a sufficient relationship to the premises. Witt v. State, 157 Ga. App. 564, 278 S.E.2d 145 (1981).

A warrantless search is justified when permission is obtained from a third party who possesses common authority over, or other sufficient relationship to, the premises sought to be inspected. Rucker v. State, 250 Ga. 371, 297 S.E.2d 481 (1982).

When the prosecution seeks to justify a warrantless search by proof of voluntary consent, it is not limited to proof that consent was given by the defendant, but may show that permission to search was obtained by a third party who possessed common authority over or other sufficient relationship to the premises or effects sought to be inspected. Cargill v. State, 255 Ga. 616, 340 S.E.2d 891 (1986), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1101, 107 S. Ct. 1328, 94 L. Ed. 2d 180 (1987); Pupo v. State, 187 Ga. App. 765, 371 S.E.2d 219 (1988).

An officer's belief that a third party has authority to consent to the search of another person's property should not only be based on information previously obtained in the officer's investigation, but should also be based on the facts and circumstances existent at the time of the search. State v. Oliver, 183 Ga. App. 92, 357 S.E.2d 889 (1987).

The authority that justifies the third-party consent does not rest upon the law of property but rests rather on mutual use of the property by persons generally having joint access or control for most purposes. State v. Oliver, 183 Ga. App. 92, 357 S.E.2d 889 (1987).

Consent of defendant's stepchild to enter and search the stepchild's apartment, and of defendant's spouse to search a suitcase over which the spouse had common authority with the defendant, was sufficient authorization to police to search the suitcase. Johnson v. State, 266 Ga. 140, 464 S.E.2d 806 (1996).

Sharer of defendant's bedroom may consent. — The rape and child molestation victim's parent could consent to a search of the bedroom which the defendant and the parent shared. Calloway v. State, 199 Ga. App. 272, 404 S.E.2d 811 (1991).

Effect of relinquishing possession of automobile to third party. — Where the owner or lessee of an automobile relinquishes actual possession to a third party, the owner or lessee thereby abandons any expectation of privacy in the automobile, and the owner or lessee therefore lacks standing to contest the legality of the search and seizure of the vehicle. Reinhardt v. State, 197 Ga. App. 825, 399 S.E.2d 729 (1990).

The defendant had sufficient authority to consent to the search of a car, where the evidence showed the car was leased in the name of an individual who was not in the car and a check conducted by the patrol officer who had stopped the vehicle for a traffic offense revealed the return of the car was overdue. Gossett v. State, 199 Ga. App. 286, 404 S.E.2d 595, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 906, 404 S.E.2d 595 (1991).

Consent given by third person, under age of majority, not necessarily invalid. — Where consent to search a suspect's residence is given by another person, which person is under the age of majority, the fact of minority alone will not render the consent invalid; rather, each case will be considered in light of the minor's age, address, right of access to the premises, and right to invite others onto the premises. Atkins v. State, 173 Ga. App. 9, 325 S.E.2d 388 (1984), aff'd, 254 Ga. 641, 331 S.E.2d 597 (1985).

A child under the age of 18 can give a valid consent to search the child's mother's house. Atkins v. State, 254 Ga. 641, 331 S.E.2d 597 (1985).

A minor child's age, address, right of access, and right of invitation determine whether that child can give a valid consent to search the child's mother's house. Atkins v. State, 254 Ga. 641, 331 S.E.2d 597 (1985).

Validity of third-party consent where defendant absent. — Where the absent target of the search and the consenting third party do not have common authority over and mutual use of premises, the third party has the right to permit inspection in the third party's own right and the absent target has assumed the risk that the third party may grant this permission to others. Fears v. State, 152 Ga. App. 817, 264 S.E.2d 284 (1979).

Consent by third party to turn over luggage to police. — Where an individual, in whose car defendant's luggage was placed prior to the defendant's arrest, was torn between two unattractive alternatives — keeping the unwanted luggage or turning it over — and finally decided to take a police receipt and gave it to the police, the individual's consent was voluntary and effective. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 101 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

Consent by apartment complex employees. — Because there was evidence that would authorize the trial court to find that, at the time that the entries by the police officer occurred, the defendant had neither leased nor was residing in the apartment, and that the defendant had no contractual rights in the premises which were in any way superior to those of the apartment complex employees, the evidence seized was the product of lawful searches conducted pursuant to the valid consent of the apartment complex employees. Green v. State, 187 Ga. App. 373, 370 S.E.2d 348, cert. denied, 187 Ga. App. 907, 370 S.E.2d 348 (1988).

Parent's consent to take defendant's gun. — Because the record showed that defendant's parent voluntarily consented to allow a police officer to take the defendant's gun and even asked that the officer not return it, the fact that the parent's consent may have occurred after the officer seized the gun did not render the search and seizure invalid. State v. McBride, 261 Ga. 60, 401 S.E.2d 484 (1991).

Consent to search of rental car by renting party and rent payor valid as to renter. — Because the defendant did not own the car searched but had rented it on behalf of another person, the other person made the rental payments, the other person maintained possession of the car and used it, while the defendant rode in it only occasionally, and there was both an implied consent to open the car from the other person who may have had a legitimate expectation of privacy in its contents, as well as an express authority in the agent of the vehicle's owner to re-take possession of it under the contract of rental, the argument that the warrantless search without the defendant's permission violated the defendant's interest in the privacy of the vehicle and was thus illegal was without merit. Little v. State, 180 Ga. App. 359, 349 S.E.2d 248 (1986).

Bus passengers. — Bus passenger freely consented to detectives' search after they boarded the bus, explained that they were attempting to stem the flow of illicit drugs and firearms, and then asked passengers if they would consent to a random search of their baggage. United States v. Fields, 909 F.2d 470 (11th Cir. 1990).

Where a party to communication consents to another's listening to and recording the party's conversation, no search or seizure is involved. U.S. Const., amend. 4 does not protect a wrongdoer from the risk that the party's companions may be reporting to the police. Ansley v. Stynchcombe, 480 F.2d 437 (5th Cir. 1973).

Requiring consent to such a search as a condition of parole is not unreasonable. Dean v. State, 151 Ga. App. 847, 261 S.E.2d 759 (1979).

3. Voluntariness

Consent waives objection to evidence. — Free and voluntary consent that one's belongings be searched is a waiver of objection to the evidence produced as a result of the search. Young v. State, 113 Ga. App. 497, 148 S.E.2d 461 (1966).

If undisputed evidence shows that a person freely and voluntarily authorized a search of that person's automobile, the person cannot complain of an illegal search and seizure. Hightower v. State, 228 Ga. 301, 185 S.E.2d 82 (1971).

Consent Searches (Cont'd)3. Voluntariness (Cont'd)

Consent must be voluntary. — Consent to search without a warrant must be given unequivocally, specifically, and intelligently. United States v. Jones, 352 F. Supp. 369 (S.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 481 F.2d 1402 (5th Cir. 1973).

The defendant's acquiescence to a repeated order to show officers the contents of the defendant's watch pocket could not be construed as voluntary consent, since acquiescence is not a substitute for free consent. Corley v. State, 236 Ga. App. 302, 512 S.E.2d 41 (1999).

Defendant's spouse was coerced into giving consent to a police search of the residence, and the trial court did not err in granting defendant's motion to suppress; the notion of "implied consent" advanced in support of the search had no basis within the context of fourth amendment rights. State v. Fulghum, 261 Ga. App. 594, 583 S.E.2d 278 (2003).

Consent to search must be the product of an essentially free and unrestrained choice by its maker. Williams v. State, 151 Ga. App. 833, 261 S.E.2d 720 (1979).

Search with consent is one undertaken with knowledge and without objection by accused. Consent, once legally obtained, ought to continue until revoked or otherwise withdrawn. Ferguson v. Caldwell, 233 Ga. 887, 213 S.E.2d 855 (1975).

Knowledge that consent may be withheld. — Waiver of fourth amendment rights is invalid unless person consenting knows that permission may be freely withheld. United States v. Jones, 352 F. Supp. 369 (S.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 481 F.2d 1402 (5th Cir. 1973).

Constitution does not require proof of knowledge of a right to refuse as the sine qua non of an effective consent to a search. United States v. Bowles, 625 F.2d 526 (5th Cir. 1980).

Although a warning that a party was free to decline to consent to a search is not required in order to validate consent to a search, knowledge is highly relevant in the voluntariness determination. United States

v. Robinson, 625 F.2d 1211 (5th Cir. 1980), rev'd on other grounds, 690 F.2d 869 (11th Cir. 1982).

Specific advice as to constitutional guaranty against unreasonable search need not precede a request that a suspect consent to search. While the search is not invalidated thereby as a matter of law, consent is not lightly assumed in the case of search and seizure. United States v. Jones, 352 F. Supp. 369 (S.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 481 F.2d 1402 (5th Cir. 1973).

Fact that appellant was not advised of the appellant's right to refuse permission to conduct a search does not require finding that the appellant's consent was coerced. Suddeth v. State, 162 Ga. App. 460, 291 S.E.2d 430 (1982).

It is not essential to the validity of a consent search that the individual be informed of the individual's right to refuse. Mann v. State, 196 Ga. App. 730, 397 S.E.2d 17 (1990).

It is not essential to validity of consent to search automobile that owner be told that the owner has the right to refuse. Woodruff v. State, 233 Ga. 840, 213 S.E.2d 689 (1975).

Factors as to voluntariness. — There are three factors to be considered in determining whether voluntary consent was obtained by exploitation of an illegal seizure: the temporal proximity of the seizure and the consent; the presence of intervening circumstances; and, particularly, the purpose and flagrancy of the official misconduct. United States v. Robinson, 625 F.2d 1211 (5th Cir. 1980), rev'd on other grounds, 690 F.2d 869 (11th Cir. 1982).

Voluntariness is a question of fact to be determined from all the circumstances, and while the subject's knowledge of a right to refuse is a factor to be taken into account, the prosecution is not required to demonstrate such knowledge as a prerequisite to establishing a voluntary consent. Brand v. State, 129 Ga. App. 747, 201 S.E.2d 180 (1973).

Test as to whether consent to search was freely given is the "totality of the circumstances" under Schnecko v. Bustamonte, 412 U.S. 218, 93 S. Ct. 2041, 36 L. Ed. 2d 854 (1973) and United States v. Scott, 578 F.2d 1186 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 870, 99 S. Ct. 201, 58 L. Ed. 2d 182 (1978). Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 101 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979); United States v. Bowles, 625 F.2d 526 (5th Cir. 1980); United States v. Robinson, 625 F.2d 1211 (5th Cir. 1980), rev'd on other grounds, 690 F.2d 869 (11th Cir. 1982); United States v. Pulvano, 629 F.2d 1151 (5th Cir. 1980); United States v. Berd, 634 F.2d 979 (5th Cir. 1981); United States v. Williams, 647 F.2d 588 (5th Cir. 1981).

Voluntariness of consent to search is question of fact to be determined from totality of the circumstances, and an appellate court should not overturn a trial court's holding on this question unless it is clearly erroneous. United States v. Troutman, 590 F.2d 604 (5th Cir. 1979); State v. Norrington, 203 Ga. App. 574, 417 S.E.2d 203 (1992), cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 907, 417 S.E.2d 203 (1992).

If defendant voluntarily consented to the police search, then the search was valid. Voluntariness is a question to be determined from the totality of the circumstances, and the Court of Appeals will not disturb the trial court's determination on appeal unless it is clearly erroneous. United States v. Smith, 649 F.2d 305 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 460 U.S. 1068, 103 S. Ct. 1521, 75 L. Ed. 2d 945 (1983).

Voluntariness of consent to search is determined by looking to the totality of the circumstances, including such factors as the age of the accused, the accused's education, the accused's intelligence, length of detention, whether the accused was advised of the accused's constitutional rights, prolonged nature of questioning, use of physical punishment, and psychological impact of all these factors on the accused. Dean v. State, 250 Ga. 77, 295 S.E.2d 306 (1982); Noland v. State, 178 Ga. App. 486, 343 S.E.2d 763 (1986); State v. Norrington, 203 Ga. App. 574, 417 S.E.2d 203 (1992), cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 907, 417 S.E.2d 203 (1992).

Whether there was a valid consent to search is a matter exclusively within the province of the factfinder, the trial court, and where, after a full exposure of the facts, the trial court finds consent for a search, that finding must be accepted by the court of appeals unless clearly erroneous. Conley v. State, 180 Ga. App. 662, 350 S.E.2d 45 (1986).

Whether there is a valid consent to search is a matter exclusively within the province of the factfinder, the trial court. Unless clearly erroneous, the trial court's ruling on disputed facts and credibility at a suppression hearing must be accepted on appeal. Allen v. State, 200 Ga. App. 326, 408 S.E.2d 127, cert. denied, 200 Ga. App. 895, 408 S.E.2d 127 (1991).

Burden is on prosecution to show voluntariness of consent to warrantless search by clear and convincing evidence. United States v. Jones, 352 F. Supp. 369 (S.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 481 F.2d 1402 (5th Cir. 1973).

Whether consent to search was freely given is issue on which state must carry burden of proof. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

Where the state seeks to justify a warrantless search on grounds of consent, it has the burden of proving that the consent was freely and voluntarily given. State v. Norrington, 203 Ga. App. 574, 417 S.E.2d 203, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 907, 417 S.E.2d 203 (1992).

Burden when consent given after illegal stop. — When trying to establish that there was a voluntary consent to carry out a search after an illegal stop, the government has a much heavier burden to carry than when the consent is given after a permissible stop. United States v. Troutman, 590 F.2d 604 (5th Cir. 1979).

Proof of voluntary consent. — The consent which opens the doors of a private home to official search and seizure cannot be deemed voluntary unless it be made clearly to appear that it was freely and intelligently given, not expressly or impliedly coerced. Ray v. United States, 84 F.2d 654 (5th Cir. 1936).

Voluntary consent and plain view doctrine. — Whatever is observed by a police officer in a legally correct location as a person voluntarily complies with a request for owner's registration papers confirming an oral statement of ownership falls within the plain view doctrine. An officer's limited use of a flashlight to illuminate the interior of a glove compartment as a person voluntarily complies with a request for owner's registration papers does not prevent the application of the plain view doctrine. Caito v. State, 130 Ga. App. 831, 204 S.E.2d 765 (1974).

Consent Searches (Cont'd)3. Voluntariness (Cont'd)

Effect of preliminary refusal in later decision to consent. — Appellant's refusal to give consent to a search prior to arrest, while a factor to be considered in evaluating the voluntariness of the appellant's later decision to give consent, was not determinative. Because the defendant consented to search of suitcase after being read the defendant's Miranda rights for the second time and after being advised that the defendant could refuse consent, and because the defendant considered the options for two to three minutes before giving consent, and because there was no suggestion that threats, promises, or coercion were used to obtain the defendant's consent to the search, there was no search and seizure within the proscription of U.S. Const., amend. 4. United States v. Pulvano, 629 F.2d 1151 (5th Cir. 1980).

Voluntariness of consent to accompany agents. — The question whether a party's consent to accompany agents was in fact voluntary or was the product of duress or coercion, express or implied, is to be determined by the totality of all the circumstances, and is a matter which the government has the burden of proving. United States v. Fry, 622 F.2d 1218 (5th Cir. 1980).

Voluntary consent by probationer to searches. — Because a person voluntarily agrees, as a condition of probation, to the possibility that periodic "shake down" searches may be conducted, the person consents to a search of the individual's person, the individual's property, and the individual's room, and waives rights under U.S. Const., amend. 4. Dean v. State, 151 Ga. App. 847, 261 S.E.2d 759 (1979).

Voluntariness of consent by prisoner in police custody. — A prisoner in police custody by reason of an illegal arrest is in no position to refuse to comply with the demands of the officer in whose custody the prisoner is placed, whether such demand is couched in the language of a police request or a direct order. Consent to a search in such a situation is not truly voluntary and the search is illegal. Hill v. State, 140 Ga. App. 121, 230 S.E.2d 336 (1976).

The mere fact that defendant was under arrest at the time the defendant gave consent to the search of the defendant's garment bag did not establish that the consent was made involuntarily or by coercion. Mann v. State, 196 Ga. App. 730, 397 S.E.2d 17 (1990).

Consent to search given while under arrest is not per se void as being coerced. Mitchell v. State, 178 Ga. App. 244, 342 S.E.2d 738 (1986).

Coercion not established by mere fact of arrest. — The mere fact that an accused is under legal arrest when the consent to a search is given does not establish the consent was made involuntarily or by coercion. Wright v. State, 189 Ga. App. 441, 375 S.E.2d 895 (1988).

Subtly coercive questions and person's possibly vulnerable state affect voluntariness. — Voluntary consent to a search is a question of fact to be determined from the totality of the circumstances and, in evaluating the circumstances, account must be taken of subtly coercive police questions, as well as the possibly vulnerable subjective state of the person who consents. Jonas v. City of Atlanta, 647 F.2d 580 (5th Cir. 1981).

Consent obtained after expression of desire for counsel. — Even accepting the fact that the consent to search was obtained after the defendant indicated a desire to have counsel before questioning, that alone was not enough to mandate a finding of coercion where the defendant had declined the invitation to use the phone and had said that there was nothing to hide. Hill v. State, 183 Ga. App. 654, 360 S.E.2d 4 (1987).

Belief that there is no alternative to consent. — A detention does not escape the strictures of the fourth amendment merely because an individual who reasonably felt that the individual had no alternative to compliance mouthed some pro forma words of consent. United States v. Elsoffer, 671 F.2d 1294 (11th Cir. 1982).

Consent to search was invalid and drugs found in the course of the search were suppressed, where police officer requested permission to search the defendants' car after their traffic stop had been fully concluded; under the circumstances, the owner would not have imagined being free to refuse permission. Gonzales v. State, 255 Ga. App. 149, 564 S.E.2d 552 (2002).

Implicitly coercive nature of a uniformed police officer's request that suspect accompany officer may exert pressure on the individual to acquiesce. Such acquiescence cannot, of course, substitute for free consent. McQuirter v. City of Atlanta, 572 F. Supp. 1401 (N.D. Ga. 1983), appeal dismissed, 724 F.2d 881 (11th Cir. 1984).

Although house was surrounded by police, this does not ipso facto require a finding of coercion. Suddeth v. State, 162 Ga. App. 460, 291 S.E.2d 430 (1982).

Consent not voluntary where forcible entry threatened. — The testimony of the defendant's parent that the parent gave a house key to the police only because they threatened forcible entry if the parent did not do so supported the court's ruling that the parent's consent to search the house was not freely and voluntarily given. State v. Davis, 261 Ga. 225, 404 S.E.2d 100 (1991).

Taxpayer's consent to examination of financial affairs. — Internal revenue service agent's alleged characterization of taxpayer's examination as "routine audit" did not vitiate taxpayer's consent to provide information, where the examination of the taxpayer's financial affairs did not have its genesis in a secret criminal investigation. United States v. Piper, 681 F. Supp. 833 (M.D. Ga. 1988).

Surrender of bag upon request. — Because the police officer asked the defendant what was in the defendant's bag, upon which the defendant voluntarily surrendered the bag to the officer, there is no possible interpretation of the evidence except that the defendant tacitly consented to inspection of the bag and there was no illegal search or seizure. State v. Turntime, 170 Ga. App. 740, 318 S.E.2d 157 (1984).

Trial court did not err in determining that the consent to the search of the defendant's automobile was voluntary and evidence obtained not excludable as the product of duress or coercion where the arresting officer testified that officer was requested to look out for a green and white Thunderbird automobile occupied by two black individuals armed with shotguns and believed to be dangerous, the vehicle was located and the officer noticed a shotgun on the right-hand passenger seat, the defendant was arrested and given the mandatory Miranda warnings which the defendant indicated were understood, when asked if the property in the vehicle belonged to the defendant, the defendant replied that everything in the car belonged to the defendant and gave the officer permission to search, and, on cross-examination, it was determined that the defendant fully cooperated with the officers conducting the search. Williams v. State, 165 Ga. App. 553, 301 S.E.2d 908 (1983).

The defendant's constitutional rights were not violated because the officer testified that the officer issued the defendant a warning ticket for improper lane change, explained to the defendant the effect of a warning ticket, and then told the defendant that the defendant was free to go but during the officer's conversation with the defendant, however, certain discrepancies arose that caused the officer to suspect that the defendant might be involved with drug smuggling and after the defendant granted permission and signed a consent to search form, the officer searched the car and found cocaine under the passenger seat. Lowe v. State, 214 Ga. App. 92, 446 S.E.2d 532 (1994).

Implied consent found in a licensing system covers only the property of the licensee. Braddock v. State, 127 Ga. App. 513, 194 S.E.2d 317 (1972).

Consent by implication in operation of licensing programs. — There is an exception to constitutional requirement for search warrant where consent is given by implication in the operation of accepted licensing programs. Braddock v. State, 127 Ga. App. 513, 194 S.E.2d 317 (1972).

Implied consent by sublicensee. — If one party is making profits by the interstate operation of the party's vehicle under another's permit, that party is, in effect, a sublicensee, and is subject to the same regulation, methods of enforcement, and principles of determination of the existence of implied consent. Braddock v. State, 127 Ga. App. 513, 194 S.E.2d 317 (1972).

Voluntary consent held shown. — Because the record indicated without contradiction that the defendant intelligently and voluntarily consented to the search of the defendant's possessions after being fully informed that the defendant had a right to refuse the search, the trial court was authorized to find that valid consent had been given. McShan v. State, 155 Ga. App. 518, 271 S.E.2d 659 (1980); Lopez v. State, 184 Ga. App. 31, 360 S.E.2d 722, cert. denied, 184 Ga. App. 910, 360 S.E.2d 722 (1987); Smith v. State, 184

Consent Searches (Cont'd)3. Voluntariness (Cont'd)

Ga. App. 304, 361 S.E.2d 215 (1987); Jones v. State, 184 Ga. App. 328, 361 S.E.2d 693 (1987); Garcia v. State, 207 Ga. App. 653, 428 S.E.2d 666 (1993).

The trial court's finding the fact of consent, and that the consent was freely and voluntarily given, was supported by the evidence. Langston v. State, 202 Ga. App. 431, 414 S.E.2d 676 (1992).

The trial court was correct in finding that defendant's consent to search was freely and voluntarily given where defendant's initial consent combines with the fact that once the officers began talking with the defendant they learned that defendant had no driver's license or insurance, observed that defendant appeared to have been drinking, and saw the bag of marijuana at defendant's feet. Martin v. State, 204 Ga. App. 782, 420 S.E.2d 645 (1992).

In an action for arson, the defendant's contention that the presence of several fire department officials was so oppressive as to require a finding of coercion, was rejected because defendant testified that the defendant's wife and a friend, who spoke excellent English were present while the defendant talked with the fire department investigator and that the defendant understood the defendant was not under arrest. Thus, defendant's consent to the search was freely and voluntarily given. Kosal v. State, 204 Ga. App. 708, 420 S.E.2d 621 (1992).

The defendant's consent to a search of the defendant's person was not involuntary, notwithstanding the contention that an officer represented that a warrant to search would be obtained if consent was refused but that probable cause to secure the warrant did not exist, since (1) a GBI agent's response to the defendant's query regarding how long the defendant would be detained — "as long as it's going to take me to write a search warrant and to find a judge to sign the warrant" — simply did not fall within the category of last ditch ploys aimed at avoiding the requirement for a probable cause determination before a magistrate; and (2) the details of a tip from a reliable informant were corroborated by the personal observations of the investigating agents and, therefore there was probable cause for a warrantless search. Solomon v. State, 237 Ga. App. 655, 513 S.E.2d 520 (1999).

When defendant, after being properly stopped for a traffic violation, was asked for consent to search defendant's vehicle and replied, "I don't care," none of the circumstances surrounding the consent showed it was involuntary, as a videotape of the encounter showed no hint of fear, intimidation, coercion or deceit, there was no evidence of a lengthy detention, and defendant suffered no physical punishment; therefore, an officer's failure to advise the defendant of the defendant's constitutional rights did not invalidate the consent, as questioning was limited to defendant's lack of a valid driver's license, whether defendant had drugs in the car, and whether defendant consented to a search. Goodman v. State, 272 Ga. App. 639, 613 S.E.2d 190 (2005).

Because defendant was not detained or subjected to prolonged questioning or physical punishment, the police officers were lawfully on the premises, explained the basis for their suspicion, and asked for permission to search defendant's pants, defendant's consent to the search was voluntary; consequently, the trial court erred in granting defendant's motion to suppress. State v. Kinsey, 272 Ga. App. 723, 613 S.E.2d 232 (2005).

Voluntary consent held not shown. — In the context of an airport stop, the government did not carry its burden of showing, by exceptionally clear evidence, that a defendant consented to accompany a Drug Enforcement Agency agent to an airport office to be searched where the agent retained the defendant's ticket and driver's license at least through the point at which the agent elicited the defendant's consent and the agent's statements about investigating for drugs easily could have induced the defendant to believe that the defendant's refusal to go to the office would lead only to formal detention. United States v. Robinson, 690 F.2d 869 (11th Cir. 1982).

The superior court was authorized to consider the absence of any attempt by the deputy to advise the defendant of the defendant's constitutional rights along with the defendant's testimony that the defendant did not believe that the defendant had any right to refuse to consent to the search in determining that the state had failed to satisfy its burden of showing that the consent to search was, in fact, freely and voluntarily given. State v. Norrington, 203 Ga. App. 574, 417 S.E.2d 203, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 907, 417 S.E.2d 203 (1992).

Because the defendant was in illegal detention, was never informed of the right to refuse a search of the defendant's person, and never otherwise expressly indicated the defendant's consent but merely said that "[the defendant] understood," there was no valid consent to search as a matter of law. Rogers v. State, 206 Ga. App. 654, 426 S.E.2d 209 (1992).

Plain View

Elements of plain view doctrine. — Police officer free to use and seize what the officer sees in plain sight if the officer is at a place where the officer is entitled to be. Green v. State, 127 Ga. App. 713, 194 S.E.2d 678 (1972); Mahar v. State, 137 Ga. App. 116, 223 S.E.2d 204 (1975), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 323, 50 L. Ed. 2d 291 (1976).

An exception to the warrant requirement of U.S. Const., amend. 4 is the "plain view" doctrine, which holds that evidence obtained in a warrantless seizure is admissible if inadvertently discovered by an officer rightfully in a position that afforded full view of the evidence. United States v. Bright, 471 F.2d 723 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 412 U.S. 921, 93 S. Ct. 2742, 37 L. Ed. 2d 148 (1973).

A police officer is free to use and seize what the police officer sees in plain sight if the police officer is at a place where the police officer is entitled to be and if exigent circumstances exist that justify a warrantless seizure. Walker v. State, 130 Ga. App. 860, 205 S.E.2d 49 (1974).

What the "plain view" cases have in common is that the police officer in each of them had a prior justification for an intrusion in the course of which the officer came inadvertently across a piece of evidence incriminating the accused. The doctrine serves to supplement the prior justification — whether it be a warrant for another object, hot pursuit, search incident to lawful arrest, or some other legitimate reason for being present unconnected with the search directed against the accused — and permits the warrantless seizure. Extension of the original justification is legitimate only if it is immediately apparent to the police that they have evidence before them; the plain view doctrine may not be used to extend a general exploratory search from one object to another until something incriminating at last emerges. Harp v. State, 136 Ga. App. 897, 222 S.E.2d 623 (1975).

The plain view exception to U.S. Const., amend. 4's requirement of probable cause is conditioned upon the requirement that the police officer have a prior justification for an intrusion in the course of which the officer comes inadvertently across a piece of evidence incriminating the accused. United States v. Robinson, 535 F.2d 881 (5th Cir. 1976).

Where officers received a tip that a crime was being committed, investigated but discovered appellant, who corresponded to the tip, legally stopped appellant, and discovered, in plain view, paraphernalia readily identifiable as that commonly used in the crime the informant had reported, there was probable cause to arrest and to seize the evidence. Stiggers v. State, 151 Ga. App. 546, 260 S.E.2d 413 (1979).

The plain view doctrine is in reality a supplement to, or extension of, the original justification for the search, rather than a mere exception to the warrant requirement. In re Southeastern Equip. Co. Search Warrant, 746 F. Supp. 1563 (S.D. Ga. 1990).

In order for a plain-view seizure to be considered a valid extension of the original justification for the search, three requirements must be met. First, the searching agents must lawfully be in the position where they viewed the disputed evidence, whether that original justification arose from a valid warrant or any of the other exceptions to the warrant requirement. Second, the searching agents must inadvertently discover the disputed evidence. Third, the incriminating nature of the disputed evidence must be immediately apparent on its face. In re S.E. Equip. Co. Search Warrant, 746 F. Supp. 1563 (S.D. Ga. 1990).

Contraband lawfully found in plain view need not be ignored and can be seized. Samuel v. State, 198 Ga. App. 558, 402 S.E.2d 325 (1991).

The plain view doctrine will support a warrantless search and seizure if the agents are lawfully in position to obtain the view, the discovery is inadvertent, and the object viewed is immediately seen to be incriminating. Samuel v. State, 198 Ga. App. 558, 402 S.E.2d 325 (1991).

Plain View (Cont'd)

To be admissible under the plain-view doctrine, the items must be seized by an officer (1) who has an independent justification for being in a position from which the items can be viewed; (2) who discovers the items inadvertently; and (3) to whom it is immediately apparent that the items are evidence. United States v. Moody, 763 F. Supp. 589 (M.D. Ga. 1991), aff'd, 977 F.2d 1420 (11th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 507 U.S. 944, 113 S. Ct. 1348, 122 L. Ed. 2d 729 (1993).

"Plain feel" principle. — Where experienced officer believed the object in defendant's pocket was a clear plastic baggie containing contraband upon initially feeling it in defendant's pocket and then visually observed a portion of the baggie protruding from the pocket, the "plain feel" corollary to the "plain view" doctrine applied, namely, that if contraband is identified through an officer's sense of touch in the course of a lawful patdown, it may be seized. Seaman v. State, 214 Ga. App. 878, 449 S.E.2d 526 (1994).

The "plain feel" doctrine was exceeded and the contraband seized should have been suppressed because an officer patted down the defendant during a traffic stop and felt an object in the defendant's pocket that the officer could not identify, but knew was not a weapon, and then removed the object which the officer discovered was a plastic bag containing marijuana. Boatright v. State, 225 Ga. App. 181, 483 S.E.2d 659 (1997).

During the execution of a search warrant at a residence where defendant was visiting, the sheriff's deputy felt what appeared to be marijuana in a plastic bag while searching defendant for weapons which search was permissible under the "plain feel" doctrine; thus, the trial court properly denied defendant's motion to suppress. Kinder v. State, 269 Ga. App. 99, 603 S.E.2d 496 (2004).

Expectation that evidence will be discovered does not preclude operation of the plain view exception to the warrant requirement. State v. Echols, 204 Ga. App. 630, 420 S.E.2d 64 (1992).

Officers not required to ignore articles in plain view and readily observable and their seizure under these circumstances does not make them the fruit of an unlawful search, since, being in plain view, no search is involved. Scott v. State, 122 Ga. App. 204, 176 S.E.2d 481 (1970).

If a police officer has a right to be in the position from which an object is seen lying in plain view, the object is admissible as evidence. Dennis v. State, 166 Ga. App. 715, 305 S.E.2d 443 (1983); Phillips v. State, 167 Ga. App. 260, 305 S.E.2d 918 (1983); State v. Webb, 193 Ga. App. 2, 386 S.E.2d 891 (1989).

No invasion of privacy. — If an article is already in plain view, neither its observation nor its seizure involves any invasion of privacy. Talley v. State, 200 Ga. App. 442, 408 S.E.2d 463 (1991).

Inadvertence of sighting. — For the "plain view" exception to the warrant requirement to be invoked, the sighting of things not specified in the warrant must have been "inadvertent." Lockhart v. State, 166 Ga. App. 555, 305 S.E.2d 22 (1983).

"Plain view" does not require inadvertence. Merriman v. State, 201 Ga. App. 817, 412 S.E.2d 598 (1991).

Observation of what is observable by public. — There is no protection under U.S. Const., amend. 4 against observation by public official of what is observable by the general public. Ehlers v. Bogue, 626 F.2d 1314 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 909, 101 S. Ct. 1979, 68 L. Ed. 2d 298 (1981).

In a prosecution of defendant for possession of cocaine, a law enforcement officer had a legitimate reason to be on defendant's property, because the evidence showed that the officer observed defendant smoking and smelled marijuana while walking on a path that local residents regularly traveled; defendant had no reasonable expectation of privacy in the area visible from the path, even if it passed through the defendant's property. Smith v. State, 276 Ga. App. 677, 624 S.E.2d 272 (2005).

To observe that which is open to view is not generally considered a search. Grimes v. United States, 405 F.2d 477 (5th Cir. 1968).

The officer needed no search warrant to drive down a public street in response to a report that marijuana was being grown on defendant's property. If the marijuana was in plain view from the vantage point of the public road, the officer's mere act of driving by and looking for the reported contraband would certainly not constitute a “search” such as would require a warrant. State v. Echols, 204 Ga. App. 630, 420 S.E.2d 64 (1992).

Seizure of items under plain view doctrine where initial intrusion valid. — Where the initial intrusion that brings police within plain view of an incriminating item of property is supported either by a lawful warrant or by one of the recognized exceptions to the warrant requirement, the seizure of that property for use as evidence is also legitimate. United States v. Roach, 590 F.2d 181 (5th Cir. 1979).

A police officer who is unable to approach the front door of a residence and tries to knock upon a side door only makes a “valid intrusion” upon the property. When the officer makes such a “valid intrusion” and seizes contraband in plain view, there is in effect no search at all. State v. Zackery, 193 Ga. App. 319, 387 S.E.2d 606 (1989).

Seizure of items in plain view suspected to have derived from recent area burglaries while executing search warrant for documents proving theft of services was valid, where the incriminating character of the items was immediately apparent and officer had a lawful right to visual and physical access of the objects themselves. Nichols v. State, 210 Ga. App. 134, 435 S.E.2d 502 (1993).

Seizability of evidence discovered in plain view. — Evidence discovered in plain view, from a place where officers are entitled to stand and where their claim to stand is not created as a pretext solely to make legitimate otherwise impermissible intrusions, is not the subject of a search within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 4; seizing such evidence does not trigger the warrant requirement. United States v. Kaiser, 545 F.2d 467 (5th Cir. 1977).

No error was found in the trial court’s denial of the defendant’s motion to suppress evidence obtained in a warrantless search because the officers knocked on the defendant’s door and the defendant voluntarily allowed the deputies to enter the defendant’s apartment, making their intrusion into the defendant’s apartment valid. Once inside the apartment, the chain saw was in plain view. Latimer v. State, 204 Ga. App. 639, 420 S.E.2d 91 (1992).

Seizure of farm animals was justified after officials, entering the property to investigate a report that deprived animals were observed from the highway, immediately observed additional, clearly deprived animals in need of immediate care in plain view. Sirmans v. State, 244 Ga. App. 252, 534 S.E.2d 862 (2000), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 831, 122 S. Ct. 76, 151 L. Ed. 2d 40 (2001).

Seizure of contraband in “plain sight”. — A police officer may seize what is in plain sight if the officer is in a place where the officer is constitutionally entitled to be, but it must be immediately apparent to the investigating officer that the property to be seized is contraband. Williams v. State, 165 Ga. App. 708, 302 S.E.2d 609 (1983).

Although the police may seize what is in “plain sight” if they are in a place where they are constitutionally entitled to be, it must be immediately apparent to the investigating officer that the property to be seized is contraband. Vincent v. State, 178 Ga. App. 199, 342 S.E.2d 382 (1986).

The trial court erred in suppressing evidence on grounds of lack of probable cause, because the evidence was observed by police in plain sight in a place where police were constitutionally authorized to be and the defendant was not arrested, searched, or detained that night on the basis of discovery of the bottle containing the illegal material. The defendant was not arrested until four days later, after the independent discovery of fingerprints on the bottle containing cocaine that matched the fingerprints of the defendant already on file. State v. Smalls, 203 Ga. App. 283, 416 S.E.2d 531 (1992).

A police officer who observes contraband in plain view is entitled to seize it, so long as the officer is at a place where the officer is entitled to be, i.e., so long as the officer has not violated the defendant’s fourth amendment rights in the process of establishing the officer’s vantage point. Thomas v. State, 203 Ga. App. 529, 417 S.E.2d 353, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 908, 417 S.E.2d 353 (1992).

Observation of stolen goods in plain view. — There is no illegal search and seizure when officers are authorized to be where they are when they observe stolen goods in plain view. Hatcher v. State, 141 Ga. App. 756, 234 S.E.2d 388 (1977).

Contraband in plain view seized during lawful inventory search admissible. — If a driver is arrested and removed from the vehicle, and the vehicle is on a highway or other public property, and there is no third person present to whom it is or might properly be turned over, or for some other sufficient reason a decision to impound it is properly made, and if in connection with such impoundment an inventory search is a recognized and routine procedure, contraband that appears in plain view in the course of such inventory is properly seized, and may be introduced in evidence. Martasin v. State, 155 Ga. App. 396, 271 S.E.2d 2 (1980).

Plain View (Cont'd)

Intrusive search not permitted merely because contraband discovered in "plain view". — The fact that contraband was discovered in "plain view" during a limited search of premises did not serve to permit the police to "roam freely" in an intrusive and thorough search of the entire premises, where no exigency was present which would have necessitated departure from the requirement for a warrant. State v. Scott, 176 Ga. App. 887, 339 S.E.2d 276 (1985).

Search pursuant to warrant. — When, in the course of performing a lawful search for an item listed on a search warrant, officers come across other articles of an incriminatory character, such articles may be seized under the "plain view" doctrine. To justify application of the plain view doctrine, the seizing officers must (1) have independent justification for being in a position to see the item; (2) must discover the items inadvertently; and (3) must immediately observe that the items are evidence. The officers must have probable cause to believe the items are evidence of the crime. United States v. Jenkins, 901 F.2d 1075 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 901, 111 S. Ct. 259, 112 L. Ed. 2d 216 (1990).

Plain view doctrine extends to use of artificial light. — The plain view doctrine, allowing discovery and seizure of contraband in plain sight without a warrant, extends to the use of artificial light at night to observe contraband which would be in plain sight during the day. United States v. Allen, 472 F.2d 145 (5th Cir. 1973).

Use of flashlight to look into automobile. — The use of a flashlight to expose to better light what would otherwise be visible to one who simply looks through a car window does not make the viewing any more of a search or any less of a plain view. State v. Hodges, 184 Ga. App. 21, 360 S.E.2d 903, cert. denied, 184 Ga. App. 910, 360 S.E.2d 903 (1987).

A truly cursory inspection — one that involves merely looking at what is already exposed to view, without disturbing it — is not a "search" for fourth amendment purposes, and therefore does not even require reasonable suspicion. State v. Field, 188 Ga. App. 639, 373 S.E.2d 815, cert. denied, 188 Ga. App. 912, 373 S.E.2d 815 (1988).

"Plain view" discovery of evidence of other crime during search pursuant to a warrant admissible. — Where the warrant was executed less than five hours after a shooting and was supported by sufficient facts to authorize a finding of probable cause for a more thorough search of the apartment, the scene of the crimes, the fact that the police officers discovered what appeared to be objects of an unrelated crime lying in "plain view" in the defendant's bedroom did not require exclusion of that evidence at trial. Isbell v. State, 179 Ga. App. 363, 346 S.E.2d 857 (1986), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1098, 107 S. Ct. 1319, 94 L. Ed. 2d 172 (1987).

A car has little capacity for escaping public scrutiny, since it travels public thoroughfares where its occupants and its contents are in plain view. Thus, what a person knowingly exposes to the public, even in the person's own home or office, is not a subject of protection under U.S. Const., amend. 4. United States v. Michael, 645 F.2d 252 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 950, 102 S. Ct. 489, 70 L. Ed. 2d 257 (1981).

Under the "plain view" doctrine, a law officer has the right to visually search the entirety of the car from the officer's vantage point on a street or roadside. Galloway v. State, 178 Ga. App. 31, 342 S.E.2d 473 (1986).

Where police officer's original stop of the defendant's automobile was authorized, the subsequent seizure of contraband which was in the officer's plain view did not violate defendant's fourth amendment rights. Freeman v. State, 194 Ga. App. 303, 390 S.E.2d 300 (1990).

Identification number visible on dashboard. — The recordation of vehicle identification numbers, visible on the dashboards of vehicles, by police entering the open business premises of an automobile repair shop and looking through the windshields of parked vehicles (no vehicle being entered, no door being opened, and no physical object being seized), was authorized by the “plain view doctrine.” Shaw v. State, 253 Ga. 382, 320 S.E.2d 371 (1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1212, 105 S. Ct. 1183, 84 L. Ed. 2d 331 (1985).

Gun in plain view inside car. — Because the defendant told the police chief the gun defendant had used was on the front seat of defendant’s car, and the chief looked into the car, observed a gun lying on the front seat, and seized it, what the officer saw in “plain view” from outside the defendant’s automobile corroborated what the defendant had told the officer and justified the intrusion into the automobile and the seizure of the gun. Childs v. State, 257 Ga. 243, 357 S.E.2d 48, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 970, 108 S. Ct. 467, 98 L. Ed. 2d 406 (1987).

Where defendant was already stopped at the side of a road and a police chief, lawfully wanting to question defendant about the incorrect vehicle tag number that defendant had given earlier, walked passed an open car door and saw a gun in plain sight, there was no stop and the chief had a right to retrieve the gun; consequently, the trial court did not err by refusing to suppress the evidence of the gun. Eldridge v. State, 270 Ga. App. 84, 606 S.E.2d 95 (2004).

Opening of bag within automobile authorized under “plain view” doctrine. — The opening of a canvas gym bag in which cocaine was discovered, during the course of a warrantless search of defendant’s automobile, was authorized, where the search of the vehicle was authorized under the “plain view” doctrine. Dimick v. State, 178 Ga. App. 60, 341 S.E.2d 914 (1986).

Evidence in plain view seized during safety inspection of boat admissible. — Where coast guard officers boarded a vessel pursuant to a safety and documents stop under 14 U.S.C. 89(a) and en route to pilot house discovered marijuana in plain view and subsequently seized the ship, there was no illegal search or seizure. United States v. Brantley, 733 F.2d 1429 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 470 U.S. 1006, 105 S. Ct. 1362, 84 L. Ed. 2d 383 (1985).

Where peace officers entered a defendant’s residence armed with an arrest warrant and a search warrant, arrested the defendant and searched the premises, certain articles in plain view having strong evidentiary value as to the crimes charged are not subject to a motion to suppress although not specifically named in the search warrant. Scott v. State, 122 Ga. App. 204, 176 S.E.2d 481 (1970).

Entry into home to care for unsupervised children. — A detective was authorized to enter a home without a warrant and items thereafter observed in plain view were properly admitted into evidence since the detective entered the home to ensure that children who were without adult supervision because of action by police officers and were being watched by two uniformed officers, were being cared for properly. State v. Peterson, 273 Ga. 657, 543 S.E.2d 692 (2001), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 955, 122 S. Ct. 356, 151 L. Ed. 2d 269 (2001).

Evidence in plain view seized from duplex unit adjoining unit for which warrant was issued was admissible. — Where law enforcement officials executed a search warrant for 621-B Roadway Avenue, from the exterior, 621 Roadway appeared to be a duplex having two entrances, one marked 621-A and the other 621-B, but upon entering 621-B, police officers discovered what seemed to be a single dwelling undergoing conversion into a duplex, a dividing wall between 621-A and 621-B was only partially built, a passageway between A and B existed, and a police officer, standing in 621-B, spied bags of marijuana eight to ten feet on the other side of the partially constructed wall in 621-A, inasmuch as the facts met the requirements of the “plain view” doctrine, the denial of the motion to suppress the marijuana was not error. Williams v. State, 165 Ga. App. 708, 302 S.E.2d 609 (1983).

Seizure of rolling papers in plain view. — Where a stop is reasonable, the consent initially given to search the vehicle is not withdrawn, and the rolling papers are in plain view scattered across the dash, a seizure of the rolling papers after the defendants are jailed does not violate constitutional rights. Merrill v. State, 130 Ga. App. 745, 204 S.E.2d 632 (1974).

Seizure of shoes in plain view at committal hearing. — Where defendant, during the defendant’s committal hearing, crossed legs, revealing the pattern of the tread on the soles of the defendant's shoes to a law enforcement officer who was acting as bailiff at the hearing, and the officer seized the shoes upon the defendant's return to jail based upon the officer's earlier investigation at the scene of the crimes, which revealed a similar tread pattern having been made by one of the alleged perpetrators, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to suppress on the basis that the evidence seized was in plain view. Mitchell v. State, 181 Ga. App. 470, 352 S.E.2d 647 (1987).

Plain View (Cont'd)

Observation of a "pickax handle" in plain view, in a scabbard on a motorcycle, was sufficiently provocative to a law enforcement official monitoring a gathering of motorcycle clubs to establish reasonable and articulable suspicion of the officer to question its possessor of the reason for its presence. The defendant's subsequent voluntary admission of possession of a revolver provided for a limited intrusion under the seat of the defendant's motorcycle. Allison v. State, 188 Ga. App. 460, 373 S.E.2d 273 (1988).

Bank deposit bag found in a security guard's home was properly seized under the plain view doctrine, where, although the bag was not listed in the warrant, the warrant described numerous bank bags, stock certificates, checks, and bills, and the officers had probable cause to believe that the bag might have been stolen. United States v. Jenkins, 901 F.2d 1075 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 901, 111 S. Ct. 259, 112 L. Ed. 2d 216 (1990).

View through cracks in fence. — Defendant's fourth amendment rights were not infringed when police officers looked through cracks in a wooden fence into defendant's backyard and saw marijuana plants growing. Merriman v. State, 201 Ga. App. 817, 412 S.E.2d 598 (1991).

Incriminating character of the item must be immediately apparent for a warrantless search under the "plain view" exception. Brown v. State, 269 Ga. 830, 504 S.E.2d 443 (1998).

Closed refrigerator. — Marijuana contained in an operating, closed refrigerator was not in the plain view of a police officer. State v. Gallup, 236 Ga. App. 321, 512 S.E.2d 66 (1999).

Scope of warrant held not exceeded. — Since the search warrant authorized an officer to search for clothing with possible blood stains and the officer saw, in plain view, what the officer believed to be dried blood on a sink, the officer's search of the sink's underside for more blood did not exceed the scope of the warrant. Moss v. State, 275 Ga. 96, 561 S.E.2d 382 (2002).

Custodial Searches

Custodial interrogation is questioning initiated by law enforcement officers after person has been taken into custody or otherwise deprived of person's freedom of action in any significant way. United States v. Jones, 352 F. Supp. 369 (S.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 481 F.2d 1402 (5th Cir. 1973).

Whether custodial search is valid depends not on officer's state of mind but on whether, viewed in retrospect, the objective facts were such as to justify a prudent person in believing that enough facts on which to base an arrest before a search were made. United States v. Jones, 352 F. Supp. 369 (S.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 481 F.2d 1402 (5th Cir. 1973).

Interrogation absent custody of defendant. — Where a possible criminal defendant has not been taken into custody or otherwise deprived of freedom of action in any significant way, the custodial interrogation condemned by Miranda has not occurred. Grogins v. State, 154 Ga. App. 606, 269 S.E.2d 98 (1980).

Presence of defendant's attorney at custodial interrogation constituted "adequate protective device" making any failure to advise defendant of Miranda rights irrelevant. Baxter v. State, 254 Ga. 538, 331 S.E.2d 561 (1985), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 935, 106 S. Ct. 269, 88 L. Ed. 2d 275 (1985).

Photographs of defendant's cut leg were properly admitted at trial, and their taking was not an unlawful search and seizure even though they were taken while defendant was in custody. Deering v. State, 168 Ga. App. 835, 310 S.E.2d 720 (1983).

Removal of shoes not "strip search". — Where a defendant was arrested for driving on a suspended license, and drug traces had been found in the car, the removal of the defendant's shoes did not amount to a "strip search" as that term is generally used; the trial court correctly determined that there was no violation of the defendant's fourth amendment rights. Bobbit v. State, 195 Ga. App. 566, 394 S.E.2d 385 (1990).

Fingerprints, Blood, Urine and other Medical Tests

Implied consent provision in O.C.G.A. § 40-5-55(a) is unconstitutional as violative of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII, and the fourth and fourteenth amendments of the Constitution of the United States because it authorizes a search and seizure, chemical testing of a suspect's blood, without probable cause that the suspect had been driving while impaired, where the suspect was involved in an accident involving serious injuries or fatalities. Cooper v. State, 277 Ga. 282, 587 S.E.2d 605 (2003).

Consent to blood testing. — Test results of a sample taken from a suspect may not be used for purposes for which the suspect was not advised and to which the suspect did not consent, and while it is not always essential under the fourth amendment for a person to be told that he or she may refuse to consent to a warrantless search, informing an individual of the right to refuse consent is a factor a trial court may consider in determining whether such consent was voluntary; a trial court's suppression of blood test results obtained from a defendant without a warrant was affirmed where any consent given by defendant before the blood draw did not include testing and where defendant was not informed of defendant's right to refuse consent and did not give a free and voluntary consent after blood was drawn. State v. Poppell, 277 Ga. 595, 592 S.E.2d 838 (2004).

Consent form. — Since the consent form signed by defendant stated that defendant's blood and hair would be used against the defendant in a court of law and that defendant was a suspect in a certain murder, the form did not limit the use of the blood or hair to only the designated murder investigation or to any particular purpose. Pace v. State, 271 Ga. 829, 524 S.E.2d 490 (1999), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 890, 121 S. Ct. 101, 148 L. Ed. 2d 60 (2000).

Taking fingerprints in absence of counsel. — Constitutional rights are not denied because fingerprints are taken in the absence of counsel. Ward v. United States, 486 F.2d 305 (5th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 416 U.S.

990, 94 S. Ct. 2398, 40 L. Ed. 2d 768 (1974).

Swabbing the hands of accused to lift gunshot residue does not constitute an unconstitutional search or seizure. Strickland v. State, 247 Ga. 219, 275 S.E.2d 29, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 882, 102 S. Ct. 365, 70 L. Ed. 2d 632 (1981).

Search for evidence by intrusion into a person's body against that person's will can be reasonable only under very limited circumstances. State v. Haynie, 240 Ga. 866, 242 S.E.2d 713 (1978).

Neither the presence of defendant's counsel nor defendant's consent is required for the execution of a warrant calling for the seizure of hair, blood, or other body fluids. Johnson v. State, 179 Ga. App. 467, 346 S.E.2d 903 (1986).

Compelled withdrawal of blood. — A suspect's fourth amendment right to be free of unreasonable searches and seizures applies to the compelled withdrawal of blood. Welch v. State, 254 Ga. 603, 331 S.E.2d 573 (1985).

Blood sample is not taken from defendant unconstitutionally because the defendant does not freely consent to the taking of the sample and because it is taken without a search warrant. Corn v. Hopper, 244 Ga. 28, 257 S.E.2d 533 (1979).

Blood sample taken from defendant was voluntarily consented to by defendant who was advised of the purpose of the test, was not promised any benefits for participating in the test, and was not threatened with fear or injury for failure to cooperate. Deering v. State, 168 Ga. App. 835, 310 S.E.2d 720 (1983).

Blood test admissible despite acquittal on initial traffic violation. — Where a police officer stopped a driver for a traffic violation and suspicion of driving under the influence, the results of a blood alcohol test were admissible where the officer had a reasonable articulable suspicion of wrongdoing, even though the defendant was acquitted of the traffic violation. Branch v. State, 175 Ga. App. 696, 334 S.E.2d 24 (1985).

Blood test inadmissible if without probable cause. — Georgia Supreme Court has held that O.C.G.A. § 40-5-55(a) is unconstitutional to the extent it requires chemical testing of the driver of a vehicle involved in a traffic accident resulting in serious injuries or death as it violates the fourth and fourteenth amendments of the United States

Fingerprints, Blood, Urine and other Medical Tests (Cont'd)

Constitution because it authorizes a search and seizure without probable cause; thus, where testing is conducted based upon the seriousness of injuries in an accident, rather than upon probable cause that the person has violated O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391, the results are inadmissible. Buchanan v. State, 264 Ga. App. 148, 589 S.E.2d 876 (2003).

Compelled administration of breath test designed to ascertain blood alcohol content undoubtedly implicates fourth amendment rights. State v. Johnston, 249 Ga. 413, 291 S.E.2d 543 (1982).

Requesting multiple chemical tests of driver allowed. — Nothing in the implied consent law prohibits an officer from advising a driver of the driver's implied consent rights and requesting multiple chemical tests at one time, and such a request does not violate the fourth amendment as an unreasonable attempt to "shop" through the driver's bodily fluids in search of evidence. McKeown v. State, 187 Ga. App. 685, 371 S.E.2d 543 (1988).

A urinalysis is a search. Everett v. Napper, 833 F.2d 1507 (11th Cir. 1987).

Taking of urine specimens. — The governmental taking of a urine specimen is a seizure within the meaning of the fourth amendment. Bostic v. McClendon, 650 F. Supp. 245 (N.D. Ga. 1986).

The Applicant Drug Screening Act (O.C.G.A. § 45-20-110 et seq.), requiring applicants for state employment to submit to urine tests for the presence of illegal drugs, violates applicants' rights to privacy under the fourth and fourteenth amendments. Georgia Ass'n of Educators v. Harris, 749 F. Supp. 1110 (N.D. Ga. 1990).

Compelled urine sample requires reasonable suspicion. — Considering the nature of a police department's legitimate interests and the individual officers' reasonable expectations of privacy, the fourth amendment allows the chief of police, the city, and city officials to demand a urine sample from an employee for chemical analysis only on the basis of a reasonable suspicion, based on specific objective facts and reasonable inferences from those facts in the light of experience, that a urinalysis will produce evidence of illegal drug use by that particular employee. Bostic v. McClendon, 650 F. Supp. 245 (N.D. Ga. 1986).

Periodic drug testing of civilian federal employees by urinalysis, absent some form of individualized suspicion, is in almost all cases offensive to the mandates of the fourth amendment. American Fed'n of Gov't Employees v. Weinberger, 651 F. Supp. 726 (S.D. Ga. 1986).

Employees who may be subjected to urinalysis testing. — The duties of the civilian-law-enforcement employees at an army base who will be subjected to standardless urinalysis testing for drugs must be shown to be more than remotely or conceivably related to national security, or the duties if performed under the influence of drugs must be shown to pose a potential danger to persons or property well beyond the danger inherent in ordinary police or transportation employment for the search to pass constitutional muster. American Fed'n of Gov't Employees v. Weinberger, 651 F. Supp. 726 (S.D. Ga. 1986).

Urinalysis tests taken by employees in electrical distribution division of city board of lights and water, ordered by the city manager and manager of the board of lights and water when employees suspected of drug usage refused to resign, were "searches" within the meaning of the fourth amendment but were not unreasonable and therefore did not violate the fourth amendment since the tests were administered in a purely employment context and were not done in connection with any criminal investigation or procedure. Allen v. City of Marietta, 601 F. Supp. 482 (N.D. Ga. 1985).

Requiring city employees to submit to urinalyses did not violate their fourth amendment rights, where city officials had reasonable grounds to suspect employees were working under the influence of drugs and the urinalyses were conducted solely to further an employment-related objective and in a manner designed to minimize intrusion. Allen v. Marietta Bd. of Lights & Water, Inc., 693 F. Supp. 1122 (N.D. Ga. 1987).

Because a city firefighter was ordered by an employer to submit to urinalysis test but did not actually take any such test prior to termination for failure to comply with the order, there was no "search" within the meaning of the fourth amendment. Everett

v. Napper, 632 F. Supp. 1481 (N.D. Ga. 1986), modified on other grounds, 833 F.2d 1507 (11th Cir. 1987).

Ordering a firefighter to undergo a urinalysis did not violate the fourth amendment right to be free from unreasonable search and seizure, because city officials had reason to suspect that the firefighter was involved with the use of illegal drugs. Everett v. Napper, 833 F.2d 1507 (11th Cir. 1987).

Employees' consent to urinalysis testing held involuntary. — Because the plaintiffs were informed that if they did not participate in urinalysis testing, their employment would be terminated and the plaintiffs stated they did participate only because they feared they would lose their jobs, the plaintiffs' consent to search was obviously not voluntary, but was the result of coercion. Bostic v. McClendon, 650 F. Supp. 245 (N.D. Ga. 1986).

Georgia's requirement that candidates for state office pass a drug test does not fit within the closely guarded category of constitutionally permissible suspicionless searches, since the state failed to show a "special need" for the intrusion sufficient enough to override the fourth amendment's normal requirement of individualized suspicion. Chandler v. Miller, 520 U.S. 305, 117 S. Ct. 1295, 137 L. Ed. 2d 513 (1997).

Urine sample from probationer. — Probationer's fourth amendment rights were not violated by the invocation of the mandatory conditions of probationer's probation to obtain a urine sample for use as evidence against probationer in an independent criminal prosecution, where, although the request for urinalysis was not made as a routine incident of the probation supervision process, it was prompted by a good-faith suspicion that the probationer was dealing in drugs. Green v. State, 194 Ga. App. 343, 390 S.E.2d 285 (1990), aff'd, 260 Ga. 625, 398 S.E.2d 360 (1990), cert. denied, 500 U.S. 935, 111 S. Ct. 2059, 114 L. Ed. 2d 464 (1991).

Handwriting samples. — A defendant has no reasonable expectation of privacy with respect to the defendant's handwriting so as to invoke the sanctions of U.S. Const., amend. 4. Reeves v. State, 139 Ga. App. 214, 228 S.E.2d 201 (1976).

The law provides that an order to furnish handwriting samples or exemplars is a lawful order, and does not violate any legal or constitutional rights. United States v. Knight, 607 F.2d 1172 (5th Cir. 1979).

Comment on refusal to provide handwriting exemplar permissible. — Handwriting exemplars fall outside the protection of U.S. Const., amend. 4 and comment on the refusal to provide an exemplar is permissible. United States v. Knight, 607 F.2d 1172 (5th Cir. 1979).

Voice exemplars. — A defendant's consent to use of the defendant's voice in a voice lineup was not required since voice exemplars are not within the scope of fourth amendment protections. Campbell v. State, 228 Ga. App. 258, 491 S.E.2d 477 (1997).

Hair samples from defendant's person, taken pursuant to a search warrant, were properly admitted, where there was probable cause to believe that hair which the warrant affidavit stated had been found in a stocking mask abandoned at the scene of a robbery would match a sample of defendant's hair. Ferrell v. State, 198 Ga. App. 270, 401 S.E.2d 301 (1991), overruled as stated in Watts v. State, 261 Ga. App. 230, 582 S.E.2d 186 (2003).

AIDS testing of convicts. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-15(b) does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 4 because the government's interest outweighs the individual's and the results are kept confidential and cannot be used against the individual in a criminal prosecution; nor does O.C.G.A. § 17-10-15(b) violate the right to privacy under the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment or the state or federal equal protection clauses. Adams v. State, 269 Ga. 405, 498 S.E.2d 268 (1998).

Exigent Circumstances

Probable cause alone insufficient. — No amount of probable cause can justify a warrantless search or seizure absent exigent circumstances. Bunn v. State, 153 Ga. App. 270, 265 S.E.2d 88 (1980).

Whether a search is sought to be justified as incident to an arrest for possession of cocaine or whether it is sought to be justified by exigent circumstances, it cannot be upheld unless probable cause existed for a belief that the suspect was currently in unlawful possession of cocaine. Polke v. State, 203 Ga. App. 306, 417 S.E.2d 22 (1992).

Exigent Circumstances (Cont'd)

Only in exigent circumstances will judgment of police as to probable cause serve as sufficient authorization for a search. One of the exigent circumstances justifying a warrantless search is where there is a seizure and search of a moving vehicle. State v. Bradley, 138 Ga. App. 800, 227 S.E.2d 776 (1976).

Only in exigent circumstances will judgment of police as to probable cause serve as sufficient authorization for a search. United States v. Fogelman, 586 F.2d 337 (5th Cir. 1978).

Exigency determined at time of seizure, not search. — The fact that sufficient time to obtain a warrant had passed between seizure and the corresponding search of defendant's car did not invalidate either, since exigency is to be determined at the time of the seizure of the automobile, not at the time of the search. United States v. Roach, 590 F.2d 181 (5th Cir. 1979).

Exigencies of situation as they appear to officer involved. — Even though acts of peace officers in detaining and questioning a citizen are necessarily a curtailment of the citizen's right to go about one's business unmolested (i.e., a seizure of the person), but more importantly because investigation and questioning are necessary elements of crime prevention and detection, the exigencies of the situation as they reasonably appear at the time to the officer involved must dictate the extent of intrusion into constitutionally protected areas. Holley v. State, 157 Ga. App. 863, 278 S.E.2d 738 (1981).

Exigent circumstances justify search incident to an arrest. — In exigent circumstances, police officers are authorized, pursuant to a lawful arrest, to enter upon premises and conduct a reasonable search of the suspects' persons and immediate presence. State v. Camp, 175 Ga. App. 591, 333 S.E.2d 896 (1985).

"Plain view" doctrine permits warrantless search and seizure. — Where an officer observed contraband in an apartment from the outside and saw one of the occupants attempt to conceal it, the officer's warrantless intrusion into the apartment was justified by the exigent circumstance that the contraband was in danger of immediate destruction. State v. David, 269 Ga. 533, 501 S.E.2d 494 (1998).

There is no general automobile exception to U.S. Const., amend. 4's requirements. The movable nature of an automobile is not enough. There must be exigent circumstances as well. United States v. Fogelman, 586 F.2d 337 (5th Cir. 1978).

Distinction has long been drawn between warrantless search of automobile as opposed to a house or other structure due to the mobility of the car. Whitlock v. State, 124 Ga. App. 599, 185 S.E.2d 90 (1971).

Likelihood of imminent departure gives rise to exigent circumstances that justify a warrantless seizure. United States v. Bryant, 580 F.2d 812 (5th Cir. 1978).

When vehicle subject to warrantless search. — A reasonable search may be made of vehicle which is easily and quickly movable, without a warrant and in the absence of a prior arrest, so long as there is probable cause to believe that the vehicle contains contraband. United States v. Brown, 411 F.2d 478 (5th Cir. 1969).

Moving vehicle is subject to warrantless search if probable cause and exigent circumstances exist. United States v. Robinson, 535 F.2d 881 (5th Cir. 1976).

The general rule is that one of the exigent circumstances justifying a warrantless search is a situation where there is a seizure and search of a moving vehicle, and when the vehicle is indeed moving there is only the requirement that the search and seizure be based upon sufficient probable cause. State v. Watts, 154 Ga. App. 789, 270 S.E.2d 52 (1980).

Ability of a vehicle to become mobile is sufficient to satisfy the exigency requirement for a search without a warrant. The vehicle does not have to be moving at the moment when the police obtain probable cause to search. United States v. Alexander, 835 F.2d 1406 (11th Cir. 1988).

Practicability of procuring warrant for search of vehicles for contraband. — A necessary difference between a search of a store, dwelling house, or other structure, in respect of which a proper official warrant readily may be obtained, and a search of a ship, motorboat, wagon, or automobile for contraband goods, where it is not practicable to secure a warrant, is that the vehicle can be quickly moved out of the locality or jurisdiction in which the warrant must be sought. United States v. Ramey, 464 F.2d 1240 (5th Cir. 1972).

Blocking airplane with police cars was reasonable manner of stopping it considering the possibility of flight in a highly mobile aircraft. Franklin v. State, 143 Ga. App. 3, 237 S.E.2d 425 (1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 950, 98 S. Ct. 1575, 55 L. Ed. 2d 799 (1978).

Police authorized, in exigent circumstances, to enter search premises. — In exigent circumstances, police officers are authorized, pursuant to a lawful arrest, to enter upon the premises and conduct a reasonable search of the suspects' persons and immediate presence, including a search under a piece of furniture where one of the suspects was observed reaching for or disposing of an unknown object, which might reasonably be thought to be either a weapon or evidence. Dennis v. State, 166 Ga. App. 715, 305 S.E.2d 443 (1983).

Burning building clearly presents an exigency of sufficient proportions to render a warrantless entry reasonable. Romano v. Home Ins. Co., 490 F. Supp. 191 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

A burning residence constitutes an exigency justifying a warrantless entry, and officials need no warrant to remain for a reasonable time to investigate the cause of a blaze after it has been extinguished. Davis v. State, 178 Ga. App. 760, 344 S.E.2d 730 (1986).

Firefighters in building do not need warrant to remain for reasonable time after fire extinguished in order to investigate the cause, since the aftermath of a fire often presents exigencies that will not tolerate the delay necessary to obtain either the owner's consent or a warrant. Waters v. State, 174 Ga. App. 916, 331 S.E.2d 893 (1985).

Warrantless arrests. — The doctrine of "exigent circumstances," applicable only with respect to searches, did not supply probable cause for warrantless arrests. Wilson v. Attaway, 757 F.2d 1227 (11th Cir. 1985).

A section of a police field manual which allows arrest with a supervisor's approval for three or more "hazardous moving violations," does not conflict with U.S. Const., amend. 4 by providing for the physical arrest of misdemeanants under "exigent circumstances," where probable cause exists. Young v. City of Atlanta, 631 F. Supp. 1498 (N.D. Ga. 1986).

Exigent circumstances held to exist. — The circumstances were sufficiently exigent to justify a warrantless arrest where the FBI had probable cause to believe that defendant had attempted to rob one bank and had actually robbed another earlier that day, there was reason to believe defendant was armed at all times, defendant's sibling could have felt remorse and called defendant to warn the defendant, or defendant could have seen the defendant's own photo on a television news report about the robberies, if the FBI delayed, defendant might dispose of the stolen cash or other evidence, and more importantly, any delay increased the risk that innocent members of the public might be injured if the defendant attempted to leave the motel at which the defendant was staying, so that it was safer to arrest the defendant immediately by surprise in the defendant's motel room than to wait for a warrant, and to risk a gun battle erupting in the halls, stairs, lobby, or other public area of the fully occupied hotel should the defendant try to escape. United States v. Standridge, 810 F.2d 1034 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1072, 107 S. Ct. 2468, 95 L. Ed. 2d 877 (1987).

Circumstances are exigent if a suspect is implicated in a drug conspiracy, is thought to be armed, discovers that a confederate is arrested, and discovers that the suspect has been cornered by the police and faces imminent arrest. United States v. Forker, 928 F.2d 365 (11th Cir. 1991).

Officers who stopped a car for a traffic violation had probable cause to believe a search would uncover evidence of a crime based upon inconsistent statements and a bulge in the suspect's midsection and there were exigent circumstances since the detained suspect might have left with the contraband if the officers waited to secure a warrant. United States v. Banshee, 85 F.3d 571 (11th Cir. 1996), op. withdrawn, corrected, 91 F.3d 99 (11th Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1083, 117 S. Ct. 752, 136 L. Ed. 2d 689 (1997).

Officers' decision to enter an apartment during a taped drug buy was justified because it appeared that the operation had gone sour and that children within the apartment might be placed in danger and attempts to destroy or conceal evidence would be made. Cates v. State, 232 Ga. App. 262, 501 S.E.2d 262 (1998).

Denial of a defendant's suppression motion was proper as the police officers were authorized to immediately enter a residence, without announcing their presence as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-5-27, as the occupants, upon seeing the police, fled into a residence where the police had recently conducted controlled drug buys and the officers had a reasonable belief that the fleeing occupants might retrieve weapons or destroy evidence; once legally inside the residence, the police were authorized to execute a search warrant that led to the discovery of the defendant's involvement in the drug sales. Further, suppression of evidence was not a constitutionally-required remedy for an improper entry pursuant to an otherwise valid search warrant. Jackson v. State, 280 Ga. App. 716, 634 S.E.2d 846 (2006).

Exigent Circumstances (Cont'd)

Exigent circumstances held not to exist. — No exigent circumstances supported the warrantless entry by police officers into the defendant's house, notwithstanding their assertion that entry was justified based on their reasonable belief that the defendant was in need of immediate aid since: (1) officers arrived at the scene one hour after the defendant's neighbor reported a motor vehicle accident and questioned the neighbor for another 20 minutes before making any inquiry as to whether the defendant was injured; (2) when the officers saw the defendant lying on the floor in the defendant's home, they did not call an ambulance and waited while dispatch contacted the defendant's spouse; (3) one officer testified that they were less concerned about the defendant's safety after they inspected the defendant's vehicle and saw no signs that the defendant's head had struck the windshield; and (4) when the officers entered the home, they attempted to wake the defendant by inflicting pain on the defendant and yelling. State v. Shephard, 248 Ga. App. 433, 546 S.E.2d 823 (2001).

Defendant's suppression motion was properly granted because: (1) an officer executing an arrest warrant for a third person had unreasonably looked through the defendants' window, discovering them using marijuana; (2) the officers did not identify themselves as police officers when they knocked at the defendants' door; (3) the defendants hid the marijuana before opening the door;

(4) the police confronted the defendants about the marijuana after they had determined that the third person was not in the house; and (5) the appellate court could not conclude, as a matter of law, that there were exigent circumstances justifying the warrantless seizure of the drugs, in that they were in danger of being destroyed, simply because the defendants hid the drugs before opening the door. State v. Schwartz, 261 Ga. App. 742, 583 S.E.2d 573 (2003).

Defendant's motion to suppress evidence seized by a police officer who entered an apartment without a warrant was properly granted because a residential alarm call did not create exigent circumstances justifying the entry where the officer had no reasonable belief that an emergency situation existed given the officer's delay in reaching the apartment, the officer's decision to allow a parent and two children to enter the apartment, and the lack of any signs of distress once the officer reached the residence. State v. Merit, 262 Ga. App. 687, 586 S.E.2d 393 (2003).

Administrative Inspections

Administrative warrant requires less than search warrant. — Courts may authorize administrative inspections on facts that would not support issuance of search warrant in a criminal case. West Point-Pepperell, Inc. v. Marshall, 496 F. Supp. 1178 (N.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd on other grounds, 689 F.2d 950 (11th Cir. 1982).

Exceptions to warrant requirement for administrative inspections. — The warrant requirement for unconsented administrative inspections is negated only if the enterprise sought to be inspected is engaged in a pervasively regulated business, the inspection will pose only a minimal threat to justifiable expectations of privacy, warrantless inspection is a crucial part of a regulatory scheme designed to further an urgent federal interest, and the inspection may be carefully limited as to time, place, and scope. Usery v. Centrif-Air Mach. Co., 424 F. Supp. 959 (N.D. Ga. 1977).

Warrantless regulatory inspections. — Because regulatory inspections further urgent federal interests and the possibilities of abuse and the threat to privacy are not of impressive dimensions, the inspection may proceed without a warrant if specifically authorized by statute. Brennan v. Buckeye Indus., Inc., 374 F. Supp. 1350 (S.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd sub. nom. Buckeye Indus., Inc. v. Secretary of Labor, 587 F.2d 231 (5th Cir. 1979).

Warrantless OSHA inspections. — Business of manufacture and sale of textile machinery is not subject to pervasive state or federal regulation; therefore, the Secretary of Labor was not entitled, pursuant to the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970, 29 U.S.C. § 651 et seq., to conduct warrantless inspection of business premises. Usery v. Centrif-Air Mach. Co., 424 F. Supp. 959 (N.D. Ga. 1977).

Determination of probable cause for search under OSHA. — The fourth amendment requires that an administrative search warrant be obtained prior to the inspection of workplaces in carrying out the purposes of the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970; the Secretary of Labor needs only to establish administrative probable cause, which is tested by a standard of reasonableness, requiring a magistrate or judge to balance the need to search against the invasion which the search entails. West Point-Pepperell, Inc. v. Donovan, 689 F.2d 950 (11th Cir. 1982).

Routine traffic checks. — A roadblock set up primarily as a means to perform routine traffic checks was valid. LaFontaine v. State, 269 Ga. 251, 497 S.E.2d 367 (1998); Boyce v. State, 240 Ga. App. 388, 523 S.E.2d 607 (1999).

Reasonableness of road checks. — The state can practice preventative therapy by reasonable road checks to ascertain whether man and machine meet the legislative determination of fitness. That this requires a momentary stopping of the traveling citizen is not fatal. Nor is it fatal because the inspection may produce the irrefutable proof that the law has just been violated. The purpose of the check is to determine the present, not the past: is the car, is the driver now fit for further driving? In the accommodation of society's needs to the basic right of citizens to be free from disruption of unrestricted travel by police officers' stopping cars in the hopes of uncovering evidence of nontraffic crimes, stopping for road checks is reasonable and, therefore, acceptable. Likewise, an arrest is proper if the check reveals a current violation which by its nature must have taken place in the immediate past. State v. Swift, 232 Ga. 535, 207 S.E.2d 459 (1974).

Except in those situations in which there is at least articulable and reasonable suspicion that a motorist is unlicensed or that an automobile is not registered, or that either the vehicle or an occupant is otherwise subject to seizure for violation of law, stopping an automobile and detaining the driver in order to check a driver's license and the registration of the automobile are unreasonable under U.S. Const., amend. 4. Bowers v. State, 151 Ga. App. 46, 258 S.E.2d 623 (1979), aff'd, 245 Ga. 367, 265 S.E.2d 57 (1980); Bobo v. State, 153 Ga. App. 679, 266 S.E.2d 247 (1980).

Roadblock set up by various uniformed city police officers after they responded to an emergency call in the area satisfied the requirements for a valid routine license check. Payne v. State, 232 Ga. App. 591, 502 S.E.2d 526 (1998).

Driver's license check not illegal search. — A routine check for a driver's license, during which a police officer observed in the wallet of the party searched a stolen credit card, is not an illegal search. United States v. Jones, 352 F. Supp. 369 (S.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 481 F.2d 1402 (5th Cir. 1973).

Brief detention of defendant at a roadblock did not violate defendant's fourth amendment rights, where all passing vehicles were stopped; the delay to passing motorists was minimal; the roadblock was set up in a well lit area by uniformed officers, and patrol cars were stationed on both sides of the road and on the median with blue lights flashing, making the roadblock highly visible to approaching motorists; and the "screening" officer was sufficiently trained to enable the officer to make a determination as to which motorists should be asked to take the field sobriety tests. Evans v. State, 190 Ga. App. 856, 380 S.E.2d 332, cert. denied, 493 U.S. 849, 110 S. Ct. 147, 107 L. Ed. 2d 105 (1989).

Sobriety checkpoint stops. are viewed differently from isolated vehicle stops because the subjective intrusion is appreciably less in the case of a checkpoint stop. Christopher v. State, 202 Ga. App. 40, 413 S.E.2d 236 (1991).

In a prosecution for driving under the influence, evidence obtained at a roadblock set up to check for driver's licenses and intoxicated drivers was admissible because the roadblock was legitimate and defendant's detention at the roadblock did not constitute an arbitrary, random stop or an unreasonable seizure. White v. State, 233 Ga. App. 276, 503 S.E.2d 891 (1998).

Administrative Inspections (Cont'd)

Allowing supervisory personnel to establish one-way roadblocks at a time and place conducive to stopping potentially intoxicated drivers does not create any significantly greater potential for improper targeting of ethnic or racial minorities than empowering them to select sites for two-way roadblocks. State v. Stearns, 240 Ga. App. 806, 524 S.E.2d 554 (1999).

Detention of driver for further tests for intoxication. — Requiring a driver who appeared to be intoxicated as viewed by police officers at a roadblock to submit to further detention so as to be subjected to field tests for intoxication did not violate the driver's fourth amendment rights. State v. Golden, 171 Ga. App. 27, 318 S.E.2d 693 (1984).

In order for a police officer at a roadblock to institute a secondary detention or seizure, the officer must have, at that time, a reasonable and articulable suspicion of criminal conduct. State v. Fischer, 230 Ga. App. 613, 497 S.E.2d 79 (1998).

Escaped convict. — Police officers who manned a roadblock were authorized to rely upon superior officers' determination that circumstances required an investigative stop of the defendants' vehicles, because there was information that an escaped convict might be traveling with the defendants, and the sighting of a revolver in one car authorized a search of the vehicle. Holbrook v. State, 177 Ga. App. 318, 339 S.E.2d 346 (1985).

Evidence obtained during roadblock inspection of concert-goers admissible. — On a motion to suppress evidence, the judge was authorized to find that a roadblock erected to inspect automobiles entering a rock concert was valid, and evidence resulting from routine traffic checks, or a more extensive warrantless search justified by plainly visible evidence of a nontraffic crime, was admissible. State v. Swift, 232 Ga. 535, 207 S.E.2d 459 (1974).

Border Searches

Validity of warrantless border searches. — U.S. Const., amend. 4 prohibits only unreasonable searches and seizures. Warrantless border searches, including mail searches, are reasonable without probable cause or any ground for suspicion. United States v. Pringle, 576 F.2d 1114 (5th Cir. 1978).

There is reason and probable cause to search every person entering the United States from a foreign country, by reason of such entry alone. A search that would be unreasonable within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 4, if conducted by police officers in the ordinary case, would be a reasonable search if conducted by customs officials in lawful pursuit of unlawful imports. United States v. Kayser, 322 F. Supp. 52 (S.D. Ga. 1970).

Search may be based on unsupported suspicion. — Authorized federal border official may, upon unsupported suspicion, stop and search persons and their vehicles entering this country. United States v. Kayser, 322 F. Supp. 52 (S.D. Ga. 1970).

Unsupported and mere suspicion alone is sufficient to justify a search for purposes of customs law enforcement. Mere suspicion of possible illegal activity within their jurisdiction is enough cause to permit a customs officer to stop and search a person. United States v. Kayser, 322 F. Supp. 52 (S.D. Ga. 1970).

Reasonableness standard in border search context is less rigorous than the probable cause requirement which normally obtains under the fourth amendment. United States v. Fogelman, 586 F.2d 337 (5th Cir. 1978).

A border crossing is not the sine qua non of a valid border search. A reasonable suspicion that the vehicle has crossed the border or has been in contact with those who have done so is required. United States v. Fogelman, 586 F.2d 337 (5th Cir. 1978).

Reasonable cause required to stop and question about citizenship and immigration status. — In order to conduct a stop and ask questions about citizenship and immigration status, U.S. Const., amend. 4 requires that agents must have been aware of specific articulable facts, together with rational inferences from those facts, that reasonably warrant suspicion that the vehicles contain aliens who may be illegally in the country. United States v. Gonzalez-Vargas, 496 F. Supp. 1296 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Further away from border that a stop occurs, the more that is required for the totality of the circumstances to justify a stop within the protection of U.S. Const., amend. 4. A requirement that a greater quantum of evidence should be required to justify a stop and citizenship inquiry the further away from the border or its functional equivalent that such a stop occurs is an appropriate response, in light of U.S. Const., amend. 4, to the problem of the inland movement of those who are not duly admitted to the country. United States v. Gonzalez-Vargas, 496 F. Supp. 1296 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Removal of defendant's shoes did not go beyond a routine border search or constitute an unreasonable strip search. Segree v. State, 186 Ga. App. 489, 367 S.E.2d 882 (1988).

Airports

Limit on access to area of aircraft. — In the interest of general security, airport officials may limit access to the area of the aircraft, as distinguished from the more public areas of the lobby, ticket counters, and other public conveniences. Incident to limiting this access, officials may set up detection devices to screen persons approaching the more sensitive areas. State v. David, 130 Ga. App. 872, 204 S.E.2d 773 (1974).

No seizure where airline passengers voluntarily produce tickets and identification. — There is no seizure, within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 4, where Drug Enforcement Administration agents employing a drug courier profile, request airline passengers to produce their tickets and some form of identification, so long as the passenger's cooperation is voluntary and not the product of coercion, force, or other use of authority. United States v. Pulvano, 629 F.2d 1151 (5th Cir. 1980).

Because police officers initiated contact with a suspect in an airport by asking if the suspect would step aside and talk with them, no fourth amendment interests were implicated. Reid v. State, 179 Ga. App. 144, 345 S.E.2d 635 (1986).

Brief questioning absent detention or coercion. — The police may approach a citizen in an airport, identify themselves, request identification, and briefly question the individual without bringing into play the proscriptions of U.S. Const., amend. 4, so long as the individual is not detained against the individual's will or otherwise coerced into cooperating. As long as the cooperation is voluntary and not the product of police coercion, a seizure has not occurred. United States v. Smith, 649 F.2d 305 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 460 U.S. 1068, 103 S. Ct. 1521, 75 L. Ed. 2d 945 (1983).

The conduct of police officers in approaching the defendant in an airport and identifying themselves as law enforcement officers, accompanied with their request to see the defendant's ticket and identification, did not amount to an intrusion upon any constitutionally protected area. Nor did the absence of an express statement to the defendant that the defendant was free to leave suggest that the defendant was "seized." Such police-citizen encounters involving no coercion or detention are without the compass of U.S. Const., amend. 4. Brown v. State, 188 Ga. App. 417, 373 S.E.2d 99 (1988).

Airport stop and investigation of the defendant did not violate fourth amendment, where the defendant was not seized or restrained until the defendant had been arrested upon probable cause to believe a bag containing cocaine was the defendant's or that the defendant was directly connected to it. Young v. State, 187 Ga. App. 161, 369 S.E.2d 772 (1988).

Stop by drug agent. — Defendant was not "seized" where encounter between a drug agent and the defendant took place in public concourse of airport, the agent wore no uniform and displayed no gun, nor did the agent summon the defendant to the agent's presence, but approached the defendant and properly identified self as a federal agent, requesting but not demanding the defendant's identification and reason for the defendant's trip to Florida, thus subsequent knowledge of possession of cocaine derived during the investigative stop could properly be considered as being acquired in a spot where the agent was authorized to be and where the defendant was lawfully being questioned. Berry v. State, 163 Ga. App. 705, 294 S.E.2d 562 (1982).

Because a Drug Enforcement Administration agent was not in uniform; made no physical contact; did not raise the agent's voice, and after looking at and returning appellant's driver's license and airline tickets, explained that the agent was a narcotics officer and asked if the appellant "would mind cooperating" with the agent and allow the agent to search the appellant for drugs, to which request the appellant stated that the appellant did not mind and had no drugs, and in fact requested that the search be carried out in "some place more private," this result of an initial stop did not constitute a seizure that would trigger fourth amendment protections. McAdoo v. State, 164 Ga. App. 23, 295 S.E.2d 114 (1982).

Airports (Cont'd)

Airport stop of the defendant by a Drug Enforcement Administration agent did not constitute a seizure of the defendant's person within the meaning of this section because the defendant freely consented to converse with the agent after the latter had presented the agent's credentials, the agent made no show of force and the agent's manner was completely noncoercive, the agent did not ask the defendant to move from where the defendant was sitting, and where after the defendant refused consent to a search of the defendant's person and luggage, the agent terminated the conversation and walked away, leaving the defendant free to board the defendant's connecting flight. Yocham v. State, 165 Ga. App. 650, 302 S.E.2d 390 (1983).

There was no seizure because Drug Enforcement Administration officers asked a passenger to consent to a search of the passenger's person and luggage pursuant to a public interview. United States v. Mancini, 802 F.2d 1326 (11th Cir. 1986).

Defendant was not "seized" during an encounter with plainclothes drug enforcement officers at an airport, where the officers "walked up beside" defendant, identified themselves as law enforcement officers, and spoke in a conversational tone, asking for, rather than demanding, defendant's ticket and identification. Owens v. State, 192 Ga. App. 671, 385 S.E.2d 761 (1989).

Detention while waiting for drug detector dog. — Detention of defendant's bag at an airport for over an hour while law enforcement agents obtained a drug detector dog to sniff the bag was a minimal intrusion and did not violate defendant's fourth amendment rights. State v. Grant, 195 Ga. App. 859, 394 S.E.2d 916 (1990).

Detention of foreign language speaking suspect while awaiting interpreter. — A drug enforcement administration agent's investigative detention of a Spanish-speaking suspect in an airport office was reasonable, where the agent, who had reasonable suspicion that the suspect was transporting drugs, acted diligently to obtain the assistance of an interpreter in order to interrogate the suspect. United States v. Espinosa-Guerra, 805 F.2d 1502 (11th Cir. 1986).

Taking defendant to room at airport constituted seizure. — Defendant was "seized," within the meaning of the fourth amendment, when the defendant was taken from an airport concourse to a room to be searched. Miranda v. State, 189 Ga. App. 218, 375 S.E.2d 295 (1988).

Observation of abnormal bulge in boots. — A federal drug enforcement agent noticed that the defendant, an airline passenger, had abnormally large bulges in both boots. When asked about the bulges, the defendant denied there was anything in the boots, an obviously untrue answer, which, coupled with the agent's observation and experience, provided the probable cause required for a warrantless arrest. Clark v. State, 183 Ga. App. 838, 360 S.E.2d 447 (1987).

Consent search of passenger. — Because a Drug Enforcement Agency agent's stopping and questioning an airline passenger at an airport about carrying drugs were proper and did not bring the fourth amendment into play, the agent's asking the passenger whether the passenger would consent to a search of the passenger's person and the passenger's suitcase did not amount to a seizure. United States v. Jensen, 689 F.2d 1361 (11th Cir. 1982).

Warrantless arrest and seizure where cocaine suspect exiting plane. — Because an agent of the Federal Drug Enforcement Administration observed the defendant exit a plane from Miami, a drug source city, the defendant had an unnatural bulge on the inside of each leg, and other incriminating evidence was present, this evidence clearly authorized the trial court to find that the agent had sufficient articulable and reasonable suspicion to conduct a Terry-type stop of the defendant, and while the defendant was lawfully stopped for questioning, the defendant freely and voluntarily consented to an inspection of the defendant's legs by the agent, under the totality of these circumstances, the agent had probable cause to arrest, and, in the search incident to the arrest, the seizure of the cocaine found in the defendant's socks was justified. Chappell v. State, 183 Ga. App. 706, 359 S.E.2d 686 (1987).

Seizure of luggage. — Because the fourth amendment protects people, not things, courts should concern themselves with seizures of luggage only when those seizures impair the right of the possessor to freedom of movement with possessor's luggage. In airport luggage cases, the traveler's possessory interest would be impaired if the seizure of traveler's luggage were tantamount to a seizure of the traveler's person, whether actually, because traveler could not leave without the traveler's luggage, or constructively, where travel plans required traveler to proceed without the luggage. United States v. Puglisi, 723 F.2d 779 (11th Cir. 1984).

Brief seizure of luggage, which interferes with the owner's freedom of movement, must be based on a reasonable, articulable suspicion that a crime is being, or soon will be, committed. United States v. Puglisi, 723 F.2d 779 (11th Cir. 1984).

Detention of defendant's luggage at an airport was not an illegal seizure, where officers had a reasonable suspicion that defendant was carrying narcotics, and a narcotic detector dog was obtained 30 minutes after the luggage was removed from defendant's departing plane. United States v. Cooper, 873 F.2d 269 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 837, 110 S. Ct. 118, 107 L. Ed. 2d 79 (1989).

Removal of airline luggage pending further investigation. — Drug Enforcement Administration agent's removal of defendant's luggage from an airline baggage cart pending further investigation was not an unreasonable seizure. Yocham v. State, 165 Ga. App. 650, 302 S.E.2d 390 (1983).

Lifting luggage to assess weight. — Drug Enforcement Administration agent's action in lifting defendant's suitcase from airline baggage cart to assess its weight did not constitute an unreasonable seizure. Yocham v. State, 165 Ga. App. 650, 302 S.E.2d 390 (1983).

Airports demand special fourth amendment considerations. — Because of the danger posed by air piracy, airports are sui generis and, like international borders, are "critical zones" in which special fourth amendment considerations apply. McSweeney

v. State, 183 Ga. App. 1, 358 S.E.2d 465 (1987).

Implied consent at airport security checkpoints. — Because the defendant voluntarily presented self at the airport checkpoint and placed the defendant's handbag on the counter so that it could be scanned by x-ray, a sign at the airport security checkpoint informing all persons entering the area that they will be subject to search provided the necessary consent for the search of the defendant's handbag. Thus, by the defendant's conduct the defendant consented to the search of the defendant's handbag and its contents as a matter of law, and the marijuana found in the search of the handbag was admissible in evidence. State v. Rosof, 180 Ga. App. 637, 350 S.E.2d 36 (1986).

If an aircraft passenger presents self to an airport security checkpoint, the passenger has consented to the screening of the passenger's luggage by the X-ray machine and the passenger's person by the magnetometer. Moreover, a search need not be curtailed, even if the passenger decides not to take the flight. McSweeney v. State, 183 Ga. App. 1, 358 S.E.2d 465 (1987).

Placement of magnetometer at loading ramp. — There is nothing unreasonable in placement of magnetometer at entrance to loading ramp at airport or in the airport security officers' stopping a person not carrying a ticket when the device gives an alert and asking that person to remove the person's hand from the person's pocket, which might have been thought to contain a weapon. State v. David, 130 Ga. App. 872, 204 S.E.2d 773 (1974).

Exposure of airplane passengers to magnetometers constitutes a search under U.S. Const., amend. 4, but such search even without a warrant is not unreasonable in view of the threat of air piracy. State v. David, 130 Ga. App. 872, 204 S.E.2d 773 (1974).

Drug Couriers

Drug courier profile characteristics have a proper role in making the determination as to the existence of reasonable suspicion. The profile is a valuable administrative tool in guiding law-enforcement officers toward individuals on whom the officers should focus their attention in order to determine whether there is a basis for a specific and articulable suspicion that the particular individual is smuggling drugs. Bothwell v. State, 250 Ga. 573, 300 S.E.2d 126, cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1210, 103 S. Ct. 3545, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1393 (1983).

Drug Couriers (Cont'd)

Stopping of airline passenger proper where passenger matched drug-courier profile. — A Drug Enforcement Agency agent's stopping and interrogation of an airline passenger at an airport was proper and did not bring the fourth amendment into play where the agent knew that the passenger was traveling from a drug center, had an unusual flight itinerary from Phoenix to Miami one evening with a return flight the next morning, and paid for the ticket in cash; and these characteristics were part of a drug-courier profile for detecting possible drug smugglers. United States v. Jensen, 689 F.2d 1361 (11th Cir. 1982).

Probable cause to arrest person with characteristics of drug courier profile. — Where law enforcement agent, who had past experience with narcotic searches, observed a suspect who had suspicious bulge in sweater, who was overheard saying during a telephone call, "I'm just trying to help him out, make a little extra money," and who exhibited some of the characteristics of the drug courier profile, including attempting to conceal fact that suspect was traveling with someone, agent had probable cause to believe that the suspect was committing an offense involving concealed contraband and to place suspect under arrest. Allen v. State, 172 Ga. App. 663, 324 S.E.2d 521 (1984).

Facts sufficient to authorize initial stop. — Because, based on experience, a federal drug enforcement agent knew that drug couriers often transport contraband strapped to their bodies, and because the defendant's surreptitious conduct — looking over the defendant's shoulders and adjusting the "bulge" on the defendant's leg without lifting up the defendant's trousers — clearly indicated an effort to conceal the protrusion, the agent had sufficient grounds for making the initial investigative stop and for seizing the bulge. United States v. Roundtree, 596 F.2d 672 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 871, 100 S. Ct. 149, 62 L. Ed. 2d 96 (1979).

Evidence supported finding that initial stop of defendant's car was not a pretextual stop based upon an impermissible "drug courier profile" but instead was based upon commission of the offense of improper lane usage. O'Keefe v. State, 189 Ga. App. 519, 376 S.E.2d 406 (1988).

Facts sufficient to authorize arrest. — Because the defendant exhibited suspicious "leg bulges" when the defendant exited the plane from Miami, a known source city for the distribution of drugs, which "leg bulges" attracted the immediate attention of two agents of the Federal Drug Enforcement Administration, the appellant was placed under surveillance by both agents and was subsequently confronted, questioned, arrested, and searched by one of them, the defendant's false response to the inquiry about the objects in the defendant's boots, coupled with the agents' observation and experience, provided the probable cause required for the defendant's warrantless arrest. Accordingly, the search incident to that arrest was not violative of the fourth and fourteenth amendments, and the fruits of that search were properly considered by the trial court in convicting the defendant of trafficking in cocaine. Miller v. State, 183 Ga. App. 702, 359 S.E.2d 683, cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 906, 359 S.E.2d 683 (1987).

Searches held unreasonable. — Use of drug courier profile on passenger arriving from a city known to be a major center for narcotics traffic resulted in an unreasonable search. State v. Smith, 164 Ga. App. 142, 296 S.E.2d 141 (1982).

Wiretaps

U.S. Const., amend. 4 applicable to wiretaps. — Fourth amendment rights apply to telephone wiretapping. Dryden v. United States, 391 F.2d 214 (5th Cir. 1968).

Wire-tapping comes within this constitutional protection. Farmer v. State, 228 Ga. 225, 184 S.E.2d 647 (1971).

Validity of warrantless wiretap. — Although a wiretap may not have been unlawful and not subject to prosecutions under former Code 1933, § 26-3001 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-11-62), that cannot alter the mandate of U.S. Const., amend. 4 which makes a wiretap an unlawful search and seizure without the proper warrants. Farmer v. State, 228 Ga. 225, 184 S.E.2d 647 (1971).

Validity of search of telephone conversations unrelated to offense. — A general and wide ranging search through all of the telephone conversations conducted on telephone lines during a period covering approximately 20 days, and seizure and recording of matters in no way related to the crime investigated, constituted a violation of the defendant's right to privacy guaranteed to defendant under the terms of U.S. Const., amend. 4 and by Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII. Cross v. State, 225 Ga. 760, 171 S.E.2d 507 (1969).

Government's electronic surveillance of telephone booth conversations violated privacy upon which defendant justifiably relied while using the telephone booth and constituted a search and seizure within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 4. United States v. Edwards, 441 F.2d 749 (5th Cir. 1971).

Recording conversations where one party consents. — Admitting into evidence recorded conversations between a defendant and a consenting government informant does not violate the fourth amendment right of the accused. United States v. Smith, 918 F.2d 1551 (11th Cir. 1990).

Turning over of surveillance records to aggrieved person. — When a person's rights of U.S. Const., amend. 4 have been violated by means of an unlawful electronic surveillance, the surveillance records must be turned over to the aggrieved person in order that the person may prevail upon the district court to determine in an adversary proceeding whether the surveillance tainted the person's criminal conviction. United States v. Zarzour, 432 F.2d 1 (5th Cir. 1970).

No standing to object to wiretap. — Where none of appellant's fourth amendment rights were violated by initial wiretap of third party's telephone, and where no conversations of appellant were overheard on the tap nor was the tap on appellant's premises, appellant lacked standing to object to the wiretap. Romano v. State, 162 Ga. App. 816, 292 S.E.2d 533 (1982).

Standing to challenge tapping of codefendant's phone. — Defendant had no standing to challenge the electronic surveillance of a codefendant's telephone. Ellis v. State, 256 Ga. 751, 353 S.E.2d 19 (1987).

Defendant had no standing to object to a wiretap of a codefendant's telephone that resulted in the interception of telephone calls between the defendant and the codefendant. Rogers v. State, 182 Ga. App. 599, 356 S.E.2d 546 (1987).

Standing to challenge recording of phone conversation. — If there is no evidence that a person was a party to a telephone conversation, nor did the person own, possess, or control the premises or telephones used in the conversations, the person has no standing to challenge the legality of a recording of the conversation. United States v. Coley, 441 F.2d 1299 (5th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 867, 92 S. Ct. 85, 30 L. Ed. 2d 111 (1971).

Exception to "fruit of poisonous tree" doctrine. — In a prosecution of defendant spouse for solicitation of murder, because there was no state participation in an illegal tapping of initial phone conversation by the other spouse, the "fruit of the poisonous tree" doctrine did not require suppression of an undercover agent's subsequent surreptitiously taped conversations with defendant. Jordan v. State, 211 Ga. App. 86, 438 S.E.2d 371 (1993).

Electronic Surveillance

Installation and monitoring of electronic surveillance device. — Law enforcement officials' reasonable suspicion of criminal activity justifies the placement and monitoring of an electronic tracking device or beeper. The monitoring does not violate rights under U.S. Const., amend. 4 where the actual installation of the beeper is much less intrusive than the typical stop and frisk, installation occurred in a public place, defendant was neither detained nor questioned and suffered no indignity, nothing from the interior or exterior of the automobile was seized or searched, the subsequent monitoring did not violate defendant's reasonable expectation of privacy, the beeper only aided the officials in the performance of their lawful surveillance, and the automobile traveled public roads and was exposed to public view. United States v. Michael, 645 F.2d 252 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 950, 102 S. Ct. 489, 70 L. Ed. 2d 257 (1981).

Warrantless installation of device. — To constitute reasonable suspicion there must be specific and articulable facts, together with rational inferences from those facts, that a crime is afoot. Such reasonable suspicion is adequate to support warrantless installation, by law enforcement officials, of electronic tracking device or beeper on an individual's automobile. United States v. Michael, 645 F.2d 252 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 950, 102 S. Ct. 489, 70 L. Ed. 2d 257 (1981).

Electronic Surveillance (Cont'd)

Information obtained from a pen register placed on telephone can be used as evidence in a criminal trial even if the court order authorizing its installation does not comply with statutory requirements. United States v. Thompson, 936 F.2d 1249 (11th Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1075, 112 S. Ct. 975, 117 L. Ed. 2d 139 (1992).

Inserting beeper in contraband or other object. — Possessors of contraband have no legitimate expectation of privacy in substances which they have no right to possess at all. Accordingly, the insertion of a beeper signaling device into such a package is constitutionally permissible. United States v. Pringle, 576 F.2d 1114 (5th Cir. 1978).

Mere insertion of beeper device either in contraband or in or onto an otherwise lawful object does not violate fourth amendment rights where there is no trespass involved and there exists probable cause to believe that a crime is intended. Dunivant v. State, 155 Ga. App. 884, 273 S.E.2d 621 (1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 998, 101 S. Ct. 1703, 68 L. Ed. 2d 199 (1981).

Placement of a "bumper beeper" on defendant's vehicle constitutes a search within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 4. United States v. Park, 531 F.2d 754 (5th Cir. 1976).

Reasonable suspicion is adequate to support warrantless attachment of electronic tracking device to the exterior of defendant's vehicle parked in a public place by Drug Enforcement Administration agents. United States v. Michael, 645 F.2d 252 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 950, 102 S. Ct. 489, 70 L. Ed. 2d 257 (1981).

Facts sufficient to warrant placing beepers in boxes of chemicals. — Call from a drug company, discovery that address given by purchasers of chemical was not one where chemical manufacturer would operate, and nature of chemicals purchased, in light of agent's familiarity with manufacture of controlled substances, together created sufficient basis for believing that criminal enterprise was underway and placing of electronic beepers in boxes containing chemicals to maintain continuous surveillance under such circumstances does not amount to an invasion of constitutionally protected right under U.S. Const., amend. 4 to privacy nor an impermissible intrusion upon protected property rights. Dunivant v. State, 155 Ga. App. 884, 273 S.E.2d 621 (1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 998, 101 S. Ct. 1703, 68 L. Ed. 2d 199 (1981).

Installation of homing beeper excused by independent radar tracking. — The tracking of an aircraft by radar provided an independent source for its location and, therefore, excused the claimed illegal "search" of the plane as the result of the installation and maintenance of a transponder ("beeper"). United States v. Cotton, 770 F.2d 940 (11th Cir. 1985).

Confessions

Fact that a confession may be voluntary for purposes of the fifth amendment is merely a threshold requirement for a fourth amendment analysis in determining whether the confession should be excluded as the fruit of an unlawful arrest. Ryals v. State, 186 Ga. App. 457, 367 S.E.2d 309 (1988).

Holding accused pending confession as violation of fourth amendment rights. — Defendant's argument that police violated defendant's "state and federal constitutional rights" by holding defendant in custody, and making it clear to defendant that defendant would not be allowed to leave the police station until defendant confessed, was sufficient to raise the contention that the confession was extracted in violation of defendant's due process rights under the fourth as well as the fifth amendment. Ryals v. State, 186 Ga. App. 457, 367 S.E.2d 309 (1988).

Confession was not tainted by an illegal arrest even though a police officer placed the defendant under arrest verbally without a warrant before the officer began the interrogation resulting in the confession, since the officer, having observed the results of the offense, knew that a felony had been committed and had probable cause to believe the defendant had committed the felony. Jarrell v. Balkcom, 735 F.2d 1242 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1103, 105 S. Ct. 2331, 85 L. Ed. 2d 848 (1985).

State Action

State action required for fourth amendment violation. — Because U.S. Const., amend. 14, through which U.S. Const., amend. 4 applies to the state, requires state action, absent some state action in a search context, there can be no fourth amendment violation. State v. Young, 234 Ga. 488, 216 S.E.2d 586 (1975); Gasaway v. State, 137 Ga. App. 653, 224 S.E.2d 772, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 865, 97 S. Ct. 172, 50 L. Ed. 2d 144 (1976).

U.S. Const., amend. 4, through U.S. Const., amend. 14, applies to state induced or supported actions. Its purpose is to curtail abusive state action. In the absence of unreasonable state action to invade the privacy of a citizen or seize the citizen's property without probable cause, there is no protection afforded as a fence against a violation of U.S. Const., amend. 4. State v. Misuraca, 157 Ga. App. 361, 276 S.E.2d 679, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 846, 102 S. Ct. 163, 70 L. Ed. 2d 133 (1981).

U.S. Const., amend. 4 proscribes only governmental action and is wholly inapplicable to a search or seizure, even an unreasonable one, effected by a private individual not acting as an agent to the government or with the participation of a government official. Williams v. State, 257 Ga. 788, 364 S.E.2d 569 (1988).

Rule inapplicable absent participation by federal or state officers in search. — U.S. Const., amend. 4 does not require the exclusion of evidence obtained through a search in which there was no participation or investigation by a federal or state law enforcement officer. State v. Lamb, 137 Ga. App. 437, 224 S.E.2d 51 (1976).

Authority to stop and question hunters. — A Department of Natural Resources officer may approach a hunter in a state-run wildlife management area to determine whether the hunter has the necessary license and permits and to ask the hunter questions about the hunt, regardless of whether the officer has reason to suspect that the hunter has broken any laws. Elzey v. State, 239 Ga. App. 47, 519 S.E.2d 751 (1999).

U.S. Const., amend. 4 cannot be evaded by the use of a private person to do what an officer of the state cannot do. State v. Betsill, 144 Ga. App. 267, 240 S.E.2d 781 (1977).

Search by private individual. — U.S. Const., amend. 4's protections against unreasonable search and seizure do not extend to a search or seizure made by a private individual, conducted without police participation. Moye v. Hopper, 234 Ga. 230, 214 S.E.2d 920 (1975).

Search by private person not covered. — With reference to searches by private persons, there is no prohibition under U.S. Const., amend. 4. State v. Young, 234 Ga. 488, 216 S.E.2d 586 (1975); State v. Lamb, 137 Ga. App. 437, 224 S.E.2d 51 (1976).

A search by a private person is not covered by U.S. Const., amend. 4. U.S. Const., amend. 4 is intended as a restriction on the activities of the government and its agents, and is not addressed to actions, illegal or legal, of private persons. Tootle v. State, 135 Ga. App. 840, 219 S.E.2d 492 (1975).

U.S. Const., amend. 4 protects individuals against unlawful intrusions made by government, not against those made by private parties. Where no official of the federal government has any connection with a wrongful seizure, or any knowledge of it until after the fact, the evidence is admissible. United States v. Jackson, 578 F.2d 1162 (5th Cir. 1978).

U.S. Const., amend. 4, though textually not so limited, actually affords protection only against unreasonable searches and seizures made by governmental officers, so however unreasonable a search by a private person may be, absent participation by governmental agents, U.S. Const., amend. 4 is totally uninvolved. Bunn v. State, 153 Ga. App. 270, 265 S.E.2d 88 (1980).

The fourth amendment proscribes only governmental action and is wholly inapplicable to a search or seizure, even an unreasonable one, effected by a private individual not acting as an agent of the government or with the participation of a government official. Marks v. State, 174 Ga. App. 711, 330 S.E.2d 900 (1985).

With reference to searches by private persons, there is no fourth amendment prohibition and therefore no occasion for applying the exclusionary rule. Lane v. State, 180 Ga. App. 168, 348 S.E.2d 711 (1986).

There is no fourth amendment violation where an individual's privacy is initially invaded by a private act. Therefore, the discovery of illegal material by a private citizen and the verification of this evidence by an officer which leads ultimately to the issuance of an arrest warrant is reasonable and does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 4. Hester v. State, 187 Ga. App. 46, 369 S.E.2d 278 (1988).

State Action (Cont'd)

Evidence illegally seized by private citizens admissible. — U.S. Const., amend. 4, though textually not so limited, actually affords protection only against unreasonable searches and seizures made by governmental officers. Therefore, however unreasonable a search by a private person may be, absent participation by governmental agents, U.S. Const., amend. 4 is totally uninvolved and the evidence, though illegally seized by private individuals, is admissible in a criminal prosecution. State v. Young, 234 Ga. 488, 216 S.E.2d 586, cert. denied, 423 U.S. 1039, 96 S. Ct. 576, 46 L. Ed. 2d 413 (1975).

Absent participation by governmental agents, U.S. Const., amend. 4 is totally uninvolved and the evidence, though illegally seized by private individuals, is admissible in a criminal prosecution. Gasaway v. State, 137 Ga. App. 653, 224 S.E.2d 772, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 865, 97 S. Ct. 172, 50 L. Ed. 2d 144 (1976).

Delivery to law enforcement officers of seized contraband by private parties. — If the seizure was not attended by law enforcement officers, simple delivery of the seized contraband to law enforcement officers does not involve those officers in the search and seizure. State v. Lamb, 137 Ga. App. 437, 224 S.E.2d 51 (1976).

Evidence inadmissible where obtained by private person as agent of government. — Evidence obtained by private person is incompetent where governmental agents, through suggestion, order, or request made a private person their agent for the purposes of criminal investigation, or where governmental agents participate in the search and seizure. Gasaway v. State, 137 Ga. App. 653, 224 S.E.2d 772, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 865, 97 S. Ct. 172, 50 L. Ed. 2d 144 (1976).

Bank officers not federal agents for purposes of constitutional liability. — Under Bivens v. Six Unknown Named Agents, 403 U.S. 388, 91 S. Ct. 1999, 29 L. Ed. 2d 619 (1971), victims of constitutional violations committed by federal officials have a right to recover damages without the need for an authorizing statute, but the regulation of the banking industry does not make bank officers federal agents for the purposes of Bivens's liability. Morast v. Lance, 631 F. Supp. 474 (N.D. Ga. 1986), aff'd, 807 F.2d 926 (11th Cir. 1987).

Entry or search of motel room by motel manager. — It is not unauthorized search for hotel management personnel, including security personnel, to open unlocked items found on their premises in an attempt to determine ownership so that the lost or misplaced property can be returned to its proper owner. Berger v. State, 150 Ga. App. 166, 257 S.E.2d 8 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 927, 100 S. Ct. 1312, 63 L. Ed. 2d 759 (1980).

Where the initial entry into a motel room was made by the manager, a private citizen, it was not prohibited by the fourth amendment. Smith v. State, 186 Ga. App. 303, 367 S.E.2d 573 (1988).

Where upon entering a motel room on which the rent was unpaid, the manager found a grocery sack with marijuana in plain sight and thereafter opened two suitcases and discovered more marijuana and called the police and allowed them in, since it was reasonably apparent to them that the prior occupant had abandoned the premises, the manager's invitation obviated the need for a warrant to authorize the officers' entry. Smith v. State, 186 Ga. App. 303, 367 S.E.2d 573 (1988).

Because a motel manager testified that the manager made no connection between a police call regarding room 103 and the manager's subsequent entry into room 437, and that no rent having been paid for room 437, the manager's search of the luggage for identification was standard procedure, this does not mandate a conclusion that the manager was the agent of the state, in searching suitcases found in room 437. Smith v. State, 186 Ga. App. 303, 367 S.E.2d 573 (1988).

Seizure by apartment employees. — The seizure of cocaine from an apartment, which seizure was accomplished by employees of the apartment complex, was not a violation of defendant's fourth amendment rights, because the apartment complex employees were neither agents of the state nor were they acting pursuant to any police instructions. Green v. State, 187 Ga. App. 373, 370 S.E.2d 348 (1988).

Neighbors of defendant. — Where no law enforcement officers or other state officials were involved when defendant's neighbors entered defendant's trailer and obtained an article of clothing, a shirt, from defendant, the seizure of defendant's shirt by these private parties did not implicate U.S. Const., amend. 4, and U.S. Const., amend. 4 was not violated when the shirt was later turned over to law enforcement officers. Pruitt v. State, 258 Ga. 583, 373 S.E.2d 192 (1988), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 1093, 110 S. Ct. 1170, 107 L. Ed. 2d 1072 (1990).

Resident of home. — Even though police officers requested defendant's spouse to search the marital home for evidence, admission of items the spouse found was not precluded because the spouse lived in the residence and had common authority over it and its contents. Johnson v. State, 231 Ga. App. 823, 499 S.E.2d 145 (1998).

Residents of trailer. — Where all objected to evidence was either turned over to the police by the residents of a trailer, to which the police were voluntarily admitted, this amounted to a search by private individuals, which is not prohibited by U.S. Const., amend. 4 even if unreasonable. Tomlinson v. State, 188 Ga. App. 213, 373 S.E.2d 25 (1988).

Search of suitcase by airline employee. — Where an airline employee searched a suitcase which had opened on a conveyor belt used for loading airplanes in order to prevent loss and breakage of its contents, the search was a private one and was not covered by U.S. Const., amend. 4. Andreu v. State, 124 Ga. App. 793, 186 S.E.2d 137 (1971).

Standing

One must have standing to move to suppress evidence. — The constitutional right violated must belong to the person seeking to suppress illegally seized evidence or the fruits thereof. United States v. Jones, 352 F. Supp. 369 (S.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 481 F.2d 1402 (5th Cir. 1973).

Suppression of product of violation of U.S. Const., amend. 4 can be urged only by one whose own rights have been infringed by the search itself. United States v. Jones, 352 F. Supp. 369 (S.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 481 F.2d 1402 (5th Cir. 1973).

Defendants charged with crimes of possession can secure the benefits of the exclusionary rule only if their own rights have in fact been violated. United States v. Robinson, 504 F. Supp. 425 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Rights may not be vicariously asserted. — Rights under U.S. Const., amend. 4 are personal rights which may not be vicariously asserted. Tisdol v. State, 158 Ga. App. 852, 282 S.E.2d 411 (1981); United States v. Herbst, 641 F.2d 1161 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 851, 102 S. Ct. 292, 70 L. Ed. 2d 141 (1981); Romano v. State, 162 Ga. App. 816, 292 S.E.2d 533 (1982); Mann v. State, 196 Ga. App. 730, 397 S.E.2d 17 (1990); Bramblett v. State, 205 Ga. App. 290, 422 S.E.2d 18 (1992); Henderson v. State, 211 Ga. App. 102, 438 S.E.2d 181 (1993).

That rights under U.S. Const., amend. 4 are personal in nature, and that such rights cannot bestow vicarious protection on those who do not have a reasonable expectation of privacy in the place to be searched, was recognized by the common law. Steagald v. United States, 451 U.S. 204, 101 S. Ct. 1642, 68 L. Ed. 2d 38 (1981).

The fact that the defendant's companion may have possessed a legitimate expectation of privacy in a carry-on bag was of no aid to the defendant. Rights secured by the fourth amendment are personal and cannot be vicariously asserted. United States v. McKennon, 814 F.2d 1539 (11th Cir. 1987).

Requirement for standing. — In order to qualify as a person aggrieved by an unlawful search and seizure, one must have been a victim of a search or seizure, one against whom the search was directed, as distinguished from one who claims prejudice only through the use of evidence gathered as a consequence of a search or seizure directed at someone else. Wood v. State, 224 Ga. 121, 160 S.E.2d 368 (1968).

Violation under U.S. Const., amend. 4 can be successfully urged only by those whose rights were violated by the search itself, not by those who are aggrieved solely by the introduction of damaging evidence. Grantling v. State, 229 Ga. 746, 194 S.E.2d 405 (1972).

The rights assured by U.S. Const., amend. 4 are personal rights, and a person is aggrieved by a search and seizure only if that person's own protection under U.S. Const., amend. 4 has been infringed. United States v. Jones, 352 F. Supp. 369 (S.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 481 F.2d 1402 (5th Cir. 1973).

Standing (Cont'd)

A defendant has standing to contest the validity of a search if a reasonable expectation of privacy was violated by the intrusion. United States v. Edwards, 577 F.2d 883 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 968, 99 S. Ct. 458, 58 L. Ed. 2d 427 (1978).

If a defendant does not show that the defendant was on the premises at the time of the contested search and seizure, or allege a proprietary or possessory interest in the premises, and is not charged with an offense requiring possession of the seized evidence at the time of the contested search and seizure, the defendant cannot be heard to question the constitutionality of the search. United States v. Williams, 613 F.2d 560 (5th Cir. 1980).

In order to establish standing, one must assert either a property or possessory interest in the premises searched or the property seized. State v. Peabody, 247 Ga. 580, 277 S.E.2d 668 (1981).

One wishing to suppress evidence obtained from one's person and car is "person aggrieved". — Because the evidence that the defendant sought to suppress was obtained during the execution of a search warrant authorizing the search of the defendant's person and automobile, the defendant would be a person aggrieved by the search, if it should be held to be unlawful. Wood v. State, 224 Ga. 121, 160 S.E.2d 368 (1968).

Person aggrieved by evidence seized from third party. — A person who is aggrieved by an illegal search and seizure only through the introduction of damaging evidence secured by search of a third person's premises or property has not had any of the defendant's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 4 infringed. Cuevas v. State, 151 Ga. App. 605, 260 S.E.2d 737 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 943, 100 S. Ct. 1338, 63 L. Ed. 2d 776 (1980); Romano v. State, 162 Ga. App. 816, 292 S.E.2d 533 (1982).

It is the relationship of the person with the property searched that gives rise to the protection of the fourth amendment, and an individual who claims to be aggrieved by an illegal search and seizure only through the introduction of evidence secured by a search of a third person's premises has not had any of the individual's fourth amendment rights infringed. Todd v. State, 184 Ga. App. 750, 362 S.E.2d 400 (1987); Morrill v. State, 216 Ga. App. 468, 454 S.E.2d 796 (1995).

Visitors. — A person has no standing to object to a search of the premises, and particularly a limited one, where the person is a mere visitor (although a frequent one), since the person has no expectation of privacy in the premises of another, where the person has neither a proprietary nor a possessory interest. Dennis v. State, 166 Ga. App. 715, 305 S.E.2d 443 (1983).

Defendant, who was merely a guest who came and went at irregular intervals, had neither a proprietary nor a possessory interest in the searched premises, and lacked standing to challenge the validity of the search. State v. Scott, 176 Ga. App. 887, 339 S.E.2d 276 (1985).

House guest, moving to suppress items found in search of house, lacked standing, failing to prove a sufficient connection to the residency to justify a reasonable expectation of privacy. An oral agreement to move into the house had not been effectuated (i.e., the guest's personal effects had not been moved) and the personal relationship between the guest and the resident was unsettled. United States v. Gilley, 608 F. Supp. 1065 (S.D. Ga. 1985).

Overnight guest in rented room. — Defendant's claim that the defendant was a frequent "overnight guest" and "social guest" in a room rented by another was not sufficient to show the defendant had standing to challenge officers' entry into the room. Atwater v. State, 233 Ga. App. 339, 503 S.E.2d 919 (1998).

Search of defendant's sibling's home. — Immunity from unreasonable search and seizure is privilege personal to those whose rights have been infringed, and the accused is not such a person, if the home of the sibling be considered searched unreasonably. Marsh v. State, 223 Ga. 590, 157 S.E.2d 273 (1967).

Standing of lessee to object to search of adjacent unleased area. — Since law enforcement agents did not enter property belonging to or under the control of the defendant and the defendant's family, who leased certain property from a landowner but grew marijuana in an adjacent unleased area, the defendant, who was not a caretaker of the owner's property, had no standing to object to the search of the unleased area.

Smallwood v. State, 171 Ga. App. 784, 321 S.E.2d 118 (1984).

Standing to contest warrantless search of automobile. — Objection that an automobile was illegally searched without a warrant is not available to one who makes no claim to the ownership or possession of the automobile or its contents and who was not present at the time of the search. Gugliotta v. State, 117 Ga. App. 212, 160 S.E.2d 266 (1968).

Because a warrantless search of an automobile was made, which was not the property of the accused and because the accused did not show that the accused was driving the same with permission of the owner or with permission of anyone entitled to possession of the automobile, the accused has no standing to invoke constitutional guarantees to exclude evidence found in the search. Brisbane v. State, 233 Ga. 339, 211 S.E.2d 294 (1974).

Passenger in car owned by another has no interest in car and no standing to object to search. Autry v. State, 150 Ga. App. 584, 258 S.E.2d 268, overruled on other grounds, Reece v. State, 152 Ga. App. 760, 264 S.E.2d 258 (1979).

Fact that defendant may have legitimately been on premises searched (i.e., as passenger in automobile) does not in and of itself entitle one to challenge the validity of the search and seizure. Meyer v. State, 150 Ga. App. 613, 258 S.E.2d 217 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 952, 100 S. Ct. 1602, 63 L. Ed. 2d 788 (1980).

Defendant-passenger in automobile, owned by another, being driven at time of arrest does not have standing to object to claimed violation of U.S. Const., amend. 4 regarding execution of warrantless search of automobile. State v. Peabody, 247 Ga. 580, 277 S.E.2d 668 (1981).

Passenger in rented automobile lacked standing. — Defendant, who was a mere passenger in a rented automobile, had no property or possessory interest in the vehicle and lacked standing to object to the lawfulness of a search of the trunk of the vehicle. Mecale v. State, 186 Ga. App. 276, 367 S.E.2d 52 (1988).

Because defendant driver and passenger had equal access to use of truck owned by the passenger's parent, each had legitimate expectation of privacy in the truck, and thus had standing to contest the admission of evidence seized in the search of the truck. Stone v. State, 162 Ga. App. 654, 292 S.E.2d 525 (1982).

If owner of an automobile relinquishes actual possession to a third party, the owner thereby abandons any expectation of privacy in the automobile, and therefore lacks standing to contest the legality of the search and seizure of the vehicle. Prothro v. State, 186 Ga. App. 836, 368 S.E.2d 793 (1988).

Standing of one permitting intoxicated driver to operate automobile. — The question of whether a defendant, charged with permitting an intoxicated driver to operate an automobile, has standing to urge the violation of the driver's statutory rights as basis for excluding intoximeter evidence did not involve questions of constitutional guarantees against unreasonable search and seizure, but did require consideration of the language of the statute (§ 40-6-392) itself. Munda v. State, 172 Ga. App. 857, 324 S.E.2d 799 (1984).

Stolen car. — An accused can have no legitimate expectation of privacy in a stolen car. Sanborn v. State, 251 Ga. 169, 304 S.E.2d 377 (1983).

Abandoned or unclaimed luggage. — Defendant has no standing to challenge the search of an abandoned briefcase or an unclaimed suitcase, and has no legitimate expectation of privacy in the abandoned or unclaimed items. United States v. Canady, 615 F.2d 694 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 862, 101 S. Ct. 165, 166 L. Ed. 2d 78 (1980).

Abandoned bank currency bag. — A bank currency bag which is found on a public street under the accused's car is abandoned property, which does not fall within the ambit of the protection of U.S. Const., amend. 4, and the car's occupant lacks standing to protest its seizure. Hawkins v. State, 146 Ga. App. 312, 246 S.E.2d 343 (1978).

Ownership of seized contraband alone is not sufficient to entitle a defendant to challenge a search; the defendant bears the burden of proving not only that the search was illegal but also that the defendant had a legitimate expectation of privacy in the area searched. Stone v. State, 162 Ga. App. 654, 292 S.E.2d 525 (1982).

Standing of one charged with unlawful possession. — A defendant charged with a crime that includes, as an essential element of the offense charged, possession of the seized evidence at the time of the contested search and seizure does not have automatic standing to challenge the legality of the search and seizure. United States v. Odum, 625 F.2d 626 (5th Cir. 1980).

Standing (Cont'd)

Where possession is a vital element of an offense, the defendant need not prove a possessory interest in real estate in order to contest an illegal search. Dunbar v. State, 163 Ga. App. 243, 292 S.E.2d 897 (1982).

When possession of seized evidence is itself an essential element of the offense with which the defendant is charged, the state is precluded from denying that the defendant has the requisite possessory interest to challenge the admission of the evidence. However, it is only where possession at the time of the contested search and seizure is an essential element of the offense charged that one is entitled to automatic standing. Meyer v. State, 150 Ga. App. 613, 258 S.E.2d 217 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 952, 100 S. Ct. 1602, 63 L. Ed. 2d 788 (1980).

Because the defendant disavowed any possessory or ownership interest in the 74.8 grams of cocaine found on the codefendant's person, the defendant had no standing to complain of its seizure. Randall v. State, 194 Ga. App. 153, 390 S.E.2d 74 (1990).

Codefendants and conspirators have no "special standing" and cannot prevent admission against them of information illegally obtained through electronic surveillance against another defendant. United States v. Jones, 352 F. Supp. 369 (S.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 481 F.2d 1402 (5th Cir. 1973).

Suppression as to defendant with standing requires suppression as to all defendants. — If the defendant with standing does move to suppress illegally seized evidence, the motion, if granted, should require suppression as to all defendants in a joint trial. Wrongful denial of a motion to suppress illegally seized evidence prejudices both the person making such motion as well as the codefendants and the right to have such evidence excluded cannot be limited to the defendant moving to do so. United States v. Jones, 352 F. Supp. 369 (S.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 481 F.2d 1402 (5th Cir. 1973).

Motion to suppress sufficiently alleging standing. — A motion by a defendant to suppress evidence because of an unlawful search and seizure sufficiently alleges that defendant had standing to challenge the legality of defendant's arrest, the seizure of the vehicle, and the following search, if the facts alleged in the motion can be fairly construed to state that defendant was legitimately on the premises of a codefendant at the time of their arrest and of seizure of the latter's property and, therefore, the fruits of the search and seizure were proposed to be used against defendant so that defendant would be aggrieved by an unlawful search and seizure. Bramblett v. State, 135 Ga. App. 770, 219 S.E.2d 26 (1975).

Defendant failed to demonstrate requisite expectation of privacy to establish standing to challenge admission of evidence. — See United States v. Perry, 746 F.2d 713 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 470 U.S. 1054, 105 S. Ct. 1760, 84 L. Ed. 2d 822 (1985).

Admissibility of Evidence; Exclusionary Rule

1. In General

Under Mapp v. Ohio, 367 U.S. 643, 81 S. Ct. 1684, 6 L. Ed. 2d 1081 (1961), the sanction for an unconstitutional search is exclusion of the evidence obtained as a result of that search. Lackey v. State, 246 Ga. 331, 271 S.E.2d 478 (1980).

Fruits of an illegal arrest are not admissible in evidence in a criminal trial. State v. Bishop, 188 Ga. App. 881, 374 S.E.2d 808 (1988).

Limitation of "fruit of poisonous tree doctrine." — The "fruit of the poisonous tree" doctrine is limited to evidence which the police cannot trace to an independent and lawful source. State v. Wright, 204 Ga. App. 382, 419 S.E.2d 334, cert. denied, 204 Ga. App. 922, 419 S.E.2d 334 (1992).

Illegal arrest invokes exclusion only where Constitution violated. — Exclusionary sanction applies to any "fruits" of a constitutional violation and an illegal arrest does not necessarily violate the constitution. Vaughn v. State, 248 Ga. 127, 281 S.E.2d 594 (1981).

Exclusionary rule does not apply absent violation of U.S. Const., amend. 4, and sometimes does not apply when such violation occurs. State v. Lamb, 137 Ga. App. 437, 224 S.E.2d 51 (1976).

Purpose of exclusionary rule. — The purpose of U.S. Const., amend. 4 — that is, deterrence of governmental lawlessness — is served by application of the exclusionary rule regardless of the criminal or administrative nature of the proceedings involved, and regardless of the personal or corporate nature of the party aggrieved by the unlawful seizure. FTC v. Page, 378 F. Supp. 1052 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

The exclusionary rule was created and has been applied primarily for the purpose of deterring police invasions of a defendant's constitutional rights by banning evidence illegally seized from introduction at a criminal trial of that defendant. Amiss v. State, 135 Ga. App. 784, 219 S.E.2d 28 (1975).

The primary reason for the exclusionary rule is to deter police misconduct, whether it be negligent or intentional. State v. Stringer, 258 Ga. 605, 372 S.E.2d 426 (1988).

The exclusionary rule is designed to deter police misconduct rather than to punish the errors of issuing magistrates, it has been modified so as not to bar the admission of evidence seized in reasonable, good-faith reliance by an officer on a search warrant that is subsequently held to be defective. Bell v. State, 204 Ga. App. 528, 419 S.E.2d 729 (1992).

Deterrent benefit of exclusion must outweigh interest in providing evidence. — For the exclusionary rule to be applied, the deterrent benefit of exclusion must outweigh the detriment to the public interest in providing factfinders with all relevant testimony. In many cases the deterrent purpose is served by merely precluding the government's use in its case-in-chief of any fruits of an illegal search at a criminal trial. Jonas v. City of Atlanta, 647 F.2d 580 (5th Cir. 1981).

No "good faith" exception. — In Georgia, a defendant's statutory right to exclusion of evidence has no "good faith" exception, so a court must determine the validity of a search based on the facts known to the officer at the time of the search, and if it concludes from those facts that the search was not valid, it cannot uphold it on grounds that, under the facts, the officer may have drawn a good-faith legal conclusion contrary to the court's conclusion. Randolph v. State, 264 Ga. App. 396, 590 S.E.2d 834 (2003).

Evidence from unlawful search or interrogation inadmissible. — Evidence of guilt that the defendant, either directly or indirectly, is compelled to disclose by an unlawful search and seizure of the defendant's person under illegal arrest, is not admissible in a criminal prosecution of the person thus illegally arrested. Raif v. State, 109 Ga. App. 354, 136 S.E.2d 169 (1964).

Evidence obtained as result of illegal search and seizure is not admissible in either federal or state courts. Raif v. State, 109 Ga. App. 354, 136 S.E.2d 169 (1964); Cash v. State, 222 Ga. 55, 148 S.E.2d 420 (1966).

Evidence obtained under illegal arrest not admissible in state courts. Raif v. State, 109 Ga. App. 354, 136 S.E.2d 169 (1964).

All evidence obtained by searches and seizures in violation of the Constitution is inadmissible in state court. Carson v. State ex rel. Price, 221 Ga. 299, 144 S.E.2d 384 (1965).

Because a warrant was illegally issued and the search under it was unlawful, it was error to deny the defendant's motion to suppress the evidence that was the fruit of the search. Burns v. State, 119 Ga. App. 678, 168 S.E.2d 786 (1969).

Neither evidence found in illegal search, nor knowledge acquired from such search, can be used legally in enforcing the law. United States v. Edwards, 441 F.2d 749 (5th Cir. 1971).

If evidence is obtained by an unlawful search or by means of custodial interrogation in the absence of proper warnings, the knowledge acquired thereby cannot be legally used in enforcing the law. United States v. Jones, 352 F. Supp. 369 (S.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 481 F.2d 1402 (5th Cir. 1973).

Evidence seized during unlawful search should not be admitted into evidence since the obtaining of it was tainted by the illegal arrest. Hill v. State, 140 Ga. App. 121, 230 S.E.2d 336 (1976).

Evidence obtained under a void warrant is evidence illegally obtained and it has been settled once and for all that the taint of illegal procurement forbids its use as evidence. Anderson v. State, 155 Ga. App. 25, 270 S.E.2d 263 (1980).

The law proscribes only unreasonable searches and seizures and prohibits the use of evidence seized as a result of lawless police activity. State v. Sanders, 155 Ga. App. 274, 270 S.E.2d 850 (1980).

Admissibility of Evidence; Exclusionary Rule (Cont'd)

1. In General (Cont'd)

Under the exclusionary rule, evidence obtained by state or federal government officials in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 4 cannot be used in a proceeding against the victim of the illegal search and seizure. Romano v. Home Ins. Co., 490 F. Supp. 191 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Unconstitutionally obtained evidence not to be used at all. — The essence of U.S. Const., amend. 4, forbidding the acquisition of evidence in a certain way, is that not merely evidence so acquired shall not be used before the court, but that it shall not be used at all. FTC v. Page, 378 F. Supp. 1052 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

Evidence illegally obtained is not excluded because it is untrustworthy or lacks credibility, but simply because it was obtained in violation of the Constitution. United States v. Edwards, 441 F.2d 749 (5th Cir. 1971).

Exclusionary rule has nothing to do with reliability of fact-finding process in determining guilt or innocence, but is simply a means of making effective the protection of U.S. Const., amend. 4 against unreasonable searches and seizures. United States v. Edwards, 441 F.2d 749 (5th Cir. 1971).

Reason for different treatment of unconstitutional search and unconstitutional arrest. — The difference in treatment between an unconstitutional search (suppression of the items seized) and an unconstitutional arrest (no foreclosure of prosecution) has been explained as being in the "public interest in having the guilty brought to book." Lackey v. State, 246 Ga. 331, 271 S.E.2d 478 (1980).

Sanction for an unconstitutional arrest is not suppression of the prosecution. — The sanction for an unconstitutional arrest is exclusion of the evidence obtained as a result of that arrest. Lackey v. State, 246 Ga. 331, 271 S.E.2d 478 (1980).

Sanction for an unconstitutional arrest is exclusion of any evidence obtained during the arrest, but a plea in bar of prosecution is not an authorized sanction. Thus, although it is arguable that a photograph of the defendant taken after the alleged illegal arrest should have been suppressed, the purported illegal arrest would not act as a plea in bar to the prosecution, nor would it prevent the in-court identification of the defendant where such identification was based on the events surrounding the incident itself, and not on events following the purported illegal arrest. Lindsey v. State, 182 Ga. App. 10, 354 S.E.2d 650 (1987).

Exclusion of evidence to enforce guaranty unrelated to fact-finding applicable only prospectively. — Where concededly relevant evidence would be excluded in order to enforce a constitutional guaranty unrelated to the fact-finding process, the United States Supreme Court has consistently held that any such new constitutional principle would be accorded only prospective application. State v. Patterson, 143 Ga. App. 225, 237 S.E.2d 707 (1977).

Retroactive application of exclusionary rule not required. — If law enforcement officers reasonably believe in good faith that evidence seized was admissible at trial, judicial integrity is not offended by the introduction into evidence of that material even if decisions subsequent to the search or seizure have broadened the exclusionary rule to encompass evidence seized in that manner and, when this is shown, retroactive application of the new rule is not required. Lawson v. State, 143 Ga. App. 776, 240 S.E.2d 188 (1977).

Exclusionary rule not remedial in nature. — The main thrust of the exclusionary rule is to deter illegal conduct on the part of public officials; it was not intended to be remedial in nature. Romano v. Home Ins. Co., 490 F. Supp. 191 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

When rule must be applied. — If there is a causal connection between an illegal arrest and a custodial statement of confession, then the exclusionary rule must be applied to ensure compliance with the fourth amendment. State v. Stringer, 258 Ga. 605, 372 S.E.2d 426 (1988).

An arrest unsupported by probable cause and made solely for the purpose of investigating a crime in the hope that something will turn up as a result of the ensuing investigation, intrudes so severely on the interest protected by the fourth amendment that exclusion of the statement is mandated. State v. Stringer, 258 Ga. 605, 372 S.E.2d 426 (1988).

Mere fact that action is taken by state officials is not adequate to invoke exclusionary rule even if that action violates U.S. Const., amend. 4. State v. Young, 234 Ga. 488, 216 S.E.2d 586, cert. denied, 423 U.S. 1039, 96 S. Ct. 576, 46 L. Ed. 2d 413 (1975).

Good-faith exception. — Evidence which is seized in good-faith reliance upon a search warrant issued by a neutral and detached magistrate will generally not be subject to the suppression on fourth amendment grounds, regardless of whether the allegations upon which the magistrate based the issuance of the warrant were sufficient to establish the probable cause for the search. Betha v. State, 192 Ga. App. 789, 386 S.E.2d 515 (1989).

The good faith exception to the exclusionary rule for searches conducted pursuant to warrants applied, where the warrant was not so lacking in indicia of probable cause as to render official belief in the existence of probable cause entirely unreasonable. United States v. Taxacher, 902 F.2d 867 (11th Cir. 1990), cert. denied, 499 U.S. 919, 111 S. Ct. 1307, 113 L. Ed. 2d 242 (1991).

Because the exclusionary rule is designed to deter police misconduct rather than to punish the errors of issuing magistrates, it has been modified so as not to bar the admission of evidence seized in reasonable, good-faith reliance by an officer on a search warrant that is subsequently held to be defective. State v. Morris, 198 Ga. App. 441, 402 S.E.2d 288 (1991).

The exclusionary rule has been modified so as not to bar the admission of evidence seized in reasonable, good-faith reliance by an officer on a search warrant that is subsequently held to be defective. Talley v. State, 200 Ga. App. 442, 408 S.E.2d 463 (1991).

Existence of technical defects in a search warrant or its accompanying affidavit will not preclude the existence of objective good faith on the part of the police in relying on the validity of the warrant. Talley v. State, 200 Ga. App. 442, 408 S.E.2d 463 (1991).

Independent basis. — Denial of a defendant's motion to suppress was affirmed as the defendant's flight from an improper Terry stop gave the police officers an independent basis to arrest the defendant; thus, the methamphetamine found in close proximity to the defendant was admissible. Reynolds v. State, 280 Ga. App. 712, 634 S.E.2d 842 (2006).

Question whether evidence should be suppressed. — In those cases wherein a search warrant has been sought and issued, the ultimate question of whether evidence should be suppressed is not dependent upon the magistrate's erroneous determination that the warrant should have issued, but upon the officer's objective good-faith reliance upon the magistrate's determination, erroneous though that determination might have been. Debey v. State, 192 Ga. App. 512, 385 S.E.2d 694 (1989).

Evidence not obtained by exploiting illegal arrest not suppressible. — Even if a warrantless arrest is illegal, neither a voluntary confession nor the fruits of a consensual search are suppressible where, in the totality of surrounding facts and circumstances of the case, neither was obtained by exploitation of the illegality of the arrest, there was in fact probable cause to obtain an arrest warrant, and the behavior and purpose of the police was neither a fishing expedition nor in purposeful and flagrant bad faith. Knighton v. State, 166 Ga. App. 390, 304 S.E.2d 512 (1983).

Evidence is not fruit of the poisonous tree simply because it would not have come to light but for the illegal actions of the police. Rather, the more apt question in such a case is whether, granting establishment of the primary illegality, the evidence to which instant objection is made has been come at by exploitation of that illegality or instead by means sufficiently distinguishable to be purged of the primary taint. Thus, even if evidence would not have been discovered but for the illegal police conduct, if the derivative evidence has only an attenuated link to the illegality, it need not be suppressed. Ruffin v. State, 201 Ga. App. 792, 412 S.E.2d 850 (1991).

Purging of initial illegal taint. — Evidence is not "fruit of the poisonous tree" simply because it would not have come to light but for the illegal actions of the police. Rather, the more apt question in such a case is whether, granting establishment of the primary illegality, the evidence to which an objection is made has been come at by exploitation of that illegality or instead by means sufficiently distinguishable to be purged of the primary taint. McKinney v. State, 261 Ga. App. 218, 582 S.E.2d 463 (2003).

Discovery of outstanding warrant during routine check. — Police officer's discovery of a valid outstanding warrant against the defendant during routine computer check attenuated the connection between the illegal stop and the search that revealed incriminating evidence. Ruffin v. State, 201 Ga. App. 792, 412 S.E.2d 850 (1991).

Admissibility of Evidence; Exclusionary Rule (Cont'd)

1. In General (Cont'd)

Evidence inadvertently discovered in course of justified intrusion. — On occasion where one, in the course of an intrusion for which a prior justification exists, comes inadvertently upon a piece of incriminating evidence, such evidence is admissible on the basis that no infraction of rights under U.S. Const., amend. 4 was intended. Williams v. State, 157 Ga. App. 476, 277 S.E.2d 923, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 823, 102 S. Ct. 109, 70 L. Ed. 2d 95 (1981).

Inevitable discovery exception to exclusionary rule. — Under the inevitable discovery exception to the exclusionary rule, evidence is admissible that otherwise would be excludable if it inevitably would have been discovered by lawful means had the illegal conduct not occurred. The exception applies to inevitable lawful discoveries by private parties as well as by government agents. United States v. Hernandez-Cano, 808 F.2d 779 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 482 U.S. 918, 107 S. Ct. 3194, 96 L. Ed. 2d 682 (1987).

Statement made during illegal detention inadmissible. — If the search and arrest are illegal, then an admission given during the illegal detention is tainted and is therefore inadmissible. Hill v. State, 140 Ga. App. 121, 230 S.E.2d 336 (1976).

Exclusionary rule does not apply to evidence derived from a voluntary but Miranda-tainted statement. Wilson v. Zant, 249 Ga. 373, 290 S.E.2d 442, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1092, 103 S. Ct. 580, 74 L. Ed. 2d 940 (1982), but see, Morgan v. State, 267 Ga. 203, 476 S.E.2d 747 (1996).

Although certain evidence may be admissible under the fifth amendment, it may still be excludable under the fourth amendment, if the evidence was obtained by exploitation of an illegal arrest. Griffith v. State, 172 Ga. App. 255, 322 S.E.2d 921 (1984).

Miranda warnings do not necessarily cure taint. — Though statements by the defendant may possibly be voluntary under U.S.

Const., amend. 5, it does not necessarily mean they were voluntary under U.S. Const., amend. 4 since they might be tainted by an illegal arrest and detention. Hill v. State, 140 Ga. App. 121, 230 S.E.2d 336 (1976).

Miranda warnings do not, without more, dissipate the taint of an illegal seizure. United States v. Robinson, 625 F.2d 1211 (5th Cir. 1980), rev'd on other grounds, 690 F.2d 869 (11th Cir. 1982).

Even though proper Miranda warnings may have been given prior to a defendant's making an incriminatory statement and even though the statement may have been voluntary for U.S. Const., amend. 5 purposes, the statement is nonetheless inadmissible under U.S. Const., amend. 4 if it is the product of an illegal seizure. Dupree v. State, 247 Ga. 470, 277 S.E.2d 18 (1981).

There is no per se rule that Miranda warnings in and of themselves suffice to cure a fourth amendment violation involved in obtaining inculpatory statements during custodial interrogation following a formal arrest on less than probable cause. In order to use such statements, the prosecution must show not only that the statements meet fifth amendment requirements (voluntariness), but also that the causal connection between the statements and the illegal arrest is sufficiently attenuated so as to purge the primary taint of the illegal arrest in light of the distinct policies and interests of the fourth amendment. Robinson v. State, 166 Ga. App. 741, 305 S.E.2d 381 (1983).

Even though proper Miranda warnings may have been given prior to a defendant's making an incriminatory statement and even though the statement may have been voluntary for fifth amendment purposes, the statement is nonetheless inadmissible under U.S. Const., amend. 4 if it is the product of an illegal seizure. Green v. State, 168 Ga. App. 558, 309 S.E.2d 687 (1983).

For confession given after illegal seizure to be admissible in evidence, government must prove two things: that the confession was voluntary for purposes of U.S. Const., amend. 5, and that the confession was not the product of the illegal seizure. The same requirements apply where the evidence has been obtained by means of a consent to search rather than a confession. United States v. Robinson, 625 F.2d 1211 (5th Cir. 1980), rev'd on other grounds, 690 F.2d 869 (11th Cir. 1982).

Burden on state to show admissibility of statements made during unlawful custody. — Each case is to be judged individually on its facts, and the burden is on the prosecution to show the admissibility of statements made by the defendant while in unlawful custody. Hill v. State, 140 Ga. App. 121, 230 S.E.2d 336 (1976).

Burden of proof on state to show testimony not induced to validate illegally obtained evidence. — If a defendant's testimony is induced in order to overcome the impact of illegally obtained evidence, then the defendant's testimony is tainted by the illegally obtained evidence, and the state has the burden to show that its illegal action did not induce the defendant's testimony. Smith v. State, 140 Ga. App. 94, 230 S.E.2d 101 (1976).

Effect of unlawfully seized evidence on lawfully seized evidence. — There is no requirement that where evidence has been lawfully seized it must be suppressed if officers unlawfully seized other material, unless the unlawfully seized evidence led to the discovery of the evidence which was admitted. Waller v. State, 251 Ga. 124, 303 S.E.2d 437 (1983), rev'd on other grounds, 467 U.S. 39, 104 S. Ct. 2210, 81 L. Ed. 2d 31 (1984).

No constitutional right to suppress evidence solely on ground that others have access to it. Ladson v. State, 248 Ga. 470, 285 S.E.2d 508 (1981).

Entrapment is not a rationale for suppressing evidence but is an affirmative defense to a criminal prosecution. State v. Baker, 216 Ga. App. 66, 453 S.E.2d 115 (1995).

Consideration of all sworn testimony regarding probable cause on motion to suppress. — A trial judge in a hearing on a motion to suppress certain evidence on the grounds that there was no probable cause for issuing the search warrant is duty bound to consider all of the sworn testimony given to the magistrate, whether it be favorable or unfavorable to the finding of probable cause. State v. Causey, 132 Ga. App. 17, 207 S.E.2d 225 (1974).

Evidence obtained under fatally defective affidavit inadmissible. — An affidavit based on an informer's tip is fatally defective as the basis for a search warrant if it recites absolutely nothing that would show the informer's reliability nor states how the informer obtained the information, and, under former Code 1933, § 27-313(2) (see O.C.G.A. § 17-5-30) the evidence so obtained must be suppressed. Grebe v. State, 125 Ga. App. 873, 189 S.E.2d 698 (1972).

Admissibility of in-court identification following tainted identification. — When a victim has sufficient independent basis for an in-court identification, even a tainted pretrial identification process that is suggestive will not require exclusion of the in-court identification unless there was a fourth amendment violation. Rivers v. State, 225 Ga. App. 558, 484 S.E.2d 519 (1997).

Admissibility of defendant's pretrial testimony on motion to suppress. — If a defendant testifies in support of a motion to suppress evidence on grounds under U.S. Const., amend. 4, the defendant's testimony may not thereafter be admitted against the defendant at trial on the issue of guilt unless the defendant makes no objection. Culpepper v. State, 132 Ga. App. 733, 209 S.E.2d 18 (1974); Cervi v. State, 248 Ga. 325, 282 S.E.2d 629 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 938, 102 S. Ct. 1995, 72 L. Ed. 2d 457 (1982).

Error to admit incriminating statements made in support of pretrial motion to suppress. — It is error for a trial court to admit in evidence on the issue of guilt incriminating statements given by a defendant in support of an unsuccessful pretrial motion to suppress; such a practice would require a defendant to surrender the defendant's right under U.S. Const., amend. 4 against unreasonable search and seizure in order to maintain the defendant's right to remain silent under U.S. Const., amend. 5. Sharp v. United States, 410 F.2d 969 (5th Cir. 1969).

Evidence of commission of a crime other than the one charged is generally not admissible. Bixby v. State, 234 Ga. 812, 218 S.E.2d 609 (1975).

Exclusionary rule not applicable to public school students aggrieved by seizure by school officials. — Granting that public primary and secondary school students have minimal rights under U.S. Const., amend. 4 to be free from searches and seizures by school officials, nonetheless, the exclusionary rule is not applicable to enforce those rights, and students aggrieved by the action of their officials must fall back upon such other legal remedies as applicable law may allow them. Although school officials are governmental officers subject to some limitations under U.S. Const., amend. 4 in searching their students, if they violate those limitations the exclusionary rule is not available to the students to exclude from evidence items illegally seized. State v. Young, 234 Ga. 488, 216 S.E.2d 586, cert. denied, 423 U.S. 1039, 96 S. Ct. 576, 46 L. Ed. 2d 413 (1975); Harris v. State, 199 Ga. App. 457, 405 S.E.2d 501 (1991).

Admissibility of Evidence; Exclusionary Rule (Cont'd)

1. In General (Cont'd)

Search warrants based on information obtained from officer's illegal entry suppressible. — Search warrants based upon the information derived from the officer's previous illegal entry are tainted by the prior illegality and must be suppressed. Clare v. State, 135 Ga. App. 281, 217 S.E.2d 638 (1975).

Exclusionary rule has also been justified on grounds that judicial integrity would be impaired were the courts to sanction defiance of the Constitution by admitting illegally seized evidence into criminal trials. Amiss v. State, 135 Ga. App. 784, 219 S.E.2d 28 (1975).

Void search warrant cannot be validated nor property illegally seized introduced in evidence merely because the officers were in fact reliably informed and did in fact recover contraband. Garner v. State, 124 Ga. App. 33, 182 S.E.2d 902 (1971).

Evidence obtained under defective warrant admissible if warrant not required. — Evidence gained by a search conducted under authority of a defective search warrant may still be admissible if an exception to the warrant requirement is present. United States v. Clark, 559 F.2d 420 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 969, 98 S. Ct. 516, 54 L. Ed. 2d 457 (1977).

Availability of estoppel for violation of administrative rules. — If a defendant cannot invoke the exclusionary rule based upon a violation of U.S. Const., amend. 4, a court will not compel an equivalent right based upon estoppel because of a violation of administrative rules. State v. Lamb, 137 Ga. App. 437, 224 S.E.2d 51 (1976).

Exclusionary rule available to codefendants only if rights violated by search of defendant. — Where several defendants were charged with possession of the cocaine found taped to leg of a particular defendant, the former could claim the benefit of the exclusionary rule only if their rights under U.S. Const., amend. 4 were in fact violated by the search of the latter. United States v. Herbst, 641 F.2d 1161 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 851, 102 S. Ct. 292, 70 L. Ed. 2d 141 (1981).

Evidence illegally obtained by state officers outside jurisdiction inadmissible in federal court. — The fact that state officers, making a warrantless search, were, at the time of the search, outside of their state-granted jurisdiction does not make such officers, thereby, merely private citizens so as to enable the federal government to freely use anything that was discovered by the state officers as evidence in a federal prosecution which would otherwise have been inadmissible. United States v. Hogue, 283 F. Supp. 846 (N.D. Ga. 1968).

Evidence legally obtained admissible against other than person arrested. — Evidence procured by lawful search and seizure is not limited in its admissibility only against the person whose lawful arrest made the search and seizure lawful. Cash v. State, 222 Ga. 55, 148 S.E.2d 420 (1966).

Evidence admissible where obtained during lawful search for evidence connected with another charge. — Evidence obtained by federal agents legally searching for evidence in connection with another charge against the accused, is not obtained in violation of the provision of U.S. Const., amend. 4 against unreasonable searches and seizures. Cash v. State, 222 Ga. 55, 148 S.E.2d 420 (1966).

No jury prejudice where arguments on motion to suppress heard outside their presence. — Defendants cannot argue that they have to prejudice themselves in the eyes of the jury in order to establish standing to object to the claimed violation of U.S. Const., amend. 4 where the arguments of counsel on the motion to suppress are heard outside of the presence of the jury. State v. Peabody, 247 Ga. 580, 277 S.E.2d 668 (1981).

Use at civil trial of evidence seized in violation of amendment. — The seizure of evidence in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 4 does not always preclude use of the evidence at a civil trial. Indeed, whether the exclusionary rule may ever bar the introduction of evidence in a civil trial is uncertain. Jonas v. City of Atlanta, 647 F.2d 580 (5th Cir. 1981).

A motion to suppress which is procedurally defective is properly overruled, and in Georgia a motion to suppress which is made orally is procedurally defective and a denial thereof is authorized. Graves v. State, 135 Ga. App. 921, 219 S.E.2d 633 (1975).

Hearing on motion to suppress unnecessary absent allegations of fact warranting relief. — Where a defendant in a motion to suppress fails to allege facts that if proved would require the grant of relief, the law does not require that the court hold a hearing independent of the trial to receive evidence on any issue necessary to the determination of the motion. United States v. Sneed, 732 F.2d 886 (11th Cir. 1984).

If admission of tainted evidence is harmless beyond reasonable doubt conviction will stand. When the properly admitted evidence to sustain a guilty verdict is overwhelming so as to negate the possibility that the tainted evidence contributed to the verdict, the constitutional error may be harmless. Green v. State, 187 Ga. App. 373, 370 S.E.2d 348 (1988).

Factual and credibility determinations made by judge at suppression hearing must be accepted by appellate courts unless such determinations are clearly erroneous. Mancil v. State, 177 Ga. App. 663, 340 S.E.2d 279 (1986).

The trial court's decision on questions of fact and credibility at a suppression hearing must be sustained unless clearly erroneous. Jothier v. State, 177 Ga. App. 655, 340 S.E.2d 624 (1986).

Motion to suppress filed three days after verdict properly denied. — Because the appellant filed a written motion to suppress based on alleged violation of U.S. Const., amend. 4 three days after the verdict, the motion was not timely, and the trial court did not err in denying it. Burnette v. State, 156 Ga. App. 441, 275 S.E.2d 94 (1980).

Failure to interpose a timely motion to suppress constitutes a waiver of the constitutional guarantee with respect to the search and seizure in question. Hawes v. State, 240 Ga. 327, 240 S.E.2d 833 (1977). But see Stewart v. State, 232 Ga. App. 565, 502 S.E.2d 502 (1998); Burnette v. State, 156 Ga. App. 441, 275 S.E.2d 94 (1980).

Failure to move to suppress timely under statute constitutes waiver of objection. — An oral objection to evidence obtained by unlawful search and seizure is not sufficient unless preceded by suppression of the evidence pursuant to a motion to suppress in compliance with former Code 1933, § 27-313 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-5-30). Failure to interpose a timely motion to suppress in compliance therewith amounts to a waiver of the constitutional guaranty in respect to the search and seizure in question. Graves v. State, 135 Ga. App. 921, 219 S.E.2d 633 (1975).

Defendant's failure to comply with former Code 1933, § 27-313 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-5-30) by interposing written motion to suppress constitutes waiver of the constitutional guaranty in respect to the search and seizure in question. West v. State, 120 Ga. App. 390, 170 S.E.2d 698 (1969).

Exclusionary rule not applicable to evidence admitted without timely challenge. — The requirement that all evidence obtained by searches and seizures in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 4 is inadmissible in state courts, is only an exclusionary rule and does not affect the competence of evidence admitted without timely challenge. Graves v. State, 135 Ga. App. 921, 219 S.E.2d 633 (1975).

Waiver of right to object to evidence upon failure to object before trial. — If the defendant knows before the trial of the possession by the prosecution of physical evidence and the manner in which it was obtained, the defendant cannot wait until the trial to make objection thereto, but must make the objection beforehand, and failing to do so, waives the right to object to the introduction of the evidence at the trial. Herndon v. State, 178 Ga. 832, 174 S.E. 597 (1934), appeal dismissed, 295 U.S. 441, 55 S. Ct. 794, 79 L. Ed. 1530 (1935).

The trial court did not err by refusing to consider a defendant's motion to suppress, which was untimely filed on the day of trial, where no written extension for a late filing had been requested prior to trial. Thompson v. State, 195 Ga. App. 18, 392 S.E.2d 732 (1990).

Burden of proof where arrests and searches conducted without warrants. — Because arrests and searches were conducted without a warrant, the government had the burden of proving that the arrests were supported by probable cause; the burden then shifted to the defendants to establish violations of their fourth amendment interests to those items seized or searched, other than those taken from them personally. United States v. Luck, 560 F. Supp. 258 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd sub nom. United States v. Crump, 736 F.2d 1527 (11th Cir. 1984).

Admissibility of Evidence; Exclusionary Rule (Cont'd)

1. In General (Cont'd)

De novo review. — Because a trial court credited a police officer's testimony and decided defendant's suppression motion on an issue of law rather than on any issue of conflicting evidence, the court of appeals correctly used the de novo standard of review. Silva v. State, 278 Ga. 506, 604 S.E.2d 171 (2004).

On appeal, trial court's findings adopted unless clearly erroneous. — On appeal of a denial of a motion to suppress, the evidence is to be construed most favorably to the upholding of the findings and judgment made. The trial court's findings must be adopted unless determined to be clearly erroneous. Dennis v. State, 166 Ga. App. 715, 305 S.E.2d 443 (1983).

2. Illustrative Cases

Exclusionary rule is not to be applied in federal grand jury proceedings. Reaves v. State, 242 Ga. 542, 250 S.E.2d 376 (1978).

Grand jury witness cannot refuse to answer questions on ground they are product of unlawful searches and seizures. United States v. Worobytz, 522 F.2d 196 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1507, 47 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1976).

Use of illegally obtained evidence an infringement of probationer's rights. — Use of the fruits of an illegal search as evidence is no less an invasion of the constitutional rights of a defendant because the evidence illegally seized is used in a hearing to revoke the defendant's probation rather than in a criminal trial. Amiss v. State, 135 Ga. App. 784, 219 S.E.2d 28 (1975).

A defendant's probation may not be revoked on basis of illegally seized evidence. Evidence obtained in an illegal search and seizure may not be admitted in a hearing to revoke probation in determining whether there has been a violation of the conditions of the probation. Amiss v. State, 135 Ga. App. 784, 219 S.E.2d 28 (1975).

One doing business as corporation may not vicariously enjoy privilege of corporation under U.S. Const., amend. 4; documents that the person could have protected from seizure, if they had been the person's own, may be used against the person, no matter how they were obtained from the corporation. United States v. Britt, 508 F.2d 1052 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 825, 96 S. Ct. 40, 46 L. Ed. 2d 42 (1975).

Confession made by appellant when not under arrest not illegally obtained. — Because the appellant was not under arrest at the time of making a confession, the confession could not have been the product of an illegal arrest. Vaughn v. State, 247 Ga. 136, 274 S.E.2d 479 (1981).

Seizure from pretrial detainee's cell. — Because the state properly sought and obtained a search warrant before it seized written materials from a pretrial detainee's cell, it was error to grant the detainee's motion to suppress. State v. Henderson, 271 Ga. 264, 517 S.E.2d 61 (1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1083, 120 S. Ct. 807, 145 L. Ed. 2d 680 (2000).

Testimony of inmate acting in self interest admissible. — An inmate who acts upon the expectation of an unpromised reward in testifying as to the jailhouse confession of a fellow inmate does not thereby become an agent for the state so as to bar introduction of the testimony. Baxter v. State, 254 Ga. 538, 331 S.E.2d 561 (1985), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 935, 106 S. Ct. 269, 88 L. Ed. 2d 275 (1985).

Where causal connection between illegal arrest and confession not broken, confession inadmissible. — If the causal connection between an illegal arrest and a confession is not broken by any intervening events, but a suspect is interrogated from the time of the suspect's arrival until the suspect confesses a short time later, the trial court errs by admitting the confession into evidence, and a conviction based solely on the confession cannot stand. Robinson v. State, 166 Ga. App. 741, 305 S.E.2d 381 (1983).

Incriminary statement held not illegally obtained. — Where the appellant did nothing prior to making the incriminary statement, such as requesting to leave or speak with an attorney, that would require a finding that the appellant had been placed involuntarily in police custody, the trial judge did not err in ruling that the statement made by the appellant was not the product of an illegal arrest. Dupree v. State, 247 Ga. 470, 277 S.E.2d 18 (1981).

Later trespass does not render inadmissible in evidence knowledge legally obtained. Williams v. State, 157 Ga. App. 476, 277 S.E.2d 923, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 823, 102 S. Ct. 109, 70 L. Ed. 2d 95 (1981).

Testimony made after admission of illegally obtained evidence unconstitutionally impelled. — In the absence of a contrary showing by the state, a defendant's testimony in a case after the admission into evidence of illegally seized evidence is unconstitutionally impelled by that erroneous admission. Hill v. State, 140 Ga. App. 121, 230 S.E.2d 336 (1976).

Impeachment on cross-examination. — Illegally obtained evidence may be used to impeach a statement made by a defendant on cross-examination when the statement being impeached is in response to a question that was reasonably suggested by the defendant's direct testimony. United States v. One 1979 Porsche Coupe, 709 F.2d 1424 (11th Cir. 1983).

Evidence obtained under warrant issued by one affiliated with law enforcement inadmissible. — If a magistrate had such an affiliation with law enforcement as to disqualify the magistrate from issuing a search warrant, the evidence obtained thereby must be excluded. State v. Guhl, 140 Ga. App. 23, 230 S.E.2d 22 (1976), rev'd on other grounds sub nom. Mitchell v. State, 239 Ga. 3, 235 S.E.2d 509 (1977).

Evidence held legally seized and admissible as: (1) evidence seized from the defendant's residence as a result of an interrogation was sufficiently attenuated from any illegality to be admissible; (2) the duration of the search had no bearing on the subsequent consent given by the defendant's roommate; (3) the consent was not a product of any illegal conduct; and (4) there was no evidence of any flagrant misconduct and coercion on the part of the investigating law enforcement officers involved. Spence v. State, Ga. , S.E.2d , 2007 Ga. LEXIS 293 (Apr. 10, 2007).

Warrant containing false statement. — Where the defendant makes a substantial preliminary showing that a false statement knowingly and intentionally, or with reckless disregard for the truth, was included by the affiant in the warrant affidavit, and if the allegedly false statement is necessary to the finding of probable cause, U.S. Const., amend. 4 requires that a hearing be held at the defendant's request; in the event the allegation of perjury or reckless disregard is established by the defendant by a preponderance of the evidence, and, with the affidavit's false material set to one side, the affidavit's remaining content is insufficient to establish probable cause, the search warrant must be voided and the fruits of the search excluded to the same extent as if probable cause was lacking on the face of the affidavit. Cuevas v. State, 151 Ga. App. 605, 260 S.E.2d 737 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 943, 100 S. Ct. 1338, 63 L. Ed. 2d 776 (1980).

Evidence obtained on basis of false information central to affidavit inadmissible. — If it is established at a hearing on a motion to suppress that evidence was seized on the basis of false information which strikes at the heart of a supporting affidavit's showing of probable cause, the court must grant the defendant's motion. United States v. Black, 344 F. Supp. 537 (N.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 476 F.2d 267 (5th Cir. 1973).

Unsigned confession held admissible. — The fact that a statement amounting to a confession by the defendant was unsigned and the fact that the stenographer who transcribed it was not present at the trial and did not testify as to its verity is not ground for excluding it from evidence. Freeman v. State, 230 Ga. 85, 195 S.E.2d 416 (1973).

Conversation overheard by arresting officers admissible. — Evidence of statements made by the defendant in a conversation overheard by the arresting officers who had concealed themselves, as planned between them and the person with whom the defendant talked, does not amount to evidence given by the defendant involuntarily and without the advice of counsel, and is not coerced from the defendant in violation of the defendant's rights not to be compelled to be a witness against oneself. Blackwell v. State, 113 Ga. App. 536, 148 S.E.2d 912 (1966).

Defendant not under arrest. — Because the defendant's encounters with the police remained consensual and voluntary, and the defendant consented to a continued detention for further questioning, a motion to suppress the evidence seized based on an illegal detention by the police was properly denied. Smith v. State, 281 Ga. 185, 640 S.E.2d 1 (2006).

Admissibility of Evidence; Exclusionary Rule (Cont'd)

2. Illustrative Cases (Cont'd)

Evidence obtained during unlawful detention of vehicle inadmissible. — Where no circumstances at all appear which might give rise to an articulable suspicion (less than probable cause, but greater than mere caprice) that the law has been violated, the act of following and detaining a vehicle and its occupants must be judged as an impermissible intrusion on the rights of the citizen. Where this occurs, the penalty exacted by the law is that evidence turned up as a result of such intrusion may not be introduced against the defendant on the trial of the defendant's case. Brooks v. State, 144 Ga. App. 97, 240 S.E.2d 593 (1977).

Clothing named in warrant and seized during lawful search admissible. — Because the evidence showed that the police officers had been informed that the defendant had on a certain type of clothing on the day the defendant discussed the murder with an informant, and the police, using a valid warrant, found the clothing in the defendant's apartment and seized it, it was not error to admit the clothing into evidence. Pass v. State, 227 Ga. 730, 182 S.E.2d 779 (1971).

Films inadmissible where warrant improperly issued. — Admission in evidence of allegedly obscene motion picture films seized under the authority of a warrant issued by a justice of the peace on a police officer's affidavit giving the films' titles, and stating that the officer had determined from personal observation of the films and of the theater's billboard that they were obscene, is erroneous, as the issuance of the warrant without the justice of the peace's inquiry into the factual basis for the officer's conclusions falls short of constitutional requirements demanding necessary sensitivity to freedom of expression. Good v. State, 127 Ga. App. 775, 195 S.E.2d 264 (1972).

The seizure as obscene of a motion picture film being exhibited to the general public at a commercial theater, without the authority of a constitutionally sufficient warrant, is unreasonable, and the evidence is not admissible. Hall v. State, 139 Ga. App. 488, 229 S.E.2d 12 (1976).

No federal interference in pending state case by requiring release of illegally obtained evidence. — Where allegedly obscene films and projectors are seized as evidence of a violation of former Code 1933, § 26-2101 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-12-80), and the case is pending in the state courts, federal courts will not interfere with the pending case by requiring release of the contraband as an unconstitutional seizure. G & E Bus. Servs., Inc. v. McAuliffe, 480 F. Supp. 239 (N.D. Ga. 1979).

Gun given to sheriff by relative in latter's house admissible. — If a sheriff goes into the house of a relative and takes possession of a gun offered to the sheriff, the evidence is insufficient to show an unreasonable search and seizure and to require suppression of the gun as evidence. Marsh v. State, 223 Ga. 590, 157 S.E.2d 273 (1967).

Rifle found in unkept area in trailer park. — The defendant's motion to suppress a rifle connected with the robbery with which the defendant was charged was properly denied where the rifle was found in an unkept area between two trailers in a trailer park of which the defendant was not an occupant or resident and where probable cause existed for a search of the area. Dunbar v. State, 163 Ga. App. 243, 292 S.E.2d 897 (1982).

Pistol admissible where procured in search incidental to arrest of another. — It is not error, in the trial of the accused for armed robbery, to admit in evidence, over objection, a pistol procured by FBI agents in the search of an apartment in Los Angeles, where the search was made incidental to the lawful arrest of another person, as the search and seizure of the evidence was lawful. Cash v. State, 222 Ga. 55, 148 S.E.2d 420 (1966).

Lottery tickets and money allegedly obtained from a defendant are not obtained by a search of the person but of the premises when found on the floor where the defendant had been standing after the defendant had moved from the spot and which were not there before the defendant had stood there, and if the search of the premises was lawful, then there is no ground to suppress this evidence. Logan v. State, 135 Ga. App. 879, 219 S.E.2d 615 (1975).

Heroin inadmissible where burden of proof showing legal arrest not met. — Heroin seized from defendant's automobile following arrest for prowling is inadmissible as evidence where the state failed to carry its burden of proof for showing that the arrest itself was legal by introducing an exemplified copy of the city ordinance, if such existed, under which defendant was arrested. Traylor v. State, 127 Ga. App. 409, 193 S.E.2d 876 (1972).

Tourist camp registration cards admissible. — Objection to admission in evidence of registration cards kept by tourist camp under former Code 1933, §§ 52-308 and 52-312 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 43-21-56 and 43-21-52), on grounds that the acquisition of such cards was in violation of U.S. Const., amends. 4, 5, and 14, was without merit in view of the provision of former Code 1933, § 52-112 that the permanent record for the registration of guests should be available at all times for inspection by any peace or law enforcement officer. Copeland v. Leathers, 206 Ga. 280, 56 S.E.2d 530 (1949).

Evidence admissible if probable cause existed at time of arrest and seizure. — Certain evidence consisting of bloodstained carpet removed from the premises where the deceased and defendant lived is admissible if probable cause existed at the time the evidence was removed and when the defendant was arrested. Ray v. State, 235 Ga. 467, 219 S.E.2d 761 (1975).

Scope of pat down search exceeded. — Trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion to suppress the evidence since the investigating police officer exceeded the scope of a Terry pat down search when the officer pulled open defendant's pocket to discover what was in it; the officer provided no facts which would lead the officer to suspect that the pill bottles the officer felt in defendant's pocket were some type of atypical weapon so as to justify intruding into defendant's pocket for the officer's protection. Howard v. State, 253 Ga. App. 158, 558 S.E.2d 745 (2002).

Evidence obtained during inventory tainted by unlawful arrest inadmissible. — If the state fails to prove any statutory basis for a defendant's arrest, a subsequent inventory of a defendant's pocketbook is tainted by the preceding illegal arrest, and fruits of an illegal arrest are not admissible in evidence in a criminal trial. Adams v. State, 153 Ga. App. 41, 264 S.E.2d 532 (1980).

Photographs of automobile and paint scrapings taken from exterior of vehicle were not subject to defendant's motion to suppress. Deshazier v. State, 155 Ga. App. 526, 271 S.E.2d 664 (1980).

Evidence held legally seized and admissible. — There was probable cause for arrest where radio report described blacks in a Buick, and the persons stopped were blacks in a Buick similar in color and style to that described, and matching leather jackets in plain view on the car's back seat corresponded with and corroborated the report that the robbers had been wearing such jackets; therefore evidence was legally seized. Cobb v. State, 244 Ga. 344, 260 S.E.2d 60 (1979).

Because a search warrant affidavit provided the issuing magistrate with sufficient probable cause connecting the defendant to the residence of a female friend for the magistrate logically to conclude that there was a fair probability that evidence of a crime would be found therein, despite the omission of additional evidence by the affiant, an order granting suppression of the evidence seized therein was reversed. State v. Hunter, Ga. , S.E.2d , 2007 Ga. LEXIS 360 (May 14, 2007).

Statement granting consent to search suppressed. — The trial court properly suppressed evidence as to the defendant's statement granting consent for the search of defendant's vehicle after applying the "reasonable person" test; the trial court determined that after the defendant was placed in the back of the trooper's car, the defendant was "in custody" for Miranda purposes even though defendant was not "under arrest" and then concluded that a reasonable person in the defendant's circumstances would not feel that they were at liberty to terminate any interrogation and leave based on the officer's retention of possession of the defendant's driver's license and an above average amount of cash while placing defendant in the back of the patrol car to await the arrival of a drug dog. Cotton v. State, 237 Ga. App. 18, 513 S.E.2d 763 (1999).

Failure to object to no ruling made on motion to suppress. — In the absence of a ruling on a pretrial motion to suppress and of an objection when the evidence was offered at trial, a defendant waived his right to contest the admissibility of the evidence on appeal. Castillo v. State, 281 Ga. 579, 642 S.E.2d 8 (2007).

Admissibility of Evidence; Exclusionary Rule (Cont'd)

2. Illustrative Cases (Cont'd)

Abandoned property. — Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion to suppress as the police search of a bag containing the items purportedly stolen from the burglary and theft victims was not illegal; the bag was located in a closet of a bedroom in a friend's residence, and because the evidence showed the defendant had abandoned it, the defendant did not have a reasonable expectation of privacy in the bag and the defendant could not claim that the fourth amendment prohibited a search of the bag by police. Gray v. State, 260 Ga. App. 197, 581 S.E.2d 279 (2003).

Warrant for vehicle following search of home proper. — Defendant's suppression motion was properly denied as a magistrate's issuance of a search warrant for defendant's home was supported by probable cause for purposes of the fourth amendment, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII, and O.C.G.A. § 17-5-30 where: (1) witnesses reported seeing defendant at the victim's home near the time that the victim disappeared; (2) the farm manager who located the victim's body told police that defendant commonly used the farm for hunting; (3) defendant had a tumultuous relationship with the victim; and (4) defendant's mailbox was painted in a similar camouflage as the cattle trough in which the victim was found; as the warrant for the house was proper, the warrant for defendant's truck was not fruit of the poisonous tree. Fortson v. State, 277 Ga. 164, 587 S.E.2d 39 (2003).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to suppress photographs that were developed from film that was in a disposable camera found in the defendant's duffle bag at the time of the defendant's arrest because: (1) the defendant lacked standing to challenge the admission of the evidence since the camera belonged to the defendant's sibling, most of the photographs had been taken by the sibling, and the camera had only been borrowed by the defendant; (2) the film was admissible under the same rationale as an inventory search because the police had to develop the film to determine to whom the camera belonged before they could return it to its owner; and (3) the film was the fruit of a search incident to the defendant's lawful arrest because it was found in the defendant's duffle bag in a search incident to the defendant's arrest. Wright v. State, 276 Ga. 454, 579 S.E.2d 214 (2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1106, 124 S. Ct. 1059, 157 L. Ed. 2d 892 (2004).

Consent to search. — Trial court erred in granting defendant's motion to suppress evidence of contraband, namely, defendant's possession of marijuana, as police officer's discovery of the marijuana was not pursuant to an impermissible pat-down search that two other officers conducted on a group of students, including defendant, but was pursuant to defendant's invitation for the officer to search defendant after the officer asked defendant why defendant's license had been suspended; however, a remand was necessary to determine whether defendant's consent to search was voluntarily given. State v. Baker, 261 Ga. App. 258, 582 S.E.2d 133 (2003).

Multiple blood samples. — Although a first search warrant for defendant's blood was defective, a second blood sample that was later drawn from defendant was not "fruit of the poisonous tree" because there was no evidence that the second search warrant for the blood was defective or that the second blood sample was obtained by exploitation of the original defective warrant; the second sample was separate and distinguishable from the first sample so as to be purged of the primary taint and, therefore, the trial court did not err in refusing to suppress the second sample. McKinney v. State, 261 Ga. App. 218, 582 S.E.2d 463 (2003).

Remedies for Violation of Rights

Constitutional tort claim depends on conduct's reasonableness. — Where the factual allegations clearly established a factual dispute which impacted on the reasonableness of federal agents' conduct in serving a subpoena and where, given the factual circumstances, a jury was entitled to find whether the agents' search and seizure of business records and material violated established constitutional rights of which a reasonable officer would have known, the district court correctly denied summary judgment to the agents on the question of qualified immunity on the plaintiffs' constitutional tort claim for unlawful search and seizure. Goddard v. Urrea, 847 F.2d 765 (11th Cir. 1988).

Defendant must show harm from challenged warrant. — Where defendant failed to show any harm resulting from the issuance of a challenged warrant, there was nothing for the court to review on appeal. Soto v. State, 252 Ga. 164, 312 S.E.2d 306 (1984).

Plaintiff was not required to show significant injury as an essential ingredient to a fourth amendment excessive force claim. Gardner v. Rogers, 224 Ga. App. 165, 480 S.E.2d 217 (1996).

Compensation for invasion of fourth amendment rights. — Courts of law are capable of making the types of judgment concerning causation and magnitude of injury necessary to accord meaningful compensation for invasion of rights under U.S. Const., amend. 4. The same may not be true, however, with respect to other types of constitutionally protected interests, and therefore the appropriateness of money damages may well vary with the nature of the personal interest asserted. Polakoff v. Henderson, 370 F. Supp. 690 (N.D. Ga. 1973), aff'd, 488 F.2d 977 (5th Cir. 1974).

Subjective intent in making arrest. — Because a police officer's subjective intent in making an arrest is irrelevant to a finding of probable cause, a plaintiff need not establish intentional conduct or even gross negligence to establish a violation of the fourth amendment. McKenna v. County of Clayton, 657 F. Supp. 221 (N.D. Ga. 1987).

Good faith and reasonable belief in validity of arrest are the appropriate standards in testing the arresting officer's liability for a warrantless arrest. Diamond v. Marland, 395 F. Supp. 432 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Federal constitutional standards proper measure of conduct of state officer. — Where an unlawful state arrest is the basis of an action for violation of rights under U.S. Const., amends. 4 and 14, federal constitutional standards are the appropriate measure of the conduct of the arresting officer.

Diamond v. Marland, 395 F. Supp. 432 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Liability under federal civil rights statute.

— Even if a police officer violates a state arrest statute, the officer is not liable under the Federal Civil Rights Act, 42 U.S.C. § 1983, unless the officer also violated federal constitutional law governing warrantless arrests. Diamond v. Marland, 395 F. Supp. 432 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

A supervisory or nonsupervisory official's failure or refusal to intervene when a constitutional violation such as the use of a chokehold once an arrestee is shackled is taking place in the official's presence establishes direct liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for excessive use of force against the arrestee in violation of the arrestee's rights under the fourth and fourteenth amendments. McQuarter v. City of Atlanta, 572 F. Supp. 1401 (N.D. Ga. 1983), appeal dismissed, 724 F.2d 881 (11th Cir. 1984).

A municipality cannot be held liable under the federal civil rights statute, 42 U.S.C. § 1983, for an illegal arrest absent a showing that the arrest without probable cause was the result of a custom, pattern, or practice of the municipality. Shelby v. City of Atlanta, 578 F. Supp. 1368 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Where a governing body has worked constitutional deprivation of a citizen pursuant to an impermissible or corrupt policy which is intentional and deliberate, a cause of action is accrued against the governing body and its employees under the federal Civil Rights Act in spite of the doctrine of sovereign immunity. City of Cave Spring v. Mason, 252 Ga. 3, 310 S.E.2d 892 (1984).

An unprovoked beating and killing of a suspect by police officers was sufficiently serious to be actionable, as a federal civil rights claim, under U.S. Const., amend. 4, notwithstanding the existence of a state tort remedy. Gilmere v. City of Atlanta, 774 F.2d 1495 (11th Cir. 1985), aff'd in part, rev'd in part and vacated in part, 774 F.2d 1495 (11th Cir. 1985), cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1115, 106 S. Ct. 1970, 90 L. Ed. 2d 654, 476 U.S. 1124, 106 S. Ct. 1993, 90 L. Ed. 2d 673 (1986), 493 U.S. 817, 110 S. Ct. 70, 107 L. Ed. 2d 37 (1989).

In a federal civil rights action by a state prisoner alleging violations of fourth amendment rights, federal abstention was proper until the state appellate court decided the issue upon its review of the conviction. Doby v. Strength, 758 F.2d 1405 (11th Cir. 1985).

Remedies for Violation of Rights (Cont'd)

In a case involving use of excessive force by police officers brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, the balancing test for determining whether a substantive due process violation has been committed, while similar in many respects to that for assessing a fourth amendment claim, requires a plaintiff to show that the force used by a defendant officer was applied maliciously and sadistically for the very purpose of causing harm. The fourth amendment balancing test, on the other hand, does not include a "malicious and sadistic" element; rather, the reasonableness of the seizure or intrusion is the central inquiry, as is the case with respect to fourth amendment analyses outside of the police abuse context. Thompson v. Spikes, 663 F. Supp. 627 (S.D. Ga. 1987).

Recognizing that 42 U.S.C. § 1983 clearly requires a showing of something more than common law tort elements, the court analyzed a deputy sheriff's tort claims for malicious prosecution, abuse of process, false arrest and false imprisonment, in the context of the fourth and fourteenth amendments, and found that claims thereunder were validly inferable for alleged conspiracy by fellow officers to force the deputy to give false testimony against a county sheriff. Mastroianni v. Deering, 835 F. Supp. 1577 (S.D. Ga. 1993).

In an action brought pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983, because where the facts indicated that the plaintiff's arrest had not ended at the time of the defendant police officers' use of excessive force, U.S. Const., amend. 4 applied to the plaintiff's excessive force claims even if the plaintiff was in post-arrest, pre-charge custody at the time of the use of such force. Albritten v. Dougherty County, Ga., 973 F. Supp. 1455 (M.D. Ga. 1997).

In an action brought pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983, where there were genuine issues of material fact as to whether defendant police officers' use of physical force against plaintiff violated U.S. Const., amend. 4, defendants were not entitled to qualified immunity in their individual capacities. Albritten v. Dougherty County, Ga., 973 F. Supp. 1455 (M.D. Ga. 1997).

Because a plaintiff in a civil rights case prosecuted under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 alleging excessive force used in arrest may receive compensatory damages for such things as physical pain and suffering and mental and emotional anguish, and because such a plaintiff whose constitutional rights are violated is entitled to receive nominal damages even if the plaintiff fails to produce any evidence of compensatory damages, the district court erred in granting judgment to defendant officers as a matter of law. Slicker v. Jackson, 215 F.3d 1225 (11th Cir. 2000).

In an arrestee's 42 U.S.C. § 1983 suit that alleged that the arrestee's fourth amendment right against the use of excessive force was violated when a sheriff's deputy crashed a cruiser into the car during a high-speed pursuit, rendering the arrestee a quadriplegic, the arrestee's deliberate indifference claim against the sheriff in an individual capacity was dismissed on summary judgment because the sheriff had provided the deputies with all of the training that was required by the State of Georgia; even if there were a causal connection between the sheriff's failure to train the deputies in the techniques of making high-pursuit stops, the sheriff was entitled to qualified immunity. Harris v. Coweta County, F. Supp. 2d , 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27348 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 25, 2003).

Internal Revenue Service Commissioner absolutely immune from liability. — The United States is absolutely immune from damages in a suit seeking damages under the Constitution, as is the Commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service insofar as the Commissioner is acting within the scope of the Commissioner's official capacity. Sellers v. United States, 569 F. Supp. 1149 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service cannot be held vicariously liable for the fourth and fifth amendment violations of the Internal Revenue Service agents. Sellers v. United States, 569 F. Supp. 1149 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Police officers' use of deadly force against suspect who was armed with knife and had just stabbed several people was reasonable and hence within the bounds of the fourth amendment. O'Neal v. DeKalb County, 850 F.2d 653 (11th Cir. 1988).

Habeas corpus. — If the petitioner is aggrieved by unconstitutional search and seizure, the petitioner is entitled to habeas relief on that basis alone. Wilson v. Hopper, 234 Ga. 859, 218 S.E.2d 573 (1975).

In federal habeas corpus court the test of legality of state arrest is "federal probable cause." Diamond v. Marland, 395 F. Supp. 432 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

The state habeas corpus procedure finally determines fourth amendment constitutional claims, and may very well be determinative of and foreclose consideration of other substantial issues in the federal proceeding because a determination after a hearing on the merits of a factual issue, made by a state court of competent jurisdiction, shall be presumed to be correct in the federal proceeding. Gibson v. Jackson, 443 F. Supp. 239 (M.D. Ga. 1977), vacated on other grounds, 578 F.2d 1045 (5th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 1119, 99 S. Ct. 1028, 59 L. Ed. 2d 79 (1979).

If the state has provided an opportunity for full and fair litigation of a fourth amendment claim, a state prisoner may not be granted federal habeas corpus relief on the ground that evidence obtained in an unconstitutional search or seizure was introduced at trial. Anglin v. Green, 639 F. Supp. 490 (S.D. Ga. 1986), aff'd, 853 F.2d 930 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 1031, 109 S. Ct. 841, 102 L. Ed. 2d 973 (1989).

Right to acquittal on ground of unlawful arrest. — A defendant in a criminal case cannot claim a verdict declaring the defendant to be not guilty on the ground that the defendant was illegally arrested. Morton v. State, 132 Ga. App. 329, 208 S.E.2d 134 (1974).

When illegal arrest not grounds for reversal. — Assuming that the warrantless arrest was illegal, it is not in and of itself a ground for reversal where defendant has been indicted and convicted. Thompson v. State, 157 Ga. App. 600, 278 S.E.2d 62, aff'd, 248 Ga. 343, 285 S.E.2d 685 (1981).

Conviction based on evidence illegally admitted must be reversed. — The fruits of an illegal arrest are not admissible in evidence against a defendant, and a conviction which is based upon evidence thus illegally admitted must be reversed and set aside. Traylor v. State, 127 Ga. App. 409, 193 S.E.2d 876 (1972).

Mere claim of illegal arrest insufficient for new trial or release. — If there is no claim that the conviction rested upon evidence seized as a result of an illegal arrest, or upon a confession secured pursuant to the illegal arrest, etc., but simply that the defendant was illegally arrested, then this, alone, does not entitle the defendant to release or a new trial. Johnson v. State, 128 Ga. App. 69, 195 S.E.2d 676 (1973).

When objections raised. — The lack of probable cause to arrest should be raised before trial if possible, and certainly at trial. A court, nevertheless, is bound to consider error apparent on the face of the record which rises to the level of "plain" or "fundamental" error. United States v. McGee, 464 F.2d 542 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 989, 93 S. Ct. 346, 34 L. Ed. 2d 255, 409 U.S. 1078, 93 S. Ct. 697, 34 L. Ed. 2d 667 (1972).

Fourth amendment objections may be raised in proceedings other than criminal trials. FTC v. Page, 378 F. Supp. 1052 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Authority of state drug enforcement officer to search and seize. — The Chief Drug Inspector of the State Board of Pharmacy and the Inspector's assistants have the authority to make arrests for violations of former Code 1933, Chs. 79A-7 and 79A-8 (see O.C.G.A. Arts. 2 and 3, Ch. 13, T. 16), and to search and seize evidence necessary for presentation before courts of this state or before the State Board of Pharmacy; the Chief Drug Inspector and the Inspector's assistants do not have the authority to seize prescription from a pharmacy without properly acquiring a valid search warrant. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-112.

Authority to seize prescriptions. — Any law enforcement official who has obtained search warrant may lawfully search and seize prescriptions retained for inspection by a pharmacy as required by Georgia law. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-112.

Constitutionality of fingerprint requirement. — Requiring applicants for driver's license or identification card to submit fingerprints does not violate constitutional rights. 1997 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U97-7.

Regulation allowing search of vehicles entering hospital grounds valid. — A regulation established by the Department of Human Resources which makes vehicles entering the grounds of Central State Hospital subject to search is a valid exercise of the department's power, and does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 4. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74-15.

Unauthorized dormitory searches. — A college may not rely absolutely on a contractual provision in a dormitory contract to conduct a search of a student's dormitory room in the absence of a valid warrant or consent. 1994 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 94-13.

Use of metal detectors in schools. — The use of a metal detector to screen everyone or to randomly screen students as they enter school is not an unreasonable search and thus is not unconstitutional. However, the metal detector could be used in some manner, such as selective screening, which could violate the prohibition against unreasonable searches. 1994 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U94-9.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Constitutional guaranties against unreasonable searches and seizures as applied to a search for or seizure of intoxicating liquor, 13 ALR 1316; 27 ALR 709; 39 ALR 811; 74 ALR 1418.

Federal Constitution as a limitation upon the powers of the states in respect of search and seizure, 19 ALR 644.

Right to arrest without a warrant for unlawful possession or transportation of intoxicating liquor, 44 ALR 132.

Admissibility of evidence obtained by government or other public officer by intercepting letter or telegraph or telephone message, 53 ALR 1485; 66 ALR 397; 134 ALR 614.

Search of automobile without a warrant by officers relying on description of persons suspected of a crime, 60 ALR 299.

Right of search and seizure incident to lawful arrest without a search warrant, 74 ALR 1387; 82 ALR 782.

Use as evidence against officers, employees, or stockholders of corporation of illegally seized documents or other articles belonging to corporation, 78 ALR 343.

Right of employee having control of articles for employer to avail himself of rule which excludes evidence obtained by unlawful search and seizure, 86 ALR 346.

Constitutionality of statutory provisions for examination of records, books, or documents for taxation purposes, 103 ALR 522.

Right of privacy, 138 ALR 22; 57 ALR3d 16.

Order upon application for suppression in criminal case of evidence wrongly seized by government as appealable, 156 ALR 1207.

Requiring submission to physical examination or test as violation of constitutional rights, 164 ALR 967; 25 ALR2d 1407.

Modern status of rule governing admissibility of evidence obtained by unlawful search and seizure, 50 ALR2d 531; 43 ALR3d 385.

Opening, search, and seizure of mail, 61 ALR2d 1282.

Nature of interest in, or connection with, premises searched as affecting standing to attack legality of search, 78 ALR2d 246.

Federal Constitution as affecting admissibility of evidence obtained by illegal search and seizure, 84 ALR2d 959.

Transiently occupied room in hotel, motel, or roominghouse as within provision forbidding unreasonable searches and seizures, 86 ALR2d 984.

Lawfulness of nonconsensual search and seizure without warrant, prior to arrest, 89 ALR2d 715.

Admissibility, in civil case, of evidence obtained by lawful search and seizure, 5 ALR3d 670.

Validity of procedures designed to protect the public against obscenity, 5 ALR3d 1214; 93 ALR3d 297.

Lawfulness of seizure of property used in violation of law as prerequisite to forfeiture action or proceeding, 8 ALR3d 473.

Validity of consent to search given by one in custody of officers, 9 ALR3d 858.

Lawfulness of search of motor vehicle following arrest for traffic violation, 10 ALR3d 314.

Propriety of considering hearsay or other incompetent evidence in establishing probable cause for issuance of search warrant, 10 ALR3d 359.

Search warrant: sufficiency of description of apartment or room to be searched in multiple-occupancy structure, 11 ALR3d 1330.

Investigations and surveillance, shadowing and trailing, as violation of right of privacy, 13 ALR3d 1025.

Modern status of rule as to validity of nonconsensual search and seizure made without warrant after lawful arrest as affected by lapse of time between, or difference in places of, arrest and search, 19 ALR3d 727.

Plea of guilty as waiver of claim of unlawful search and seizure, 20 ALR3d 724.

Requiring suspect or defendant in criminal case to demonstrate voice for purposes of identification, 24 ALR3d 1261.

Admissibility, in criminal case, of evidence obtained by search by private individual, 36 ALR3d 553.

Privilege against self-incrimination as ground for refusal to produce noncorporate documents in possession of person asserting privilege, but owned by another, 37 ALR3d 1373.

“Fruit of the poisonous tree” doctrine excluding evidence derived from information gained in illegal search, 43 ALR3d 385.

Right of exonerated arrestee to have fingerprints, photographs, or other criminal identification or arrest records expunged or restricted, 46 ALR3d 900; 58 ALR4th 902.

Censorship of convicted prisoners’ “legal” mail, 47 ALR3d 1150.

Censorship of convicted prisoners’ “non-legal” mail, 47 ALR3d 1192.

Lawfulness of “inventory search” of motor vehicle impounded by police, 48 ALR3d 537.

Observation through binoculars as constituting unreasonable search, 48 ALR3d 1178.

Censorship and evidentiary use of unconvicted prisoners’ mail, 52 ALR3d 548.

Uninvited entry into another’s living quarters as invasion of privacy, 56 ALR3d 434.

Waiver or loss of right of privacy, 57 ALR3d 16.

Admissibility, in criminal prosecution, of evidence obtained by electronic surveillance of prisoner, 57 ALR3d 172.

Admissibility of videotape film in evidence in criminal trial, 60 ALR3d 333; 41 ALR4th 812; 41 ALR4th 877.

Admissibility, in state probation revocation proceedings, of evidence obtained through illegal search and seizure, 77 ALR3d 636.

Validity of requirement that, as condition of probation, defendant submit to warrantless searches, 79 ALR3d 1083.

State or municipal liability for invasion of privacy, 87 ALR3d 145.

Necessity that demanding state show probable cause to arrest fugitive in extradition proceedings, 90 ALR3d 1085.

Admissibility of evidence discovered in search of adult defendant’s property or residence authorized by defendant’s minor child — state cases, 99 ALR3d 598.

Admissibility of evidence discovered in search of defendant’s property or residence authorized by domestic employee or servant, 99 ALR3d 1232.

Admissibility of evidence discovered in search of defendant’s property or residence authorized by defendant’s spouse (resident or nonresident) — state cases, 1 ALR4th 673; 65 ALR5th 407.

Admissibility of evidence discovered in warrantless search of rental property authorized by lessor of such property — state cases, 2 ALR4th 1173; 61 ALR5th 1.

Use of electronic sensing device to detect shoplifting as unconstitutional search and seizure, 10 ALR4th 376.

Adequacy of defense counsel’s representation of criminal client regarding search and seizure issues, 12 ALR4th 318.

Propriety of requiring suspect or accused to alter, or to refrain from altering, physical or bodily appearance, 24 ALR4th 592.

Disputation of truth of matters stated in affidavit in support of search warrant — modern cases, 24 ALR4th 1266.

Sufficiency of showing that voluntariness of confession or admission was affected by alcohol or other drugs, 25 ALR4th 419.

Admissibility in criminal case of evidence that accused refused to take test of intoxication, 26 ALR4th 1112.

Employment of photographic equipment to record presence and nature of items as constituting unreasonable search, 27 ALR4th 532.

Search and seizure: suppression of evidence found in automobile during routine check of vehicle identification number (VIN), 27 ALR4th 549.

Admissibility, in criminal case, of evidence discovered by warrantless search in connection with fire investigation — post-Tyler cases, 31 ALR4th 194.

Propriety in state prosecution of severance of partially valid search warrant and limitation of suppression to items seized under invalid portions of warrant, 32 ALR4th 378.

Validity, in state criminal trial, of arrest without warrant by identified peace officer outside of jurisdiction, when not in fresh pursuit, 34 ALR4th 328.

Validity of, and admissibility of, evidence discovered in search authorized by judge over telephone, 38 ALR4th 1145.

Search and seizure: what constitutes abandonment of personal property within rule that search and seizure of abandoned property is not unreasonable — modern cases, 40 ALR4th 381.

Admissibility, in criminal case, of physical evidence obtained without consent by surgical removal from person's body, 41 ALR4th 60.

Admissibility of visual recording of event or matter giving rise to litigation or prosecution, 41 ALR4th 812.

Admissibility of visual recording of event or matter other than that giving rise to litigation or prosecution, 41 ALR4th 877.

Validity of arrest made in reliance upon outdated warrant list or similar police records, 45 ALR4th 550.

Officer's ruse to gain entry as affecting admissibility of plain-view evidence — modern cases, 47 ALR4th 425.

Search and seizure: necessity that police obtain warrant before taking possession of, examining, or testing evidence discovered in search by private person, 47 ALR4th 501.

Propriety of state or local government health officer's warrantless search — post-Camara cases, 53 ALR4th 1168.

Seizure of books, documents, or other papers under search warrant not describing such items, 54 ALR4th 391.

False light invasion of privacy — accusation or innuendo as to criminal acts, 58 ALR4th 902.

Search and seizure: reasonable expectation of privacy in public restroom, 74 ALR4th 508.

Search and seizure of telephone company records pertaining to subscriber as violation of subscriber's constitutional rights, 76 ALR4th 536.

Liability for discharge of at-will employee for refusal to submit to drug testing, 79 ALR4th 105.

"Caller ID" system, allowing telephone call recipient to ascertain number of telephone from which call originated, as violation of right to privacy, wiretapping statute, or similar protections, 9 ALR5th 553.

Lawfulness of search of person or personal effects under medical emergency exception to warrant requirement, 11 ALR5th 52.

Search and seizure: lawfulness of demand for driver's license, vehicle registration, or proof of insurance, pursuant to police stop to assist motorist, 19 ALR5th 884.

Admissibility, in motor vehicle license suspension proceedings, of evidence obtained by unlawful search and seizure, 23 ALR5th 108.

Search conducted by school official or teacher as violation of fourth amendment or equivalent state constitutional provision, 31 ALR5th 229.

Search and seizure of bank records pertaining to customer as violation of customer's rights under state law, 33 ALR5th 453.

Propriety of stop and search by law enforcement officers based solely on drug courier profile, 37 ALR5th 1.

Propriety of execution of search warrant at nighttime, 41 ALR5th 171.

Searches and seizures: Reasonable expectation of privacy in contents of garbage or trash receptacle, 62 ALR5th 1.

Belief that burglary is in progress or has recently been committed as exigent circumstance justifying warrantless search of premises, 64 ALR5th 637.

Search and seizure: reasonable expectation of privacy in tent or campsite, 66 ALR5th 373.

Validity of anticipatory search warrants — state cases, 67 ALR5th 361.

Admissibility of evidence discovered in search of defendant's property or residence authorized by one, other than relative, who is cotenant or common resident with defendant — state cases, 68 ALR5th 343.

Civilian participation in execution of search warrant as affecting legality of search, 68 ALR5th 549.

Effect of retroactive consent on legality of otherwise unlawful search and seizure, 76 ALR5th 563.

Permissibility and sufficiency of warrantless use of thermal imager or Forward Looking Infra-Red Radar (F.L.I.R.), 78 ALR5th 309.

Validity of police roadblocks or checkpoints for purpose of discovery of illegal narcotics violations, 82 ALR5th 103.

Validity of search or seizure of computer, computer disk, or computer peripheral equipment, 84 ALR5th 1.

What constitutes compliance with knock-and-announce rule in search of private premises — state cases, 85 ALR5th 1.

Federal and state constitutions as protecting prison visitor against unreasonable searches and seizures, 85 ALR5th 261.

Constitutionality of secret video surveillance, 91 ALR5th 585.

Expectation of privacy in internet communications, 92 ALR5th 15.

Destruction of property as violation of fourth amendment, 98 ALR5th 305.

Validity of requirement that, as condition of probation, defendant submit to warrantless searches, 99 ALR5th 557.

Error, in either search warrant or application for warrant, as to address of place to be searched as rendering warrant invalid, 103 ALR5th 463.

Search warrant as authorizing search of structures on property other than main house or other building, or location other than designated portion of building, 104 ALR5th 165.

Odor detectable by unaided person as furnishing probable cause for search warrant, 106 ALR5th 397.

When are facts offered in support of search warrant for evidence of sale or possession of cocaine so untimely as to be stale — State cases, 109 ALR5th 99.

When are facts offered in support of search warrant for evidence of sexual offense so untimely as to be stale — State cases, 111 ALR5th 239.

When are facts relating to marijuana, provided by one other than police or other law enforcement officer, so untimely as to be stale when offered in support of search warrant for evidence of sale or possession of a controlled substance — State cases, 112 ALR5th 429.

When are facts relating to drug other than cocaine or marijuana so untimely as to be stale when offered in support of search warrant for evidence of sale or possession of controlled substance — State cases, 113 ALR6th 517.

Validity of warrantless search of motor vehicle based on odor of marijuana — State cases, 114 ALR5th 173.

When are facts relating to marijuana, provided by police or other law enforcement officer, so untimely as to be stale when offered in support of search warrant for evidence of sale or possession of controlled substance — State cases, 114 ALR5th 235.

Validity of warrantless search based in whole or in part on odor of narcotics other than marijuana, or chemical related to manufacture of such narcotics, 115 ALR5th 477.

Validity of routine roadblocks by state or local police for purpose of discovery of driver's license, registration, and safety violations, 116 ALR5th 479.

Use of trained dog to detect narcotics or drugs as unreasonable search in violation of state constitutions, 117 ALR5th 407.

Adequacy of defense counsel's representation of criminal client regarding search and seizure issues — Motions and objections during trial and matters other than pretrial motions, 117 ALR5th 513.

Validity of warrantless search of other than motor vehicle or occupant of vehicle based on odor of marijuana — State cases, 122 ALR5th 439.

Validity of warrantless search of motor vehicle driver based on odor of marijuana—State cases, 123 ALR5th 179.

Validity of search conducted pursuant to parole warrant, 123 ALR5th 221.

Validity of warrantless search of motor vehicle passenger based on odor of marijuana, 1 ALR6th 371.

Application of Leon good faith exception to exclusionary rule where police fail to comply with knock and announce requirement during execution of search warrant, 2 ALR6th 169.

Application in state narcotics cases of collective knowledge doctrine or fellow officers' rule under Fourth Amendment — Cocaine cases, 4 ALR6th 599.

Application in state narcotics cases of collective knowledge doctrine or fellow officers' rule under Fourth Amendment — Drugs other than marijuana and cocaine and unidentified drugs, 12 ALR6th 553.

Construction and application of rule permitting knock and talk visits under Fourth Amendment and state constitutions, 15 ALR6th 515.

When is warrantless entry of house or other building justified under "hot pursuit" doctrine, 17 ALR6th 327.

Validity, under federal constitution, of regulations, rules or statutes allowing drug testing of students, 87 ALR Fed. 148.

Validity, construction, and effect of domestic currency transaction reporting requirement based upon 31 U.S.C.S. § 5313(a), 89 ALR Fed. 770.

Warrantless search by government employer of employee's workplace locker, desk, or the like as violation of fourth amendment privacy rights — federal cases, 91 ALR Fed. 226.

Physical examination of child's body for evidence of abuse as violative of fourth amendment or as raising fourth amendment issue, 93 ALR Fed. 530.

What constitutes functional equivalent of border for purpose of border exception to requirements of fourth amendment, 94 ALR Fed. 372.

Excessiveness or adequacy of awards of compensatory damages in civil actions for deprivation of rights under 42 USCS § 1983 — modern cases, 99 ALR Fed. 501.

Immunity of federal tax agent from suit based upon agent's effort to enforce or collect tax, 99 ALR Fed. 700.

Validity of warrantless search under extended border doctrine, 102 ALR Fed. 269.

Admissibility of evidence not related to air travel security, disclosed by airport security procedures, 108 ALR Fed. 658.

Warrantless detention of mail for investigative purposes as violative of fourth amendment, 115 ALR Fed. 439.

Permissibility under fourth amendment of detention of motorist by police, following lawful stop for traffic offense, to investigate matters not related to offense, 118 ALR Fed. 567.

Use of trained dog to detect narcotics or drugs as unreasonable search in violation of the fourth amendment, 150 ALR Fed. 399.

Admissibility of evidence discovered in search of adult defendant's property or residence authorized by defendant's minor relative, 152 ALR Fed. 475.

Admissibility of evidence discovered in search of defendant's property or residence authorized by defendant's spouse, 154 ALR Fed. 579.

Admissibility of evidence discovered in search of defendant's property or residence authorized by defendant's adult relative other than spouse, 160 ALR Fed. 165.

Validity of warrantless administrative inspection of business that is allegedly closely or pervasively regulated; cases decided since Colonnade Catering Corp. v. U.S., 397 U.S. 72, 90 S. Ct. 774, 25 L. Ed. 2d 60 (1970), 182 ALR Fed. 467.

When are facts offered in support of search warrant for evidence of federal nondrug offense so untimely as to be stale, 187 ALR Fed. 415.

Forcible administration of antipsychotic medication to pretrial detainees — Federal cases, 188 ALR Fed. 285.

Validity of warrantless search of motor vehicle based on odor of marijuana — Federal cases, 188 ALR Fed. 487.

Validity of warrantless search of other than motor vehicle or occupant of motor vehicle based on odor of marijuana — Federal cases, 191 ALR Fed. 303.

Validity of warrantless search of motor vehicle occupant based on odor of marijuana — Federal cases, 192 ALR Fed. 391.

Sufficiency of information provided by confidential informant, whose identity is known to police, to provide probable cause for federal search warrant where there was indication that informant provided reliable information to police in past — Cases decided after Illinois v. Gates, 462 U.S. 213, 103 S. Ct. 2317, 76 L. Ed. 2d 527 (1983), 196 ALR Fed. 1.

Sufficiency of information provided by confidential informant, whose identity is known to police, to provide probable cause for federal search warrant where there was no indication that informant provided reliable information to police in past — Cases decided after Illinois v. Gates, 462 U.S. 213, 103 S. Ct. 2317, 76 L. Ed. 2d 527 (1983), 9 ALR Fed. 2d 1.

[AMENDMENT V]

[Rights of Accused in Criminal Proceedings]

No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the Militia, when in actual service in time of War or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall he be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.

Cross references. — Protection of life, liberty, and property, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I. Privilege against self-incrimination, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVI and §§ 15-11-31, 17-7-93, 17-7-95, 24-9-27. Double jeopardy generally, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII and §§ 16-1-7, 16-1-8, 17-7-53, 38-2-438. Guarantee of just compensation, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I and § 22-1-5. Right to grand jury process, § 17-7-50. Self-incrimination in courts-martial, § 38-2-411. Double jeopardy in courts-martial, § 38-2-438. Use of evidence of driver's refusal to submit to chemical test for alcohol or drugs in blood, § 40-6-392.

Editor's notes. — The Supreme Court has declared that the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 protects a person from multiple jeopardy and compulsory self-incrimination in state, as well as federal, criminal proceedings. See Benton v. Maryland, 395 U.S. 784, 89 S. Ct. 2056, 23 L. Ed. 2d 707 (1969) (multiple jeopardy) and Malloy v. Hogan, 373 U.S. 1, 83 S. Ct. 1068, 10 L. Ed. 2d 148 (1964) (compulsory self-incrimination).

Law reviews. — For article discussing constitutionality of restrictive covenants, see 12 Ga. B.J. 277 (1950). For article "The School Segregation Decision: A Legal Analysis," see 3 J. of Pub. L. 83 (1954). For article, "The Law of the Land," focusing on the role of the Supreme Court, see 6 J. of Pub. L. 444 (1957). For article criticizing United States v. Costello, 145 F. Supp. 892 (S.D.N.Y. 1956), holding the privilege against self-incrimination does not obtain in denaturalization proceedings due to the noncriminal nature of such proceedings, see 8 Mercer L. Rev. 368 (1957). For article, "Jury Trials in Contempt Cases," see 20 Ga. B.J. 297 (1957). For article, "The Federal Loyalty Security Program-A Constitutional Dilemma," see 20 Ga. B.J. 473 (1958). For article, "Due Process of Law Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow," see 21 Ga. B.J. 193 (1958). For article,

"Civil Liberties and Statutory Construction," see 8 J. of Pub. L. 66 (1959). For article, "The School Segregation Cases," see 23 Ga. B.J. 9 (1960). For article, "The Supreme Court and State Coerced Confessions," see 12 J. of Pub. L. 53 (1963). For article, "The Fourteenth Amendment and Confessions of Guilt: Role of the Supreme Court," see 15 Mercer L. Rev. 309 (1964). For article, "Changing Constitutional Concepts in Criminal Law and Procedure," see 1 Ga. St. B.J. 421 (1965). For article, "The Legal Status of the American Communist Party: 1965," see 15 J. of Pub. L. 94 (1966). For article discussing federal liability for pollution abatement in condemnation actions, see 17 Mercer L. Rev. 364 (1966). For article discussing the limitation imposed by this amendment on the power to regulate the value of currency, see 16 J. of Pub. L. 51 (1967). For article, "The Supreme Court, the Individual and the Criminal Process," see 1 Ga. L. Rev. 386 (1967). For article, "Federalism in Current Perspective," see 1 Ga. L. Rev. 586 (1967). For article, "Police Interrogation and the Supreme Court: An Inquiry into the Limits of Judicial Policy-Making," see 17 J. of Pub. L. 241 (1968). For article on the judicial development of the due process clause of U.S. Const., Amend. 14 and the selective incorporation of the Bill of Rights, see 22 Mercer L. Rev. 533 (1971). For article, "Eminent Domain, Police Power and Urban Renewal: Compensation for Interim Depreciation in Land Values," see 7 Ga. L. Rev. 226 (1972). For article, "Privacy in the Corporate State: A Constitutional Value of Dwindling Significance," see 22 J. of Pub. L. 3 (1973). For article discussing federal Fair Credit Reporting Act, and the effect credit reporting has upon the constitutional right to privacy, see 22 J. of Pub. L. 67 (1973). For article, "Prisoners' Perceptions of their Constitutional Rights: A Client's View of the World of Criminal Justice," see 24 Emory L.J. 67 (1975). For article, "The Supreme Court and Civil Liberties: 1974-1975," see 24 Emory L.J. 937 (1975). For article, "Personal Liability of State Officials Under State and Federal Law," see 9 Ga. L. Rev. 821 (1975). For article discussing federal taxing law in connection with land use planning, see 10 Ga. L. Rev. 53 (1975). For article, "Constitutional Issues In Federal No-Fault," see 27 Mercer L. Rev. 273 (1975). For article proposing constitutional bases for a right to adequate health care, see 10 Ga. L. Rev. 391 (1976). For article discussing admissibility of illegally obtained evidence as violative of right not to incriminate self and advocating a state exclusionary rule, see 11 Ga. L. Rev. 105 (1976). For article, "Sexual Privacy — Recent U.S. Supreme Court Decisions," see 13 Ga. St. B.J. 93 (1976). For article analyzing commercial and government deprivation cases involving procedural due process, and advocating application of the same constitutional standard to both, see 11 Ga. L. Rev. 477 (1977). For article discussing developments in Georgia criminal law in 1976 to 1977, see 29 Mercer L. Rev. 55 (1977). For article, "Toward a Perspective on the Death Penalty Cases," see 27 Emory L.J. 469 (1978). For article, "Federal Antibias Legislation and Academic Freedom: Some Problems with Enforcement Procedures," see 27 Emory L.J. 609 (1978). For article surveying cases dealing with criminal law and criminal procedure from June 1, 1977 through May 1978, see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 27 (1978). For article, "In Their Own Image: The Reframing of the Due Process Clause by the United States Supreme Court," see 13 Ga. L. Rev. 479 (1979). For article, "Mistrials and the Double Jeopardy Clause," see 14 Ga. L. Rev. 45 (1979). For article, "To Supplant the Fifth Amendment's Right Against Compulsory Self-Incrimination: the Supreme Court and Federal Grants of Witness Immunity," see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 633 (1979). For article, "United States v. Alessio — Due Process of Law and Federal Grants of Witness Immunity for Defense Witnesses," see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 689 (1980). For article discussing the concept of a mandatory public service obligation for lawyers, see 29 Emory L.J. 997 (1980). For article, "The Constitutionality of Labor Unions' Collection and Use of Forced Dues for Non-Bargaining Purposes," see 32 Mercer L. Rev. 561 (1981). For article criticizing the use of compensation as a remedy for invalid land-use regulations, see 15 Ga. L. Rev. 559 (1981). For article, "Constitutional Criminal Litigation," see 32 Mercer L. Rev. 993 (1981). For article surveying developments in Georgia constitutional law from mid-1980 through mid-1981, see 33 Mercer L. Rev. 51 (1981). For article discussing the constitutional contours of forensic evaluation and the leading case of Estelle v. Smith, 451 U.S. 454 (1981), see Emory L.J. 71 (1982). For article, "The 'Forum State Interest' Factor in Personal Jurisdiction Adjudication," see 33 Mercer L. Rev. 769 (1982). For article discussing eleventh circuit court cases in the year 1981 dealing with constitutional criminal procedure, see 33 Mercer L. Rev. 1083 (1982). For survey article on domestic relations, see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 113 (1982). For article surveying 1982 Eleventh Circuit cases involving constitutional criminal procedure, see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 1241 (1983). For annual survey of evidence law, see 35 Mercer L. Rev. 167 (1983). For article, "Substantive Due Process and the Scope of Constitutional Torts," see 18 Ga. L. Rev. 201 (1984). For article, "The Bail Reform Act of 1984," see 34 Emory L.J. 685 (1985). For article, "Problems in Search of Principles: The First Amendment in the Supreme Court from 1791-1930," see 35 Emory L.J. 59 (1986). For article, "Prosecutorial Misconduct During Closing Argument: The Arts of Knowing When and How to Object and of Avoiding the 'Invited Response' Doctrine," see 37 Mercer L. Rev. 1033 (1986). For survey of 1985 Eleventh Circuit cases on constitutional criminal procedure, see 37 Mercer L. Rev. 1275 (1986). For survey of 1985 Eleventh Circuit cases on evidence, see 37 Mercer L. Rev. 1367 (1986). For article, "Employer and Consultant Reporting Under the LMRDA," see 20 Ga. L. Rev. 533 (1986). For article, "The Impact of the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations on Federal Policy," 21 Ga. L. Rev. 17 (1986). For lecture, "Government, Society, and Anarchy," see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 753 (1987). For survey of 1986 Eleventh Circuit cases on constitutional criminal procedure, see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 1141 (1987). For survey of 1986 Eleventh Circuit cases on employment discrimination, see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 1213 (1987). For article, "After ABSCAM: An Examination of Congressional Proposals to Limit Targeting Discretion in Federal Undercover Investigations," see 36 Emory L.J. 75 (1987). For article, "Affirmative Action in EEOC Litigation," see 21 Ga. L. Rev. 1059 (1987). For article, "Judicial Privilege," see 22 Ga. L. Rev. 89 (1987). For article, "An Overview of the New Federal Sentencing Guidelines," see 25 Ga. St. B.J. 16 (1988). For survey of 1987 Eleventh Circuit cases on administrative law, see 39 Mercer L. Rev. 1057 (1988). For survey of 1987 Eleventh Circuit cases on constitutional criminal procedure, see 39 Mercer L. Rev. 1187 (1988). For survey of Eleventh Circuit cases on evidence, see 39 Mercer L. Rev. 1259 (1988). For survey of Eleventh Circuit cases on trial practice and procedure, see 39 Mercer L. Rev. 1307 (1988). For article, "Exclusion of Evidence in Federal Prosecutions on the Basis of State Law," see 22 Ga. L. Rev. 667 (1988). For article, "More Myths of Parity: State Court Forums and Constitutional Actions for the Right to Shelter," see 38 Emory L.J. 615 (1989). For article, "Should a Christian Lawyer Serve the Guilty?," see 23 Ga. L. Rev. 1021 (1989). For article, "Georgia Local Government Officials and the Grand Jury," see 26 Ga. St. B.J. 50 (1989). For article, "Metaphor and Paradox," see 23 Ga. L. Rev. 1053 (1989). For article, "Ideology, Religion, and the Constitutional Protection of Private Property: 1760-1860," see 39 Emory L.J. 65 (1990). For article, "A Commentary on Professor Fisher's Thesis: Ideology, Religion, Private Property, and the Supreme Court 1987-1988," see 39 Emory L.J. 135 (1990). For article, "Federal and State 'State Action': The Undercritical Embrace of a Hypercriticized Doctrine," see 24 Ga. L. Rev. 327 (1990). For article, "The World Where Parallel Lines Converge: The Privilege Against Self-Incrimination in Concurrent Civil and Criminal Child Abuse Proceedings," see 24 Ga. L. Rev. 473 (1990). For essay, "The Prospects for a Revival of Conservative Activism in Constitutional Jurisprudence," see 24 Ga. L. Rev. 629 (1990). For article surveying developments in Georgia constitutional law during 1989, see 41 Mercer L. Rev. 1261 (1990). For annual survey on criminal law and procedure, see 42 Mercer L. Rev. 141 (1990). For annual eleventh circuit survey of constitutional law—civil, see 42 Mercer L. Rev. 1313 (1991). For annual eleventh circuit survey of constitutional criminal procedure, see 42 Mercer L. Rev. 1349 (1991). For article, "Criminal Discovery: Disclosure of Police Internal Affairs Division Documents and Police Personnel Files," see 29 Ga. St. B.J. 34 (1992). For annual eleventh circuit survey of constitutional law — civil, see 43 Mercer L. Rev. 1075 (1992). For annual eleventh circuit survey of constitutional criminal law, see 43 Mercer L. Rev. 1113 (1992). For annual eleventh circuit survey of federal tax law touching on fifth amendment privilege against self-incrimination, see 43 Mercer L. Rev. 1195 (1992). For annual survey of criminal law and procedure, see 43 Mercer L. Rev. 175 (1991). For article, "Individual Rights and the Powers of Government," see 27 Ga. L. Rev. 343 (1993). For article, "Conceptual Interdependence and Comparative Competence," see 27 Ga. L. Rev. 391 (1993). For article, "Rights as Trumps," see 27 Ga. L. Rev. 463 (1993). For article, "A Comprehensive Analysis of Georgia RICO," see 9 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 537 (1993). For article, "Making the Case for a Constitutional Right to Minimum Entitlements," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 525 (1993). For article, "Comment On: Making the Case for a Constitutional Right to Minimum Entitlements," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 567 (1993). For article, "Resources and Rights: Towards a New Prototype of Criminal Representation," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 599 (1993). For article, "Article II Courts," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 825 (1993). For article, "Constitutional Criminal Law," see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 1143 (1993). For article, "Annual Eleventh Circuit Survey January 1, 1993 — December 31, 1993: Constitutional Civil Law," see 45 Mercer L. Rev. 1217 (1994). For article, "Annual Eleventh Circuit Survey January 1, 1993 — December 31, 1993: Constitutional Criminal Law," see 45 Mercer L. Rev. 1243 (1994). For annual survey article on criminal law and procedure, see 46 Mercer L. Rev. 153 (1994). For article, "The Power of Government to Regulate Class Discrimination by Religious Entities: A Study in Conflicting Values," see 43 Emory L.J. 1189 (1994). For article, "1994 Eleventh Circuit Survey: Constitutional Criminal Procedure," see 46 Mercer L. Rev. 1297 (1995). For article, "Liberty and the Constitution," see 29 Ga. L. Rev. 585 (1995). For survey of 1995 Eleventh Circuit cases on constitutional criminal procedure, see 47 Mercer L. Rev.

765 (1996). For survey of 1995 Eleventh Circuit cases on evidence, see 47 Mercer L. Rev. 837 (1996). For survey of 1995 Eleventh Circuit cases on federal sentencing guidelines, see 47 Mercer L. Rev. 851 (1996). For survey of 1995 Eleventh Circuit cases on trial practice and procedure, see 47 Mercer L. Rev. 907 (1996). For article, "Between a Rock and a Hard Place: Accommodating the Fifth Amendment Privilege in Civil Forfeiture Cases," see 15 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 555 (1999). For article surveying 1997 and 1998 Eleventh Circuit cases on constitutional criminal procedure, see 50 Mercer L. Rev. 921 (1999). For article surveying 1999 Eleventh Circuit cases involving constitutional criminal procedure, see 51 Mercer L. Rev. 1089 (2000). For article surveying of 1999 Eleventh Circuit cases on federal sentencing guidelines, see 51 Mercer L. Rev. 1189 (2000). For article, "Why Georgia's Child Support Guidelines Are Unconstitutional," see 6 Ga. St. B.J. 8 (2000). For article, "Constitutionally Sound Objectives and Means," see 6 Ga. St. B.J. 16 (2000). For article, "Tree Preservation Ordinances: Sacrificing Private Timber Rights on the Diminutive Altar of Public Benefit," see 52 Mercer L. Rev. 705 (2001). For article on constitutional criminal procedure, see 52 Mercer L. Rev. 1305 (2001). For article on criminal law, see 53 Mercer L. Rev. 209 (2001). For article, "Constitutional Criminal Procedure," see 53 Mercer L. Rev. 1339 (2002). For article, "Constitutional Criminal Procedure," see 54 Mercer L. Rev. 1403 (2003). For survey article on criminal law and procedure for the period from June 1, 2002 through May 31, 2003, see 55 Mercer L. Rev. 117 (2003). For survey article on death penalty decisions from June 1, 2002 through May 31, 2002, see 55 Mercer L. Rev. 175 (2003). For Eleventh Circuit survey article on constitutional criminal procedure decisions in 2003, see 55 Mercer L. Rev. 1149 (2004). For article, "Constitutional Interpretation, Coercive Interrogation, and Civil Rights Litigation after Chavez v. Martinez," 39 Ga. L. Rev. 733 (2005). For article, "Data Matching, Data Mining, and Due Process," see 40 Ga. L. Rev. 1 (2005). For article, "The Role of the Federal Sentencing Guidelines in the Wake of United States v. Booker and United States v. Fanfan," see 56 Mercer L. Rev. 1131 (2005). For annual survey of criminal law, see 57 Mercer L. Rev. 113 (2005). For annual survey of death penalty decisions, see 57 Mercer L. Rev. 139 (2005). For annual survey of zoning and land use law, see 57 Mercer L. Rev. 447 (2005). For annual survey of evidence law, see 58 Mercer L. Rev. 151 (2006).

For note "Taxation of Illegally Received Income," see 1 J. of Pub. L. 473 (1952). For note discussing the use of eminent domain powers in slum clearance and owners right under this amendment and U.S. Const., Amend. 14, see 3 J. of Pub. L. 261 (1954). For note discussing due process and loyalty requirements for federal employment, in light of Cole v. Young, 351 U.S. 536, 76 S. Ct. 861, 100 L. Ed. 1396 (1956), see 5 J. of Pub. L. 508 (1956). For note, "The Posture of Former Jeopardy on Retrial," see 9 Mercer L. Rev. 354 (1958). For note on amenability of dependents of servicemen and nonmilitary employees to court-martial overseas, see 9 J. of Pub. L. 252 (1960). For note on computation of compensation for condemned lands where value is enhanced by announcement of proposed improvement, see 15 Mercer L. Rev. 488 (1964). For note discussing habeas corpus as a means of exerting control by the central government in protecting the constitutional rights of criminal defendants and the ramifications for federalism, see 16 Mercer L. Rev. 281 (1964). For note suggesting attorney's due process right to be compensated for representing an indigent, see 16 Mercer L. Rev. 367 (1964). For note discussing retroactivity of constitutional rules of criminal procedure in light of Linkletter v. Walker, 381 U.S. 618, 85 S. Ct. 1731, 14 L. Ed. 2d 601 (1965), see 16 J. of Pub. L. 193 (1967). For note, "Constitutional Rights of a Taxpayer in a Criminal Tax Investigation," see 16 J. of Pub. L. 403 (1967). For note discussing sonic boom damage as governmental taking of property for public use without just compensation, see 2 Ga. L. Rev. 83 (1967). For note discussing constitutional problems with the bail system, see 4 Ga. St. B.J. 278 (1967). For note, "Welfare Due Process: The Maximum Grant Limitation on the Right to Survive," see 3 Ga. L. Rev. 459 (1969). For note discussing operation of Implied Consent Law Code 1933, § 68-1625.1 (see § 40-5-55), and constitutional issues raised by the concept, see 20 Mercer L. Rev. 489 (1969). For note discussing the constitutional origins of the substantive right to family autonomy, see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 719 (1969). For note discussing some limitations on governmental tort immunity, see 5 Ga. St. B.J. 494 (1969). For note, "Regulation and Ownership of the Marshlands: The Georgia Marshlands Act," see 5 Ga. L. Rev. 563 (1971). For note discussing the constitutional implications of higher nonresident tuition fees charged by state universities, see 8 Ga. St. B.J. 86 (1971). For note, "The Constitutionality of the Use of Search Warrant to Obtain Tax Records," see 6 Ga. L. Rev. 399 (1972). For note advocating judicial discretion in permitting a pro se defense, see 23 Emory L.J. 523 (1974). For note discussing self-incrimination in relation to mandatory reporting of illegally obtained income, see 23 Emory L.J. 1119 (1974). For note, "Behind Closed Doors: An Empirical Inquiry Into the Nature of Prison Discipline in Georgia," see 8 Ga. L. Rev. 919 (1974). For note on use of voice exemplars in grand jury investigations, see 25 Mercer L. Rev. 365 (1974). For note analyzing appropriate standard of proof to meet due process requirements in cases involving loss of liberty, in light of Blunt v. United States, 322 A.2d 579 (D.C. App. 1974), see 24 Emory L.J. 105 (1975). For note, "Constitutionality of State Residency Requirements for Bar Admission," see 24 Emory L.J. 425 (1975). For note, "The Constitutionality of Residency Requirements for Municipal Employees," see 24 Emory L.J. 447 (1975). For note, "Application of the Fourth Amendment and the Exclusionary Rule to the Grand Jury," see 24 Emory L.J. 471 (1975). For note discussing the right against self-incrimination in reference to the production of records, see 9 Ga. L. Rev. 658 (1975). For note discussing airport noise as a "taking," see 10 Ga. L. Rev. 218 (1975). For note discussing limits to prosecutor's duty to disclose exculpatory evidence to the defense, in light of United States v. Agurs, 427 U.S. 97, 96 S. Ct. 2392, 49 L. Ed. 2d 342 (1976), see 28 Mercer L. Rev. 383 (1976). For note, "The Limits of Judicial Intervention in Criminal Trials and Reversible Error," see 11 Ga. L. Rev. 371 (1977). For note, "Criminal Discovery: The Use of Notices to Produce," see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 331 (1978). For note, "Constitutionally Implied Causes of Action:

A Policy of Protection, Expansion, or Restriction?" see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 1023 (1979). For note discussing application of procedural due process requirements to hearings by administrative tribunals, see 32 Mercer L. Rev. 359 (1980). For note pertaining to property rights of owners versus rights of expression and petition exercised on shopping center property, see 32 Mercer L. Rev. 637 (1981). For note discussing abortion regulation in light of Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113, 93 S. Ct. 705, 35 L. Ed. 2d 147 (1973), see 15 Ga. L. Rev. 681 (1981). For note discussing "Interstate Commerce" jurisdictional test in Sherman Act (15 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.) cases, in light of McLain v. Real Estate Bd., Inc., 444 U.S. 232, 100 S. Ct. 502, 62 L. Ed. 2d 441 (1980), see 15 Ga. L. Rev. 714 (1981). For note on United States v. DiFrancesco, 449 U.S. 117, 101 S. Ct. 426, 66 L. Ed. 2d 328 (1980), see 32 Mercer L. Rev. 1261 (1981). For note on airport searches of drug couriers, see 33 Mercer L. Rev. 433 (1981). For note, "Constitutional Challenges to Grand Jury Foreperson Selection Procedures," see 17 Ga. L. Rev. 153 (1982). For note, "The Bifurcated Trial: Is It Used More Than It Is Useful?," see 31 Emory L.J. 441 (1982). For note, "Two Models of Prosecutorial Vindictiveness," see 17 Ga. L. Rev. 467 (1983). For note, "An Assessment of the Use of Cameras in State and Federal Courts," see 18 Ga. L. Rev. 389 (1984). For note, "Circling the Wagons: Informational Privacy and Family Testimonial Privileges," see 20 Ga. L. Rev. 173 (1985). For note, "Military Medical Malpractice and the Feres Doctrine," see 20 Ga. L. Rev. 497 (1986). For case note, "Morris v. Mathews: A Constitutional Salve for Double Jeopardy Violations," see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 715 (1987). For note, "United States v. Stanley: Salt in a Serviceman's Wounds," see 39 Mercer L. Rev. 1013 (1988). For note, "When Exactions Become Extortion: The Supreme Court Draws the Line in Nollan v. California Coastal Commission," see 39 Mercer L. Rev. 1033 (1988). For note, "Dismissal with Prejudice for Failure to Prosecute: Visiting the Sins of the Attorney upon the Client," see 22 Ga. L. Rev. 195 (1987). For note, "Metro Broadcasting, Inc. v. FCC: Are Racial Classifications No Longer Subject to Strict Scrutiny?," see 42 Mercer L. Rev. 1623 (1991). For note, "Minnick v. Mississippi: Additional Protection for the Criminal Defendant,” see 42 Mercer L. Rev. 1639 (1991). For note, “Haitian Centers Council, Inc. v. McNary: If at First You Don’t Succeed ...,” see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 959 (1993). For note, “Lucas v. South Carolina Coastal Council: Low Tide for the Takings Clause,” see 44 Mercer L. Rev. 1433 (1993). For note, “United States v. Dickerson: The Beginning of the End for Miranda?” see 51 Mercer L. Rev. 1359 (2000). For note, “Giving Taxpatriates the Boot-permanently?: The Reed Amendment Unconstitutionally Infringes on the Fundamental Right to Expatriate,” see 36 Ga. L. Rev. 835 (2002). For note, “Which Stream to Follow: Why the Eleventh Circuit Should Adopt a Broader Stream of Commerce Theory in Light of Growing E-Commerce Markets,” see 20 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 539 (2003). For note, “The Meaning of Fifth and Sixth Amendment Rights: Sentencing in Federal Drug Cases after Apprendi v. New Jersey and Harris v. United States,” see 20 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 723 (2004). For note, “United States v. Patane: The Supreme Court’s Continued Assault on Miranda,” see 56 Mercer L. Rev. 1499 (2005). For note, “What’s the Use? The Court Takes a Stance on the Public Use Doctrine in Kelo v. City of New London,” see 57 Mercer L. Rev. 689 (2006).

For comment on Helvering v. Mitchell, 303 U.S. 391, 58 S. Ct. 630, 82 L. Ed. 917 (1938), holding acquittal on criminal charge of tax evasion does not bar remedial civil action for fraudulent deduction arising out of same facts, see 1 Ga. B.J. 48 (1939). For comment on Williamson v. Housing Auth., 186 Ga. 673, 199 S.E. 43 (1938); Barber v. Housing Auth., 189 Ga. 155, 5 S.E.2d 425 (1939); Hogg v. Housing Auth., 189 Ga. 164, 5 S.E.2d 431 (1939), see 2 Ga. B.J. 65 (1940). For comment on United States v. White, 322 U.S. 694, 64 S. Ct. 1248, 88 L. Ed. 1542 (1944), holding privilege against self-incrimination cannot be claimed for refusal to produce union records specifically designated in subpoena, see 7 Ga. B.J. 247 (1944). For comment regarding due process right to counsel for indigent defendant charged with felony, in light of Williams v. Kaiser, 323 U.S. 471, 65 S. Ct. 363, 89 L. Ed. 398 (1945), see 7 Ga. B.J. 484 (1945). For comment on United Pub. Workers v. Mitchell, 330 U.S. 75, 67 S. Ct. 556, 91 L. Ed. 754 (1946), upholding constitutionality of Hatch Act, 5 U.S.C. § 1501 et seq., curbing political activity of state and federal employees, see 9 Ga. B.J. 459 (1947). For comment on United States ex rel. Kennedy v. Burke, 176 F.2d 96 (3rd Cir. 1949), holding absence of counsel permissible where petitioner’s age, intelligence, and experience established intelligent guilty plea, see 12 Ga. B.J. 228 (1949). For comment discussing appeal by state after acquittal, in light of State v. Eyjue, 254 Wis. 581, 37 N.W.2d 50 (1949), see 1 Mercer L. Rev. 306 (1950). For comment on Blau v. United States, 340 U.S. 159, 71 S. Ct. 223, 95 L. Ed. 170 (1950), holding this amendment’s privilege against self-incrimination extends to refusal to answer grand jury questions regarding Communist party, see 13 Ga. B.J. 483 (1951). For comment concerning discriminatory selection of grand jury members, in light of Shepherd v. Florida, 341 U.S. 50, 71 S. Ct. 549, 95 L. Ed. 740 (1951), see 14 Ga. B.J. 256 (1951). For comment on United States v. Pewee Coal Co., 341 U.S. 114, 71 S. Ct. 670, 95 L. Ed. 2d 809 (1951), holding seizure of coal mine by United States constitutes a taking, see 14 Ga. B.J. 261 (1951). For comment on United States v. Carignan, 342 U.S. 36, 72 S. Ct. 97, 96 L. Ed. 48 (1951), see 14 Ga. B.J. 486 (1952). For comment on Rochin v. California, 342 U.S. 165, 72 S. Ct. 205, 96 L. Ed. 182 (1952), see 15 Ga. B.J. 86 (1952). For comment discussing the determination of just compensation for ships requisitioned during wartime, see 15 Ga. B.J. 236 (1952). For comment on United States v. Coffey, 198 F.2d 438 (3rd Cir. 1952), see 15 Ga. B.J. 368 (1953). For comment on United States v. Kahriger, 345 U.S. 22, 72 S. Ct. 510, 97 L. Ed. 54 (1953), holding unconstitutional the federal excise and occupational tax on wagering as an invasion of the state’s police powers and violative of the privilege against self-incrimination, see 15 Ga. B.J. 505 (1953). For comment on Kitchens v. Steele, 112 F. Supp. 383 (W.D. Mo. 1953), holding that a statute providing for the confinement of an accused found to be mentally incompetent until such time as the accused shall be mentally competent to stand trial is valid under the constitutional provision relating to “incidental powers,” see 16 Ga. B.J. 236 (1953). For comment on Ikeda v. Curtis, 43 Wash. 2d 449, 261 P.2d 684, 690 (1953), as to permissibility of inferring guilt in a civil case in which a party's fifth amendment rights are invoked, see 3 J. of Pub. L. 280 (1954). For comment on Orloff v. Willoughby, 345 U.S. 83, 73 S. Ct. 534, 97 L. Ed. 842 (1953), upholding the denial of writ of habeas corpus and army discharge of petitioner who refused, on grounds of possible self-incrimination, to state whether he had been a member of the Communist Party in his application for commission, see 16 Ga. B.J. 354 (1954). For comment on Adams v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 179, 74 S. Ct. 442, 98 L. Ed. 608 (1954), holding that petitioner who testified before senate committee was not a volunteer, and was not required to invoke the fifth amendment as a prerequisite to claiming immunity under the general immunity statute (62 Stat. 833 [1948], 18 U.S.C. § 3486 [1953]), as the statute forbids the use of testimony given by a witness before either House of Congress or their committees in any criminal proceeding against him in "any court," see 17 Ga. B.J. 140 (1954). For comment on United States v. Nesmith, 121 F. Supp. 758 (D.D.C. 1954), regarding admissibility of chemical tests of body fluids where fourth, fifth and fourteenth amendment objections are made, see 4 J. of Pub. L. 202 (1955). For comment on Grandville-Smith v. Grandville-Smith, 349 U.S. 1, 75 S. Ct. 553, 99 L. Ed. 773 (1955), analyzing due process aspects of divorce jurisdiction statutes and full faith and credit problems with divorce decrees, see 4 J. of Pub. L. 206 (1955). For comment on Beard v. United States, 222 F.2d 84 (4th Cir. 1955), wherein the refusal of defendant to produce public records was held to raise an inference of criminality and such inference did not violate privilege against self-incrimination, see 7 Mercer L. Rev. 233 (1955). For comment on Communist Party of United States v. Subversive Activities Control Bd., 223 F.2d 531 (D.C. 1954), cert. granted, 349 U.S. 944, 75 S. Ct. 877, 99 L. Ed. 1270 (1955), holding the statute requiring registration of Communist action organizations is valid and not contrary to this amendment, see 18 Ga. B.J. 358 (1956). For comment on United States ex rel. Toth v. Quarles, 350 U.S. 11, 76 S. Ct. 1, 100 L. Ed. 8 (1955), holding that Congress cannot subject civilians to trial by court-martial for they are entitled to safeguards which pertain to regular federal court proceedings, see 18 Ga. B.J. 364

(1956). For comment, "The 'Right to Work': Individual or Collective Right," focusing on Railway Employees' Dep't v. Hanson, 351 U.S. 225, 76 S. Ct. 714, 100 L. Ed. 1112 (1956), see 6 J. of Pub. L. 263 (1957). For comment on Reid v. Covert, 354 U.S. 1, 77 S. Ct. 1222, 1 L. Ed. 2d 1148 (1957) and Kinsella v. Krueger, 351 U.S. 470, 76 S. Ct. 886, 100 L. Ed. 1342 (1956) as to military authority overseas over dependents of servicemen, see 6 J. of Pub. L. 540 (1957). For comment on United States v. Linen Serv. Council, 141 F. Supp. 511 (D.N.J. 1956), holding that the members of a partnership may exercise the privilege against self-incrimination in regard to the production of partnership records, see 19 Ga. B.J. 536 (1957). For comment on Railway Employees' Dep't v. Hanson, 351 U.S. 225, 76 S. Ct. 714, 100 L. Ed. 1112 (1956), see 19 Ga. B.J. 550 (1957). For comment on Breithaupt v. Abram, 352 U.S. 432, 77 S. Ct. 408, 1 L. Ed. 2d 448 (1957), holding that U.S. Const., Amend. 14 does not extend the protection of this amendment and U.S. Const., Amend. 4 to criminal prosecutions in state cases, see 20 Ga. B.J. 126 (1957). For comment discussing the privilege against self-incrimination for those other than natural persons, in light of United States v. Linen Serv. Council, 141 F. Supp. 511 (D.N.J. 1956), see 20 Ga. B.J. 269 (1957). For comment discussing the privilege against self-incrimination with regard to the work papers of taxpayer's accountant in taxpayer's possession, in light of Application of House, 114 F. Supp. 95 (N.D. Cal., 1956), see 20 Ga. B.J. 278 (1957). For comment on Thomas v. State, 213 Ga. 237, 98 S.E.2d 548 (1957), holding that since defendant did not object to being placed in his car for the purposes of identification, it was not error to allow testimony concerning the incriminating act and no constitutional right was violated, see 20 Ga. B.J. 384 (1958). For comment on Looper v. Georgia S. & F. Ry., 213 Ga. 279, 99 S.E.2d 101 (1957), holding that a shop agreement requiring employees to become a member of a labor organization and contribute dues to be distributed among various political organizations was in violation of the employees rights as one cannot constitutionally be compelled to contribute moneys to support ideas which one opposes, see 20 Ga. B.J. 540 (1958). For comment on Blackford v. United States, 247

F.2d 245 (9th Cir. 1957), cert. denied, 356 U.S. 914, 78 S. Ct. 672, 2 L. Ed. 2d 586 (1958), holding that evidence gained in bodily search of defendant who was attempting to cross the United States border was not obtained through unreasonable search and seizure and did not violate constitutional protections, see 21 Ga. B.J. 269 (1958). For comment on the right to belong to a labor union, in light of Oliphant v. Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen & Enginemen, 262 F.2d 359 (6th Cir. 1958), cert. denied, 359 U.S. 935, 79 S. Ct. 648, 3 L. Ed. 2d 636 (1959), see 8 J. of Pub. L. 580 (1959). For comment discussing the constitutionality of the statutory prohibition against expenditures by labor unions in connection with federal elections, 18 U.S.C. § 610, see 21 Ga. B.J. 575 (1959). For comment on Steinberg v. United States, 163 F. Supp. 590 (Ct. Cl. 1958), holding suspension of retirement pay for pleading this amendment to be violation of due process, see 22 Ga. B.J. 114 (1959). For comment regarding right of witness in congressional contempt proceeding to refuse to testify under this amendment and U.S. Const., Amend. 1, in light of Barrenblatt v. United States, 360 U.S. 109, 79 S. Ct. 1081, 3 L. Ed. 2d 1115 (1959), see 22 Ga. B.J. 404 (1960). For comment on Marshall v. United States, 360 U.S. 310, 79 S. Ct. 1171, 3 L. Ed. 2d 1250 (1959), holding exposure of jurors to newspaper articles regarding prior convictions when court refused to permit prosecutor to present such evidence was denial of due process, see 22 Ga. B.J. 413 (1960). For comment on Nelson v. County of Los Angeles, 362 U.S. 1, 80 S. Ct. 527, 4 L. Ed. 2d 494 (1959), holding due process not denied employees summarily dismissed for invocation of this amendment and U.S. Const., Amend. 5 before congressional subcommittee, see 23 Ga. B.J. 267 (1960). For comment discussing constitutionality of legislation requiring employees to pay dues to railway union in order to maintain employment, in light of International Ass'n of Machinists v. Street, 367 U.S. 740, 81 S. Ct. 784, 6 L. Ed. 2d 1141 (1961), see 24 Ga. B.J. 432 (1962). For comment on Cohen v. Hurley, 366 U.S. 117, 81 S. Ct. 954, 6 L. Ed. 2d 156 (1961), upholding constitutionality of disbarment by state court of attorney who refused to answer questions in judicial investigation pertaining to professional misconduct, see 24 Ga. B.J. 522 (1962). For comment discussing admissibility of voluntary statements made after indictment and release on bail in absence of retained counsel, in light of Massiah v. United States, 377 U.S. 201, 84 S. Ct. 1199, 12 L. Ed. 2d 246 (1964), see 16 Mercer L. Rev. 343 (1964). For comment on Malloy v. Hogan, 378 U.S. 1, 84 S. Ct. 1489, 12 L. Ed. 653 (1964), see 1 Ga. St. B.J. 358 (1965). For comment on Bowers v. Fulton County, 221 Ga. 731, 146 S.E.2d 884 (1966), appearing below, as to measure of damages for condemnation, see 17 Mercer L. Rev. 471 (1966). For comment on Busbee v. State, 183 So. 2d 27 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1966), discussing multiple prosecutions of distinct offenses arising from the same transaction, see 18 Mercer L. Rev. 304 (1966). For comment on Juelich v. United States, 342 F.2d 29 (5th Cir. 1965), see 2 Ga. St. B.J. 504 (1966). For comment on State Hwy. Dep't v. Branch, 222 Ga. 770, 152 S.E.2d 372 (1966), discussing regulation of outdoor advertising and billboards as a constitutional taking, see 18 Mercer L. Rev. 499 (1967). For comment discussing Miranda warnings in criminal tax prosecutions, see 18 Mercer L. Rev. 502 (1967). For comment on Marchetti v. United States, 390 U.S. 39, 88 S. Ct. 697, 19 L. Ed. 2d 889 (1968), applying this amendment's privilege to disclosure of gambling income, see 19 Mercer L. Rev. 433 (1968). For comment on State v. Rand, 20 Ohio Misc. 98, 247 N.E.2d 342 (Com. Pleas 1969), holding criminal defendant competent to stand trial under properly administered tranquilizing drugs, see 18 J. of Pub. L. 503 (1969). For comment discussing limits on the military's jurisdiction and the constitutional rights of servicemen in light of O'Callahan v. Parker, 395 U.S. 258, 89 S. Ct. 1683, 23 L. Ed. 2d 291 (1969), see 21 Mercer L. Rev. 311 (1969). For comment on Sams v. Olah, 225 Ga. 497, 169 S.E.2d 790 (1969) as to the constitutionality of Art. 2, Ch. 19, T. 15, see 21 Mercer L. Rev. 355 (1969). For comment on Smith v. State, 225 Ga. 328, 168 S.E.2d 587 (1969), see 6 Ga. St. B.J. 294 (1970). For comment on United States v. Barash, 428 F.2d 328 (2d Cir. 1970), as to the constitutionality under the principle of double jeopardy, of increasing severity of punishment on retrial following successful appeal, see 5 Ga. L. Rev. 194 (1971). For comment on Anderson v. Laird, 316 F. Supp. 1081 (D.D.C. 1970), as to religious regulations at military academies, see 5 Ga. L. Rev. 400 (1971). For comment on Freeman v. Wilcox, 119 Ga. App. 325, 167 S.E.2d 163 (1969) and a juvenile's right to counsel at pre-adjudicatory stages of juvenile proceedings, see 22 Mercer L. Rev. 597 (1971). For comment on Dutton v. Evans, 400 U.S. 74, 91 S. Ct. 210, 27 L. Ed. 2d 213 (1970) and Georgia's coconspirator exception to the hearsay rule, see 22 Mercer L. Rev. 791 (1971). For comment on In re Kras, 331 F. Supp. 1207 (E.D.N.Y. 1971), holding the required prepayment of a filing fee by an indigent in a bankruptcy proceeding violative of equal protection and due process, see 21 J. of Pub. L. 239 (1972). For comment as to custodial interrogation at the suspect's home, in light of Knowles v. State, 124 Ga. App. 377, 183 S.E.2d 617 (1971), see 23 Mercer L. Rev. 983 (1972). For comment discussing the application of this amendment's privilege against self-incrimination to a federal tax scheme requiring disclosure of potentially incriminating information on one's tax return, see 8 Ga. L. Rev. 160 (1973). For comment discussing treatment of premeditated murder and felony murder as one offense under the theory of continuing jeopardy, in light of United States ex rel. Jackson v. Follette, 462 F.2d 1041 (2d Cir. 1972), see 24 Mercer L. Rev. 679 (1973). For comment on Creamer v. State, 229 Ga. 511, 192 S.E.2d 350 (1972), see 24 Mercer L. Rev. 687 (1973). For comment on Scarpa v. United States Bd. of Parole, 477 F.2d 278 (5th Cir.), vacated and remanded, 414 U.S. 809, 94 S. Ct. 79, 38 L. Ed. 2d 44 (1973), declining to accord parole release hearings, judicial review and procedural due process rights, see 23 Emory L.J. 597 (1974). For comment on Gagnon v. Scarpelli, 411 U.S. 778, 93 S. Ct. 1756, 36 L. Ed. 2d 656 (1973), as to probationer's rights at probation revocation, see 23 Emory L.J. 617 (1974). For comment discussing due process and equal protection rights of illegitimate child denied social security benefits due to birth after father's disability, in light of Beaty v. Weinberger, 478 F.2d 300 (5th Cir. 1973), see 23 Emory L.J. 861 (1974). For comment criticizing Chaffin v. Stynchcombe, 412 U.S. 17, 93 S. Ct. 1977, 36 L. Ed. 2d 714 (1973), permitting imposition of increased sentence by jury after retrial, see 23 Emory L.J. 879

(1974). For comment on Construction Indus. Assoc. v. City of Petaluma, 375 F. Supp. 574 (N.D. Cal. 1974), as to the authority of local governments to restrict population growth by means other than by the operation of demographic and market demands in light of the right to travel, see 9 Ga. L. Rev. 260 (1974). For comment on James v. State, 230 Ga. 29, 195 S.E.2d 448 (1973), appearing below, see 25 Mercer L. Rev. 935 (1974). For comment discussing elements of due process required for nonprobationary employee discharged without prior evidentiary hearing where administrative appeal is available, in light of Arnett v. Kennedy, 416 U.S. 134, 94 S. Ct. 1633, 40 L. Ed. 2d 15 (1974), see 26 Mercer L. Rev. 1429 (1974). For comment on Couch v. United States, 409 U.S. 322, 93 S. Ct. 611, 34 L. Ed. 2d 548 (1973), holding compelled production of taxpayers records in possession of accountant not violative of taxpayer's right against self-incrimination, see 10 Ga. St. B.J. 648 (1974). For comment on Brown v. Illinois, 422 U.S. 590, 95 S. Ct. 2254, 45 L. Ed. 2d 416 (1975), as to effect of Miranda warnings on admissibility of a confession made after an unconstitutional arrest, see 25 Emory L.J. 227 (1976). For comment on Washington v. Davis, 426 U.S. 229, 96 S. Ct. 2040, 48 L. Ed. 2d 597 (1976), upholding employment test with a racially disproportionate impact absent discriminatory purpose against an equal protection attack under this amendment, see 25 Emory L.J. 737 (1976). For comment on Michigan v. Mosley, 423 U.S. 96, 96 S. Ct. 321, 46 L. Ed. 2d 313 (1975), regarding the resumption of questioning after the right to remain silent has been exercised, see 27 Mercer L. Rev. 1203 (1976). For comment on United States v. Security Nat'l Bank, 546 F.2d 492 (2d Cir. 1976), regarding protection of corporate defendant under the double jeopardy clause, see 11 Ga. L. Rev. 694 (1977). For comment on Andresen v. Maryland, 427 U.S. 463, 96 S. Ct. 2737, 49 L. Ed. 2d 627 (1976), as to nonapplicability of privilege against self-incrimination to seizure with search warrant of incriminatory personal business records, see 28 Mercer L. Rev. 581 (1977). For comment on Maher v. New Orleans, 516 F.2d 1051 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 426 U.S. 905, 96 S. Ct. 2225, 48 L. Ed. 2d 830 (1976), upholding the constitutionality of a municipal zoning ordinance regulating the preservation and maintenance of a historical district, see 28 Mercer L. Rev. 591 (1977). For comment on United States v. Grayson, 438 U.S. 41, 98 S. Ct. 2610, 57 L. Ed. 2d 582 (1978), regarding consideration by sentencing judge of his belief that defendant falsely testified during trial, see 28 Emory L.J. 159 (1979). For comment discussing whether a mother may challenge a state child custody ruling in a federal habeas corpus proceeding in light of Sylvander v. New England Home for Little Wanderers, 584 F.2d 1103 (1st Cir. 1978), see 13 Ga. L. Rev. 662 (1979). For comment, "The Tacit Admission Rule: Unreliable and Unconstitutional — A Doctrine Ripe for Abandonment," see 14 Ga. L. Rev. 27 (1979). For comment on Alderman v. State, 241 Ga. 496, 246 S.E.2d 642, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 991, 99 S. Ct. 593, 58 L. Ed. 2d 666 (1978), see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 349 (1979). For comment on DeKalb County v. Trustees, Decatur Lodge No. 1602, 242 Ga. 707, 251 S.E.2d 243 (1978), see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 367 (1979). For comment on Pope v. City of Atlanta, 242 Ga. 331, 249 S.E.2d 16 (1978), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 936, 99 S. Ct. 1281, 59 L. Ed. 2d 494 (1979), see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 375 (1979). For comment, "Bivens and the Creation of a Cause of Action for Money Damages Arising Directly From the Due Process Clauses," see 29 Emory L.J. 231 (1980). For comment on Fare v. Michael C., 442 U.S. 707 (1979), regarding this amendment and Miranda rights of juveniles, see 29 Emory L.J. 563 (1980). For comment on Fulcher v. United States, 632 F.2d 278 (4th Cir. 1980), see 15 Ga. L. Rev. 516 (1981). For comment on Fullilove v. Klutznick, 448 U.S. 448, 100 S. Ct. 2758, 65 L. Ed. 2d 902 (1980), regarding the constitutionality of the ten percent set aside for minority contractors, etc., see 29 Emory L.J. 1127 (1980). For comment discussing the forcible medication of involuntarily committed mental patients with antipsychotic drugs in light of Rogers v. Okin, 634 F.2d 650 (1st Cir. 1980), see 15 Ga. L. Rev. 739 (1981). For comment, "Free Press, Privacy, and Privilege: Protection of Researcher-Subject Communications," see 17 Ga. L. Rev. 1009 (1983). For case comment discussing Miranda v. Arizona ambiguous requests for counsel, see 20 Ga. L. Rev. 221 (1985). For comment, "Gary Dotson as Victim: The Legal Response to Recanting Testimony," see 35 Emory L.J. 969 (1986). For comment, "Enforcing the Right to a Public Education for Children Afflicted with AIDS," see 36 Emory L.J. 603 (1987). For comment, "Searching for a Standard for Regulatory Takings Based on Investment-Backed Expectations: A Survey of State Court Decisions in the Vested Rights and Zoning Estoppel Areas," see 36 Emory L.J. 1219 (1987). For comment, "The Constitutional Implications of Mandatory Testing for Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome — AIDS," see 37 Emory L.J. 217 (1988). For case comment, "First English Evangelical Lutheran Church v. County of Los Angeles: Compensation of Landowners for Temporary Regulatory Takings," see 21 Ga. L. Rev. 1169 (1987). For comment, "Batson v. Kentucky: Equal Protection, the Fair Cross-Section Requirement, and the Discriminatory Use of Peremptory Challenges," see 37 Emory L.J. 755 (1988). For comment, "Grady v. Corbin: An Unsuccessful Effort to Define Same Offense," see 25 Ga. L. Rev. 143 (1990). For comment, "McNeil v. Wisconsin: Invocation of Right to Counsel Under Sixth Amendment by Accused at Judicial Proceeding Does Not Constitute Invocation of Miranda Right to Counsel for Unrelated Charge," see 26 Ga. L. Rev. 1049 (1992). For comment, "A Trend Ephemeral? Eternal? Neither?: A Durational Look at the New Judicial Federalism," see 42 Emory L.J. 209 (1993). For comment, "First Covenant Church v. City of Seattle: The Washington Supreme Court Fortifies the Free Exercise Rights of Religious Landmarks Against Historic Preservation Restrictions," see 27 Ga. L. Rev. 589 (1993). For comment, "Ramseur v. Beyer: The Third Circuit Upholds Race-Based Treatment of Prospective Grand Jurors," see 27 Ga. L. Rev. 621 (1993). For comment, "The Government's Right to Read: Maintaining State Access to Digital Data in the Age of Impenetrable Encryption," see 49 Emory L.J. 711 (2000). For comment, "The Takings Clause As a Vehicle for Judicial Activism: Eastern Enterprises v. Apfel Presents a New Twist to Takings Analyses," see 16 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 689 (2000). For comment, "A Deep Breath Before the Plunge: Undoing Miranda's Failure Before It's Too Late," see 55 Mercer L. Rev. 1375 (2004).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

PRESENTMENTS AND INDICTMENTS

1. IN GENERAL
2. GRAND JURIES

DOUBLE JEOPARDY

1. IN GENERAL
2. ATTACHMENT OF JEOPARDY
3. PROSECUTION BY MORE THAN ONE SOVEREIGN
4. DETERMINATION AS TO WHETHER SAME OFFENSES ARE INVOLVED
5. IMPOSITION OF OTHER PENALTIES FOR SAME ACT
6. MISTRIAL
7. EFFECT OF APPEAL
8. RESENTENCING

SELF-INCRIMINATION

1. IN GENERAL
2. INTERROGATIONS
3. WAIVER AND VOLUNTARINESS GENERALLY
4. VOLUNTARINESS OF CONFESSIONS
5. VOLUNTARINESS OF GUILTY PLEAS
6. SILENCE OF THE ACCUSED
7. TESTIMONY AND CROSS-EXAMINATION
8. IMMUNIZED TESTIMONY
9. PHYSICAL AND OTHER NONTTESTIMONIAL EVIDENCE

DUE PROCESS

1. IN GENERAL
2. VAGUENESS AND OTHER ISSUES WITH STATUTES
3. PRETRIAL CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS
4. CRIMINAL TRIALS
5. JURY SELECTION
6. ASSISTANCE OF COUNSEL
7. DISCOVERY, COMPULSORY PROCESS, AND SUPPRESSION OF EVIDENCE
8. APPEALS AND HABEAS CORPUS
9. PROBATION AND PAROLE
10. PRISONERS
11. IMMUNIZED TESTIMONY

TAKING OF PRIVATE PROPERTY FOR PUBLIC USE

1. IN GENERAL
2. COMPENSABLE TAKINGS
3. SCOPE OF TAKING
4. COMPENSATION
5. EXERCISE OF POLICE POWER
6. ZONING

General Consideration

Nature of rights under fifth amendment.

— Assurance that a person's fifth amendment right against compelled self-incrimination was not violated does not necessarily overcome a failure to protect the person's right under the fourth amendment against unreasonable search and seizure.

State v. Guillory, 236 Ga. App. 230, 511 S.E.2d 591 (1999).

Defense counsel cannot invoke defendant's rights without consulting defendant.

— Defense counsel, acting without having consulted the defendant, is not empowered to invoke the defendant's personal rights under the fifth and sixth amendments.

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Edwards v. State, 167 Ga. App. 681, 307 S.E.2d 264 (1983).

Waiver of rights. — Implicit in a finding that the defendant was properly advised of the defendant's rights, that the defendant understood those rights, and that the defendant voluntarily signed a written waiver of those rights is the factual determination that the defendant was mentally competent to waive the defendant's rights. Hance v. Zant, 696 F.2d 940 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1210, 103 S. Ct. 3544, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1393 (1983), overruled on other grounds, 762 F.2d 1383 (11th Cir. 1985).

There is no requirement that waiver of constitutional rights be in writing. Brown v. State, 162 Ga. App. 198, 290 S.E.2d 540 (1982).

Failure to voice objection. — The refusal to grant a mistrial, on the grounds that the state's cross-examination of a witness was improper, is not an abuse of discretion if the defendant failed to voice an objection during the questioning. Kirk v. State, 168 Ga. App. 226, 308 S.E.2d 592 (1983), aff'd, 252 Ga. 133, 311 S.E.2d 821 (1984).

Plaintiff's allegations of statutory and constitutional predicates mandates federal court jurisdiction. — Where a plaintiff alleges 28 U.S.C. § 1343(3), in conjunction with 42 U.S.C. § 1983, as the jurisdictional predicate, and alleges federal constitutional predicates, such as fourteenth amendment property rights, first amendment rights to free speech and association, and fifth amendment just compensation or "taking" clause, a federal court must assume jurisdiction to decide whether the allegations state a cause of action on which the court can grant relief, as well as to determine issues of fact arising in the controversy. Stone Mt. Game Ranch, Inc. v. Hunt, 570 F. Supp. 238 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 746 F.2d 761 (11th Cir. 1984).

No habeas evidentiary hearing where no evidence of underrepresentation on grand and traverse juries. — Because a habeas petitioner offered to produce no evidence that proved underrepresentation of blacks and women on the grand and traverse juries which indicted and convicted the petitioner in violation of the petitioner's fifth amendment rights, no federal evidentiary hearing is required. Ross v. Hopper, 716 F.2d 1528 (11th Cir. 1983), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 756 F.2d 1483 (11th Cir. 1985).

Standing to complain about violations of voter's constitutional rights. — Election candidate and chairman of county board of elections lacked standing to complain about alleged violations of a voter's constitutional rights under U.S. Const., amend. 5 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. I, Para. I. Hammill v. Valentine, 258 Ga. 603, 373 S.E.2d 9 (1988).

Effect of sovereign immunity. — Claims against the United States based directly on fifth amendment violations are barred by sovereign immunity. United States v. Article or Device Consisting of Biotone Model 4, 557 F. Supp. 141 (N.D. Ga. 1982).

Claims against Internal Revenue Service Commissioner. — The United States is absolutely immune from damages in a suit seeking damages under the Constitution, as is the Commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service insofar as the Commissioner is acting within the scope of the Commissioner's official capacity. Sellers v. United States, 569 F. Supp. 1149 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service cannot be held vicariously liable for the fourth and fifth amendment violations of Internal Revenue Service agents. Sellers v. United States, 569 F. Supp. 1149 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Cited in Hall v. State, 41 Ga. App. 455, 153 S.E. 534 (1930); Reynolds v. Brosnan, 170 Ga. 773, 154 S.E. 264 (1930); Ventimiglia v. Aderhold, 51 F.2d 308 (N.D. Ga. 1931); Waugh v. Aderhold, 52 F.2d 702 (N.D. Ga. 1931); Buie v. Buie, 175 Ga. 27, 165 S.E. 15 (1932); State v. Thompson, 175 Ga. 189, 165 S.E. 34 (1932); Interstate Co. v. Richardson, 177 Ga. 9, 169 S.E. 373 (1933); Donalson v. City of Bainbridge, 177 Ga. 7, 169 S.E. 886 (1933); Cowart v. State, 177 Ga. 377, 170 S.E. 253 (1933); Gaskins v. Varn, 178 Ga. 502, 173 S.E. 695 (1934); Richmond Hosier Mills v. Camp, 7 F. Supp. 139 (N.D. Ga. 1934); Colson v. Aderhold, 73 F.2d 191 (5th Cir. 1934); Jones v. City of Atlanta, 51 Ga. App. 218, 179 S.E. 922 (1935); United States v. Griffin, 12 F. Supp. 135 (S.D. Ga. 1935); Consolidated Utils. Co. v. Commissioner, 84 F.2d 548 (5th Cir. 1936); Jenkins v. United States, 86 F.2d 123 (5th Cir. 1936); Anniston

Mfg. Co. v. Davis, 301 U.S. 337, 57 S. Ct. 816, 81 L. Ed. 1143 (1937); United States v. Weathers, 21 F. Supp. 763 (N.D. Ga. 1937); Farnsworth v. Zerbst, 98 F.2d 541 (5th Cir. 1938); Mulford v. Smith, 307 U.S. 38, 59 S. Ct. 648, 83 L. Ed. 1092 (1939); Beard v. Sanford, 105 F.2d 141 (5th Cir. 1939); McIntyre v. State, 190 Ga. 872, 11 S.E.2d 5 (1940); Meriwether v. State, 63 Ga. App. 667, 11 S.E.2d 816 (1940); Anthony v. City of Atlanta, 66 Ga. App. 506, 18 S.E.2d 82 (1941); FDIC v. Beasley, 193 Ga. 727, 20 S.E.2d 23 (1942); Zugar v. State, 194 Ga. 285, 21 S.E.2d 647 (1942); United States v. A Certain Tract or Parcel of Land, 44 F. Supp. 712 (S.D. Ga. 1942); Emmett v. State, 195 Ga. 517, 25 S.E.2d 9 (1943); In re Burke, 51 F. Supp. 552 (S.D. Ga. 1943); Perkins v. Brown, 53 F. Supp. 176 (S.D. Ga. 1943); Upchurch Packing Co. v. United States, 53 F. Supp. 791 (N.D. Ga. 1943); Davis v. United States, 138 F.2d 406 (5th Cir. 1943); Creaser v. Durant, 197 Ga. 531, 29 S.E.2d 776 (1944); Spreckels Sugar Co. v. South Atl. S.S. Line, 55 F. Supp. 670 (S.D. Ga. 1944); United States v. Ryals, 56 F. Supp. 772 (N.D. Ga. 1944); Monge v. Sanford, 145 F.2d 227 (5th Cir. 1944); Williams v. State, 199 Ga. 504, 34 S.E.2d 854 (1945); Miller v. Sanford, 59 F. Supp. 812 (N.D. Ga. 1945); Jackson v. Houston, 200 Ga. 399, 37 S.E.2d 399 (1946); Morakes v. State, 201 Ga. 425, 40 S.E.2d 120 (1946); Morris v. Peacock, 202 Ga. 524, 43 S.E.2d 531 (1947); Durant v. Hiatt, 81 F. Supp. 948 (N.D. Ga. 1948); Brown v. Sanford, 170 F.2d 344 (5th Cir. 1948); Boyett v. State, 205 Ga. 370, 53 S.E.2d 919 (1949); Walton v. City of Atlanta, 89 F. Supp. 309 (N.D. Ga. 1949); Sweeney v. Hiatt, 89 F. Supp. 416 (N.D. Ga. 1949); Martin v. Hiatt, 174 F.2d 350 (5th Cir. 1949); Hiatt v. Brown, 339 U.S. 103, 70 S. Ct. 495, 94 L. Ed. 691 (1950); Notis v. State, 84 Ga. App. 199, 65 S.E.2d 622 (1951); Torras v. Stradley, 103 F. Supp. 737 (N.D. Ga. 1951); United States v. Forrester, 105 F. Supp. 136 (N.D. Ga. 1952); Atlanta-New Orleans Motor Freight Co. v. United States, 155 F. Supp. 68 (N.D. Ga. 1953); Screven County v. Brier Creek Hunting & Fishing Club, Inc., 202 F.2d 369 (5th Cir. 1953); Humthlett v. Reeves, 211 Ga. 210, 85 S.E.2d 25 (1954); City of Moultrie v. Colquitt County Rural Elec. Co., 211 Ga. 842, 89 S.E.2d 657 (1955); United States v. Willis, 145 F. Supp. 365 (M.D. Ga. 1955); United States v. Jenkins, 141 F. Supp. 499 (S.D. Ga. 1956); Kivette v. United States, 230 F.2d 749 (5th Cir. 1956); Heyward v. Public Hous. Admin., 238 F.2d 689 (5th Cir. 1956); Looper v. Georgia, S. & Fla. Ry., 213 Ga. 279, 99 S.E.2d 101 (1957); Daniels v. State, 213 Ga. 833, 102 S.E.2d 27 (1958); Stark v. Waters, 214 Ga. 597, 106 S.E.2d 401 (1958); Deloach v. Rogers, 268 F.2d 928 (5th Cir. 1959); Suggs v. Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen & Enginemen, 219 F. Supp. 770 (M.D. Ga. 1960); Backer v. Commissioner, 275 F.2d 141 (5th Cir. 1960); International Ass'n of Machinists v. Street, 367 U.S. 740, 81 S. Ct. 1784, 6 L. Ed. 2d 1141 (1961); Warnell v. United States, 291 F.2d 687 (5th Cir. 1961); Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. United States, 205 F. Supp. 360 (M.D. Ga. 1962); Ferguson v. State, 219 Ga. 33, 131 S.E.2d 538 (1963); Pistor v. State, 219 Ga. 161, 132 S.E.2d 183 (1963); Pugh v. State, 219 Ga. 166, 132 S.E.2d 203 (1963); Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241, 85 S. Ct. 348, 13 L. Ed. 2d 258 (1964); Walther v. Walther, 219 Ga. 644, 135 S.E.2d 401 (1964); Raif v. State, 109 Ga. App. 354, 136 S.E.2d 169 (1964); Chatterton v. State, 221 Ga. 424, 144 S.E.2d 726 (1965); Curtis Publishing Co. v. Butts, 351 F.2d 702 (5th Cir. 1965); Gibbs v. Blackwell, 354 F.2d 469 (5th Cir. 1965); Woods v. State, 222 Ga. 321, 149 S.E.2d 674 (1966); Bass v. Bass, 222 Ga. 378, 149 S.E.2d 818 (1966); Givens v. Dutton, 222 Ga. 756, 152 S.E.2d 358 (1966); State Hwy. Dep't v. Branch, 222 Ga. 770, 152 S.E.2d 372 (1966); Elkins v. State, 222 Ga. 746, 152 S.E.2d 377 (1966); Carmichael v. Allen, 267 F. Supp. 985 (N.D. Ga. 1966); Nicholson v. United States, 355 F.2d 80 (5th Cir. 1966); O'Neal v. State, 115 Ga. App. 100, 153 S.E.2d 663 (1967); Abrams v. State, 223 Ga. 216, 154 S.E.2d 443 (1967); Arkwright v. State, 223 Ga. 768, 158 S.E.2d 370 (1967); Hurst v. United States, 370 F.2d 161 (5th Cir. 1967); Bon Air Hotel, Inc. v. Time, Inc., 376 F.2d 118 (5th Cir. 1967); Grogan v. United States, 394 F.2d 287 (5th Cir. 1967); Price v. State, 224 Ga. 306, 161 S.E.2d 825 (1968); Johnson v. Smith, 295 F. Supp. 835 (N.D. Ga. 1968); Gilstrap v. United States, 389 F.2d 6 (5th Cir. 1968); Chamblee v. United States, 402 F.2d 296 (5th Cir. 1968); Anderson v. United States, 403 F.2d 206 (5th Cir. 1968); Shoffeitt v. United States, 403 F.2d 991 (5th Cir. 1968); Robinson v. State, 225 Ga. 167, 167 S.E.2d 158 (1969); Sullivan v. State, 225 Ga. 301,

General Consideration (Cont'd)

168 S.E.2d 133 (1969); Bugden v. Bugden, 225 Ga. 413, 169 S.E.2d 337 (1969); Sams v. Olah, 225 Ga. 497, 169 S.E.2d 790 (1969); Carroway v. Stynchcombe, 225 Ga. 586, 170 S.E.2d 396 (1969); Park v. State, 225 Ga. 618, 170 S.E.2d 687 (1969); Cato v. Georgia, 302 F. Supp. 1143 (N.D. Ga. 1969); Graham v. Blackwell, 306 F. Supp. 889 (N.D. Ga. 1969); Grant v. United States, 407 F.2d 56 (5th Cir. 1969); Handsford v. United States, 410 F.2d 733 (5th Cir. 1969); Elkins v. Kelley, 410 F.2d 734 (5th Cir. 1969); Cagle v. Scroggins, 410 F.2d 741 (5th Cir. 1969); Walker v. Blackwell, 411 F.2d 23 (5th Cir. 1969); Sturgis v. United States, 419 F.2d 390 (5th Cir. 1969); Daniels v. State, 226 Ga. 269, 174 S.E.2d 422 (1970); Mallin v. Mallin, 226 Ga. 628, 176 S.E.2d 709 (1970); Huftstetler v. Davies, 309 F. Supp. 1372 (N.D. Ga. 1970); United States v. Mobley, 421 F.2d 345 (5th Cir. 1970); Bowers v. United States, 423 F.2d 1207 (5th Cir. 1970); United States v. Adkins, 426 F.2d 298 (5th Cir. 1970); Jenkins v. United States, 428 F.2d 538 (5th Cir. 1970); United States v. Zarzour, 432 F.2d 1 (5th Cir. 1970); Edwards v. Selective Serv. Local Bd. 111, 432 F.2d 287 (5th Cir. 1970); United States v. Jones, 432 F.2d 773 (5th Cir. 1970); United States v. Houston, 434 F.2d 613 (5th Cir. 1970); Morris v. State, 228 Ga. 39, 184 S.E.2d 82 (1971); Alexander v. State, 228 Ga. 179, 184 S.E.2d 450 (1971); Rietz v. Butler, 322 F. Supp. 1029 (N.D. Ga. 1971); Cooley v. Endictor, 340 F. Supp. 15 (N.D. Ga. 1971); Staggers v. Stynchcombe, 436 F.2d 585 (5th Cir. 1971); Henderson v. Blackwell, 436 F.2d 1081 (5th Cir. 1971); Genuine Parts Co. v. FTC, 445 F.2d 1382 (5th Cir. 1971); United States v. Attaway, 449 F.2d 309 (5th Cir. 1971); FTC v. Gladstone, 450 F.2d 913 (5th Cir. 1971); Fryer v. Stynchcombe, 228 Ga. 576, 186 S.E.2d 885 (1972); Perdue v. Smith, 228 Ga. 770, 187 S.E.2d 862 (1972); Davis v. State, 229 Ga. 437, 192 S.E.2d 149 (1972); West v. State, 229 Ga. 427, 192 S.E.2d 163 (1972); Yeomans v. State, 229 Ga. 488, 192 S.E.2d 362 (1972); Williams v. Caldwell, 229 Ga. 453, 192 S.E.2d 378 (1972); Robertson v. State, 127 Ga. App. 6, 192 S.E.2d 502 (1972); Thomason v. Caldwell, 229 Ga. 637, 194 S.E.2d 112 (1972); Kahn v. United States, 349 F. Supp. 806 (N.D. Ga. 1972); United States v. Jones, 352 F. Supp. 369 (S.D. Ga. 1972); Hamlin v. Laird, 371 F. Supp. 806 (S.D. Ga. 1972); Widmer v. Stokes, 464 F.2d 592 (5th Cir. 1972); Jones v. State, 128 Ga. App. 885, 198 S.E.2d 336 (1973); Geter v. State, 129 Ga. App. 108, 199 S.E.2d 272 (1973); Allison v. State, 129 Ga. App. 364, 199 S.E.2d 587 (1973); Sheats v. State, 231 Ga. 362, 201 S.E.2d 420 (1973); Stanley v. Local 926, Int'l Union of Operating Eng'rs, 354 F. Supp. 1267 (N.D. Ga. 1973); Finish Allatoona's Interstate Right, Inc. v. Volpe, 355 F. Supp. 933 (N.D. Ga. 1973); Law v. USDA, 366 F. Supp. 1233 (N.D. Ga. 1973); Peach Bowl, Inc. v. Shultz, 370 F. Supp. 685 (N.D. Ga. 1973); Community Action Group v. City of Columbus, 473 F.2d 966 (5th Cir. 1973); Beaty v. Weinberger, 478 F.2d 300 (5th Cir. 1973); Ansley v. Stynchcombe, 480 F.2d 437 (5th Cir. 1973); Northside Iron & Metal Co. v. Dobson & Johnson, Inc., 480 F.2d 798 (5th Cir. 1973); Walter v. State, 131 Ga. App. 667, 206 S.E.2d 662 (1974); Marchman v. State, 132 Ga. App. 677, 209 S.E.2d 88 (1974); Wall v. American Optometric Ass'n, 379 F. Supp. 175 (N.D. Ga. 1974); United States v. Hamilton, 492 F.2d 1110 (5th Cir. 1974); Dixon v. Henderson, 493 F.2d 467 (5th Cir. 1974); Sullivan v. Weinberger, 493 F.2d 855 (5th Cir. 1974); Park v. Huff, 493 F.2d 923 (5th Cir. 1974); United States v. Register, 496 F.2d 1072 (5th Cir. 1974); State v. Bailey, 233 Ga. 795, 213 S.E.2d 661 (1975); Lawson v. State, 234 Ga. 136, 214 S.E.2d 559 (1975); Baxter v. State, 134 Ga. App. 286, 214 S.E.2d 578 (1975); State v. Young, 234 Ga. 488, 216 S.E.2d 586 (1975); Pace v. City of Atlanta, 135 Ga. App. 399, 218 S.E.2d 128 (1975); Revels v. Tift County, 235 Ga. 333, 219 S.E.2d 445 (1975); Nunnally v. State, 235 Ga. 693, 221 S.E.2d 547 (1975); Diamond v. Marland, 395 F. Supp. 432 (S.D. Ga. 1975); Finch v. Weinberger, 407 F. Supp. 34 (N.D. Ga. 1975); United States v. Crockett, 506 F.2d 759 (5th Cir. 1975); United States v. Sklaroff, 506 F.2d 837 (5th Cir. 1975); Park v. Huff, 506 F.2d 849 (5th Cir. 1975); United States v. Quinn, 514 F.2d 1250 (5th Cir. 1975); Atlas Roofing Co. v. Occupational Safety & Health Review Comm'n, 518 F.2d 990 (5th Cir. 1975); Jones v. Anderson, 522 F.2d 181 (5th Cir. 1975); Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S. Ct. 2909, 49 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1976); Dodd v. State, 236 Ga. 572, 224 S.E.2d 408 (1976); Godwin v. State, 138 Ga. App. 131, 225

S.E.2d 723 (1976); Ballew v. State, 138 Ga. App. 530, 227 S.E.2d 65 (1976); Smith v. State, 138 Ga. App. 683, 227 S.E.2d 84 (1976); Banks v. State, 237 Ga. 325, 227 S.E.2d 380 (1976); Garrett v. Department of Pub. Safety, 237 Ga. 413, 228 S.E.2d 812 (1976); Thomas v. State, 237 Ga. 690, 229 S.E.2d 458 (1976); United States ex rel. Gereau v. Henderson, 526 F.2d 889 (5th Cir. 1976); United States v. King, 532 F.2d 505 (5th Cir. 1976); United States v. Thurmond, 534 F.2d 41 (5th Cir. 1976); Nelson v. Rosenthal, 539 F.2d 1034 (5th Cir. 1976); Carter v. State, 238 Ga. 446, 233 S.E.2d 201 (1977); Mitchell v. State, 142 Ga. App. 802, 237 S.E.2d 243 (1977); Hill v. Delta Air Lines, 143 Ga. App. 103, 237 S.E.2d 597 (1977); Overcash v. State, 239 Ga. 499, 238 S.E.2d 50 (1977); Baranan v. State Bd. of Nursing Home Adm'rs, 143 Ga. App. 605, 239 S.E.2d 533 (1977); Freedman v. United States, 437 F. Supp. 1252 (N.D. Ga. 1977); United States v. London, 550 F.2d 206 (5th Cir. 1977); United States v. Brown, 555 F.2d 407 (5th Cir. 1977); Roberts v. Cameron-Brown Co., 556 F.2d 356 (5th Cir. 1977); Mason v. Pulliam, 557 F.2d 426 (5th Cir. 1977); Oglethorpe Co. v. United States, 558 F.2d 590 (Ct. Cl. 1977); United States v. Hegwood, 562 F.2d 946 (5th Cir. 1977); Seaboard Coast Line R.R. v. Coleman, 562 F.2d 1008 (5th Cir. 1977); Savannah Sur. Assocs. v. Master, 240 Ga. 438, 241 S.E.2d 192 (1978); Felker v. State, 144 Ga. App. 458, 241 S.E.2d 576 (1978); Simpson v. State, 144 Ga. App. 657, 242 S.E.2d 265 (1978); Underwood v. State, 144 Ga. App. 684, 242 S.E.2d 339 (1978); Lowe v. State, 240 Ga. 767, 242 S.E.2d 582 (1978); Sims v. State, 144 Ga. App. 825, 242 S.E.2d 745 (1978); Moore v. State, 240 Ga. 807, 243 S.E.2d 1 (1978); Fayetteville-85 Assocs. v. Samas, Inc., 241 Ga. 119, 243 S.E.2d 887 (1978); Airport Bookstore, Inc. v. Jackson, 242 Ga. 214, 248 S.E.2d 623 (1978); Lockett v. State, 147 Ga. App. 102, 248 S.E.2d 177 (1978); Burks v. State, 147 Ga. App. 234, 248 S.E.2d 329 (1978); Beall v. Department of Revenue, 148 Ga. App. 5, 251 S.E.2d 4 (1978); High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 449 F. Supp. 364 (N.D. Ga. 1978); Crist v. Crist, 460 F. Supp. 891 (N.D. Ga. 1978); Fidelity Equip. Leasing Corp. v. United States, 462 F. Supp. 845 (N.D. Ga. 1978); United States v. WIYN Radio, Inc., 464 F. Supp. 101 (N.D. Ga. 1978); United States v. Herring, 568 F.2d 1099 (5th Cir. 1978); Cox v. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco & Firearms, 571 F.2d 267 (5th Cir. 1978); United States v. Anderson, 577 F.2d 258 (5th Cir. 1978); Thompson v. State, 150 Ga. App. 567, 258 S.E.2d 180 (1979); Leggett v. State, 244 Ga. 226, 259 S.E.2d 476 (1979); Cochran v. State, 151 Ga. App. 478, 260 S.E.2d 391 (1979); Doe v. Busbee, 471 F. Supp. 1326 (N.D. Ga. 1979); United States v. Jackson, 590 F.2d 121 (5th Cir. 1979); United States v. Bryan, 591 F.2d 1161 (5th Cir. 1979); Gilbert v. Johnson, 601 F.2d 761 (5th Cir. 1979); Lane v. Hanberry, 601 F.2d 805 (5th Cir. 1979); Huskins v. State, 245 Ga. 541, 266 S.E.2d 163 (1980); Playmate Cinema, Inc. v. State, 154 Ga. App. 871, 269 S.E.2d 883 (1980); Hoerner v. State, 246 Ga. 374, 271 S.E.2d 458 (1980); Myrick v. State, 155 Ga. App. 496, 271 S.E.2d 637 (1980); Singer v. State, 156 Ga. App. 416, 274 S.E.2d 612 (1980); LaPier v. Holliman, 514 F. Supp. 692 (N.D. Ga. 1980); In re Middleton, 7 Bankr. 3 (N.D. Ga. 1980); Vaughn v. State, 247 Ga. 136, 274 S.E.2d 479 (1981); Wood v. State, 159 Ga. App. 221, 283 S.E.2d 79 (1981); Thompson v. State, 248 Ga. 343, 285 S.E.2d 685 (1981); Johnson v. State, 159 Ga. App. 819, 285 S.E.2d 252 (1981); United States v. Bartlett, 633 F.2d 1184 (5th Cir. 1981); Exxon Corp. v. Busbee, 644 F.2d 1030 (5th Cir. 1981); Shaw v. Stone, 506 F. Supp. 571 (M.D. Ga. 1981); CNN, Inc. v. ABC, 518 F. Supp. 1238 (N.D. Ga. 1981); Storey v. Office of Personnel Mgt., 519 F. Supp. 54 (N.D. Ga. 1981); Dampier v. State, 249 Ga. 299, 290 S.E.2d 431 (1982); Abdi v. State, 249 Ga. 827, 294 S.E.2d 506 (1982); Smith v. State, 163 Ga. App. 531, 295 S.E.2d 208 (1982); Norris v. State, 250 Ga. 38, 295 S.E.2d 321 (1982); Simmons v. State, 164 Ga. App. 643, 298 S.E.2d 313 (1982); Clark v. Singer, 250 Ga. 470, 298 S.E.2d 484 (1983); Lett v. State, 164 Ga. App. 584, 298 S.E.2d 541 (1982); United States v. Timmons, 672 F.2d 1373 (11th Cir. 1982); High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 673 F.2d 1225 (11th Cir. 1982); Kyle v. Hanberry, 677 F.2d 1386 (11th Cir. 1982); Bracewell v. Nicholson Air Servs., Inc., 680 F.2d 103 (11th Cir. 1982); United States v. Lott, 681 F.2d 1371 (11th Cir. 1982); United States v. Gaines, 690 F.2d 849 (11th Cir. 1982); Scott v. Donovan, 539 F. Supp. 255 (N.D. Ga. 1982); United States v. Carlin, 698 F.2d 1133 (11th Cir. 1983); Logan v. Warren County

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Bd. of Educ., 549 F. Supp. 145 (S.D. Ga. 1982); Baranan v. Fulton County, 250 Ga. 531, 299 S.E.2d 722 (1983); Stevens v. State, 165 Ga. App. 814, 302 S.E.2d 724 (1983); Williams v. State, 251 Ga. 749, 312 S.E.2d 40 (1983); Hospital Auth. v. Heckler, 707 F.2d 456 (11th Cir. 1983); United States v. Johnson, 709 F.2d 639 (11th Cir. 1983); Cape v. Francis, 558 F. Supp. 1207 (M.D. Ga. 1983); Borg-Warner Acceptance Corp. v. Lovett & Tharpe, Inc., 560 F. Supp. 905 (S.D. Ga. 1983); House v. Balkcom, 562 F. Supp. 1111 (N.D. Ga. 1983); Agan v. Pierce, 576 F. Supp. 257 (N.D. Ga. 1983); State v. Hightower, 252 Ga. 220, 312 S.E.2d 610 (1984); Parker v. State, 170 Ga. App. 295, 316 S.E.2d 855 (1984); McCrary v. State, 171 Ga. App. 585, 320 S.E.2d 567 (1984); Griffith v. State, 172 Ga. App. 255, 322 S.E.2d 921 (1984); United States v. Hewes, 729 F.2d 1302 (11th Cir. 1984); United States v. Jorge-Salon, 734 F.2d 789 (11th Cir. 1984); Peek v. Kemp, 746 F.2d 672 (11th Cir. 1984); Scoggins v. Moore, 579 F. Supp. 1320 (N.D. Ga. 1984); Shepard v. Byrd, 581 F. Supp. 1374 (N.D. Ga. 1984); Hubbard v. State, 173 Ga. App. 127, 325 S.E.2d 799 (1984); Pierce v. State, 173 Ga. App. 551, 327 S.E.2d 531 (1985); Hawkins v. State, 175 Ga. App. 606, 333 S.E.2d 870 (1985); Barnes v. State, 175 Ga. App. 621, 334 S.E.2d 205 (1985); Amadeo v. Kemp, 773 F.2d 1141 (11th Cir. 1985); Tenner v. Wallace, 615 F. Supp. 40 (S.D. Ga. 1985); Fernandez-Roque v. Smith, 622 F. Supp. 887 (N.D. Ga. 1985); Mason v. State, 177 Ga. App. 184, 338 S.E.2d 706 (1985); Moore v. State, 176 Ga. App. 882, 339 S.E.2d 271 (1985); Davis v. State, 255 Ga. 598, 340 S.E.2d 869 (1986); Bacon v. State, 178 Ga. App. 546, 343 S.E.2d 774 (1986); Rogers v. State, 256 Ga. 139, 344 S.E.2d 644 (1986); Riggins v. State, 179 Ga. App. 179, 345 S.E.2d 897 (1986); Welch v. State, 179 Ga. App. 221, 346 S.E.2d 4 (1986); Dixon v. State, 179 Ga. App. 278, 346 S.E.2d 93 (1986); Hood v. State, 179 Ga. App. 387, 346 S.E.2d 867 (1986); Brown v. State, 179 Ga. App. 538, 346 S.E.2d 908 (1986); Leggett v. State, 256 Ga. 274, 347 S.E.2d 580 (1986); Hall v. State, 180 Ga. App. 366, 349 S.E.2d 255 (1986); Harris v. State, 256 Ga. 350, 349 S.E.2d 374 (1986); Doby v. State, 180 Ga. App. 453, 349 S.E.2d 467 (1986); McNabb v.

State, 180 Ga. App. 723, 350 S.E.2d 314 (1986); Rashada v. State, 180 Ga. App. 773, 350 S.E.2d 323 (1986); M.N.C. of Hinesville, Inc. v. United States Dep't of Defense, 791 F.2d 1466 (11th Cir. 1986); United States v. Rosenthal, 793 F.2d 1214 (11th Cir. 1986); Sizzler Family Steak Houses v. Western Sizzlin Steak House, Inc., 793 F.2d 1529 (11th Cir. 1986); Baldwin v. Ledbetter, 647 F. Supp. 623 (N.D. Ga. 1986); Carey v. Rudseal, 112 F.R.D. 95 (N.D. Ga. 1986); Hicks v. State, 256 Ga. 715, 352 S.E.2d 762 (1987); Griffin v. State, 257 Ga. 148, 356 S.E.2d 209 (1987); Hill v. State, 183 Ga. App. 654, 360 S.E.2d 4 (1987); Wilcox v. Ford, 813 F.2d 1140 (11th Cir. 1987); In re Grand Jury No. 86-3 (Will Roberts Corp.), 816 F.2d 569 (11th Cir. 1987); United States v. Boldin, 818 F.2d 771 (11th Cir. 1987); United States v. McDonald, 653 F. Supp. 793 (N.D. Ga. 1987); Bernstein v. Holland, 657 F. Supp. 233 (M.D. Ga. 1987); Ryals v. State, 186 Ga. App. 457, 367 S.E.2d 309 (1988); United States v. Elliott, 849 F.2d 554 (11th Cir. 1988); Bernard v. United States, 872 F.2d 376 (11th Cir. 1989); United States v. Henry, 883 F.2d 1010 (11th Cir. 1989); State v. Evans, 192 Ga. App. 216, 384 S.E.2d 404 (1989); United States v. Williams, 954 F.2d 668 (11th Cir. 1992); Brown v. Crawford County, 960 F.2d 1002 (11th Cir. 1992); Greenwood v. State, 203 Ga. App. 901, 418 S.E.2d 160 (1992); Bonilla v. State, 204 Ga. App. 424, 419 S.E.2d 495 (1992); Strickland v. Lamar County Bd. of Comm'rs, 807 F. Supp. 121 (M.D. Ga. 1992); Kraft v. Memorial Medical Ctr., Inc., 807 F. Supp. 785 (S.D. Ga. 1992); Fortner v. Thomas, 983 F.2d 1024 (11th Cir. 1993); Head v. State, 262 Ga. 795, 426 S.E.2d 547 (1993); Williams v. State, 207 Ga. App. 124, 427 S.E.2d 59 (1993); United States v. Costales, 5 F.3d 480 (11th Cir. 1993); Moore v. State, 263 Ga. 11, 427 S.E.2d 766 (1993); Walton v. State, 207 Ga. App. 787, 429 S.E.2d 158 (1993); United States v. Daniels, 986 F.2d 451 (11th Cir. 1993); Pittman v. State, 208 Ga. App. 211, 430 S.E.2d 141 (1993); Lyle v. Dodd, 857 F. Supp. 958 (N.D. Ga. 1994); Strickland v. Alderman, 74 F.3d 260 (11th Cir. 1996); Buchnowski v. State, 233 Ga. App. 766, 505 S.E.2d 263 (1998); Mackey v. State, 234 Ga. App. 554, 507 S.E.2d 482 (1998); Dorsey v. State, 251 Ga. App. 640, 554 S.E.2d 278 (2001), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 863, 123 S. Ct. 247, 154 L. Ed. 2d 104 (2002); Cherokee County v. Greater Atlanta Homebuilders Ass'n, 255 Ga. App. 764, 565 S.E.2d 925 (2002); Bentley v. State, 262 Ga. App. 541, 586 S.E.2d 32 (2003).

Presentments and Indictments

1. In General

U.S. Const., amend. 5 requires that persons charged with crimes shall be indicted. United States v. Contris, 592 F.2d 893 (5th Cir. 1979).

Not intended to limit court jurisdiction but to protect individuals. — The language of the pertinent part of U.S. Const., amend. 5 is that "No person shall be held to answer", not that "No court shall hold any person to answer," as would likely have been the language had the provision been intended to be a limitation on the jurisdiction or the power of the court instead of a privilege for the protection of the individual. Barkman v. Sanford, 162 F.2d 592 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 332 U.S. 816, 68 S. Ct. 155, 92 L. Ed. 393 (1947).

Adequacy of notice of criminal charges. — The test as to whether one accused of crime is given adequate notice in a charge against the accused is whether the charge is definite and specific enough to meet the test of reasonably apprising the accused of what the accused must defend against and enable the accused to avoid a second conviction for the same offense or included offenses. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd on other grounds, 519 F.2d 184 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied sub nom. Calley v. Hoffman, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1976).

Waiver of right to protections afforded by presentment or indictment. — The first provision in U.S. Const., amend. 5 is intended as a protection to the individual to the same extent as were the other four provisions of U.S. Const., amend. 5, and each provision therein may be waived as fully as the accused may waive the rights under U.S. Const., amend. 6. Barkman v. Sanford, 162 F.2d 592 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 332 U.S. 816, 68 S. Ct. 155, 92 L. Ed. 393 (1947).

Validity of indictment. — Validity of an indictment is to be determined by reading it as a whole. United States v. Contris, 592 F.2d 893 (5th Cir. 1979).

Sufficiency of indictment as question of law. — Whether an indictment sufficiently charges a crime is a question of law, not of fact. United States v. Contris, 592 F.2d 893 (5th Cir. 1979).

Indictment is sufficient which charges the offense in the language of the statute, or so plainly that its nature may be easily understood by the jury. State v. Siebert, 133 Ga. App. 775, 213 S.E.2d 7 (1975).

Minor deficiencies in indictment. — Indictments are read for their clear meaning and convictions will not be reversed because of minor deficiencies which do not prejudice the accused. United States v. Contris, 592 F.2d 893 (5th Cir. 1979).

Practical rather than technical considerations are determinative. — Sufficiency of an indictment is to be tested by practical rather than technical considerations, and the test of sufficiency is not whether the indictment could have been more artfully or precisely drawn, but whether it states the elements of the offense intended to be charged and adequately apprises the defendant of that which the defendant must be prepared to meet. United States v. Contris, 592 F.2d 893 (5th Cir. 1979).

Criteria for testing sufficiency of indictment. — The two criteria by which the sufficiency of an indictment is to be tested are whether the facts stated show the essential elements of the offense and whether the facts alleged are sufficient to permit the defendant to plead former jeopardy in a subsequent prosecution. Marshall v. State, 127 Ga. App. 805, 195 S.E.2d 469 (1972); Calley v. Callaway, 519 F.2d 184 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760, 96 S. Ct. 1505 (1976); United States v. Contris, 592 F.2d 893 (5th Cir. 1979).

Use in indictment of trade name. — An indictment containing a trade name which does not designate an individual or import a corporation is not void where it satisfies the requisites of informing the defendant with reasonable certainty of the nature of the accusation for defense purposes and does not subject defendant to the possibility of double jeopardy, particularly where the trade name is unique to the area and the accused's dealings have been in such trade name. Marshall v. State, 127 Ga. App. 805, 195 S.E.2d 469 (1972).

Indictment may rest upon hearsay, but informal unsworn hearsay from the mouth of the prosecutor only is interdicted by U.S. Const., amend. 5. United States v. Hodge, 496 F.2d 87 (5th Cir. 1974).

Presentments and Indictments (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

When motion to quash must be filed. — In order for the defendant's motion to quash the indictment and challenge to the array of the grand jurors to be entertained by the trial court, it must be made prior to the return of the indictment or the defendant must show that the defendant had no knowledge, either actual or constructive, of such alleged illegal composition of the grand jury prior to the time the indictment was returned. Otherwise, the objection is deemed to be waived. Sanders v. State, 235 Ga. 425, 219 S.E.2d 768 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 976, 96 S. Ct. 2177, 48 L. Ed. 2d 800 (1976).

Charging at trial for conspiracy where not indicted for such. — It is not, on the trial of one of two or more persons jointly indicted for a crime, inappropriate to charge upon the law of conspiracy merely because the indictment does not, in terms, allege that there was a conspiracy to commit the offense. Talley v. State, 120 Ga. App. 365, 170 S.E.2d 444 (1969).

Requirements of proof for indictment for conspiracy. — In a conspiracy case the government should not be able to procure an indictment without having to prove to the satisfaction of a jury that at least one act was done in the district of the indictment. Jones v. State, 135 Ga. App. 893, 219 S.E.2d 585 (1975).

Indictment charging theft by taking must describe property sufficiently to protect accused from double jeopardy. Chesser v. State, 159 Ga. App. 261, 283 S.E.2d 24 (1981).

Amendability of criminal indictments. — Criminal indictments are not amendable to conform to the evidence. Bowers v. State, 177 Ga. App. 36, 338 S.E.2d 457 (1985).

There was no fatal variance or due process violation in juvenile petition as the petition contained sufficient information, including the date of the incident and the fact that it involved egg-throwing, to inform defendant of the charge, enable defendant to prepare a defense, and protect defendant from subsequent prosecutions for the same offense; the discrepancy between the delinquency allegations and the evidence regarding the number of windows damaged did not demand reversal as the petition fully informed defendant. In the Interest of M.M., 265 Ga. App. 381, 593 S.E.2d 919 (2004).

2. Grand Juries

Impartiality of grand juries. — U.S. Const., amend. 6, expressly provides that the trial jury in a criminal case must be impartial. No such requirement in respect to grand juries is found in U.S. Const., amend. 5, which contains the guaranty against prosecutions for infamous crimes unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury. Creamer v. State, 150 Ga. App. 458, 258 S.E.2d 212 (1979).

Defendant has the right to be tried solely on charges returned by a grand jury; this preserves the defendant's right to be accused by the defendant's fellow citizens, and also insures that the defendant will have adequate notice of the charges against the defendant and will be protected against double jeopardy. United States v. Johnson, 713 F.2d 633 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1081, 104 S. Ct. 1447, 79 L. Ed. 2d 766 (1984).

Discrimination in selection of grand jury forepersons. — A criminal defendant may attack a conviction on the grounds of purposeful discrimination against an identifiable group in the selection of the grand jury foreperson of the grand jury indicting the defendant. United States v. Sneed, 729 F.2d 1333 (11th Cir. 1984).

Even if discrimination entered into the selection of grand jury forepersons, such discrimination did not warrant a reversal of conviction and the dismissal of the indictment absent an infringement of the fundamental right to fairness. United States v. Lewis, 743 F.2d 859 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1067, 105 S. Ct. 2144, 85 L. Ed. 2d 500 (1985).

Permissible criteria for grand jury foreman selection. — The grand jury foreman is not required to be a cross section of the community, and the appointing officer has wide discretion based on acceptable criteria that is race and gender neutral. United States v. Browning-Ferris Indus. of Ga., Inc., 555 F. Supp. 595 (N.D. Ga. 1982).

Purported showing of low "non-white" representation not a prima facie case. — The defendant, who submitted statistics comparing the representation of white and “non-white” people on the qualified grand jury wheel, failed to establish a prima facie case of discrimination, “non-white” persons not comprising a distinctive group singled out for special treatment under the law. United States v. Lewis, 743 F.2d 859 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1067, 105 S. Ct. 2144, 85 L. Ed. 2d 500 (1985).

Systematic and arbitrary exclusion of Negroes from jury venires. — Negroes may not be systematically and arbitrarily excluded from the jury venires from which the grand jury that has indicted a Negro is selected, for such constitutes a denial of due process and equal protection of the laws. Mobley v. United States, 379 F.2d 768 (5th Cir. 1967).

Grand jury witness cannot refuse to answer questions on the ground that they are the product of unlawful searches and seizures. United States v. Worobytz, 522 F.2d 196 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1507, 47 L. Ed. 2d 761 (1976).

Double Jeopardy

1. In General

Double jeopardy prohibition applies to the states through U.S. Const., amend 14. Price v. Georgia, 398 U.S. 323, 90 S. Ct. 1757, 26 L. Ed. 2d 300 (1970); Staggers v. Stynchcombe, 319 F. Supp. 1305 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff’d, 436 F.2d 585 (5th Cir. 1971); Alexander v. State, 129 Ga. App. 395, 199 S.E.2d 918 (1973); Clark v. State, 144 Ga. App. 69, 240 S.E.2d 270 (1977).

Scope of protection generally. — The double jeopardy clause prohibits merely punishing twice, or attempting a second time to punish criminally, for the same offense. The question is whether a statute imposes a criminal sanction. Cushway v. State Bar, 120 Ga. App. 371, 170 S.E.2d 732 (1969), cert. denied, 398 U.S. 910, 90 S. Ct. 1705, 26 L. Ed. 2d 71 (1970); Middlebrook v. Allen, 234 Ga. 481, 216 S.E.2d 331 (1975).

The Georgia constitution is less protective than the fifth amendment, for it recognizes an exception to the bar against double jeopardy when the first trial ends in mistrial. State v. Oliver, 188 Ga. App. 47, 372 S.E.2d 256 (1988).

The double jeopardy clause protects a criminal defendant against successive, rather than simultaneous, prosecutions. United States v. Farmer, 923 F.2d 1557 (11th Cir. 1991).

Prosecution for separate and similar offense allowed. — Precedent supports the conclusion that simultaneous prosecution for carjacking and using or carrying a firearm during a crime of violence (18 U.S.C. §§ 2119, 924) does not offend the double jeopardy clause. United States v. Grant, 860 F. Supp. 843 (M.D. Ga. 1994), aff’d without op. sub nom., United States v. Williams, 81 F.3d 175 (11th Cir. 1996).

Procedural double jeopardy prevents successive prosecutions for the same offense; it does not prevent prosecutions for offenses which are separate from and similar to a prior prosecuted offense. Loden v. State, 199 Ga. App. 683, 406 S.E.2d 103 (1991).

Where defendant was convicted of driving under the influence in municipal court and then prosecuted for vehicular homicide and driving under the influence in superior court, the latter prosecution was not barred by principles of double jeopardy since the offenses did not arise from the same transaction and, because the offenses were completed at different times and in different locations, there was no single court with jurisdiction over all the crimes. Lefler v. State, 210 Ga. App. 609, 436 S.E.2d 777 (1993).

Double jeopardy clause did not prohibit additional punishment for a separate offense which the Georgia General Assembly deemed to warrant separate sanction; therefore, the trial court did not err in refusing to merge defendant’s armed robbery and hijacking convictions because O.C.G.A. § 16-5-44.1(d) specifically provided that the offense of hijacking would be considered a separate offense and would not merge with any other offense. Boykin v. State, 264 Ga. App. 836, 592 S.E.2d 426 (2003).

Defense of previously overcome charges. — The double jeopardy clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5 protects against: (1) a second prosecution for the same offense after an acquittal; (2) a second prosecution for the same offense after a conviction; and (3) multiple punishments for the same offense. United States v. Johnson, 709 F.2d 639 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 1010, 104 S. Ct. 531, 78 L. Ed. 2d 713 (1983).

A defendant should not be forced to defend against charges or factual allegations that the defendant overcame in an earlier trial. Albert v. Montgomery, 732 F.2d 865 (11th Cir. 1984).

Double Jeopardy (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Questions of double jeopardy in Georgia must be determined under the expanded statutory proscriptions found in O.C.G.A. §§ 16-1-6, 16-1-7, and 16-1-8, which place limitations upon multiple prosecutions, convictions, and punishments for the same criminal conduct. Stone v. State, 166 Ga. App. 245, 304 S.E.2d 94 (1983).

O.C.G.A. §§ 16-1-7 and 16-1-8 are broader in scope than constitutional standards regarding double jeopardy. Trimble v. State, 156 Ga. App. 9, 274 S.E.2d 10 (1980), overruled on other grounds, McCannon v. State, 252 Ga. 515, 315 S.E.2d 413 (1984).

Continuation of a trial for two months before the same jury, absent exceptional circumstances or consent of the parties, was improper; however, the continuance did not constitute a "termination" within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 16-1-8 and later proceedings were not barred by double jeopardy; overruling Paquin v. Town of Tyrone, 261 Ga. 418, 405 S.E.2d 497 (1991). Morris v. State, 264 Ga. 823, 452 S.E.2d 100 (1995).

Effect of statutory double jeopardy provisions and cases decided before their enactment. — The Criminal Code of Georgia, enacted by Ga. L. 1968, p. 1249, expanded the proscription of double jeopardy beyond that provided for in the federal and state Constitutions. Therefore questions of double jeopardy in this state must now be determined under the expanded statutory proscriptions of Code Ann. §§ 26-506, 26-506, and 26-507 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 16-1-6 through 16-1-8). Consequently, previous Georgia decisions applying constitutional standards of double jeopardy will generally not be applicable. State v. Estevez, 232 Ga. 316, 206 S.E.2d 475 (1974), overruled on other grounds by Drinkard v. Walker, 281 Ga. 211, 636 S.E.2d 530, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 840 (2006); State v. Warren, 133 Ga. App. 793, 213 S.E.2d 53 (1975).

Bar to successive prosecutions is referred to as the procedural aspect of the double jeopardy rule. Keener v. State, 238 Ga. 7, 230 S.E.2d 846 (1976), cert. denied, 433 U.S. 911, 97 S. Ct. 2980, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1096 (1977).

Rationale behind the bar to successive prosecutions is to prevent harassment of the accused. Keener v. State, 238 Ga. 7, 230 S.E.2d 846 (1976), cert. denied, 433 U.S. 911, 97 S. Ct. 2980, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1096 (1977).

Bar to multiple convictions is referred to as the substantive aspect of the double jeopardy rule. Keener v. State, 238 Ga. 7, 230 S.E.2d 846 (1976), cert. denied, 433 U.S. 911, 97 S. Ct. 2980, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1096 (1977).

Rationale behind the bar to multiple convictions is to prevent multiple and excessive punishments. Keener v. State, 238 Ga. 7, 230 S.E.2d 846 (1976), cert. denied, 433 U.S. 911, 97 S. Ct. 2980, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1096 (1977).

Double jeopardy clause provides three related protections: protection against a second prosecution for the same offense after acquittal; protection against a second prosecution for the same offense after conviction; and protection against multiple punishments for the same offense. United States v. Dunbar, 591 F.2d 1190 (5th Cir. 1979), aff'd, 611 F.2d 985 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 926, 100 S. Ct. 3022, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1120 (1980); United States v. Cowart, 595 F.2d 1023 (5th Cir. 1979).

The double jeopardy clause affords the defendant three basic protections. The clause protects against a second prosecution for the same offense after acquittal, against a second prosecution for the same offense after conviction, and against multiple punishments for the same offense. United States v. Cochran, 883 F.2d 1012 (11th Cir. 1989).

Fundamental protection against double jeopardy guards against the risk or potential that an accused may again be convicted of the same offense for which the accused was initially tried. Price v. Georgia, 398 U.S. 323, 90 S. Ct. 1757, 26 L. Ed. 2d 300 (1970); Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd on other grounds, 519 F.2d 184 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1976); Redd v. State, 242 Ga. 876, 252 S.E.2d 383, cert. denied, 442 U.S. 934, 99 S. Ct. 2870, 61 L. Ed. 2d 304 (1979).

The state with all its resources and power should not be allowed to make repeated attempts to convict an individual for an alleged offense, thereby subjecting that individual to embarrassment, expense, and ordeal and compelling the individual to live in a continuing state of anxiety and insecurity.

city, as well as enhancing the possibility that, even though innocent, the individual may be found guilty. United States v. Starling, 571 F.2d 934 (5th Cir. 1978); United States v. Tammaro, 636 F.2d 100 (5th Cir. 1981).

The double jeopardy clause forbids a second trial for the purpose of affording the prosecution another opportunity to supply evidence which it failed to muster in the first proceeding. United States v. Bizzard, 493 F. Supp. 1084 (S.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd, 674 F.2d 1382 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 973, 103 S. Ct. 305, 74 L. Ed. 2d 286 (1982).

The double jeopardy clause bars retrial where bad faith conduct by judge or prosecutor, threatens the harassment of an accused by successive prosecutions or declaration of a mistrial so as to afford the prosecution a more favorable opportunity to convict the defendant. Chatham v. State, 247 Ga. 95, 274 S.E.2d 473 (1981).

Prohibition against double jeopardy is not against being twice punished, but against being twice put in jeopardy. Price v. Georgia, 398 U.S. 323, 90 S. Ct. 1757, 26 L. Ed. 2d 300 (1970); Redd v. State, 242 Ga. 876, 252 S.E.2d 383, cert. denied, 442 U.S. 934, 99 S. Ct. 2870, 61 L. Ed. 2d 304 (1979).

Double jeopardy addresses potential or risk of trial and conviction. — Double jeopardy clause is written in terms of potential or risk of trial and conviction, not punishment. Redd v. State, 242 Ga. 876, 252 S.E.2d 383, cert. denied, 442 U.S. 934, 99 S. Ct. 2870, 61 L. Ed. 2d 304 (1979).

Multiple conviction and punishment for the same offense is prohibited. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd on other grounds, 519 F.2d 184 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1976).

Multiple convictions arising from successive prosecutions. — If multiple convictions arising out of a single prosecution are barred, they will likewise be barred from successive prosecution. Keener v. State, 238 Ga. 7, 230 S.E.2d 846 (1976), cert. denied, 433 U.S. 911, 97 S. Ct. 2980, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1096 (1977).

Violation of plea agreement. — Trial court did not err in granting the state's motion to set aside defendant's plea agreement and retry defendant for the crimes covered by that agreement, as defendant breached the agreement by agreeing to testify truthfully in exchange for a lesser sentence and then falsely testified at a codefendant's trial that defendant was not involved in an armed robbery that defendant had admitted being involved in at defendant's plea agreement hearing; defendant could not argue that trying defendant on the crimes that were the subject of the plea agreement violated double jeopardy principles since defendant chose to voluntarily violate the plea agreement and a double jeopardy argument was not available to shield defendant from the consequences of a defendant's voluntary choice. Brown v. State, 261 Ga. App. 115, 582 S.E.2d 13 (2003).

Criminal and administrative convictions not double jeopardy. — The criminal and administrative conviction and punishment of a defendant for the same act does not constitute double jeopardy. Culbertson v. State, 198 Ga. App. 513, 402 S.E.2d 111 (1991).

Suspension of defendant's operator's license pursuant to administrative proceedings did not constitute former punishment foreclosing prosecution for driving under the influence. Jackson v. State, 218 Ga. App. 677, 462 S.E.2d 802 (1995).

Suspension of a driver's license at an administrative hearing is not punishment, nor is the hearing a prosecution for the purposes of double jeopardy. Kirkpatrick v. State, 219 Ga. App. 307, 464 S.E.2d 882 (1995).

Forfeiture proceedings not a bar to prosecution. — Double jeopardy did not attach to bar prosecution of a defendant on state drug charges following federal civil forfeiture proceedings because the defendant's failure to contest the forfeiture meant the defendant was not placed in jeopardy in those proceedings and, also, Georgia constitutional and statutory provisions did not bar the prosecution because they apply only to criminal proceedings, not civil proceedings. Waye v. State, 219 Ga. App. 22, 464 S.E.2d 19 (1995); Lundy v. State, 226 Ga. App. 197, 482 S.E.2d 516 (1997).

The forfeiture proceeding under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-49 is legitimately a civil sanction and does not constitute punishment for purposes of double jeopardy. Murphy v. State, 267 Ga. 120, 475 S.E.2d 907 (1996); Rojas v. State, 226 Ga. App. 688, 487

Double Jeopardy (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

S.E.2d 455 (1997); Cuellar v. State, 230 Ga. App. 203, 496 S.E.2d 282 (1998).

Indictment as recidivist. — A defendant's complaint that the defendant's indictment as a recidivist violated the double jeopardy clause was patently without merit. McCoy v. Newsome, 953 F.2d 1252 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 504 U.S. 944, 112 S. Ct. 2283, 119 L. Ed. 2d 208 (1992).

Reprosecution on substantive count after acquittal on conspiracy count not barred. — Reprosecution of a defendant on a substantive count alleging violation of the federal civil rights law, after the defendant's acquittal on a conspiracy count, was not a successive prosecution barred by double jeopardy but rather, a mere continuation of the initial prosecution, and the second prosecution on the substantive count therefore did not implicate the double jeopardy clause. United States v. Farmer, 923 F.2d 1557 (11th Cir. 1991).

Resolving reasonable doubts. — Reasonable doubts must be resolved in favor of the accused in double jeopardy cases. United States v. Starling, 571 F.2d 934 (5th Cir. 1978).

Waiver of protection. — The second provision of U.S. Const., amend. 5 "nor shall any person be subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb," is a personal privilege which may be waived. Barkman v. Sanford, 162 F.2d 592 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 332 U.S. 816, 68 S. Ct. 155, 92 L. Ed. 393 (1947).

No jeopardy unless court has jurisdiction. — Before a person can be said to have been put in jeopardy of life or limb the court in which the person was acquitted or convicted must have had jurisdiction to try the person for the offense charged. Stephens v. Zant, 631 F.2d 397 (5th Cir. 1980), modified, 648 F.2d 446, (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 909, 101 S. Ct. 1979, 68 L. Ed. 2d 298 (1981), rev'd on other grounds, 462 U.S. 862, 103 S. Ct. 2733, 77 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1983).

A person is not put in jeopardy unless the court in which the person was tried the first time had jurisdiction to try the person for the charge the person now seeks to avoid. Potts v. Zant, 575 F. Supp. 374 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 734 F.2d 526 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1068, 106 S. Ct. 1386, 89 L. Ed. 2d 610, judgment vacated, 478 U.S. 1017, 106 S. Ct. 3328, 92 L. Ed. 2d 734 (1986), (remanded for further consideration in light of Rose v. Clark, 478 U.S. 570 (1986)), aff'd, 814 F.2d 1512 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 876, 110 S. Ct. 214, 107 L. Ed. 2d 166 (1989).

An acquittal before a court having no jurisdiction is absolutely void, and therefore no bar to subsequent indictment and trial in a court which has jurisdiction of the offense. Stephens v. Zant, 631 F.2d 397 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1035, 102 S. Ct. 575, 70 L. Ed. 2d 480 (1981), rev'd on other grounds, 462 U.S. 862, 103 S. Ct. 2733, 77 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1983).

Failure to establish venue does not bar re-trial in a court where venue is proper and proven. Kimmel v. State, 261 Ga. 332, 404 S.E.2d 436 (1991).

Failure to properly establish venue does not bar retrial, because evidence of venue does not go to the guilt or innocence of the accused, and hence it does not invoke double jeopardy concerns. Jones v. State, 272 Ga. 900, 537 S.E.2d 80 (2000).

"Jeopardy," in its constitutional and common law sense, has a strict application to criminal prosecutions only. Cushway v. State Bar, 120 Ga. App. 371, 170 S.E.2d 732 (1969), cert. denied, 398 U.S. 910, 90 S. Ct. 1705, 26 L. Ed. 2d 71 (1970).

Only actions intended to authorize criminal punishment, as distinguished from remedial actions, subject the defendant to jeopardy. Cushway v. State Bar, 120 Ga. App. 371, 170 S.E.2d 732 (1969), cert. denied, 398 U.S. 910, 90 S. Ct. 1705, 26 L. Ed. 2d 71 (1970).

Two proceedings not necessary for jeopardy to attach twice. — While the idea of double jeopardy normally arises from an accused's involvement in two proceedings, it is not necessary that there be two proceedings before jeopardy can attach twice. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd on other grounds, 519 F.2d 184 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1976).

Pendency of a former indictment for same ground. — The pendency of a former indictment for the same offense does not provide a ground for a plea of double jeopardy because even if an accused has been arraigned and has entered a plea, the accused is not placed in jeopardy until a jury is impanelled and sworn. Teal v. State, 203 Ga. App. 440, 417 S.E.2d 666, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 908, 417 S.E.2d 666 (1992).

The pendency of a prior indictment for the same offense based on the same facts for which the defendant was arraigned and entered a plea did not place the defendant in jeopardy. The defendant did not face a repeated prosecution simply because the defendant was tried on a subsequent indictment. Hubbard v. State, 225 Ga. App. 154, 483 S.E.2d 115 (1997).

Use of facts underlying dismissed indictment to charge another offense. — If a prior indictment is dismissed, the government is not barred from using the underlying facts in that offense as the basis for a charge that the defendant committed a different offense. United States v. Nixon, 634 F.2d 306 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 828, 102 S. Ct. 120, 70 L. Ed. 2d 103 (1981).

Use of same witnesses and evidence at second trial not double jeopardy. — A defendant is not placed in double jeopardy just because the same witnesses testify in the second trial and much of the same evidence is introduced. United States v. Dunbar, 591 F.2d 1190 (5th Cir. 1979), aff'd, 611 F.2d 985 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 926, 100 S. Ct. 3022, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1120 (1980).

Bifurcated trial of case in which death penalty may be imposed. — Double jeopardy clause does not prohibit the bifurcated trial of a case in which the death penalty may be imposed for the reason that although such a trial is divided into two stages, it is but one trial. Peek v. State, 239 Ga. 422, 238 S.E.2d 12 (1977), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 882, 99 S. Ct. 218, 58 L. Ed. 2d 194 (1978).

With respect to cumulative sentences imposed in single trial, the double jeopardy clause does no more than prevent the sentencing court from prescribing greater punishment than the Legislature intended. United States v. Eley, 723 F.2d 1522 (11th Cir. 1984).

No violation where act results in injury to two or more persons. — Upon defendant's conviction of three counts of homicide by vehicle (O.C.G.A. § 40-6-393) through a violation of O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391, driving under the influence, it was not a violation of double jeopardy to sentence defendant to 15 years for each of the homicide counts. Cox v.

State, 243 Ga. App. 668, 533 S.E.2d 435 (2000).

Failure to file written plea does not defeat right. — The failure to file a written plea of former jeopardy prior to trial will not defeat an accused's right to be free of multiple convictions for the criminal act. McClure v. State, 179 Ga. App. 245, 345 S.E.2d 922 (1986); Dotson v. State, 213 Ga. App. 7, 443 S.E.2d 650 (1994).

Right may be waived by failure to file written plea. — The procedural bar against double jeopardy can, at least in some circumstances, be waived by failure to assert it in writing prior to trial. McClure v. State, 179 Ga. App. 245, 345 S.E.2d 922 (1986).

Double jeopardy clause, by its own terms, applies to retrial for same offense. Neal v. State, 159 Ga. App. 450, 283 S.E.2d 671 (1981).

First conviction set aside because of error. — The double jeopardy clause's general prohibition against successive prosecutions does not prevent the government from retrying a defendant who succeeds in getting the first conviction set aside because of some error in the proceedings leading to conviction. Allen v. State, 262 Ga. 240, 416 S.E.2d 290 (1992).

After the defendant's conviction for possession of cocaine was reversed due to a finding that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance for failing to object to the admission of cocaine without establishing an adequate chain of custody, and for failing to preserve objections to the jury instructions, retrial was not barred by the double jeopardy clause of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII and U.S. Const., amend. 5, as the evidence offered by the state and admitted by the trial court — whether erroneous or not — would have been sufficient to sustain a guilty verdict against the defendant. Wilson v. State, 271 Ga. App. 359, 609 S.E.2d 703 (2005).

Acquittal on earlier charge resolves "identity" factor. — Where the defendant's identity as the perpetrator of two separate offenses of rape was in dispute, the jury's acquittal of the defendant on the earlier charge resolved the "identity" factor in the defendant's favor and the state could not relitigate the issue in the later trial. Lucas v. State, 178 Ga. App. 150, 342 S.E.2d 377 (1986).

Double Jeopardy (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Prosecution of prior offense after conviction of subsequent offense not barred. — The defendant was not placed in double jeopardy by a second prosecution for driving under the influence, even though the second incident occurred prior to the filing of the first accusation upon which the defendant was convicted and the state failed to allege the date of the first offense, since the pending charge stemmed from a different incident than the first. Grogan v. State, 179 Ga. App. 300, 346 S.E.2d 378 (1986).

Submission of same issue in successive trials. — Because, in the first trial, the trial court never dismissed the lesser-included offense but merely agreed not to submit it to the first jury as a separate count, under Georgia law the defendant was at risk, both in the first and second trials, of being convicted of violating the defendant's oath as a public officer, a lesser-included offense of the bribery count. The double jeopardy clause of the fifth amendment did not prohibit submission of that issue to the second jury, following a hung jury in the first trial. Nave v. Helms, 845 F.2d 963 (11th Cir. 1988).

Victim of felony dying after conviction. — If victim of felony dies as a result of that felony after defendant has already been convicted of the felony, double jeopardy considerations do not prevent subsequent prosecution for felony-murder. Bell v. State, 249 Ga. 644, 292 S.E.2d 402 (1982).

Dismissal of a rule nisi, without prejudice, by the court in a parole revocation case where the state is not ready to proceed is, in effect, dismissal of the court's own show-cause order to appellant, and not a ruling on the merits of the probation revocation; and, absent abuse, such action does not subject a parolee to double jeopardy nor denial of due process of law. Brooks v. State, 162 Ga. App. 485, 292 S.E.2d 89 (1982).

Double jeopardy clause applies to juvenile proceedings. United States v. Whitney, 632 F.2d 654 (5th Cir. 1980), aff'd, 649 F.2d 296 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 969, 101 S. Ct. 1490, 67 L. Ed. 2d 620 (1981); United States v. Whitney, 649 F.2d 296 (5th Cir. 1981); In re J.B.W., 230 Ga. App. 673, 497 S.E.2d 1 (1998).

Extension of juvenile disposition order. — Provision permitting the juvenile court to extend an order of disposition for two years does not violate constitutional prohibitions against double jeopardy since it operates to further the accomplishment of the juvenile's treatment and rehabilitation. In re T.B., 268 Ga. 149, 486 S.E.2d 177 (1997).

Improper revocation of bond. — Incarceration of the defendant resulting from the improper revocation of the defendant's bond was not a bar to prosecution for vehicular homicide and related offenses. Shaw v. State, 225 Ga. App. 193, 483 S.E.2d 646 (1997).

Parole and probation revocation proceedings do not constitute a stage of a criminal prosecution. United States v. Whitney, 632 F.2d 654 (5th Cir. 1980), aff'd, 649 F.2d 296 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 969, 101 S. Ct. 1490, 67 L. Ed. 2d 620 (1981); United States v. Whitney, 649 F.2d 296 (5th Cir. 1981).

Permitting defendant to be prosecuted in successive actions for probation revocation based on violations that were part of the same conduct did not violate double jeopardy. Perry v. State, 213 Ga. App. 220, 444 S.E.2d 150 (1994).

Double jeopardy clause is not applicable to parole or probation revocation proceedings. United States v. Whitney, 632 F.2d 654 (5th Cir. 1980), aff'd, 649 F.2d 296 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 969, 101 S. Ct. 1490, 67 L. Ed. 2d 620 (1981); United States v. Whitney, 649 F.2d 296 (5th Cir. 1981).

Double jeopardy clause does not bar consideration of certain acts in probation revocation proceedings where those acts formed the basis of a previous parole revocation. United States v. Whitney, 632 F.2d 654 (5th Cir. 1980), aff'd, 649 F.2d 296 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 969, 101 S. Ct. 1490, 67 L. Ed. 2d 620 (1981); United States v. Whitney, 649 F.2d 296 (5th Cir. 1981).

Use of a crime as a ground for revocation of probation. — Double jeopardy protection does not preclude the use of a crime, for which a probationer has been acquitted by a jury, as a ground for revocation of probation. Johnson v. State, 240 Ga. 526, 242 S.E.2d 53, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 881, 99 S. Ct. 221, 58 L. Ed. 2d 194 (1978).

Double jeopardy protections inapplicable to cases of contempt. — Constitutional prohibition against double jeopardy is inapplicable to cases of contempt. Sumbry v. Land, 127 Ga. App. 786, 195 S.E.2d 228 (1972), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1079, 94 S. Ct. 598, 38 L. Ed. 2d 486 (1973).

Double jeopardy protections applicable to courts martial. — The provision of U.S. Const., amend. 5, “nor shall any person be subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb”, is applicable to courts martial. The immediately preceding exception of “cases arising in the land or naval forces” from the requirement of an indictment, abundantly shows that such cases were in contemplation but not excepted from the other provisions. Sanford v. Robbins, 115 F.2d 435 (5th Cir. 1940), cert. denied, 312 U.S. 697, 61 S. Ct. 737, 85 L. Ed. 1132 (1941).

Former conviction is a defense in a court-martial. — In a court-martial, former conviction is a defense to be heard in the exercise of jurisdiction, and not a fact destroying jurisdiction. The defense must be claimed and is waived by not asserting it. When claimed and adversely determined, there is an adjudication which if not reviewed is conclusive. Sanford v. Robbins, 115 F.2d 435 (5th Cir. 1940), cert. denied, 312 U.S. 697, 61 S. Ct. 737, 85 L. Ed. 2d 1132 (1941).

No jeopardy protection as to character and fitness investigation for bar examination. — The investigation of the character and fitness of an applicant to take a bar examination is not a criminal proceeding, and the principle of double jeopardy has no application to such investigation. Therefore, the dismissal of an investigation, without action, when it is learned that an individual has failed to pass an examination, does not preclude a new investigation into an incident on the individual reapplication to take the examination. Gardner v. Gwinnett Circuit Bar Ass'n, 241 Ga. 614, 247 S.E.2d 64 (1978).

Disciplinary proceedings of State Bar of Georgia do not place accused in jeopardy. — The accused in a disciplinary proceeding by the State Bar of Georgia is not placed in jeopardy of life or liberty since the power of the grievance tribunal is limited to making findings of fact and recommendations to the court as to appropriate sanctions, and the power of the court is limited to reprimanding, suspending or disbarring. A matter is criminal only if imprisonment or the assessment of a fine may follow conviction. Cushway v. State Bar, 120 Ga. App. 371, 170 S.E.2d 732 (1969), cert. denied, 398 U.S. 910, 90 S. Ct. 1705, 26 L. Ed. 2d 71 (1970).

No double jeopardy can arise out of a decision in an extradition proceeding. Broughton v. Griffin, 244 Ga. 365, 260 S.E.2d 75 (1979).

Effect of grant of writ of habeas corpus in extradition proceedings. — While the grant of a writ of habeas corpus is generally to be given res judicata effect in a subsequent habeas proceeding based on the same issues of law and fact, where a previous writ of habeas corpus in an extradition proceeding was granted because of the insufficiency of the supporting documents or other technical defects which may be subsequently corrected, the prior judgment granting the writ of habeas corpus will not be res judicata in a subsequent extradition demand brought to avoid the technical objections fatal to the first proceeding. Broughton v. Griffin, 244 Ga. 367, 260 S.E.2d 75 (1979).

Use in aggravated assault case of prior incident found not to involve criminal intent constituted double jeopardy. — Introduction of evidence of a previous incident in which the defendant had attacked someone but had been found not guilty of aggravated assault by reason of insanity, admitted as a similar transaction solely to prove the defendant's motive, bent of mind, plan, scheme, course of conduct or other matters dependent on a person's state of mind, permitted the jury to determine that the defendant had made the first attack with criminal intent although the defendant had already been found by a jury to have acted without criminal intent at that time. Accordingly, the defendant was subjected to double jeopardy when that issue was permitted to be retried, and it could not be said beyond a reasonable doubt that the error did not contribute to the jury's verdict of guilty. Riley v. State, 181 Ga. App. 667, 353 S.E.2d 598 (1987).

Transfer to superior court following juvenile adjudication violates double jeopardy prohibition. — The attempt to transfer a juvenile to superior court after an adjudicatory hearing violates O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(a) and places the juvenile in jeopardy twice, in violation of the fifth and fourteenth amendments. In re T.E.D., 169 Ga. App. 401, 312 S.E.2d 864 (1984).

Double Jeopardy (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Increase in amount of child-support payments constitutional. — Court's increase in the amount of the child-support payments pursuant to the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 42-8-34 does not constitute double punishment or jeopardy. Hudson v. State, 248 Ga. 397, 283 S.E.2d 271 (1981).

Evidentiary use of independent offenses is not per se prohibited where an acquittal was obtained; rather, the application of collateral estoppel requires an examination of what facts were in issue and necessarily resolved in the defendant's favor at the first trial. Moore v. State, 254 Ga. 674, 333 S.E.2d 605 (1985).

When plea of former conviction good against motion to dismiss. — A plea of former conviction is good as against demurrer (now motion to dismiss) only when it sets out the record of the former trial and conviction and judgment, and such a state of facts as will show that the former conviction was for the same offense for which the defendant is about to be arraigned. Gresham v. State, 52 Ga. App. 77, 182 S.E. 416 (1935).

Where double jeopardy raised in motion in arrest of judgment. — A motion in arrest of judgment, being narrow and restricted in its province, is limited to the face of the pleadings in determining whether a violation of the constitutional double jeopardy provisions is presented by the record. Hall v. State, 202 Ga. 42, 42 S.E.2d 130 (1947).

Determination as to frivolousness of double jeopardy motion. — The district courts, in any denial of a double jeopardy motion, should make written findings determining whether the motion is frivolous or nonfrivolous, and if the claim is found to be frivolous, the filing of a notice of appeal by the defendant shall not divest the district court of jurisdiction over the case. United States v. Dunbar, 611 F.2d 985 (5th Cir.), aff'd on reh'g, 614 F.2d 39 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 926, 100 S. Ct. 3022, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1120 (1980).

Proof of plea of former acquittal or conviction. — In all pleas of former acquittal or conviction, proof of the plea has to consist partly of matter of record and partly not of record. The identity of the two cases is the part of the plea which it is the peculiar business of the evidence, which is not of record, to make out. Gower v. State, 71 Ga. App. 127, 30 S.E.2d 298 (1944).

Burden of proof as to double jeopardy motion. — In considering a double jeopardy motion, the district court must determine whether a defendant has tendered a prima facie nonfrivolous double jeopardy claim before shifting the burden of persuasion to the government. United States v. Dunbar, 611 F.2d 985 (5th Cir.), aff'd on reh'g, Windsor v. State, 122 Ga. App. 767, 178 S.E.2d 751 (1970), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 926, 100 S. Ct. 3022, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1120 (1980); United States v. Futch, 637 F.2d 386 (5th Cir. 1981).

Standard of proof as to frivolousness. — To satisfy the test of frivolousness it is essential to find beyond doubt and under any arguable construction, both in law and in fact of the substance of the plaintiff's claim that he would not be entitled to relief. United States v. Bizzard, 493 F. Supp. 1084 (S.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd, 674 F.2d 1382 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 973, 103 S. Ct. 305, 74 L. Ed. 2d 286 (1982).

Findings as to frivolousness. — The federal district courts, in any denial of a double jeopardy motion, should make written findings determining whether the motion is frivolous or nonfrivolous. If the claim is found to be frivolous, the filing of a notice of appeal by the defendant shall not divest the district court of jurisdiction over the case. If nonfrivolous the trial cannot proceed until a determination is made of the merits of an appeal. United States v. Bizzard, 493 F. Supp. 1084 (S.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd, 674 F.2d 1382 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 973, 103 S. Ct. 305, 74 L. Ed. 2d 286 (1982).

A timely filed plea of double jeopardy is directly appealable without resort to the interlocutory appeal procedures set forth in O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34. Rogers v. State, 166 Ga. App. 299, 304 S.E.2d 108 (1983).

Jury instructions as constructive amendment to indictment. — Jury instructions that altered an essential element of the offense of conspiracy to rob, and thereby broadened the possible bases for conviction by allowing the jury to convict the defendant if the defendant conspired with anyone, when the indictment alleged the defendant conspired solely with a named individual, constituted a constructive amendment of the indictment and therefore violated the defendant's fifth amendment right to be charged by grand jury indictment. United States v. Keller, 916 F.2d 628 (11th Cir. 1990), cert. denied, 499 U.S. 978, 111 S. Ct. 1628, 113 L. Ed. 2d 724 (1991).

Trial court's direction to jury to continue deliberating after return of verdict not double jeopardy. — Georgia does not recognize an inconsistent verdict rule which would permit a defendant to challenge the factual findings underlying a guilty verdict on one count as inconsistent with the findings underlying a not guilty verdict on a different count. A conviction on one count and an acquittal on another related count may reflect a compromise or lenity by the jury rather than inconsistent factual conclusions and Georgia courts will generally not look behind the jury's decision to convict on certain counts and acquit on certain counts. Furthermore, a trial court's request that a jury continue deliberations after the jury failed to comply with the court's instructions concerning a mutually exclusive verdict was proper. Easley v. State, 262 Ga. App. 144, 584 S.E.2d 629 (2003).

Provisions of the Tort Reform Act (O.C.G.A. § 51-12-5.1), relating to punitive damages, violated the due process and equal protection clauses of the federal and state constitutions, violated the excessive fines provisions of both constitutions, and violated the double jeopardy provision of the fifth amendment to the federal constitution. McBride v. GMC, 737 F. Supp. 1563 (M.D. Ga. 1990).

Implied acquittal barred rewritten verdict. — Because a jury's verdict found the defendant "guilty" of only the "intent" to traffic in narcotics, a rewritten verdict for "attempt" was void for double jeopardy since the original verdict amounted to an acquittal. Douglas v. State, 206 Ga. App. 740, 426 S.E.2d 628 (1992).

2. Attachment of Jeopardy

Threshold question is attachment of jeopardy. — The threshold question to be addressed in any case involving double jeopardy is whether jeopardy has attached to the defendant during the proceedings which the defendant contends preclude further prosecution. Haynes v. State, 245 Ga. 817, 268 S.E.2d 325 (1980).

Where the Georgia Supreme Court had previously ruled that evidence seized from defendant's former car and apartment had to be suppressed, the trial court was not precluded on double jeopardy grounds from re-hearing the issue of the admissibility of the blood evidence seized from these places pursuant to fresh search warrants. As defendant had never been put to trial, jeopardy had not attached. State v. Lejeune, 277 Ga. 749, 594 S.E.2d 637, cert. denied, 543 U.S. 861, 125 S. Ct. 187, 160 L. Ed. 2d 103 (2004).

Before any double jeopardy considerations arise, one must have been placed in jeopardy. United States v. Pitts, 569 F.2d 343 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 959, 98 S. Ct. 3076, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1125 (1978).

Defendant is placed in constitutional jeopardy if, in a court of competent jurisdiction with a sufficient indictment, the defendant has been arraigned, has pled, and a jury has been impaneled and sworn. State v. Martin, 173 Ga. App. 370, 326 S.E.2d 558 (1985).

No jeopardy where jurisdiction lacking. — Because the defendant's original trial was before a court that lacked jurisdiction the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's plea of former jeopardy. Jackett v. State, 209 Ga. App. 112, 432 S.E.2d 586 (1993).

No jeopardy where prior judgment was void. — Because a uniform traffic citation was deliberately withheld from filing, and the state did not authorize or participate in the prosecution of the case, the probate court lacked authority to accept defendant's plea to the proposed charge and impose a fine, making its resulting judgment void; hence, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's plea in bar based on double jeopardy, since the probate court's void judgment could not serve as the basis for barring the subsequent indictment and prosecution of defendant in the superior court. Roberts v. State, 280 Ga. App. 672, 634 S.E.2d 790 (2006).

Retrial after not guilty finding returned by an unsworn jury was not barred by the double jeopardy principles under both the U.S. and Georgia Constitutions, as said jury lacked any authority to pass upon any of the issues at trial, and hence, could not make any determinations whatsoever as to the defendant's guilt or innocence. Spencer v. State, 281 Ga. 533, 640 S.E.2d 267 (2007).

Double Jeopardy (Cont'd)2. Attachment of Jeopardy (Cont'd)

Trial in county other than where crime occurred. — If a defendant is tried in one county in a court having jurisdiction of the offense, but the crime occurred in another county, no jeopardy attaches. Schiefelbein v. State, 258 Ga. 623, 373 S.E.2d 354 (1988), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1026, 109 S. Ct. 1156, 103 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1989).

When jeopardy attaches in jury trial. — For a jury trial, jeopardy attaches when that body is empaneled and sworn. Cushway v. State Bar, 120 Ga. App. 371, 170 S.E.2d 732 (1969), cert. denied, 398 U.S. 910, 9 S. Ct. 1705, 26 L. Ed. 2d 71 (1970); Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd on other grounds, 519 F.2d 184 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied sub nom. Calley v. Hoffman, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1976); White v. State, 143 Ga. App. 315, 238 S.E.2d 247 (1977); United States v. Pitts, 569 F.2d 343 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 959, 98 S. Ct. 3076, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1125 (1978); Haynes v. State, 245 Ga. 817, 268 S.E.2d 325 (1980); United States v. Futch, 637 F.2d 386 (5th Cir. 1981).

Defendants were not placed in jeopardy before the trial court granted the state's Batson challenge and dismissed a jury that was selected to try them on charges of armed robbery and possession of a firearm during the commission of a crime because the jury was never empaneled and sworn, and the trial court did not err when it denied defendants' plea in bar and proceeded with trial. Garlington v. State, 268 Ga. App. 264, 601 S.E.2d 793 (2004).

When jeopardy attaches in bench trial. — For a bench trial, jeopardy attaches when the judge begins to receive evidence. White v. State, 143 Ga. App. 315, 238 S.E.2d 247 (1977); United States v. Pitts, 569 F.2d 343 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 959, 98 S. Ct. 3076, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1125 (1978); Haynes v. State, 245 Ga. 817, 268 S.E.2d 325 (1980).

When first jeopardy is complete. — First jeopardy is complete on the swearing of a jury or on the submission of evidence if the trial is stopped for insufficient cause. Sanford v. Robbins, 115 F.2d 435 (5th Cir. 1940), cert. denied, 312 U.S. 697, 61 S. Ct. 737, 85 L. Ed. 1132 (1941).

Amendment of accusation. — Where amendment of accusation was made in open court prior to the selection of the jury, there was no violation of double jeopardy even though the defendant was not served with the amended accusation until after the jury was selected. Reed v. State, 205 Ga. App. 209, 422 S.E.2d 15, cert. denied, 205 Ga. App. 901, 422 S.E.2d 15 (1992).

Jeopardy does not attach at a probation revocation hearing so as to invoke the double jeopardy clause. Smith v. State, 171 Ga. App. 279, 319 S.E.2d 113 (1984).

Admission of crimes at juvenile transfer hearing. — Jeopardy did not attach so as to preclude further proceedings against a juvenile for crimes he admitted at a transfer hearing, where the juvenile court accepted the admission for the limited purpose of determining whether the case should be transferred to superior court. In re M.E.J., 260 Ga. 805, 401 S.E.2d 254 (1991).

Federal civil forfeiture actions. — Double jeopardy does not apply in criminal trial where federal civil forfeiture judgment was entered after criminal convictions because the double jeopardy clause reaches only subsequent punishments, not the initial punishment imposed for the criminal act. Durfee v. State, 221 Ga. App. 211, 471 S.E.2d 32 (1996).

Carjacking and robbery. — Defendant's conviction of hijacking a motor vehicle and armed robbery were properly entered, despite defendant's contention that the state used the same facts to establish both offenses, and that defendant should have only been convicted of and sentenced for one of the offenses, as: (1) hijacking a motor vehicle was considered a separate offense and did not merge with any other offense; (2) O.C.G.A. § 16-5-44.1 superseded the double jeopardy provisions of O.C.G.A. § 16-1-7 in motor vehicle hijacking cases; (3) O.C.G.A. § 16-5-44.1(d) did not violate the prohibition against double jeopardy, since the double jeopardy clause of the Georgia Constitution did not prohibit additional punishment for a separate offense which the legislature deemed to warrant separate sanction; and (4) defendant failed to offer any evidence in support of defendant's allegation that O.C.G.A. § 16-5-44.1(d) otherwise violated defendant's double jeopardy rights. Holman v. State, 272 Ga. App. 890, 614 S.E.2d 124 (2005).

3. Prosecution by More Than One Sovereign

When multiple prosecution not prohibited. — Double jeopardy provisions of the Constitution do not prohibit multiple prosecution for the same act if that act constituted an offense against more than one sovereign. Dorsey v. State, 237 Ga. 876, 230 S.E.2d 307 (1976).

Double jeopardy provision of U.S. Const., amend. 5 does not bar federal prosecution despite a previous conviction or acquittal in the state courts based on the same act. Jolley v. United States, 232 F.2d 83 (5th Cir. 1956).

An act denounced as a crime by both national and state sovereignties may be punished by each without violation of the double jeopardy provision. Screws v. United States, 325 U.S. 91, 65 S. Ct. 1031, 89 L. Ed. 1495 (1945).

Person may not be convicted by both the state and a municipality for the same crime. — The test for determining if there is a fatal identity between the crime and the ordinance is whether the ordinance contains an ingredient or element, essential to the city's peace but not essential to the state offense, or if the offense created by the ordinance lacks some element essential to the state crime. Barrett v. State, 123 Ga. App. 210, 180 S.E.2d 271 (1971).

Nor may same state prosecute both a felony and lesser included misdemeanor. — Prosecutions of the same defendant in different courts of the same state, one prosecution being for a felony and the other being for a misdemeanor which was included in the felony offense, must be viewed as the acts of a single sovereign under the double jeopardy clause. Brock v. State, 146 Ga. App. 78, 245 S.E.2d 442 (1978).

Prosecution on state and federal charges of murder and kidnapping held proper. — Since the facts necessary to prove the federal charges of kidnapping and interstate travel with intent to commit murder for extortion are different from the facts necessary to prove the Georgia charges of murder and aggravated assault, there was no violation of Georgia's statutes barring multiple prosecutions, O.C.G.A. §§ 16-1-7, 16-1-8, nor the constitutional prohibition against double jeopardy, when the defendants were prosecuted in federal and state courts for all of the above offenses. Satterfield v. State, 256 Ga.

593, 351 S.E.2d 625 (1987).

Multi-county crime spree. — Where a criminal defendant goes on a multi-county crime spree, the double jeopardy clause does not preclude successive prosecutions in separate counties for separate crimes arising out of a single criminal episode — even if they have factual elements in common — where they are not the “same offense” as a matter of fact or of law. Potts v. State, 261 Ga. 716, 410 S.E.2d 89 (1991).

Prosecution of lesser included offense in different county. — A prosecution for a lesser included offense, which includes the underlying felony in a felony murder case, after a conviction for the greater offense in a different county violates O.C.G.A. § 16-1-6, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII, and the fifth and fourteenth amendments to the United States Constitution. Perkinson v. State, 273 Ga. 491, 542 S.E.2d 92 (2001).

4. Determination as to Whether Same Offenses are Involved

Prohibition against double jeopardy forbids double punishment for what is the same offense, not eo nomine, but the same transaction. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd on other grounds, 519 F.2d 184 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied sub nom. Calley v. Hoffman, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1976).

Double jeopardy clause's prohibition of multiple punishments for the same offense is not violated as long as the “same evidence” test is satisfied. Where the same act or transaction constitutes a violation of two distinct statutory provisions, the test to be applied to determine whether there are two offenses or only one, is whether each provision requires proof of a fact which the other does not. Hardwick v. Doolittle, 558 F.2d 292 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1049, 98 S. Ct. 897, 54 L. Ed. 2d 801 (1978).

To support a claim of double jeopardy, a defendant must show that the two offenses charged are the same in law and fact. United States v. Futch, 637 F.2d 386 (5th Cir. 1981); United States v. Henry, 661 F.2d 894 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 992, 102 S. Ct. 1619, 71 L. Ed. 2d 853 (1982).

Doctrine of collateral estoppel is a part of U.S. Const., amend. 5's guarantee against double jeopardy. Clark v. State, 144 Ga. App. 69, 240 S.E.2d 270 (1977).

Double Jeopardy (Cont'd)4. Determination as to Whether Same Offenses are Involved (Cont'd)

Collateral estoppel means that when an issue of ultimate fact has once been determined by a valid and final judgment, the issue cannot again be litigated between the same parties in a future lawsuit. In a criminal case it is a protection embodied in the fifth amendment guarantee against double jeopardy. United States v. Mulherin, 710 F.2d 731 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 964, 104 S. Ct. 402, 78 L. Ed. 2d 343 (1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1034, 104 S. Ct. 1305, 79 L. Ed. 2d 703 (1984).

But the concept of collateral estoppel is distinct from double jeopardy in the sense that the traditional bar of double jeopardy prohibits the prosecution of the crime itself, whereas collateral estoppel, in a more modest fashion, simply forbids the government from relitigating certain facts in order to establish the fact of the crime. United States v. Mulherin, 710 F.2d 731 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 964, 104 S. Ct. 402, 78 L. Ed. 2d 343 (1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1034, 104 S. Ct. 1305, 79 L. Ed. 2d 703 (1984).

Second prosecution for the same offense occurs when the state attempts to relitigate issues of fact necessarily determined in a defendant's favor at a prior trial. Hardwick v. Doolittle, 558 F.2d 292 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1049, 98 S. Ct. 897, 54 L. Ed. 2d 801 (1978).

Test of whether collateral estoppel bars later prosecution is whether the jury could not have rationally based its verdict on any other issue than the one the defendants seek to foreclose. That the jury may have based its verdict on this issue is not enough; the defendant has the burden to show that an issue was necessarily determined in the defendant's favor in the former trial. United States v. Mulherin, 710 F.2d 731 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 964, 104 S. Ct. 402, 78 L. Ed. 2d 343 (1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1034, 104 S. Ct. 1305, 79 L. Ed. 2d 703 (1984).

Although collateral estoppel is a corollary of the double jeopardy clause, a defendant may not invoke collateral estoppel unless the facts sought to be foreclosed were determined in the defendant's favor in the prior trial. Humphrey v. United States, 888 F.2d 1546 (11th Cir. 1989).

Even assuming that the defendant's position that O.C.G.A. § 40-6-395 set out two distinct offenses, wilful failure to stop and fleeing and eluding a police officer, the defendant was tried, first in a bench trial and again on remand after an appeal, on an accusation charging the defendant with fleeing and eluding an officer and was found guilty and sentenced both times for fleeing and eluding; hence, because the defendant was not tried on the offense of wilful failure to stop, the defendant's contention that double jeopardy considerations prohibited a jury trial on that charge was moot. Harbuck v. State, 280 Ga. 775, 631 S.E.2d 351 (2006).

Multiple convictions and punishments for single crime improper. — Appeals court agreed that because there was only one homicide victim, only one life sentence, and not three, could be imposed, because such improperly subjected the defendant to multiple convictions and punishments for one crime. Turner v. State, 281 Ga. 487, 640 S.E.2d 25 (2007).

Prosecution under more than one statute not barred where each requires element of proof which other does not. — The test is not whether the defendant has already been tried for the same act, but whether the defendant has been put in jeopardy for the same offense. A single act may be an offense against two statutes; and if each statute requires proof of an additional fact that the other does not, an acquittal or conviction under either statute does not exempt the defendant from prosecution and punishment under the other. Ballerini v. Aderholt, 44 F.2d 352 (5th Cir. 1930); Brock v. State, 146 Ga. App. 78, 245 S.E.2d 442 (1978); United States v. Dunbar, 591 F.2d 1190 (5th Cir. 1979); United States v. Cowart, 595 F.2d 1023 (5th Cir. 1979); State v. Burroughs, 244 Ga. 288, 260 S.E.2d 5 (1979); United States v. Caston, 615 F.2d 1111 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 831, 101 S. Ct. 99, 66 L. Ed. 2d 36 (1980); Stephens v. Zant, 631 F.2d 397 (5th Cir. 1980), rev'd on other grounds, 462 U.S. 862, 103 S. Ct. 2733, 77 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1983); United States v. Tammamro, 636 F.2d 100 (5th Cir. 1981).

A defendant may properly be prosecuted under the general federal conspiracy statute and a specific conspiracy statute so long as each statute requires proof of an element not required by the other. United States v. Lanier, 920 F.2d 887 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 872, 112 S. Ct. 208, 116 L. Ed. 2d 166 (1991).

Lesser or greater included offense is the same offense for double jeopardy purposes. Stephens v. Zant, 631 F.2d 397 (5th Cir. 1980), modified, 648 F.2d 446 (5th Cir. 1981), rev'd on other grounds, 462 U.S. 862, 103 S. Ct. 2733, 77 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1983).

By charging a lesser offense in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 16-1-6, the trial court did not permit the jury to convict defendant in a manner not alleged in the indictment in violation of defendant's due process rights. Rupnik v. State, 273 Ga. App. 34, 614 S.E.2d 153 (2005).

Conviction for greater offense bars conviction for lesser offense. — A person who has been convicted of a crime having several elements included in it may not subsequently be tried for a lesser included offense, that is, an offense consisting solely of one or more of the elements of the crime for which the person has already been convicted. Ballerini v. Aderholt, 44 F.2d 352 (5th Cir. 1930); State v. Burroughs, 246 Ga. 393, 271 S.E.2d 629 (1980).

Defendant's conviction of voluntary manslaughter under O.C.G.A. § 16-5-2 was improper, as the defendant was also convicted of felony murder under O.C.G.A. § 16-5-1(c) for the same transaction, and this would have subjected the defendant to multiple convictions and punishments for one crime, which would have placed the defendant in double jeopardy in violation of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII and U.S. Const., amend. 5. Lawson v. State, 280 Ga. 881, 635 S.E.2d 134 (2006).

Conviction of lesser included offense bars subsequent trial on greater offense. State v. Burroughs, 246 Ga. 393, 271 S.E.2d 629 (1980).

In order for the rule that jeopardy for an offense ends after a jury convicts a defendant of a lesser offense to apply, there must be an unambiguous conviction of the lesser offense, and the trial court must have given the jury full opportunity to return a verdict on the greater charge. Potts v. State, 258 Ga. 430, 369 S.E.2d 746 (1988), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1068, 109 S. Ct. 1347, 103 L. Ed. 2d 815 (1989).

Conviction of lesser offense amounts to implicit acquittal of greater offense. — If a defendant is tried on more than one count, and the jury returned no verdict on the greater offense, but convicted on a lesser included offense, the defendant may not be retried for the greater offense after the conviction is overturned, because the jury had implicitly acquitted the defendant of that greater offense. Price v. Georgia, 398 U.S. 323, 90 S. Ct. 1757, 26 L. Ed. 2d 300 (1970).

Reversal of conviction for greater offense does not bar retrial for that offense. — If there is a conviction of two crimes in a single prosecution, one of which is included in the other, and the defendant obtains a reversal of the major crime for lack of jurisdiction, the remaining conviction of the lesser crime does not bar a retrial on the major crime. In the event the defendant is then convicted on retrial for the major crime, an invalidation of the defendant's conviction of the lesser included offenses for the same conduct would be authorized in appropriate proceedings. Keener v. State, 238 Ga. 7, 230 S.E.2d 846 (1976), cert. denied, 433 U.S. 911, 97 S. Ct. 2980, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1096 (1977).

No merger absent conviction for greater offense. — No merger of greater and lesser included offenses when there is no conviction for the greater offense. Hill v. State, 207 Ga. App. 65, 426 S.E.2d 915 (1993).

Where second indictment may be proved under first, offenses are same for double jeopardy purposes. — In determining what is the same offense for the purposes of U.S. Const., amend. 5, the test is whether, if what is set out in the second indictment had been proved under the first, there could have been a conviction; when there could, the second cannot be maintained; when there could not, it can be. Bertsch v. Snook, 36 F.2d 155 (5th Cir. 1929); Ballerini v. Aderholt, 44 F.2d 352 (5th Cir. 1930).

Evidence insufficient to convict under second indictment. — If the evidence required to convict under the first indictment would not be sufficient to convict under the second indictment, but proof of an additional fact would be necessary to constitute the offense charged in the second, the former conviction or acquittal could not be pleaded in bar to the second indictment. Price v. State, 76 Ga. App. 108, 45 S.E.2d 84 (1947).

Double Jeopardy (Cont'd)4. Determination as to Whether Same Offenses are Involved (Cont'd)*Where counts charge same offense and maximum sentence is imposed for one. —

Where counts of an indictment to which the defendant pleads guilty charge the same offense, and the maximum imprisonment authorized for a single conspiracy was imposed on one count, imposition of an additional sentence of imprisonment on the second count is void. Bertsch v. Snook, 36 F.2d 155 (5th Cir. 1929).

Double jeopardy clause is not violated by treating single agreement as two offenses where Congress intends to impose multiple punishment, as where there is an agreement to trade firearms for drugs and defendants are charged under two separate conspiracy statutes, a drug conspiracy under 21 U.S.C. § 846 and a firearm conspiracy under 18 U.S.C. § 371. United States v. Mulherin, 710 F.2d 731 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 964, 104 S. Ct. 402, 78 L. Ed. 2d 343 (1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1034, 104 S. Ct. 1305, 79 L. Ed. 2d 703 (1984).

Underlying felony in felony murder. — As felony murder is defined under Georgia law, the underlying felony is a lesser included offense of felony murder and thus the same offense for double jeopardy purposes. Stephens v. Zant, 631 F.2d 397 (5th Cir. 1980), modified, 648 F.2d 446 (5th Cir. 1981), rev'd on other grounds, 462 U.S. 862, 103 S. Ct. 2733, 77 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1983).

Previous conviction for underlying felony bars prosecution for felony murder. — Once the state tried and convicted petitioner for kidnapping, it would be barred from prosecuting him for felony murder only if the underlying felony upon which that prosecution was based were that same kidnapping. Stephens v. Zant, 631 F.2d 397 (5th Cir. 1980), modified, 648 F.2d 446 (5th Cir. 1981), rev'd on other grounds, 462 U.S. 862, 103 S. Ct. 2733, 77 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1983).

Bifurcated trial of malice murder and felony murder not double jeopardy. — Double jeopardy principles were used to bar prosecution of a defendant in a second proceeding after the defendant was tried on a charge in a former proceeding, but defendant's trial on a charge of felony murder in a case where the trial was bifurcated and defendant was first tried on a malice murder charge did not violate defendant's double jeopardy rights since the delay between the proceedings did not constitute the termination of the prosecution and, thus, trial on the malice murder charge did not involve a former prosecution; rather, the charges were different phases of the same trial, and, thus, the fact that the malice murder charge had already been tried did not bar a trial on the felony murder charge. Jones v. State, 276 Ga. 663, 581 S.E.2d 546 (2003).

No exposure to double jeopardy. — Trial court did not err in allowing the manufacturing methamphetamine offense to proceed to the jury under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(b); despite the poor wording of the caption of the count at issue, which stated "trafficking in methamphetamine," because the body of the count clearly charged the defendant with manufacturing methamphetamine, and the defendant failed to show how the defendant was misled by the presentment, nor did it expose the defendant to double jeopardy in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 5 or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII. Gentry v. State, 281 Ga. App. 315, 635 S.E.2d 782 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 78 (Ga. 2007).

Malice murder and kidnapping are not the same offense for double jeopardy purposes under Georgia law, even though they involve the same transaction and considerably overlap each other factually. Stephens v. Zant, 631 F.2d 397 (5th Cir. 1980), modified, 648 F.2d 446 (5th Cir. 1981), rev'd on other grounds, 462 U.S. 862, 103 S. Ct. 2733, 77 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1983).

Malice murder and kidnapping with bodily injury have separate and distinct elements and require proof of different facts. Thus, even if they involve the same transaction and considerably overlap each other factually, they are not the "same offense" under the double jeopardy clause. Potts v. Zant, 575 F. Supp. 374 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 734 F.2d 526 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1068, 106 S. Ct. 1386, 89 L. Ed. 2d 610, judgment vacated, 478 U.S. 1017, 106 S. Ct. 3328, 92 L. Ed. 2d 734 (1986) (remanded for further consideration in light of Rose v. Clark, 478 U.S. 570 (1986)), aff'd, 814 F.2d 1512 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 876, 110 S. Ct. 214, 107 L. Ed. 2d 166 (1989).

Hijacking and armed robbery. — Defendant's separate convictions for armed robbery and hijacking a motor vehicle did not violate the prohibitions against double jeopardy as O.C.G.A. § 16-5-44.1(d) provided that hijacking a motor vehicle was a separate offense and did not merge and it therefore superseded the state statutory double jeopardy provision; further, the Georgia Constitution did not prohibit additional punishment for a separate offense that the Georgia legislature had deemed to warrant a separate sanction; the defendant failed to show how the hijacking statute violated the federal double jeopardy clause. Mullins v. State, 280 Ga. App. 689, 634 S.E.2d 850 (2006).

Essence of a double jeopardy determination in a conspiracy case is whether there was more than one agreement. United States v. Tammaro, 636 F.2d 100 (5th Cir. 1981).

Factors to be considered in concluding that events charged in two indictments were part of a single agreement: (1) time; (2) persons acting as coconspirators; (3) the statutory offenses charged in the indictments; (4) the overt acts charged by the government or any other description of the offense charged which indicates the nature and scope of the activity which the government sought to punish in each case; and (5) places where the events alleged as part of the conspiracy took place. United States v. Futch, 637 F.2d 386 (5th Cir. 1981).

Test for existence of unified conspiracy. — The usual tests for determining the existence of a unified conspiracy are whether: the participants shared a continuing, common goal; the operations of the conspiracy followed an unbroken and repetitive pattern; and the cast of coconspirators remained the same. United States v. Futch, 637 F.2d 386 (5th Cir. 1981).

Central question in narcotics conspiracies is existence of larger unified conspiracy. — The question that is central to double jeopardy claims arising in the context of a narcotics conspiracy is whether the particular transactions alleged in the indictment were within a larger unified conspiracy. United States v. Futch, 637 F.2d 386 (5th Cir. 1981); United States v. Henry, 661 F.2d 894 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 992, 102 S. Ct. 1619, 71 L. Ed. 2d 853 (1982).

Conspiracy to commit a crime and the crime itself are separate offenses and a defendant may be tried in separate trials for both. United States v. Tallant, 547 F.2d 1291 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 889, 98 S. Ct. 262, 54 L. Ed. 2d 174 (1977).

Since whatever evidence is introduced in a trial on a substantive offense, later prosecution for conspiracy based upon the same evidence cannot amount to a double jeopardy violation because the conspiracy and the substantive offense are distinct, where the situation was reversed, the first charges were for conspiracy and the pending charges involved substantive crimes, there was no double jeopardy violation. United States v. Eley, 968 F.2d 1143 (11th Cir. 1992).

Only if the substantive offense and the conspiracy are identical does a conviction for both constitute double jeopardy. United States v. Tallant, 547 F.2d 1291 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 889, 98 S. Ct. 262, 54 L. Ed. 2d 174 (1977).

Conviction and punishment for conspiracy as well as aiding and abetting does not violate the double jeopardy clause because the offenses are separate and distinct, even where the evidence adduced serves "double duty" in establishing the elements of both offenses. United States v. Cowart, 595 F.2d 1023 (5th Cir. 1979).

Attempt and conspiracy. — Prosecuting a defendant on attempt and conspiracy charges does not violate double jeopardy even though both offenses arose out of a single narcotics transaction. There can be no double jeopardy bar, therefore, to punishing a defendant for both crimes. United States v. Cochran, 883 F.2d 1012 (11th Cir. 1989).

Possession of cocaine and conspiracy to sell and distribute. — Charging the defendant with conspiracy to sell and distribute cocaine after the defendant had pled guilty to a substantive crime, possession of cocaine, did not constitute double jeopardy because the second prosecution required proof of facts not required on the prior prosecution. Rogers v. State, 201 Ga. App. 426, 411 S.E.2d 289 (1991).

Disorderly conduct conviction precludes retrial for battery. — An individual may not be retried for a simple battery based upon a striking and kicking incident for which the individual was convicted of disorderly conduct. State v. Burroughs, 246 Ga. 393, 271 S.E.2d 629 (1980).

Trial on an indictment for simple battery and criminal damage to property in the second degree constituted double jeopardy where these charges were based on the same facts underlying defendant's plea and conviction for disorderly conduct. Henderson v. State, 206 Ga. App. 642, 426 S.E.2d 264 (1992).

Double Jeopardy (Cont'd)4. Determination as to Whether Same Offenses are Involved (Cont'd)

Crimes of illegal possession of heroin and illegal sale of heroin. — As a matter of law, the crime of illegal possession of heroin is not included in the crime of illegal sale of heroin for the purposes of double jeopardy and multiple prosecution. Wilson v. Hopper, 234 Ga. 859, 218 S.E.2d 573 (1975).

Possession of a controlled substance is separate and distinct from the conduct required to establish the offense of driving under the influence of intoxicants, although the offenses may arise out of the same conduct, i.e., driving. Rogers v. State, 166 Ga. App. 299, 304 S.E.2d 108 (1983).

Acquittal of use of obscene and vulgar language no bar to prosecution for soliciting for prostitution. — After defendant's acquittal on charge of communicating to a virtuous female by writing obscene and vulgar language and an improper proposal under former Code 1933, § 26-6303 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-11-39.1), the defendant is not placed in double jeopardy by being placed on trial for charge of soliciting another for the purpose of prostitution under former Code 1933, § 26-6201 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-6-12), on grounds that the two cases are based on the same transaction. Price v. State, 76 Ga. App. 108, 45 S.E.2d 84 (1947).

Revocation of probation for offense of escape and criminal prosecution for the same offense is not double jeopardy. Aldridge v. State, 155 Ga. App. 916, 273 S.E.2d 656 (1980).

Convictions for both driving under the influence and public drunkenness not barred. — Where convictions for both driving under the influence and public drunkenness are not based upon proof of the same facts, the defendant has no viable claim of double jeopardy under the United States Constitution; moreover, the fact that both crimes arose from the same intoxication has no bearing on this issue. Fuller v. State, 169

Ga. App. 468, 313 S.E.2d 745 (1984).

DUI and unlawful blood alcohol level. — Where charges of driving under the influence of alcohol (O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391(a)(1)) and driving with an unlawful blood alcohol level (O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391(a)(4)) were based on the same conduct, they merged under the substantive double jeopardy rule, requiring vacating of conviction of latter offense. Hoffman v. State, 208 Ga. App. 574, 430 S.E.2d 886 (1993).

Burglary and robbery. — No double jeopardy violation occurred when defendant was convicted of and sentenced for both burglary and robbery. Luke v. State, 171 Ga. App. 201, 318 S.E.2d 833 (1984).

Malice murder and armed robbery. — Conviction of a defendant for armed robbery, a lesser included offense of the malice murder for which the defendant was also convicted, subjected the defendant to double jeopardy. Huynh v. King, 95 F.3d 1052 (11th Cir. 1996).

Rape and battery. — Defendant's right to be free from double jeopardy was not violated by rape prosecution in second trial after defendant was acquitted in a first trial on a charge of battery, as the facts used to prove the rape charge in the second trial were distinct from the factual allegations cited in support of the battery charge in the first trial, and, thus, the state was not barred by double jeopardy from retrying defendant on the rape charge in the second trial after the trial court declared a mistrial on that charge in the first trial. Dawson v. State, 260 Ga. App. 824, 581 S.E.2d 371 (2003).

Where defendant was charged with five traffic violations and disorderly conduct, a guilty plea having been accepted for the latter, trial court's denial of defendant's plea of former jeopardy to preclude prosecution for the traffic violations was not in error where the offense of disorderly conduct for which the defendant was earlier tried did not arise from the same transaction as the five traffic offenses with which the defendant was also charged, as they were completed at a different time and at different locations; therefore, prosecution for the traffic offenses did not constitute double jeopardy for defendant. Boyette v. State, 172 Ga. App. 683, 324 S.E.2d 540 (1984).

Carjacking and armed robbery. — Defendant's prosecution for a car hijacking was not barred by the double jeopardy clause as the refusal to admit evidence of the car hijacking as similar transaction evidence at defendant's trial for armed robbery was based on the lack of similarity between the car hijacking and the armed robbery incidents, not the lack of evidence of defendant's culpability for the car hijacking. Syas v. State, 273 Ga. App. 161, 614 S.E.2d 803 (1992).

Separate proof for traffic violations. — Where defendant could not have been convicted for aggravated assault and criminal damage to property under prior citations for traffic offenses requiring separate proof of facts, no double jeopardy attached. Cates v. State, 206 Ga. App. 694, 426 S.E.2d 576 (1992).

RICO prosecution based on same evidence as prior conspiracy and drug convictions. — No double jeopardy violation existed in an indictment charging the defendants with substantive and conspiracy violations of the federal Racketeer Influenced Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO) based on the use of the same proof as prior federal conspiracy and substantive drug convictions. United States v. Boldin, 772 F.2d 719 (11th Cir. 1985), modified, 779 F.2d 618 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1098, 106 S. Ct. 1498, 89 L. Ed. 2d 899, cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1048, 106 S. Ct. 1269, 89 L. Ed. 2d 577, cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1110, 106 S. Ct. 1520, 89 L. Ed. 2d 917 (1986).

Separate instances of aggravated stalking. — The prosecution of the defendant in Fulton County for aggravated stalking was not barred by defendant's previous conviction in Cobb County for aggravated stalking since, although the offenses pertained to stalking of the same victim, each prosecution pertained to events that occurred on different days and in different places. Daker v. State, 248 Ga. App. 657, 548 S.E.2d 354 (2001), cert. denied, 535 U.S. 1085, 122 S. Ct. 1977, 152 L. Ed. 2d 1035 (2002).

Firearm charge and underlying felony. — Cumulative punishment for armed robbery and carrying and using a firearm in the commission of a felony does not subject a defendant to double jeopardy. Jackson v. United States, 976 F.2d 679 (11th Cir. 1992).

Defendant's conviction of offense of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon was not precluded by collateral estoppel where he was acquitted of two other charges (aggravated assault and possession of a firearm during commission of a crime against a person) arising out of the same incident; the jury could have concluded that the defendant had the gun but did not assault or attempt to rob the victim with it. Clark v. State, 194 Ga. App. 280, 390 S.E.2d 425 (1990).

Financial transaction card theft not lesser included offense of financial transaction card fraud. — Financial transaction card theft, O.C.G.A. § 16-9-31, is not a lesser included offense of financial transaction card fraud, O.C.G.A. § 16-9-33, thus, the defendant's prior conviction for the former offense did not preclude prosecution for the latter. Sword v. State, 232 Ga. App. 497, 502 S.E.2d 334 (1998).

Defendant has burden of proving plea of former jeopardy. — In order to sustain a plea of former jeopardy, it is always incumbent upon the defendant to plead and prove that the transaction charged in the second indictment is the same as a matter of fact as that charged in the first indictment under which the defendant was put in jeopardy. Waters v. State, 112 Ga. App. 201, 144 S.E.2d 477 (1965).

What defendant must prove in support of double jeopardy plea. — In addition to pleading and proving that the transactions are the same as a matter of fact, it is also necessary in order to sustain a double jeopardy plea to plead and prove: (a) that the transaction charged in the second indictment is an offense that is identical in law with that charged in the first indictment, or else that under the actual terms of the first indictment proof of the second offense was made necessary as an essential ingredient of the offense as first charged; (b) that the transaction charged in the second indictment is an offense that represents either a major or minor grade of the same offense, of which the defendant might be convicted under an indictment for the major offense; or (c) if the transactions are the same as a matter of fact, even though the offenses be not identical or in effect identical as a matter of law, so as to come within the scope of the preceding items (a) or (b), the defendant may nevertheless, under the principles of res judicata, which may be included in a plea under the broader doctrine of former jeopardy.

Double Jeopardy (Cont'd)4. Determination as to Whether Same Offenses are Involved (Cont'd)

ardly, show that the defendant's acquittal on the first charge was necessarily controlled by the determination of some particular issue or issues of fact which would preclude the defendant's conviction of the second charge. Waters v. State, 112 Ga. App. 201, 144 S.E.2d 477 (1965).

If defendant establishes a prima facie claim the burden shifts to the government to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the indictments involved in fact charge separate offenses. United States v. Futch, 637 F.2d 386 (5th Cir. 1981).

Operation of bar to multiple convictions where several crimes arising from one transaction are tried together. — The bar to multiple convictions usually arises where several crimes arising out of one criminal transaction are tried at the same time. In such cases the bar does not operate until after the verdicts. Under Georgia law it bars the conviction and therefore the punishment of all crimes which are as a matter of law or a matter of fact included in a major crime for which the defendant has been convicted. Keener v. State, 238 Ga. 7, 230 S.E.2d 846 (1976), cert. denied, 433 U.S. 911, 97 S. Ct. 2980, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1096 (1977).

5. Imposition of Other Penalties for Same Act

No bar to imposition of civil and criminal penalties for same act. — The prohibition against putting any person twice in jeopardy of life or limb for the same offense applies only to twice subjecting an individual to criminal processes for the same offense against the same sovereign. There is no bar to the sovereign's imposing both civil and criminal penalties for the same act. Alexander v. State, 129 Ga. App. 395, 199 S.E.2d 918 (1973); Johnson v. State, 142 Ga. App. 124, 235 S.E.2d 550 (1977), aff'd, 240 Ga. 526, 242 S.E.2d 53, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 881, 99 S. Ct. 221, 58 L. Ed. 2d 194 (1978).

Revocation of business license. — Revocation of a business license to operate a health spa following the owner's plea of nolo contendere to a sexual offense was not double jeopardy. Moser v. Richmond County Bd.

of Comm'rs, 263 Ga. 63, 428 S.E.2d 71 (1993).

Suspension of a driver's license at an administrative hearing was not punishment, nor was the hearing a prosecution for the purposes of double jeopardy, thus, a subsequent criminal prosecution for driving under the influence was not barred. Nolen v. State, 218 Ga. App. 819, 463 S.E.2d 504 (1995), cert. denied, 518 U.S. 1018, 116 S. Ct. 2550, 135 L. Ed. 2d 1070 (1996); McDaniel v. State, 224 Ga. App. 5, 479 S.E.2d 779 (1996).

Payment of the fee required for reinstatement of a driver's license after it was suspended following an arrest for driving under the influence was not punishment and did not bar a subsequent prosecution for driving under the influence. Thompson v. State, 229 Ga. App. 526, 494 S.E.2d 306 (1997); Morgan v. State, 229 Ga. App. 861, 495 S.E.2d 138 (1998).

Ten-day suspension from school following defendant's arrest and indictment for armed robbery did not rise to the level of "punishment" for double jeopardy purposes. Clark v. State, 220 Ga. App. 251, 469 S.E.2d 250 (1996).

A civil forfeiture proceeding in a drug case was not a criminal prosecution for purposes of double jeopardy. Murphy v. State, 219 Ga. App. 474, 465 S.E.2d 497 (1995), aff'd, 267 Ga. 120, 475 S.E.2d 907 (1996).

A civil federal forfeiture action was neither punishment nor criminal for purposes of the double jeopardy clause. Battista v. State, 223 Ga. App. 369, 477 S.E.2d 665 (1996).

Criminal punishment and administrative punishment for same act. — Imposition of criminal punishment and administrative punishment for the same act does not constitute a violation of the double jeopardy prohibition. Horne v. Hopper, 238 Ga. 140, 231 S.E.2d 735 (1977).

A prisoner's convictions for certain criminal acts and prison administrative punishment for the same acts do not constitute double jeopardy. Minton v. State, 167 Ga. App. 114, 305 S.E.2d 812 (1983).

The constitutional prohibition against double jeopardy is not violated when a prisoner is subjected to executive department punishment for an act committed while a prison inmate and is then prosecuted and convicted in a court of law for having committed a crime even though the crime and the act for which administrative punishment is assessed are one and the same. Flowers v. State, 166 Ga. App. 740, 306 S.E.2d 16 (1983).

Pretrial detentions. — Where defendant's pretrial detentions were not to punish defendant for two murders or the result of prosecutorial misconduct, the United States Constitution's fifth amendment double jeopardy clause did not bar the state's prosecution for the murders and related crimes. Agee v. State, 276 Ga. 536, 579 S.E.2d 730 (2003).

Termination of a police officer for threatening and attempting to choke the victim did bar prosecution of the officer for the same offenses. Pennyman v. State, 222 Ga. App. 779, 476 S.E.2d 71 (1996).

Separate conspiracy trial considering quantity of drugs sold. — Where the Northern District Court considered the quantities of drugs which were the object of the prosecution in the Southern District in determining the Northern District sentence for a conspiracy conviction, there was no double jeopardy violation for criminal conduct relating to those quantities of drugs because Congress may punish separately each step leading to the consummation of a transaction. United States v. Eley, 968 F.2d 1143 (11th Cir. 1992).

Consideration of murder in federal sentencing not a bar to state prosecution. — Double jeopardy did not bar the state from prosecuting defendant for murder even though the federal district court had considered the murder in its sentencing of defendant for bank robbery. Nance v. State, 266 Ga. 816, 471 S.E.2d 216 (1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1043, 117 S. Ct. 615, 136 L. Ed. 2d 539 (1996).

Proceeding to revoke a probated sentence is not a criminal proceeding. Johnson v. State, 142 Ga. App. 124, 235 S.E.2d 550 (1977), aff'd, 240 Ga. 526, 242 S.E.2d 53, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 881, 99 S. Ct. 221, 58 L. Ed. 2d 194 (1978).

Discipline of a prisoner by prison authorities for violations of prison regulations and prosecution by civil authorities for the same acts does not violate the double jeopardy clause. Gilchrist v. United States, 427 F.2d 1132 (5th Cir. 1970).

When one is criminally convicted and sentenced for escape and is also subjected to administrative in-prison punishments for the same escape, constitutional double jeopardy protection is not violated. Middlebrook v. Allen, 234 Ga. 481, 216 S.E.2d 331 (1975).

6. Mistrial

State's right to mistrial. — Defendant's right to a fair trial is not paramount to the state's right to a fair trial; the trial court has the duty to ensure a fair trial to all parties in a case and has as much authority to grant a mistrial where injustice is caused to the state as where injustice is cause to the defendant. Sinkfield v. State, 217 Ga. App. 589, 458 S.E.2d 665 (1995).

Impaneled jury may not be discharged except for manifest necessity or ends of public justice. — Once the jury has been impaneled, the court may not discharge the jury from giving a verdict unless there is a case of manifest necessity for such an act, or the ends of public justice would otherwise be defeated. Haynes v. State, 245 Ga. 817, 268 S.E.2d 325 (1980).

Violation of court order did not provoke mistrial. — The requisite intent to provoke a mistrial, entitling the defendant to a dismissal on double jeopardy grounds, was absent where, in violating a court order to refrain from using the term "organized crime," the prosecutor referred to the government's witnesses only and there was no direct reference to the defendant, and where the defendant failed to object to the violation at the time it was made when the infraction could have been cured with proper instructions. United States v. Dante, 739 F.2d 547 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1036, 105 S. Ct. 512, 83 L. Ed. 2d 402 (1984).

Reprosecution permissible where jury cannot fairly try the issues. — Reprosecution is permissible where, before declaring a mistrial, the court justifiably concludes that it is impossible for the jury, in considering the case, to act with the independence and freedom requisite to a fair trial of the issues. United States v. Starling, 571 F.2d 934 (5th Cir. 1978).

Strictest scrutiny is appropriate when the basis for a mistrial is the unavailability of critical prosecution evidence, or when there is reason to believe that the prosecutor is using the superior resources of the state to harass or achieve a tactical advantage over the accused. Cobb v. State, 246 Ga. 565, 272 S.E.2d 297 (1980).

Double Jeopardy (Cont'd)6. Mistrial (Cont'd)

Termination of trial in defendant's favor before guilt or innocence determined. — When a criminal defendant obtains a termination of the trial in the defendant's favor before any determination of factual guilt or innocence, a new trial is not barred by the double jeopardy clause. State v. Williams, 246 Ga. 788, 272 S.E.2d 725 (1980).

As a general rule, the genuine inability of a jury to agree on a verdict provides manifest necessity for discharge and a mistrial due to a deadlocked jury does not bar re prosecution. United States v. Wright, 622 F.2d 792 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 961, 101 S. Ct. 376, 66 L. Ed. 2d 229 (1980).

When a deadlocked jury was dismissed, the effect of the court's action was a mistrial, and a subsequent declaration of mistrial based on improper closing argument was a nullity; thus, the state was not barred from a retrial of defendant. State v. Telenko, 225 Ga. App. 724, 484 S.E.2d 725 (1997).

Failure of a jury to agree on a verdict of either acquittal or conviction does not bar retrial. Cameron v. Caldwell, 232 Ga. 611, 208 S.E.2d 441 (1974); Hooks v. State, 138 Ga. App. 539, 226 S.E.2d 765 (1976); Kelly v. State, 145 Ga. App. 780, 245 S.E.2d 20 (1978); United States v. Starling, 571 F.2d 934 (5th Cir. 1978); Cherry v. Director, State Bd. of Cors., 613 F.2d 1262 (5th Cir. 1980), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 635 F.2d 414 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 840, 102 S. Ct. 150, 70 L. Ed. 2d 124 (1981).

Whether a trial for the same offense or one growing out of same act. — If the grant of a mistrial results from the inability of the jury to agree on a verdict that makes the discharge of the jury necessary and the completion of the trial impossible, a second trial for the same offense or for an offense growing out of the same acts is not barred and does not violate the guaranty against double jeopardy. Van Scoik v. State, 139 Ga. App. 293, 228 S.E.2d 229 (1976).

A second prosecution is not prohibited because of disqualification of a juror, mere irregularity of procedure, or tactical necessity in wartime. United States v. Starling, 571 F.2d 934 (5th Cir. 1978).

Third trial, held after two mistrials caused by jury disagreement, does not constitute double jeopardy. Orvis v. State, 237 Ga. 6, 226 S.E.2d 570 (1976).

Jury request for mistrial due to lack of evidence. — Because, after deliberating for only a few minutes, the jury sent a note to the trial judge asking if it could declare a mistrial due to lack of evidence, but because the foreman stated a belief that the jury would eventually reach a decision, there was no manifest necessity for declaring a mistrial, and retrial was barred by the double jeopardy clause. Cobb v. State, 246 Ga. 565, 272 S.E.2d 297 (1980).

Trial court can retry a defendant following mistrial without violating double jeopardy protections. Bell v. State, 249 Ga. 644, 292 S.E.2d 402 (1982).

Trial court properly denied the defendant's plea in bar based on double jeopardy under U.S. Const., amend. 5 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII, seeking to prevent a retrial of criminal charges against defendant after the motion for a mistrial under O.C.G.A. § 16-1-8(e)(1) was granted in the first trial upon the jury's advisement to the trial court judge that they were hopelessly deadlocked due to the refusal by two jurors to consider the direct evidence; the mistrial was properly declared and there was no improper conduct shown by the trial court or the state but rather, the defendant's counsel admitted that defendant hoped that another jury would be more sympathetic to the defendant upon a retrial, as the first jury was deadlocked 10-2 in favor of conviction. Jackson v. State, 282 Ga. App. 476, 638 S.E.2d 865 (2006).

Retrial of a criminal defendant after a mistrial caused by the inability of the jury to reach a verdict does not constitute double jeopardy where there is manifest necessity for declaring the mistrial. Glass v. State, 250 Ga. 736, 300 S.E.2d 812 (1983); Jackson v. State, 257 Ga. 484, 361 S.E.2d 156 (1987).

A retrial after a mistrial had been declared because of the jury's inability to reach an unanimous decision, it being hopelessly deadlocked after deliberating for two days (more time than the actual trial), sending four notes to the court explaining its situation, and being recharged twice, did not deprive the defendant of the defendant's right to be protected against double jeopardy. Walker v. Weldon, 744 F.2d 775 (11th Cir. 1984).

A trial terminated as a result of the jury's inability to reach a unanimous verdict. It is well known that retrial under these circumstances is not barred by the double jeopardy clause. Williams v. State, 258 Ga. 305, 369 S.E.2d 232, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 891, 109 S. Ct. 225, 102 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1988).

Mistrial during prosecution of multiple offenses. — Where the state seeks to prosecute a defendant for two offenses in a single prosecution, one of which is included in the other, and the defendant receives a mistrial on the greater offense, the remaining conviction of the lesser offense does not bar retrial of the greater offense. Taylor v. State, 238 Ga. App. 753, 520 S.E.2d 267 (1999).

Where a jury is hopelessly deadlocked, this constitutes manifest necessity for declaring a mistrial. Glass v. State, 250 Ga. 736, 300 S.E.2d 812 (1983); Hurston v. State, 206 Ga. App. 570, 426 S.E.2d 196 (1992).

Reprosecution generally not barred by mistrial sought or consented to by defendant. — The double jeopardy proscription of the federal and state Constitutions generally does not prevent reprosecution of a defendant where a mistrial occurs on the motion of, or with the consent of, the defendant. Studyent v. State, 153 Ga. App. 161, 264 S.E.2d 695 (1980).

Consent to mistrial. — Defendant was not prosecuted twice for the same offense where evidence introduced at habeas hearing did not contradict the court's recital that defendant consented to mistrial for lack of formal arraignment, and in fact defendant did not object to the mistrial, and either expressly or tacitly joined in co-defendant's motion for mistrial. McCormick v. Gearinger, 253 Ga. 531, 322 S.E.2d 716 (1984).

Where, after a jury was impaneled, defendant moved for severance and a mistrial, and the trial court granted the motion for severance and elected to go forward with the trial of the codefendant, but, instead of granting a mistrial, continued defendant's case, the grant of the continuance was equivalent to the grant of a mistrial, and defendant's plea of double jeopardy was properly rejected since defendant had sought and consented to the severance. Stone v. State, 218 Ga. App. 350, 461 S.E.2d 548 (1995).

Defendant did not carry defendant's burden of showing that the state goaded defendant into moving for a mistrial when the state failed to provide the defense with one of two statements that the victim provided to police regarding the charges brought against defendant for child molestation and statutory rape, and, thus, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's plea of former jeopardy under either the state or federal constitution after the trial court granted defendant's motion for a mistrial. Beach v. State, 260 Ga. App. 399, 579 S.E.2d 808 (2003).

Delay in reducing mistrial order to writing. — Where the first trial ended with the grant of defendant's motion for mistrial and the order declaring the mistrial was not reduced to writing and entered on the minutes of the court until after the second trial, and where the court's written order merely perfected the record in this regard and the delay in no way affected defendant's rights, no double jeopardy defense is established. Swafford v. State, 161 Ga. App. 139, 291 S.E.2d 3 (1982).

Erroneous ruling invoked by defendant. — Because the prosecution's failure to present to the jury sufficient evidence to support a conviction resulted from an erroneous ruling of the trial court, which ruling was invoked by the defendant, the defendant waived the right to obtain a judgment of acquittal due to evidentiary insufficiency. Consequently, a new trial was not barred by the double jeopardy clause. Hunter v. State, 257 Ga. 571, 361 S.E.2d 787 (1987).

Prosecutor allowed inadmissible matters into evidence through negligence, and did not intend to "goad" defendant into seeking a mistrial; thus, defendant's retrial on the same charges after a mistrial was declared was not barred by double jeopardy. Collis v. State, 252 Ga. App. 659, 556 S.E.2d 221 (2001).

Prosecutorial overreaching is gross negligence or intentional misconduct, causing aggravated circumstances to develop which seriously prejudice a defendant causing him to reasonably conclude that a continuation of the tainted proceeding would result in a conviction. United States v. Wright, 622 F.2d 792 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 961, 101 S. Ct. 376, 66 L. Ed. 2d 229 (1980).

Double Jeopardy (Cont'd)6. Mistrial (Cont'd)

Retrial barred where defendant forced to move for mistrial because of prosecutorial overreaching. — Reprosecution is barred by the double jeopardy clause when prosecutorial overreaching forces a defendant to the choice of giving up the substantial right that the defendant has to the trial before the present jury, or moving for a mistrial and giving the government a second chance before another jury with any additional advantage accrued by matter learned in the first trial. Studyvent v. State, 153 Ga. App. 161, 264 S.E.2d 695 (1980).

What constitutes "prosecutorial overreaching". — "Prosecutorial overreaching" occurs and bars retrials where bad faith conduct by judge or prosecutor threatens the harassment of an accused by successive prosecutions or declaration of a mistrial so as to afford the prosecution a more favorable opportunity to convict the defendant. Studyvent v. State, 153 Ga. App. 161, 264 S.E.2d 695 (1980).

To find prosecutorial overreaching, the government must have, through gross negligence or intentional misconduct, caused aggravated circumstances to develop which seriously prejudiced a defendant causing the defendant to reasonably conclude that a continuation of the tainted proceeding would result in a conviction. United States v. Bizzard, 493 F. Supp. 1084 (S.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd, 674 F.2d 1382 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 973, 103 S. Ct. 305, 74 L. Ed. 2d 286 (1982).

Where the trial court and the district attorney are totally at fault in the contempt finding which resulted in a mistrial it is unfair to allow the state to take advantage of such an abuse by again putting defendant in jeopardy. Chatham v. State, 247 Ga. 95, 274 S.E.2d 473 (1981).

Judicial or prosecutorial misconduct. — In determining if a retrial is barred by double jeopardy after a mistrial is granted because of prosecutorial or judicial misconduct, the issue is whether there has been a judicial or prosecutorial intent to harass the defendant and deprive the defendant of a fair decision by the jury before whom the defendant is being tried. Benford v. State, 164 Ga. App. 733, 298 S.E.2d 39 (1982).

In the context of a granted motion for mistrial, governmental misconduct will support a plea in bar based on double jeopardy if the prosecutor or trial judge intended to goad the defendant into moving for a mistrial. In the context of a reversal or grant of a motion for new trial, on the other hand, double jeopardy may bar a retrial where the prosecutor intended to prevent an acquittal that the prosecutor, or the trial judge accused of misconduct, believed at the time was likely to occur in the absence of the judge's misconduct. Paul v. State, 266 Ga. App. 126, 596 S.E.2d 670 (2004).

Prosecutorial misconduct will bar retrial pursuant to the double jeopardy clause only if there is an intent on the part of the prosecutor to subvert the protections afforded by the double jeopardy clause. Fugitt v. Lemacks, 833 F.2d 251 (11th Cir. 1987).

Trial court did not err in granting a plea of double jeopardy after a motion for mistrial had been granted, where, in granting the plea, the court orally ruled that the prosecutor had "a deliberate intent to goad [defense counsel] into a mistrial, ... and that it was prosecutorial misconduct." Beck v. State, 261 Ga. 826, 412 S.E.2d 530 (1992).

The applicable standard is the intent of the prosecutor in the misconduct, and such intent is a fact question for the court to resolve. Reed v. State, 222 Ga. App. 376, 474 S.E.2d 264 (1996).

Prosecutorial misconduct before and after trial. — Because all but one of the incidents of alleged prosecutorial misconduct occurred either before or after trial, because the one trial incident did not result in a mistrial, and because the evidence did not show that any alleged incident of harassment was intended to subvert the protections afforded by the double jeopardy clause, the defendant's claim that a retrial was barred had no merit. Fugitt v. State, 253 Ga. 311, 319 S.E.2d 829 (1984), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1070, 107 S. Ct. 963, 93 L. Ed. 2d 1011 (1987).

Prosecutor's failure to follow the instruction of the trial court to avoid questions concerning a witness' credibility did not bar retrial, where the prosecutor's mistakes were made in good faith and there was no intention to provoke mistrial. State v. Oliver, 188 Ga. App. 47, 372 S.E.2d 256 (1988).

Prosecutorial misconduct amounting to harassment or overreaching, even if sufficient to justify a grant of mistrial, is nevertheless insufficient to bar retrial absent intent on the part of the prosecutor to subvert the protections afforded by the double jeopardy clause. State v. Oliver, 188 Ga. App. 47, 372 S.E.2d 256 (1988).

Defendant not “goaded” into moving for mistrial. — District attorney’s improper quoting of prior court cases was not intended to “goad” defendant into moving for a mistrial and therefore did not bar the state from retrying the case after it had been remanded to the trial court for retrial on sentencing. Hardy v. State, 258 Ga. 523, 371 S.E.2d 849 (1988), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1040, 109 S. Ct. 1174, 103 L. Ed. 2d 237 (1989).

Where a mistrial was granted at the behest of the defendant, a retrial was not barred; the state had not intended to goad the defendant into moving for a mistrial by inadvertent testimony of its private investigator. Mobley v. State, 262 Ga. 808, 426 S.E.2d 150 (1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 870, 114 S. Ct. 198, 126 L. Ed. 2d 156 (1993); Weems v. State, 269 Ga. 577, 501 S.E.2d 806 (1998).

Repeated misconduct by defense counsel, resulting in the jury’s exposure to extensive assertions that were irrelevant, immaterial, highly prejudicial, and wholly lacking in evidentiary support, made it impossible for an impartial verdict to be reached; therefore, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in declaring a mistrial based on manifest necessity, and retrial of defendant was not barred. Jackson v. State, 226 Ga. App. 256, 485 S.E.2d 832 (1997).

Mistrial caused by defense’s improper question. — A mistrial was declared when defense counsel asked the defendant whether, in the context of the investigation of the present charges, the defendant had “ever taken a polygraph examination” and the defendant responded, “No, not for the State of Georgia.” In violation of the rules of evidence and contrary to the true state of facts, the question and answer intimated that, although the state had not undertaken to conduct its own test, there did exist a private polygraph test, the results of which were exculpatory. Therefore, the trial court did not abuse its sound discretion by granting the state’s motion for a mistrial and in denying the defendant’s plea of former jeopardy.

Phelps v. State, 187 Ga. App. 236, 369 S.E.2d 506 (1988).

In a trial of multiple counts where defense sought to impeach a complaining witness with character evidence of a specific act, a mistrial was proper only for the counts prejudiced by such improper evidence. Venson v. Georgia, 74 F.3d 1140 (11th Cir. 1996).

In a prosecution for malice murder, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in declaring a mistrial when defense counsel injected the prejudicial issue of the victim’s violent acts without having first made a prima facie showing of justification, and the state could try defendant again. Laster v. State, 268 Ga. 172, 486 S.E.2d 153 (1997).

No manifest necessity for mistrial where no evidentiary infraction. — In a prosecution for speeding and driving under the influence, the defendant did not engage in an intentional evidentiary infraction or knowingly violate any instruction of the trial court not to divulge an alcosensor reading in the defendant’s testimony sufficient to establish manifest necessity for a mistrial and avoid double jeopardy on retrial. Dotson v. State, 213 Ga. App. 7, 443 S.E.2d 650 (1994).

Error on part of prosecution in failing to produce document cannot be classified as prosecutorial misconduct barring retrial, unless the prosecutor’s action was intended to subvert the protections afforded by the double jeopardy clause. Williams v. State, 258 Ga. 305, 369 S.E.2d 232, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 891, 109 S. Ct. 225, 102 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1988).

Questions based on past sexual behavior. — In a rape prosecution, it was proper for the trial judge to declare a mistrial, on the judge’s own motion following the cross-examination of the alleged victim, which culminated in a question by defense counsel concerning the past sexual behavior of the witness, a violation of the shield law (O.C.G.A. § 24-2-3) that was “highly improper” and prejudicial. The declaration of mistrial did not bar a second trial of the defendant for the alleged offense. Abdi v. Georgia, 744 F.2d 1500 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1006, 105 S. Ct. 1871, 85 L. Ed. 2d 164 (1985).

Defendant’s introduction of evidence that was prohibited by the rape shield statute gave the court grounds to find manifest necessity for a mistrial; therefore, state and federal double jeopardy provisions did not bar reprosecution. Banks v. State, 230 Ga. App. 258, 495 S.E.2d 877 (1998).

Double Jeopardy (Cont'd)6. Mistrial (Cont'd)

New trial after former mistakenly ended in mistrial. — Trial court erred in denying a rape defendant's plea of double jeopardy after a mistrial had been granted on the mistaken ground that the defense line of questioning of the victim had violated the Rape Shield Law. George v. State, 257 Ga. 176, 356 S.E.2d 882 (1987).

Absent prosecutorial or judicial overreaching, defendant's motion for mistrial ordinarily removes bar to reprosecution. — Where circumstances develop not attributable to prosecutorial or judicial overreaching, a motion by the defendant for mistrial is ordinarily assumed to remove any barrier to reprosecution, even if the defendant's motion is necessitated by prosecutorial or judicial error. United States v. Romano, 482 F.2d 1183 (5th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1129, 94 S. Ct. 866, 38 L. Ed. 2d 753 (1974); Studyvent v. State, 153 Ga. App. 161, 264 S.E.2d 695 (1980); Haynes v. State, 245 Ga. 817, 268 S.E.2d 325 (1980); Cherry v. Director, State Bd. of Cors., 635 F.2d 414 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 840, 102 S. Ct. 150, 70 L. Ed. 2d 124 (1981).

Mistrial granted at behest of defendant. — Where a mistrial is granted at the behest of the defendant, a retrial is not barred by principles of double jeopardy unless the governmental conduct in question (from whomever derived) is intended to "goad" the defendant into moving for a mistrial. Ellerbee v. State, 215 Ga. App. 312, 450 S.E.2d 443 (1994).

Where a mistrial is granted at defendant's request, reprosecution is barred only if the mistrial resulted from grossly negligent or intentional misconduct by judge or prosecutor, conduct which was undertaken to harass the accused by successive prosecution or to gain the prosecution a better opportunity at conviction. United States v. Kennedy, 548 F.2d 608 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 865, 98 S. Ct. 199, 54 L. Ed. 2d 140 (1977); United States v. Luttrell, 609 F.2d 1190 (5th Cir. 1980); Chatham v. State, 247 Ga. 95, 274 S.E.2d 473 (1981).

Mere negligence on the part of the government is not sufficient to preclude a second trial. United States v. Luttrell, 609 F.2d 1190 (5th Cir. 1980).

Double jeopardy clause does protect a defendant against governmental actions intended to provoke mistrial requests and thereby to subject defendants to the substantial burdens imposed by multiple prosecutions. It bars retrials where bad faith conduct by judge or prosecutor threatens the harassment of an accused by successive prosecutions or declaration of a mistrial so as to afford the prosecution a more favorable opportunity to convict the defendant. United States v. Wright, 622 F.2d 792 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 961, 101 S. Ct. 376, 66 L. Ed. 2d 229 (1980); United States v. Bizzard, 493 F. Supp. 1084 (S.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd, 674 F.2d 1382 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 973, 103 S. Ct. 305, 74 L. Ed. 2d 286 (1982).

Defendant's refusal to agree to continuance deemed motion for mistrial. — If a defendant will not agree to a continuance of some reasonable and finite length, and a mistrial is declared, the defendant has essentially forced the mistrial, and the defendant's actions should be declared akin to a motion for a mistrial. Accordingly, further proceedings against the defendant are not barred by the double jeopardy clause. Haynes v. State, 245 Ga. 817, 268 S.E.2d 325 (1980).

Reprosecution after mistrial without accused's consent stringently limited. — The protections offered by the double jeopardy ban include a stringent limitation on the government's right to reprosecute after a mistrial is declared without the consent of the accused. United States v. Starling, 571 F.2d 934 (5th Cir. 1978).

When free and fair trial cannot be had. — When it appears that a free and fair trial cannot be had, the trial ought to be stopped, even over objection of the accused, and the Constitution will not prevent another and better trial. Sanford v. Robbins, 115 F.2d 435 (5th Cir. 1940), cert. denied, 312 U.S. 697, 61 S. Ct. 737, 85 L. Ed. 1132 (1941).

Trial court's finding of manifest necessity requiring a mistrial was proper, and double jeopardy did not bar a retrial, where, during a break in deliberations, a juror made a comment in the presence of other jurors about making money from defendant's family. Perez v. State, 266 Ga. App. 82, 596 S.E.2d 191, cert. denied, 543 U.S. 957, 125 S. Ct.

410, 160 L. Ed. 2d 319 (2004).

Judge's inability to disregard inadmissible evidence. — In a bench trial, the judge's inability to disregard evidence the judge ruled inadmissible constituted a manifest necessity for a mistrial and the defendant's double jeopardy rights would not be violated by a retrial to a jury. Bailey v. State, 219 Ga. App. 258, 465 S.E.2d 284 (1995).

If, for reasons deemed compelling by the trial judge, the ends of substantial justice cannot be attained without discontinuing the trial, a mistrial may be declared without the defendant's consent and even over the defendant's objections, and the defendant may be retried consistently with U.S. Const., amend. 5. United States v. Wayman, 510 F.2d 1020 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 846, 96 S. Ct. 84, 46 L. Ed. 2d 67 (1975).

Retrial not barred where defendant successfully attacks conviction for lack of sufficient evidence. — The jeopardy provision does not prohibit a second trial on the same charge where the defendant has been successful in the motion for a new trial in having the conviction set aside for want of sufficient evidence. Staggers v. State, 120 Ga. App. 875, 172 S.E.2d 462 (1969).

Retrial barred where prosecution unprepared and mistrial granted over defendant's objection. — If the prosecutor begins the case without sufficient evidence to convict and the court grants a mistrial over defendant's objection, the defendant's plea of former jeopardy should be sustained should the state attempt to call the case again. Haynes v. State, 245 Ga. 817, 268 S.E.2d 325 (1980).

Defendant's objection to mistrial must be timely. — Where defendant objects to declaration of mistrial, but court order states that the mistrial was granted upon agreement of counsel for the defendant and counsel for the state, defendant's remedy is to file a motion to correct it, before the judge who issued it, at the same term of court, and while the matter is still fresh in the judge's mind. Minter v. State, 122 Ga. App. 695, 178 S.E.2d 335 (1970).

Failure to consider less severe alternatives to mistrial. — While not determinative, the failure of a trial judge to consider adequately less severe alternatives to a mistrial shows an inadequate concern for the severe consequences of ordering a mistrial without the accused's consent. Cherry v. Director, State Bd. of Cors., 613 F.2d 1262 (5th Cir. 1980), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 635 F.2d 414 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 840, 102 S. Ct. 150, 70 L. Ed. 2d 124 (1981).

Unavailability of key corroborating witness. — Retrial after a mistrial was not barred by the double jeopardy prohibition, where there was "manifest necessity" for the declaration of a mistrial because of the unavailability of a key witness who could corroborate an accomplice's inculpatory testimony. Spencer v. State, 192 Ga. App. 822, 386 S.E.2d 705 (1989).

Retrial possible if jury deadlocked. — Because defendant was acquitted of a charge of malice murder and the jury was deadlocked as to other offenses before them, retrial on the lesser included unindicted offense of voluntary manslaughter was not barred, provided the jury did not know about the murder charge. State v. Archie, 230 Ga. App. 253, 495 S.E.2d 581 (1998).

Failure of solicitor to pay state bar dues. — Even if the solicitor failed to pay the solicitor's state bar dues, this fact did not show intentional misconduct or instigative intention on the solicitor's part, and, therefore, the double jeopardy clause did not bar the retrial of the defendant after the granting of a mistrial when it was discovered that the solicitor was not in good standing. Spears v. State, 234 Ga. App. 498, 506 S.E.2d 446 (1998).

Consent to mistrial. — Although defense counsel had an opportunity to raise an objection after the court announced its intention to excuse the jurors and before the jurors were returned to the courtroom, counsel failed to do so; therefore, the trial court was authorized to find that defendant, through counsel, impliedly consented to the grant of a mistrial and defendant's plea of double jeopardy made during trial was properly denied. Howell v. State, 266 Ga. App. 480, 597 S.E.2d 546 (2004).

Declaration of mistrial because of juror's false statements. — Where, after requesting and considering alternatives to aborting a trial, the trial judge in good faith declares a mistrial because false statements of a juror might prevent a fair trial, the trial judge has not abused sound judicial discretion. In such a case, the double jeopardy clause does not bar retrial of a state criminal defendant. Jones v. Anderson, 404 F. Supp. 182 (S.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 522 F.2d 181 (5th Cir. 1975).

Double Jeopardy (Cont'd)6. Mistrial (Cont'd)

Mistrial resulting from removal of a juror who misadvised the trial court as to the juror's qualifications upon voir dire, thereby depriving the jury of the statutory minimum number, constituted a mistrial as a result of "manifest necessity," therefore, retrial following the mistrial was not barred by a plea of double jeopardy. Bishop v. State, 179 Ga. App. 606, 347 S.E.2d 350 (1986).

Option of replacing juror does not eliminate grounds for declaring mistrial. — The option of selecting a replacement juror pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-12-167 does not eliminate manifest necessity or the need for the protection of the ends of public justice as a basis for the declaration of a mistrial at a defendant's first trial. Nor is the trial court required by the double jeopardy clause to utilize an available alternative so that failure to do so constitutes an abuse of discretion. Jones v. Anderson, 404 F. Supp. 182 (S.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 522 F.2d 181 (5th Cir. 1975).

Juror bias created a manifest necessity to declare a mistrial. Wilson v. State, 217 Ga. App. 544, 458 S.E.2d 486 (1995).

7. Effect of Appeal

Distinction between reversal for trial error and for insufficiency of the evidence. — Reversal for trial error, as distinguished from evidentiary insufficiency, does not constitute a decision to the effect that the government has failed to prove its case. It implies nothing with respect to the guilt or innocence of the defendant. It is a determination that a defendant has been convicted through a judicial process which is defective in some fundamental respect. Hall v. State, 244 Ga. 86, 259 S.E.2d 41 (1979).

Where a conviction is reversed for trial error, retrial does not violate the double jeopardy clause. Hall v. State, 244 Ga. 86, 259 S.E.2d 41 (1979); United States v. Bizzard, 615 F.2d 1080 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 973, 103 S. Ct. 305, 74 L. Ed. 2d 286 (1982).

Retrial barred by finding of not guilty or that evidence did not support verdict. — A defendant can be tried a second time for an offense when the defendant's prior conviction for that same offense had been set aside on appeal unless the accused was adjudged not guilty or there was a finding that the evidence did not support the verdict. Keener v. State, 238 Ga. 7, 230 S.E.2d 846 (1976), cert. denied, 433 U.S. 911, 97 S. Ct. 2980, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1096 (1977); Holloway v. McElroy, 632 F.2d 605 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 1028, 101 S. Ct. 3019, 69 L. Ed. 2d 398 (1981); State v. Williams, 246 Ga. 788, 272 S.E.2d 725 (1980).

To obtain double jeopardy protection, challenge must be reviewable before second trial. — If a criminal defendant is to avoid exposure to double jeopardy and thereby enjoy the full protection of the clause, the defendant's double jeopardy challenge to an indictment must be reviewable before that subsequent exposure occurs. United States v. Dunbar, 591 F.2d 1190 (5th Cir. 1979), aff'd, 611 F.2d 985 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 926, 100 S. Ct. 3022, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1120 (1980).

Because the double jeopardy clause is a guarantee against being twice put to trial for the same offense, the rights conferred thereunder would be significantly undermined if appellate review of double jeopardy claims were postponed until after conviction and sentence. United States v. Dunbar, 611 F.2d 985 (5th Cir.), aff'd, 614 F.2d 39 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 926, 100 S. Ct. 3022, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1120 (1980).

Filing notice of appeal prevents retrial pending review. — Timely filing of a notice of appeal strips the trial court of its jurisdiction to try the case on the merits pending the outcome of the prior jeopardy appeal. United States v. Dunbar, 591 F.2d 1190 (5th Cir. 1979), aff'd, 611 F.2d 985 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 926, 100 S. Ct. 3022, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1120 (1980).

No bar to reprosecution where new trial sought and obtained. — U.S. Const., amend. 5's double jeopardy provision does not apply to a subsequent prosecution after a defendant has sought and obtained a new trial. Staggers v. Stynchcombe, 319 F. Supp. 1305 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 436 F.2d 585 (5th Cir. 1971).

No bar to reprosecution where defendant succeeds in having conviction set aside. — The constitutional guarantee against double jeopardy imposes no limitations whatever upon the power to retry a defendant who has succeeded in getting the first conviction set aside. Staggers v. Stynchcombe, 319 F. Supp. 1305 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 436 F.2d 585 (5th Cir. 1971).

Retrial not barred by successful appeal. — Because the defendant was tried and convicted and was granted a new trial on appeal, the grant of the new trial is not an acquittal of the defendant, and to try the defendant again does not violate the double jeopardy provision of the United States Constitution. Staggers v. State, 225 Ga. 581, 170 S.E.2d 430 (1969); Hardwick v. Doolittle, 558 F.2d 292 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1049, 98 S. Ct. 897, 54 L. Ed. 2d 801 (1978); United States v. Starling, 571 F.2d 934 (5th Cir. 1978); Cherry v. Director, State Bd. of Cors., 613 F.2d 1262 (5th Cir. 1980), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 635 F.2d 414 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 840, 102 S. Ct. 150, 70 L. Ed. 2d 124 (1981).

Adjudication of delinquency was reversed as the state presented no evidence of venue and the juvenile court did not take judicial notice that the location of an aggravated assault described at a hearing was in Sumter County; the county in which the offense was committed was not established and the evidence was insufficient to support the conviction, but retrial was not barred by the double jeopardy clause so long as venue was properly established at retrial. In the Interest of T.W., 280 Ga. App. 693, 634 S.E.2d 854 (2006).

Retrial not barred by successful collateral attack. — When a conviction is overturned on collateral attack, the double jeopardy clause does not bar retrial for the charges of which the successful appellant or petitioner had been found guilty. Hardwick v. Doolittle, 558 F.2d 292 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1049, 98 S. Ct. 897, 54 L. Ed. 2d 801 (1978).

Reversal of sentence on appeal and new trial as to punishment is not double jeopardy. — If the jury, at the first trial, finds defendant guilty of the offense of murder, with such conviction for murder being affirmed on appeal, but with the sentence for that offense reversed and a new trial ordered as to punishment, the defendant is not twice put in jeopardy of being convicted for the same offense, since the conviction for murder is affirmed on appeal. Defendant's punishment was the only thing that remained to be decided by the jury upon the defendant's retrial. Redd v. State, 242 Ga. 876, 252 S.E.2d 383, cert. denied, 442 U.S. 934, 99 S. Ct. 2870, 61 L. Ed. 2d 304 (1979).

Government is barred from appealing an acquittal. — U.S. Const., amend. 5's double jeopardy prohibition bars the government from appealing an acquittal in a criminal prosecution. Price v. Georgia, 398 U.S. 323, 90 S. Ct. 1757, 26 L. Ed. 2d 300 (1970).

But can appeal a judgment of acquittal entered after a verdict of guilt. United States v. Clemones, 577 F.2d 1247 (5th Cir. 1978), modified, 582 F.2d 1373 (5th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 927, 100 S. Ct. 1313, 63 L. Ed. 2d 759 (1980).

Review of court of appeals decision in favor of defendant in criminal case. — The Supreme Court has jurisdiction to review by certiorari any decision by the court of appeals in the defendant's favor in a criminal case, and a defendant's constitutional right against double jeopardy is not implicated when the state seeks discretionary review of an adverse decision by the court of appeals in a criminal case. State v. Tyson, 273 Ga. 690, 544 S.E.2d 444 (2001).

Failure to assert claim on interlocutory appeal. — The double jeopardy claim is not lost for failure to assert it on an interlocutory appeal. United States v. Bizzard, 674 F.2d 1382 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 973, 103 S. Ct. 305, 74 L. Ed. 2d 286 (1982).

Where a double jeopardy claim is found by the district court to be frivolous, the filing of a notice of appeal divests the district court of jurisdiction to try the case. United States v. Bizzard, 674 F.2d 1382 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 973, 103 S. Ct. 305, 74 L. Ed. 2d 286 (1982).

Waiver of right to appeal. — A defendant is entitled to appellate review of a double jeopardy claim prior to trial, but such right to appeal before trial can be waived. United States v. Bizzard, 674 F.2d 1382 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 973, 103 S. Ct. 305, 74 L. Ed. 2d 286 (1982).

Where a defendant notices an appeal of a double jeopardy claim, suspends the trial, then dismisses the appeal, the right to appeal before trial is waived. United States v. Bizzard, 674 F.2d 1382 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 973, 103 S. Ct. 305, 74 L. Ed. 2d 286 (1982).

Double Jeopardy (Cont'd)
7. Effect of Appeal (Cont'd)

Reversal for insufficiency of evidence, but not for error, bars retrial. — Once a reviewing court reverses a conviction solely for insufficiency of the evidence to sustain the verdict of guilty, double jeopardy bars retrial; however, where a defendant obtains a reversal based upon “trial error,” double jeopardy does not bar retrial. Osborne v. State, 166 Ga. App. 439, 304 S.E.2d 416 (1983).

Grant of new trial based on insufficiency of evidence. — Where defendant’s motion for new trial was granted on the basis of insufficiency of evidence, the trial court erred in denying defendant’s plea in bar as to the defendant’s further prosecution. Priest v. State, 265 Ga. 399, 456 S.E.2d 503 (1995).

Retrial not barred where reversal for erroneous admission of evidence. — Where the testimony of a lab technician was not inadmissible because it was incompetent, but because the defense had not been furnished a copy of the laboratory report as required by former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211, it was not excluded automatically on retrial. Thus, where the original conviction was reversed due to the trial error in the admission of evidence, rather than insufficiency of the evidence, a retrial was not barred by the double jeopardy provisions of the Georgia and United States Constitutions. Osborne v. State, 166 Ga. App. 439, 304 S.E.2d 416 (1983).

Retrial barred by successful appeal including finding that evidence did not authorize verdict. — The reversal of the defendants’ convictions for felony murder based upon armed robbery due to insufficient evidence not only raised a procedural double jeopardy bar for that particular crime but also raised a procedural double jeopardy bar for the lesser-included offense of criminal attempt to commit armed robbery. Prater v. State, 273 Ga. 477, 541 S.E.2d 351 (2001).

Retrial not barred by judicial or prosecutorial misconduct at initial trial. — Even if misconduct of the trial court and prosecutor required the defendant to represent self at the initial trial without benefit of counsel, a retrial was not barred since there was no evidence that retrial was an intended consequence of the actions of the court and prosecutor. Keith v. State, 222 Ga. App. 360, 474 S.E.2d 256 (1996).

8. Resentencing

Neither double jeopardy nor equal protection provisions bar more severe sentence upon reconviction. — The guarantee against double jeopardy does not restrict the length of sentence which may be imposed upon reconviction, and the imposition of a more severe sentence upon retrial does not violate the equal protection clause of the U.S. Const., amend. 14. Chaffin v. State, 227 Ga. 327, 180 S.E.2d 741 (1971); Rozier v. State, 126 Ga. App. 336, 190 S.E.2d 627 (1972); Stuckey v. Stynchcombe, 614 F.2d 75 (5th Cir. 1980).

Sentence modifications. — Double jeopardy concerns are not implicated in sentence modifications as long as the overall period of imprisonment is reduced. United States v. Jackson, 923 F.2d 1494 (11th Cir. 1991).

Juvenile defendant’s voluntary manslaughter sentence was vacated, and resentencing was ordered, when the trial court erred by increasing the same after defendant had already begun serving it, because the original sentence was final at the time it was imposed, and defendant had no reason to believe otherwise; hence, the trial court’s increased sentence constituted double jeopardy and could not stand. Williams v. State, 273 Ga. App. 42, 614 S.E.2d 146 (2005).

Imposition of more severe penalty following successful appeal. — System that allows the imposition of a more severe penalty following a successful appeal is not per se constitutionally infirm. The focus is on the potential for vindictiveness to determine whether a particular procedure violates due process. Dan J. Sheehan Co. v. Occupational Safety & Health Review Comm’n, 520 F.2d 1036 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 424 U.S. 965, 96 S. Ct. 1458, 47 L. Ed. 2d 731 (1976).

Vindictiveness against a defendant for successfully attacking the defendant’s first conviction must play no part in resentencing after retrial. Chaffin v. Stynchcombe, 412 U.S. 17, 93 S. Ct. 1977, 36 L. Ed. 2d 714 (1973), see 23 Emory L.J. 879, United States v. McDuffie, 542 F.2d 236 (5th Cir. 1976); Hardwick v. Doolittle, 558 F.2d 292 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1049, 98 S. Ct. 897, 54 L. Ed. 2d 801 (1978); Thompson v.

State, 154 Ga. App. 704, 269 S.E.2d 474 (1980).

Rendition of a higher sentence by a jury upon retrial does not violate the double jeopardy clause nor the due process clause so long as the jury is not informed of the prior sentence and the second sentence is not otherwise shown to be a product of vindictiveness. Chaffin v. Stynchcombe, 412 U.S. 17, 93 S. Ct. 1977, 36 L. Ed. 2d 714 (1973), for comment, see 23 Emory L. J. 879(1974).

Defendant must show that jury acted in spirit of vindictiveness. — An increase in a defendant's sentence by a jury, on retrial of the case, is not unconstitutional unless the defendant can demonstrate that the increase was prompted by a spirit of vindictiveness, since the jury ordinarily will not know of the previous trial or sentence. Chaffin v. Stynchcombe, 455 F.2d 640 (5th Cir. 1972), aff'd, 412 U.S. 17, 93 S. Ct. 1977, 36 L. Ed. 2d 714 (1973), for comment, see 23 Emory L. J. 879 (1974).

Judge must affirmatively state reasons for more severe sentence upon retrial. — To ensure the absence of vindictiveness and to assure defendants that they will not be penalized for asserting their rights on appeal, whenever a judge imposes a more severe sentence upon a defendant after a new trial, the reasons for so doing must affirmatively appear. Chaffin v. Stynchcombe, 412 U.S. 17, 93 S. Ct. 1977, 36 L. Ed. 2d 714 (1973); United States v. McDuffie, 542 F.2d 236 (5th Cir. 1976); Hardwick v. Doolittle, 558 F.2d 292 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1049, 98 S. Ct. 897, 54 L. Ed. 2d 801 (1978); Thompson v. State, 154 Ga. App. 704, 269 S.E.2d 474 (1980).

Reasons given for more severe sentence should in fact support the imposition of the harsher penalty. Thompson v. State, 154 Ga. App. 704, 269 S.E.2d 474 (1980).

More severe sentence must be based upon objective information concerning identifiable conduct of the defendant occurring after the original sentencing proceeding. United States v. McDuffie, 542 F.2d 236 (5th Cir. 1976); Hardwick v. Doolittle, 558 F.2d 292 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1049, 98 S. Ct. 897, 54 L. Ed. 2d 801 (1978).

Factual data upon which the increased sentence is based must be made part of the record, so that the constitutional legitimacy of the increased sentence may be fully reviewed on appeal. United States v. McDuffie, 542 F.2d 236 (5th Cir. 1976).

Submitting an additional aggravating circumstance to the jury for its consideration at a resentencing trial does not violate double jeopardy protection. Davis v. State, 242 Ga. 901, 252 S.E.2d 443 (1979), vacated in part on other grounds, 446 U.S. 961, 100 S. Ct. 2934, 64 L. Ed. 2d 819 (1980).

Resentencing to correct an illegal sentence is not double jeopardy, even if the prisoner has already served part of the prisoner's term. Stuckey v. Stynchcombe, 614 F.2d 75 (5th Cir. 1980).

Where the original sentence was invalid, vacation of that sentence and imposition of another sentence did not constitute double jeopardy. Crews v. State, 170 Ga. App. 104, 316 S.E.2d 549 (1984).

Prisoner entitled to credit for time served. — The guarantee against double jeopardy is violated when punishment already exacted for an offense is not fully credited in imposing a new sentence after retrial for the same offense. Chaffin v. State, 227 Ga. 327, 180 S.E.2d 741 (1971).

Court may not reinstate original, vacated sentence where lesser punishment received upon resentencing. — Where a defendant who was convicted for murder and sentenced to life imprisonment is granted a new trial and subsequently pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter and is sentenced to ten years imprisonment, the trial court is without authority to vacate the motion for new trial and ten year sentence and reinstate the sentence of life imprisonment. Brown v. Moody, 243 Ga. 473, 254 S.E.2d 853 (1979).

The imposition of a new sentence to be served consecutively to a sentence on a prior conviction, in place of a vacated sentence that was to be served concurrently with the sentence on that prior conviction, may constitute an impermissible harsher punishment. Thomas v. State, 150 Ga. App. 341, 258 S.E.2d 28 (1979).

Different aggravating circumstance to support death sentence. — Where a first death sentence is vacated, the double jeopardy clause does not prevent the state from relying on an aggravating circumstance to support a death sentence at a second sentencing hearing not relied on at the first such hearing. Davis v. Kemp, 829 F.2d 1522 (11th Cir.

Double Jeopardy (Cont'd)8. Resentencing (Cont'd)

1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 929, 108 S. Ct. 1099, 99 L. Ed. 2d 262 (1988).

Death penalty may be sought on retrial. — A reversal of a conviction in which the death penalty was imposed does not preclude imposing the death penalty upon a retrial unless the sentencer or reviewing court has found that the evidence is insufficient to support the death penalty. Crawford v. State, 256 Ga. 57, 344 S.E.2d 215, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 989, 107 S. Ct. 583, 93 L. Ed. 2d 585 (1986).

State was not prohibited from seeking anew the death penalty after reversal of a murder conviction, where, although the jury had improperly specified "kidnapping" as the aggravating circumstance in imposing the death penalty, there had been no finding that the evidence was insufficient to support the death penalty. Crawford v. State, 256 Ga. 57, 344 S.E.2d 215, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 989, 107 S. Ct. 583, 93 L. Ed. 2d 585 (1986).

Death penalty barred upon retrial after jury imposed life sentence. — If convicting jury in a murder trial sentences the defendant to life imprisonment, this constitutes an acquittal of the charge that the evidence supports a finding of a statutory aggravating circumstance, and in any retrial the double-jeopardy clause prohibits the defendant's being given the death sentence. Hill v. State, 250 Ga. 821, 301 S.E.2d 269 (1983).

Initial judgment that evidence insufficient to support death sentence bars imposing death penalty on retrial. — The federal district court's initial judgment holding that there was insufficient evidence to support a death sentence, i.e., insufficient evidence to prove the alleged statutory aggravating factors beyond a reasonable doubt, as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(c), which decision was left undisturbed by the federal appellate court, which reversed the district's court's denial of the writ of habeas corpus with respect to the guilt phase of the trial, barred the state under the double jeopardy clause from attempting to impose the death penalty on the defendant in the defendant's retrial. Young v. Kemp, 760 F.2d 1097 (11th Cir. 1985), cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1123, 106 S. Ct. 1991, 90 L. Ed. 2d 672 (1986).

Only one aggravating factor was presented to and considered by the jury which imposed the death sentence in the defendant's first trial for murder. Since the ground failed, on appeal, for constitutional insufficiency of the evidence, the state could not, should it choose to try the defendant again, seek to reimpose the death penalty. Godfrey v. Francis, 613 F. Supp. 747 (N.D. Ga. 1985), aff'd, 836 F.2d 1557 (11th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 487 U.S. 1264, 109 S. Ct. 27, 101 L. Ed. 2d 977 (1988).

Overturning death sentence on legal grounds. — If a defendant overturns a death sentence on legal grounds, the death penalty may be sought on resentencing, and the state may offer proof of statutory aggravating circumstances not offered at the first trial. Zant v. Redd, 249 Ga. 211, 290 S.E.2d 36 (1982), cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1213, 103 S. Ct. 3552, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1398 (1983).

If a defendant overturns a death sentence on technical grounds, the sentence is nullified and the state and the defense start anew. Consequently, on resentencing, the state may again seek the death penalty and may offer any evidence on aggravating circumstances in support thereof. Likewise, the defendant is entitled to bring the jury any mitigating circumstances available to him, including those not known or utilized at the first sentencing trial. Zant v. Redd, 249 Ga. 211, 290 S.E.2d 36 (1982), cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1213, 103 S. Ct. 3552, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1398 (1983).

Rule that state cannot seek death penalty on resentencing after original sentencing jury has imposed a life sentence does not apply where jury has imposed death penalty and death penalty is vacated on legal grounds as opposed to grounds that the evidence is insufficient to support the verdict. Patrick v. State, 249 Ga. 708, 293 S.E.2d 329, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1089, 103 S. Ct. 575, 74 L. Ed. 2d 936 (1982).

Reimposition of death sentence based on another aggravating circumstance. — The double jeopardy clause was not violated at the defendant's resentencing trial because the judge permitted the state to introduce evidence pertaining to the defendant's alleged rape of the victim, where the jury in the first sentencing trial returned a death sentence upon a finding of "torture." The first jury may have taken the alleged rape into account, as sexual abuse constitutes "torture" under Georgia law for the purpose of a death sentence aggravating circumstance. Green v. Zant, 738 F.2d 1529 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1098, 105 S. Ct. 607, 83 L. Ed. 2d 716 (1984).

Amending of orally pronounced sentence permitted if not vindictive. — Court is authorized to amend its oral pronouncement to change sentence from 12 months on probation to 12 months in jail, where there is no suggestion of vindictiveness against defendant for having exercised any legal right, but rather it is only trial court's effort to make punishment fit crime of which jury had found defendant to be guilty. Curry v. State, 248 Ga. 183, 281 S.E.2d 604 (1981).

Although an oral sentence is not a binding judgment of the court, once a person has entered upon the execution of the sentence, the court is without power to change it by increasing the punishment. However, when there is an error or irregularity in failing to inform the defendant of conditions under which the sentence to confinement was imposed, the court may correct the error by recalling the defendant and sentencing the defendant as provided by law. Henderson v. State, 162 Ga. App. 320, 292 S.E.2d 77 (1982).

Where the record shows, without dispute, that the amended sentence is identical to the intended original sentence and the amended sentence is corrected to the oral pronouncement of the trial court and to the defendant's original understanding of the sentence, this is merely a correction to make the sentence speak the truth. Henderson v. State, 162 Ga. App. 320, 292 S.E.2d 77 (1982).

Once a person has entered upon the execution of the person's sentence, the court is without power to change it by increasing the punishment. Brown v. Moody, 243 Ga. 473, 254 S.E.2d 853 (1979); Hudson v. State, 248 Ga. 397, 283 S.E.2d 271 (1981).

Sentence which has been reduced to writing and signed by judge may not be increased after defendant has begun to serve that sentence. Curry v. State, 248 Ga. 183, 281 S.E.2d 604 (1981).

Unless a statute explicitly provides for sentence modification, or the defendant knowingly engages in deception, a sentence may not be altered in a manner prejudicial to the defendant after the defendant has started serving the sentence. United States v. Jones, 722 F.2d 632 (11th Cir. 1983).

Oral sentence may not be increased after execution commences. — Although it is true that an oral sentence is not a binding judgment of the court, the law is also clear that once a person has entered upon the execution of the sentence, the court is without power to change it by increasing the punishment. This is considered a violation of the prohibition under U.S. Const., amend. 5 against double punishment or jeopardy. Inman v. State, 124 Ga. App. 190, 183 S.E.2d 413 (1971); Hinton v. State, 127 Ga. App. 853, 195 S.E.2d 472 (1973); Jones v. State, 155 Ga. App. 382, 271 S.E.2d 30 (1980); Harp v. State, 228 Ga. App. 473, 491 S.E.2d 923 (1997).

Oral declaration as to what sentence shall be is not the sentence of the court; the sentence signed by the judge is. However, oral declaration of sentence may not be increased after defendant has begun to serve it. Curry v. State, 248 Ga. 183, 281 S.E.2d 604 (1981).

Where defendant is jailed over weekend pursuant to oral sentence, increase in sentence barred. — Where a defendant is in fact incarcerated immediately upon oral announcement of misdemeanor sentence on a Friday and is held in jail over the weekend, the court is without power to increase the sentence the following Monday. Jones v. State, 155 Ga. App. 382, 271 S.E.2d 30 (1980).

Self-Incrimination

1. In General

Self-incrimination clause creates zone of privacy. — This amendment, in its self-incrimination clause, enables the citizen to create a zone of privacy that the government may not force the citizen to surrender to the citizen's detriment. Smith v. Price, 446 F. Supp. 828 (M.D. Ga. 1977), rev'd on other grounds, 616 F.2d 1371 (5th Cir. 1980).

Privilege applies to interrogations. — The constitutional privileges against self-incrimination are applicable to post-arrest, pretrial police interrogation. Howard v. State, 237 Ga. 471, 228 S.E.2d 860 (1976); Clark v. State, 237 Ga. 901, 230 S.E.2d 277 (1976).

Applicability of the privilege to the trial itself. Howard v. State, 237 Ga. 471, 228 S.E.2d 860 (1976).

Self-Incrimination (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Protections of U.S. Const., amend. 5 apply fully to state proceedings through U.S. Const., amend. 14. Tennessee, Inc. v. Berger, 144 Ga. App. 45, 240 S.E.2d 586 (1977).

When fifth amendment protections may be invoked. — Protections of U.S. Const., amend. 5 may be invoked in civil as well as criminal actions. Tennessee, Inc. v. Berger, 144 Ga. App. 45, 240 S.E.2d 586 (1977).

The insured's danger of incrimination was sufficient to support the insured's refusal to answer the insured's liability insurer's questions about the insured's actions giving rise to the claim against the insured, because those actions had led to criminal convictions, and a possibility existed that the insured's pending motion for a new trial in the criminal case could have been granted. Anderson v. Southern Guar. Ins. Co., 235 Ga. App. 306, 508 S.E.2d 726 (1998).

In defendant's trial for forgery and racketeering for selling fake badges for a golf tournament to a ticket agency, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's motion for mistrial when the state attempted to question defendant's spouse after the spouse invoked the fifth amendment while on the witness stand because, despite defendant's argument that defendant's spouse's use of the fifth amendment could have been interpreted as evidence against the defendant and thus violated defendant's own right against self incrimination, the spouse's use of the fifth amendment related to the spouse's own concerns about self incrimination, not to defendant's, and the court instructed defendant that defendant could request a charge on the scope of the fifth amendment right against self incrimination but the record did not indicate that defendant requested such a charge. Davis v. State, 264 Ga. App. 128, 589 S.E.2d 700 (2003).

Privilege against self-incrimination cannot be asserted in advance of the questions actually propounded in the examination or hearing. Spivey v. State, 200 Ga. App. 284, 407 S.E.2d 425, cert. denied, 200 Ga. App. 897, 407 S.E.2d 425 (1991).

Privilege against self-incrimination may not be overridden by the right of confrontation under U.S. Const., amend. 6. United States v. Brown, 634 F.2d 819 (5th Cir. 1981).

Right to resist inquiry not as extensive under first amendment. — Undeniably, U.S. Const., amend. 1, in some circumstances protects an individual from being compelled to disclose the individual's associational relationships. However, the protections of U.S. Const., amend. 1, unlike a proper claim of the privilege against self-incrimination under U.S. Const., amend. 5, do not afford a witness the right to resist inquiry in all circumstances. Braden v. United States, 272 F.2d 653 (5th Cir. 1959), aff'd, 365 U.S. 431, 81 S. Ct. 584, 5 L. Ed. 2d 653 (1961).

State courts and federal constitutional right against self-incrimination. — State courts do not have the power to expand the federal constitutional right against self-incrimination beyond the limits given it by federal authorities. Page v. Page, 235 Ga. 131, 218 S.E.2d 859 (1975).

Amendment applies to all evidence, oral or real, not just testimony. — While the language of U.S. Const., amend. 5 has long been construed to be limited to testimony, the language of Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVI) has been construed to limit the state from forcing the individual to present evidence, oral or real. Johnson v. State, 156 Ga. App. 496, 274 S.E.2d 837 (1980).

Constitutional right against self-incrimination is incorporated in O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20. Harris v. State, 237 Ga. 718, 230 S.E.2d 1 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 933, 97 S. Ct. 2642, 53 L. Ed. 2d 251 (1977), sentence vacated, Eppinger v. State, 198 Ga. App. 889, 403 S.E.2d 829 (1991), cert. denied, 198 Ga. App. 897, 403 S.E.2d 829 (1991).

O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20 is governed by the same standards as its constitutional counterpart, U.S. Const., amend. 5. Jordan v. State, 239 Ga. 526, 238 S.E.2d 69 (1977).

Where privilege expressly predicated on U.S. Const., amend. 5, state constitutional and statutory provisions immaterial. — Where refusal to answer questions is expressly and exclusively predicated on the self-incrimination clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5, the parallel Georgia constitutional and statutory provisions, Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVI) and O.C.G.A. § 24-9-27, and interpretations of them, are not material. Master v. Savannah Sur.

Assoc., 148 Ga. App. 678, 252 S.E.2d 186 (1979).

Essential predicate for a claim under U.S. Const., amend. 5 is a finding that an accused has been compelled to incriminate oneself. McAllister v. Brown, 555 F.2d 1277 (5th Cir. 1977).

Determination as to whether statement would be incriminatory. — The protection of U.S. Const., amend. 5 and O.C.G.A. § 24-9-27 can only be invoked when there is a substantial and real danger of incrimination. The mere say-so of the witness does not establish this. Defendant must also show that the defendant has reasonable cause to apprehend danger of incrimination from the answer, and the court must first determine whether there is a proper basis for invoking the privilege. Prince & Paul v. Don Mitchell's WLAQ, Inc., 127 Ga. App. 502, 194 S.E.2d 269 (1972).

Extensive questioning concerning financial affairs as incrimination. — Extensive questioning concerning financial affairs might tend to incriminate a person as a matter of law. In the particular situation of financial affairs, only the defendant or witness can weigh the effect. Busby v. Citizens Bank, 131 Ga. App. 738, 206 S.E.2d 640 (1974).

It is not error to permit the defendant to determine whether answers would incriminate the defendant. — If a court can not say that answers to questions concerning a defendant's financial resources and dealings might not tend to incriminate the defendant in any matter, under either state or federal law, a trial judge does not err in allowing the defendant to determine whether answers to the interrogatories might tend to incriminate the defendant. Mallin v. Mallin, 227 Ga. 833, 183 S.E.2d 377 (1971).

Person is not entitled to Miranda warnings as a matter of right, even though that person is a suspect, unless that person had been taken into custody or has been deprived of freedom of action in another significant way. Although the focus of the investigation may be on the defendant, the defendant must also be in a custodial situation for Miranda to apply. Ford v. State, 205 Ga. App. 12, 421 S.E.2d 294 (1992).

Where the accused was neither in custody nor so restrained as to equate to a formal arrest, any statements made to the investigating officer were made under noncustodial circumstances and Miranda warnings were not required. Tolliver v. State, 273 Ga. 785, 546 S.E.2d 525 (2001).

Miranda warnings not required if movement restrained by defendant's injury not police. — Defendant was not in "custody" for Miranda purposes when questioned by police because although defendant's movement was restrained, it was because of defendant's own injury and not by any police conduct. Meadows v. State, 264 Ga. App. 160, 590 S.E.2d 173 (2003).

Assertion of privilege with particular questions protected. — Defendant in SEC violation case had repeatedly invoked the defendant's fifth amendment privilege against self-incrimination, but not in a blanket manner, in pre-indictment discovery requests. Although a defendant may not assert the privilege on matters which would not tend to incriminate defendant, it was likely that any testimony or response sought in investigating allegations of civil allegations of fraud would provide or would lead to providing relevant incriminating information for a criminal securities fraud case; furthermore, the act of producing documents whose contents might not be privileged would likely be sufficiently testimonial and incriminating in nature to trigger the fifth amendment privilege. Therefore, the defendant's response to particular questions by invoking the privilege was protected. SEC v. Zimmerman, 854 F. Supp. 896 (N.D. Ga. 1993).

Privilege need not be expressly invoked where plain from context. — If it is plain from the context of the questioning in general that the plaintiff is invoking the privilege under U.S. Const., amend. 5 against self incrimination it is not necessary to invoke the privilege in express terms. Temple v. Temple, 228 Ga. 73, 184 S.E.2d 183 (1971).

Assertion of privilege must be clear. — Law enforcement officers must immediately cease questioning a defendant who has clearly asserted a right to have counsel present during custodial interrogation; but if the defendant makes a reference to an attorney that is ambiguous or equivocal in that a reasonable officer in light of the circumstances would have understood only that the suspect might be invoking the right to counsel, cessation of the questioning is not required. Since a reasonable officer would not necessarily have understood defendant's reference to an attorney to be a clear request for counsel, the officer was not required to cease the questioning. Fitz v. State, 275 Ga. 349, 566 S.E.2d 668 (2002).

Self-Incrimination (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Exclusion is remedy for violation of U.S. Const., amend. 5. — Under Miranda, a criminal defendant's remedy for a violation of the defendant's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 5 is the exclusion from trial of any evidence obtained from the defendant during the defendant's illegal detention. Sheffield v. State, 235 Ga. 507, 220 S.E.2d 265 (1975).

Effect of civil action while criminal charges as to same conduct pending. — Being forced to go to trial in a civil case while criminal charges arising out of the same conduct are pending does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 5 by forcing the defendant to choose between preserving the defendant's privilege against self-incrimination and losing the civil action. United States v. White, 589 F.2d 1283 (5th Cir. 1979).

If there is no indication that invocation of U.S. Const., amend. 5 would result in an adverse judgment, nor any indication that the defendant's silence would compel a verdict for the plaintiff, compelling the defendant to go to trial in a civil suit before the defendant's trial on a related criminal charge did not violate the defendant's privilege under U.S. Const., amend. 5. United States v. White, 589 F.2d 1283 (5th Cir. 1979).

In a case in which the defendant moved the court to stay further proceedings in a civil action by the comptroller of the currency pending the outcome of possible criminal proceedings against the defendant in a pending criminal investigation, it was held that although the choice between testifying or invoking U.S. Const., amend. 5 may be difficult, it does not create a basis for a stay. Comptroller of Currency v. Lance, 632 F. Supp. 437 (N.D. Ga. 1986).

Generally, there is no unconstitutional infringement of the fifth amendment privilege by forcing an individual to risk disadvantage in a civil case by refusing to provide material facts for fear of self-incrimination in a pending criminal case, but there is an exception to this rule in instances where an individual who is a defendant in pending civil and criminal cases is forced to choose between forfeiting the privilege against self-incrimination or losing the civil case by automatic summary judgment; the exception does not apply if assertion of the privilege merely results in loss of the defendant's most effective defense rather than an adverse summary judgment. Anderson v. Southern Guar. Ins. Co., 235 Ga. App. 306, 508 S.E.2d 726 (1998).

Forfeiture proceedings. — Defendant failed to show how requiring the defendant to conform to the pleading requirements of O.C.G.A. § 16-13-49(o)(3), relating to civil forfeiture proceedings against persons arrested for controlled substances violations, violated defendant's fifth amendment right against self-incrimination. Jett v. State, 230 Ga. App. 655, 498 S.E.2d 274 (1998).

Defendant was not compelled to be a witness against self in violation of defendant's fifth amendment rights when the trial court permitted admission in defendant's criminal case of answers defendant gave in pleadings in a related civil forfeiture proceeding that defendant owned certain items of property seized at defendant's residence, including illegal drugs, as defendant could have sought a stay of the forfeiture proceeding by asserting defendant's fifth amendment rights under the forfeiture statute, but chose not to do so. Clemons v. State, 257 Ga. App. 96, 574 S.E.2d 535 (2002).

Trial court could infer admissions from defendant's invocation of defendant's fifth amendment right against self-incrimination in a civil forfeiture proceeding. Sanders v. State, 259 Ga. App. 422, 577 S.E.2d 94 (2003).

Consent to search. — Although a consent to search was requested and obtained after the defendant had invoked the defendant's right to remain silent, the defendant's rights under the fifth amendment privilege against self-incrimination were not violated by use of the consent and by introduction of the evidence obtained as a result of the ensuing search, since the fifth amendment protects only against compelled incriminating evidence of a testimonial nature and not against compelled production of physical evidence. United States v. Hidalgo, 7 F.3d 1566 (11th Cir. 1993).

Privilege retained despite guilty plea. — Defendant who entered a guilty plea retained the privilege against self-incrimination prior to sentencing. United States v. Kuku, 129 F.3d 1435 (11th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 524 U.S. 909, 118 S. Ct. 2071, 141 L. Ed. 2d 147 (1998).

Right against self-incrimination is personal. — A witness cannot be compelled to answer any question the answer to which would tend to incriminate the witness, or would constitute a necessary link in the chain of testimony sufficient to convict the witness of a criminal offense. But the privilege is personal to the witness, and cannot be claimed for the witness by a party to the action. Johnson v. State, 112 Ga. App. 597, 145 S.E.2d 636 (1965).

Defendant in a civil action lacks standing to challenge the admission of testimony given in a previous criminal action on the ground that such action violated the witness' fifth amendment rights or the immunity agreement between the witness and the state, since the privilege against self-incrimination is that of the person under examination as a witness and is intended for the witness' protection only. Kesler v. Veal, 165 Ga. App. 475, 300 S.E.2d 217 (1983).

Right may not be vicariously asserted. — Some constitutional rights are personal and may not be vicariously asserted, among these is the right against self-incrimination. Hall v. United States, 413 F.2d 45 (5th Cir. 1969).

Right against incrimination is personal right. — Party's successors cannot invoke the original party's right under U.S. Const., amend. 5 against incrimination. The privilege is purely personal. United States v. Ayers, 615 F.2d 658 (5th Cir. 1980).

Defendant may not invoke the defendant's privilege on behalf of a witness. — The privilege against self-incrimination is that of the person under examination as a witness and is intended for the witness' protection only. The defendant on trial has no standing to raise this issue on behalf of the witness, even where the witness is an accomplice. Lively v. State, 237 Ga. 35, 226 S.E.2d 581 (1976).

Privilege as applicable to juveniles. — A child is entitled to the same constitutional privilege against self-incrimination as is available to adults. Freeman v. Wilcox, 119 Ga. App. 325, 167 S.E.2d 163 (1969), for comment, see 22 Mercer L. Rev. 597 (1971).

Constitutional privilege against self-incrimination is as applicable to juveniles as it is with respect to adults. K.E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 843, 216 S.E.2d 670 (1975).

Privilege as applicable to corporations. — Under U.S. Const., amend. 5, a corporation cannot avail itself of the privilege against self-incrimination. Classic Art Corp. v. State, 245 Ga. 448, 265 S.E.2d 577 (1980); In re Agan, 498 F. Supp. 493 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Corporate officer may be compelled to identify and authenticate corporate records produced pursuant to a valid subpoena duces tecum even though this involves compelling oral testimony, where the officer is compelled to state nothing more than the belief that the papers are those described in the subpoena, since such testimony is only ancillary to the primary act compelled — that of producing the documents. In re Agan, 498 F. Supp. 493 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Corporate officer may be compelled to give name and address. — In context of compliance by corporate officer with requests for documents designated in subpoena duces tecum, absent unusual circumstances, testifying before grand jury as to the officer's name and address merely provides identification information ancillary to production of the documents called for in the subpoena and is not within the scope of U.S. Const., amend. 5's privilege against self-incrimination. In re Agan, 498 F. Supp. 493 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Corporate officers may be compelled to produce corporate records even though they may be personally incriminating, since corporations can only speak through their officers. In re Agan, 498 F. Supp. 493 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Even though a corporate officer is the sole shareholder or alter ego of the corporation, the officer may be compelled to produce corporate records that may incriminate the officer. In re Agan, 498 F. Supp. 493 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Generally, corporate books and records cannot be insulated from reasonable demands by governmental authorities by a claim of personal privilege and same only applies to the private property of the person claiming the privilege; thus, a corporate officer may not withhold testimony or documents on the ground that the corporation would be incriminated, nor may the custodian of corporate books or records withhold them on the ground that the custodian personally might be incriminated by their production. Jacobs v. State, 157 Ga. App. 466, 278 S.E.2d 21 (1981).

Self-Incrimination (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

An individual may not claim the fifth amendment privilege against compulsory self-incrimination to withhold documents of a collective entity held in a representative capacity and an order of a district court finding that individual in contempt of court for refusing to produce the records of a corporation in compliance with a grand jury subpoena duces tecum will be affirmed. In re Grand Jury Subpoena Duces Tecum, 795 F.2d 904 (11th Cir. 1986).

A corporate representative or agent cannot claim a fifth amendment privilege against producing corporate documents, whether or not they were prepared by the representative or agent, regardless of the incriminating nature of the information they contain. In re Grand Jury Subpoena, 635 F. Supp. 569 (N.D. Ga. 1986).

Custodian of corporate or association books, by accepting custodianship, voluntarily assumes a duty that overrides the custodian's claim of privilege with respect to the production of records themselves, but does not waive the custodian's constitutional privilege as to oral testimony; therefore, a corporate officer who is the custodian of the records may not resist the production of corporate books in response to subpoena even though such books may tend to incriminate the custodian as an individual. Jacobs v. State, 157 Ga. App. 466, 278 S.E.2d 21 (1981).

Custodian of records not required to disclose whereabouts of records. — The custodian of corporate records must produce the records if the custodian has them and the custodian may also be required to identify them; but the custodian may not be required to do more in answering questions as to their whereabouts such as to disclose the whereabouts of the records or who has possession of them. Jacobs v. State, 157 Ga. App. 466, 278 S.E.2d 21 (1981).

Witness in a state court can claim the privilege against self-incrimination as to matters which might tend to incriminate him under either state or federal law. Mallin v. Mallin, 227 Ga. 833, 183 S.E.2d 377 (1971).

Persons other than criminal defendants cannot stymie questioning totally, but must take the stand when called and decide after each question whether to invoke the privilege or not. Tennesco, Inc. v. Berger, 144 Ga. App. 45, 240 S.E.2d 586 (1977).

Nondefendant witness cannot refuse to testify. — Therefore, such a witness cannot be said to have waived the witness' privilege under U.S. Const., amend. 5 against self-incrimination by testifying. United States v. Dooley, 587 F.2d 201 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 949, 99 S. Ct. 1430, 59 L. Ed. 2d 639 (1979).

Applicability to potential defendants. — A potential defendant may be subpoenaed to appear before a grand jury and subsequently indicted without violating the self-incrimination proscription of the fifth amendment, if the potential defendant testifies voluntarily. Blackwell v. United States, 405 F.2d 625 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 395 U.S. 962, 89 S. Ct. 2104, 23 L. Ed. 2d 747 (1969).

Disciplinary hearing while incarcerated in a state correctional institution is a custodial hearing which requires an appropriate warning of the right against self-incrimination before any statements made are admissible against the speaker in a subsequent criminal proceeding for those same criminal acts (in the absence of waiver). Grant v. State, 154 Ga. App. 758, 270 S.E.2d 42 (1980).

Attorney under investigation by State Bar of Georgia may invoke privilege against self-incrimination. — An attorney whose professional activities are under investigation by the disciplinary authorities of the State Bar of Georgia is entitled to the protection of the constitutional safeguards of the federal and state Constitutions against self-incrimination. Wilson v. State Bar, 225 Ga. 343, 168 S.E.2d 584, cert. denied, 396 U.S. 957, 90 S. Ct. 429, 24 L. Ed. 2d 421 (1969).

Attorney improperly found in contempt where requisite determinations about questions not made. — Attorney who delivered an anonymous campaign contribution on behalf of a client in violation of O.C.G.A. § 21-5-30(e) was improperly held in contempt for failing to disclose the client's name to the State Ethics Commission; the attorney invoked the self-incrimination privilege, and the trial court found the attorney in contempt without first determining whether the commission's proposed questions might have been incriminating. Begner v. State Ethics Comm'n, 250 Ga. App. 327, 552 S.E.2d 431 (2001).

Self-incrimination a complete defense where compliance with statute would violate that privilege. — When compliance with a federal statute entails a very substantial risk of self-incrimination, a plea of the privilege against self-incrimination provides a complete defense to a prosecution based on failure to comply with that statute. United States v. Davis, 330 F. Supp. 899 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Firearm registration statute not unconstitutional where prosecutorial use of information is prohibited. — A statute requiring the registration of firearms does not violate the privilege against self-incrimination where the statute prohibits the direct or indirect use of any information obtained from firearm registration in a criminal prosecution of a violation occurring prior to or concurrently with the registration. United States v. Bright, 471 F.2d 723 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 412 U.S. 921, 93 S. Ct. 2742, 37 L. Ed. 2d 148 (1973).

Prosecution under National Firearms Act. — The timely assertion of the privilege under U.S. Const., amend. 5 by the transferee of an unregistered firearm is no longer a defense to a criminal prosecution under the National Firearms Act, 26 U.S.C. § 5801 et seq., since the transferee of a firearm who attempts to comply with the Act no longer faces the risk of self-incrimination, the transferee does not need immunity, whether "use" or "transactional". United States v. Smith, 341 F. Supp. 687 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

Prosecution under Federal Marihuana Tax Act. — The assertion of the privilege under U.S. Const., amend. 5 is a complete defense to a prosecution based on non-compliance with the Federal Marihuana Tax Act, 26 U.S.C. § 4741 et seq. United States v. Davis, 330 F. Supp. 899 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Prosecution under federal tax wagering statutes. — This amendment's privilege against self-incrimination provides a complete defense to prosecution under the federal wagering tax statutes. Lawson v. United States, 397 F. Supp. 370 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Information concerning the nature of one's business may be privileged under U.S. Const., amend. 5. In re Agan, 498 F. Supp. 493 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

How privilege asserted as to business records. — Rights under U.S. Const., amend. 5 in business records should be asserted by refusal to deliver the records rather than by subsequently revoking that delivery and demanding their return, for when a person has voluntarily submitted records in response to a summons, it is only reasonable to assume that the government would conclude its examination and copy such records prior to return, even after a demand, and that it should have a reasonable time to do so. Kelley v. Godbout, 379 F. Supp. 532 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

Application of privilege to federal tax returns. — See United States v. Vance, 730 F.2d 736 (11th Cir. 1984).

In a prosecution for willful failure to file income tax returns, by refusing to allow the defendant to submit any evidence to the jury of good faith as to the defendant's assertion on the defendant's tax forms of the privilege against self-incrimination, without first making a prima facie showing to the court, the trial court impermissibly invaded the province of the jury. United States v. Goetz, 746 F.2d 705 (11th Cir. 1984).

Production of records under IRS summons. — A taxpayer failed to show that any potential incrimination would have occurred as the result of the enforcement of a summons by the IRS requiring the taxpayer to testify and to produce certain designated records; therefore, U.S. Const., amend. 5 did not bar the production of the requested records. United States v. Reis, 765 F.2d 1094 (11th Cir. 1985).

An IRS summons to a bank requiring the production of certain records relating to an individual taxpayer did not violate the taxpayer's privilege against self-incrimination, since U.S. Const., amend. 5 does not protect against the production of records belonging to third parties and the records were not being sought pursuant to a justice department criminal prosecution. United States v. Saunders, 621 F. Supp. 745 (N.D. Ga. 1985).

Domestic reporting requirements of the federal Bank Secrecy Act, which requires certain financial institutions to file currency transaction reports, were not unconstitutional as applied to defendants charged with a money laundering scheme, as these requirements are not directed at any inherently suspect group, nor is there a direct nexus between the required disclosure and any potential criminal activity. United States v. Sanchez Vazquez, 585 F. Supp. 990 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Self-Incrimination (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Debtor bears burden to establish privilege in fieri facias interrogatories. — Where interrogatories in fieri facias do not constitute or evidence extensive questioning as to the judgment debtor's financial affairs which would tend, as a matter of law, to incriminate the debtor, work a forfeiture of the debtor's estate, or bring disgrace or infamy upon the debtor or the debtor's family, but are clearly within the ambit of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-69, the burden is on the debtor to state the general reason for the debtor's refusal to answer and to specifically establish that a real danger of incrimination exists with respect to each question. Petty v. Chrysler Credit Corp., 169 Ga. App. 418, 312 S.E.2d 874 (1984).

Voluntary waiver of privilege by property settlement agreement. — Privilege against self-incrimination can be voluntarily waived by a property settlement agreement as to future income tax returns and financial information covering future financial events unknown at the time of entering into the contract. Feig v. Feig, 246 Ga. 763, 272 S.E.2d 723 (1980).

If waiver necessarily follows settlement agreement, express waiver not required. — If a person represented by counsel enters into a property settlement agreement that has the necessary effect of waiving a constitutional right, express notice of or reference to such waiver is not required. Feig v. Feig, 246 Ga. 763, 272 S.E.2d 723 (1980).

Evidence of flight and escape. — Evidence of flight, including defendant's failure to show up at time of trial, and evidence that accused attempted to escape during trial is admissible as tending to establish guilt of an accused and is not violative of defendant's right against self-incrimination. Carruth v. State, 155 Ga. App. 666, 272 S.E.2d 531 (1980).

Noncustodial electronic surveillance. — Electronic surveillance of a suspect who is not in custody does not violate right under U.S. Const., amend. 5 not to be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against oneself. Granes v. State, 232 Ga. 193, 206 S.E.2d 26 (1974).

Electronic interceptions of the defendant speaking to self in the defendant's cell in the penitentiary did not violate the defendant's fifth amendment rights against self-incrimination and the defendant's due process rights. United States v. Moody, 977 F.2d 1425 (11th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 507 U.S. 1052, 113 S. Ct. 1948, 123 L. Ed. 2d 653 (1993).

Illegal search and arrest. — If a search and arrest are illegal, then admissions made during the illegal detention are tainted and therefore inadmissible. Hill v. State, 140 Ga. App. 121, 230 S.E.2d 336 (1976).

Validity of defendant's testimony after admission of illegally seized evidence. — In the absence of a contrary showing by the state, a defendant's testimony in a case after the admission into evidence of illegally seized evidence is unconstitutionally impelled by that erroneous admission. Hill v. State, 140 Ga. App. 121, 230 S.E.2d 336 (1976).

Psychiatric evaluation. — No violation of the privilege against self-incrimination occurred where the accused was compelled to undergo a psychiatric evaluation to be used by the state after the accused made it clear the accused was going to raise the defense of insanity and requested that the state pay for the accused to be examined by a psychiatrist. Godfrey v. Francis, 613 F. Supp. 747 (N.D. Ga. 1985), aff'd, 836 F.2d 1557 (11th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 487 U.S. 1264, 109 S. Ct. 27, 101 L. Ed. 2d 977 (1988).

Defendant's suppression motion was properly denied as to the defendant's psychiatric examination by a state's expert as the defendant's counsel knew of the time, place, scope, and nature of the examination, but chose not to attend; the examination did not violate the defendant's fifth or sixth amendment rights. Durham v. State, 281 Ga. 208, 636 S.E.2d 513 (2006).

Admissibility of testimony given at suppression hearing under fourth amendment. — When a defendant testifies in support of a motion to suppress evidence pursuant to U.S. Const., amend. 4, the defendant's testimony may not thereafter be admitted against the defendant's at trial on the issue of guilt, unless the defendant makes no objection. Culpepper v. State, 132 Ga. App. 733, 209 S.E.2d 18 (1974).

Statement properly admitted. — The trial court did not err in admitting the written statement of the defendant into evidence, because the defendant voluntarily went to the police station and told an officer that the defendant wanted to talk about the charges against the defendant. After the officer advised the defendant of the defendant's rights, the defendant indicated that the defendant understood the defendant's rights by signing a waiver of rights form. McDaniel v. State, 204 Ga. App. 753, 420 S.E.2d 636 (1992).

Trial court did not err in admitting defendant's statement that if the police would let defendant walk away, defendant would identify a major drug dealer, as there was no evidence that defendant was coerced or threatened by the police, or that defendant did not understand defendant's Miranda rights; thus, the trial court was authorized to find that the statement was freely and voluntarily given. Johnson v. State, 267 Ga. App. 549, 600 S.E.2d 667 (2004).

Trial court properly denied suppression of statements that defendant made to police officers while defendant was getting treated in the hospital for injuries sustained after committing criminal acts with a co-defendant in two home invasions, as the first statement that defendant gave to a police officer occurred when defendant was not in custody and the officer was unaware that defendant was involved in any criminal incidents; when the second officer questioned defendant, defendant was already handcuffed to the hospital gurney, such that defendant should have been given Miranda warnings, but as the statement given to that officer was repetitive of the one given to the first officer, the error was deemed harmless. Moyer v. State, 275 Ga. App. 366, 620 S.E.2d 837 (2005).

Defendant's motion to suppress two statements the defendant made to the police were properly denied as the defendant was not in custody when the defendant made the statements; the defendant's motion to suppress a third statement was properly denied as the defendant was read the defendant's Miranda rights before the defendant made the statement. Durham v. State, 281 Ga. 208, 636 S.E.2d 513 (2006).

Admission of testimony in support of motion to suppress would chill right against self-incrimination. — It is error for a trial court to admit in evidence on the issue of guilt incriminating statements given by a defendant in support of an unsuccessful pretrial motion to suppress; such a practice would require a defendant to surrender the defendant's U.S. Const., amend. 4 right against unreasonable search and seizure in order to maintain the defendant's right under U.S. Const., amend. 5 to remain silent. Sharp v. United States, 410 F.2d 969 (5th Cir. 1969).

Sanction for use of privilege against self-incrimination to avoid discovery. — Federal court interpretations of the privilege against self-incrimination have generally allowed dismissal of a plaintiff's action as a sanction against the plaintiff who is avoiding discovery via the self-incrimination privilege. Master v. Savannah Sur. Assocs., 148 Ga. App. 678, 252 S.E.2d 186 (1979).

Imposition of maximum sentence for failure to answer questions about unrelated offenses. — A trial judge's imposition of the maximum sentence possible upon a defendant as a result of the defendant's failure to answer the judge's questions concerning an unrelated offense imposes an unconstitutional condition on the defendant's privilege against self-incrimination and violates U.S. Const., amend. 5. Bertrand v. United States, 467 F.2d 901 (5th Cir. 1972).

Jury instructions regarding defendant's failure to testify. — It is proper for the court to give a charge on the defendant's failure to testify without a request and it is not reversible error to fail to give the charge if the defendant does not request it. Stapleton v. State, 235 Ga. 513, 220 S.E.2d 269 (1975).

In the absence of a timely written request, the trial court does not err in failing to charge the jury that the defendant has a constitutional right not to testify and that no inference could be made as a result of the defendant's failure to testify on the defendant's own behalf. Stephens v. State, 157 Ga. App. 414, 278 S.E.2d 70 (1981).

Jury instructions regarding presumption of truthfulness as to witness testimony. — Instructing the jury that "witnesses are presumed to speak the truth unless they are impeached in some manner as provided by law" does not violate the fifth amendment privilege against self-incrimination. Head v. State, 191 Ga. App. 262, 381 S.E.2d 519, cert. denied, 191 Ga. App. 922, 381 S.E.2d 519 (1989).

Self-Incrimination (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Jury instruction regarding inference of guilt from possession of stolen property. — An instruction stating that guilt of the defendant can be inferred from possession of recently stolen property unaccounted for by the defendant cannot properly be construed as a comment on the defendant's failure to testify. Horton v. State, 228 Ga. 690, 187 S.E.2d 677 (1972).

Party asserting privilege must respond to each question asked in discovery. — If a party asserts the privilege against self-incrimination concerning matters sought to be discovered, that party must respond to each question asked, asserting the privilege to those questions that party deems necessary. Axson v. National Sur. Corp., 254 Ga. 248, 327 S.E.2d 732 (1985).

Invocation of privilege by foreign nationals. — A French citizen, who sued American citizens for fraud in connection with the sale of Georgia land to the French citizen, could invoke the fifth amendment privilege against self-incrimination on the ground that the answers to certain questions posed on deposition might incriminate the French citizen of violations under the criminal law of France. Yves Farms, Inc. v. Rickett, 659 F. Supp. 932 (M.D. Ga. 1987).

Testimony concerning alien detainee's criminal behavior in another country not privileged. — The privilege against self-incrimination simply protects any disclosures that the witness may reasonably apprehend could be used in a criminal prosecution or that could lead to other evidence that might be so used, and testimony concerning an alien detainee's criminal behavior in the alien's country is not privileged, since such acts could not form the basis for any criminal prosecution in the United States. Fernandez-Roque v. Smith, 567 F. Supp. 1115 (N.D. Ga. 1983), rev'd on other grounds, 734 F.2d 576 (11th Cir. 1984).

Statements attributable to a coconspirator who refuses to testify are properly admitted as declarations of the other coconspirator during the course of the conspiracy. Owens

v. State, 251 Ga. 313, 305 S.E.2d 102 (1983).

Right of a witness in a criminal case to invoke the fifth amendment is not unqualified. Jones v. State, 162 Ga. App. 502, 291 S.E.2d 103 (1982).

Grand jury witness' refusal to answer questions on fifth amendment grounds did not warrant contempt sanctions because there was no court order that the witness answer the questions before the grand jury, nor was the witness in anywise granted immunity. Baker v. State, 162 Ga. App. 606, 292 S.E.2d 451 (1982).

Law firm complying with grand jury subpoenas and directing it to produce records reflecting, inter alia, its clients' financial status, business activities, payment of taxes, and involvement in litigation, did not implicate its clients in any compelled testimonial self-incrimination. In re Grand Jury Subpoena Duces Tecum, 754 F.2d 918 (11th Cir. 1985).

Gun obtained by police after the police denied the defendant's request for an attorney in an interview in which the defendant told the police the murder was committed by the defendant using the defendant's parent's gun was the fruit of a voluntary statement and was not subject to the exclusionary rule. Taylor v. State, 274 Ga. 269, 553 S.E.2d 598 (2001).

Statements during traffic stops. — A motorist detained pursuant to a traffic stop is not taken into custody for the purpose of the Miranda warning. Hudgins v. State, 176 Ga. App. 719, 337 S.E.2d 378 (1985).

Refusal to undergo alcohol screening test. — Because the defendant in a prosecution for driving under the influence was not in custody, there was no requirement that a request that the defendant undergo an alcohol screening test be preceded by Miranda warnings, and evidence of the defendant's refusal to undergo the test was not inadmissible as violative of the defendant's constitutional right to remain silent. Keenan v. State, 263 Ga. 569, 436 S.E.2d 475 (1993); Bravo v. State, 249 Ga. App. 433, 548 S.E.2d 129 (2001).

Noncustodial defendant and field sobriety tests. — The alphabet test and the physical dexterity tests for determining sobriety are not inadmissible under the fifth amendment of the United States Constitution because they were not evidence of a testimonial or communicative nature. Lankford v. State, 204 Ga. App. 405, 419 S.E.2d 498 (1992), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1051, 113 S. Ct. 972, 122 L. Ed. 2d 127 (1993); State v. Sumlin, 224 Ga. App. 205, 480 S.E.2d 260 (1997).

